So, in Charge 8, we have eye witnesses, direct and circumstantial evidence. We have extra-judicial confessions which are the truth and have never been challenged, the judicial confessions on the witness stand, and proof of the dead body. That brings us to Charge 9.

We began the proof in Charge 9 by the witness Schornweber, who stated that she saw Michely with a wrist watch in Wallrabenstein and when she pressed him for an explanation he said, "If you want to know it exactly, I did away with him and he is lying up there" (page 593). She remembered that the bracelet had the name "Jimmie" and some family name (page 596).

The witness Buhlman received an order from Goss to pick up a parachuted flyer (605). "After he was searched in the evening, about evening, I got the order to take the flyer to a camp at Bauer bach and on the way there, to do away with him." He said he got that order from Goss. That finally the flyer was brought to Idstein by 2 other men. The next day another flyer was captured by Michely (607). That flyer was searched and Goss talked to Buhlman about who should bring the flyer away and he said Michely would do it. When darkness set in, Michely left with the flyer and one hour later returned and said he had shot the flyer while he was trying to escape. Buhlman then said that Goss told him that he, Goss, had been bawled out because Buhlman had not shot the first flyer (606), and this call-down had been by Major Best and later that month Major Best complained to Goss about Buhlman and told him he should keep Buhlman out of the way of General Stroop (614).

Goss said that in Wiesbaden he was told by Stroop that if any A lied flyers would come into his hands they should be shot (965). He further said that after he assumed command of the Wehrwolf School, he was familiar with the "Non-Interference" order and the Goebbels propaganda (966). Referring again to the flyer shot by Michely, Goss called up Major Best for instructions (968), and said that the instructions or orders could be issued only by Stroop and that was why he was asking Best. Later, he met Best under the oaks and Best transmitted to him the order that the flyer was to be shot and that the order had come from Stroop (989) (990). Goss admitted at that time they were practically surrounded by the American forces (993). When Best reported to Stroop that the first flyer had not been shot, Stroop said that he considered it cause for talking a few serious words with them (1000-1001). Then Goss went on to talk about Michely's shooting the second flyer which was done on his order. He said Michely returned from the shooting and said that he had carried out the order. He said that, at that time Wallrabenstein was the immediate front line area (1006). Goss testified that neither he nor Buhlman was punished by Stroop or any one else for failure to obey the order to shoot the first flyer. Referring to the second flyer, he said Michely was obeying Stroop's order transmitted by him. However, he also said:

> "Q If you had failed to receive the order from Major Best, the flyer would be alive, would he not?
> A I can't say because somebody else would probably have shot him." (page 1015).

In trying to explain why the report of the shooting indicated that the flyer was trying to escape, he said the following:

> "Q Why did you make a report which was contradictory to the truth since you had an order to shoot the flyer anyway?"

This is the answer to the fake reports that Trummler wouldn't admit:

> "A Because one would never know if this report would get directly in the hands of the superior officer for whom they were destined or in the hands of some other office for which they were not supposed to be." (page 1024)

There's your answer--that's why all this business is fake.

Michely took the stand and made a complete judicial confession. He admitted shooting the flyer on orders from Goss and gave a clear description of just how the deed was accomplished and that it was followed by a report made to Stroop through Major Best.

"Q What did you put down on that report?

A I put down in this report the whole occurrence, how I captured the flyer. I also wrote that I had received the order from Goss to take him to Idstein, that he attempted to escape on the way and that I shot him while he was trying to escape.

Q Who told you to falsify the report to the effect that the flyer was shot while attempting to escape?

A 1st Lt. Goss." (pages 1048 and 1049).

"Q From then on you wore Jimmie Heathman's bracelet?
A Yes." (page 1049).

Best testified that he received the message from Goss that he had the flyer in Wallrabenstein and requested instructions from Stroop (page 1061). Stroop said "The flyer has to be shot." Best then gave Goss Stroop's order (page 1062), and it was at this point that the Defense recalled Else Hoecker, Stroop's secretary, who testified that Stroop had said to Goss: "You know what the treatment of parachuted flyers is supposed to be. That also is one of the tasks of the Wehrwolf." (page 1089).

Goss made a written statement, Exhibit P-141, in which he admitted all the essential facts. There was no duress whatever in making this statement. "I can definitely state the murder committed by Michely was a direct result of the orders given by Best and passed on by me. I am certain that the said order was received by Best from Stroop."

Best, in his written statement, Exhibit P-142, said: "About the beginning of March, 1945, a verbal report came to me from Goss that his unit had an Allied flyer in custody." He asked Stroop what should be done with him and Stroop gave me instructions to transmit the order to Goss that the flyer should be executed. I sent this order to Goss but shortly afterwards I received another report from Goss that the flyer had been delivered to the PW camp in Idstein. I reported this to Stroop. He was very surprised and said, "How is this possible?" I replied that probably too much time was lost while the order was transmitted. About the same time as this incident or shortly after, it was reported to me through Goss that a flyer had been executed by personnel of the Wehrwolf School while same tried to escape."

Of course, as the evidence indicated, Best was in command of the Wehrwolf School. To complete the evidence in Charge 9, we now refer to Michely's sworn statement, exhibit P-143, in which he makes a complete confession to the crime. He concluded the proof by making a very complete confession on the back of the photographs received in evidence as exhibits P-141A through J, inclusive.

The evidence in support of Charge 9 is clear and conclusive and leaves no doubt as to the guilt of the accused Best, Goss and Michely, and it rests upon direct and circumstantial evidence, judicial and extra-judicial confessions, the admissions against interest made by Michely to the witness Schornweber, and positive proof of the corpus delicti.

The defense of justifiable reprisal offered to some extent by the Defense is worthy of so little consideration that we believe no comment is necessary except to point out that I argued that point at length before this Court, and gave some reasons why the Defense should not be permitted to introduce any evidence on that. This court took it for whatever value it might have and only in mitigation. Although the defense tried to deny it, every flyer that was murdered was murdered in a front line area; and, if it was impossible to evacuate the women and children, we feel for them, and it is unfortunate. All of us who are human would have tried to do that, but it was probably impracticable for them; and so in an isolated case some bullets fell and did hit some women and children. Regrettable as it is, it doesn't excuse these people for the slow, deliberate, calculated murders that they committed on our American prisoners of war. The Nuernberg Tribunal listened to that stuff for days and days in an effort to give them every opportunity, but at the end it had to be thrown away because you know and everyone knows what the results of that trial were.

Chief Justice Harlan Stone, U. S.Supreme Court, once made the statement that punishment of war criminals was a necessary part of warfare--that it was the second step and a necessary step. In proving that these men were war criminals, we first proved the conspiracy and then in Charges 3 to 10 we demonstrated to this Court the results of this conspiracy and the fruits of that criminal combine.

The only other Defense that they interposed was this oft told tale, the defense of Superior Orders. That is not new, but it should be given little or not weight at all, even in mitigation. Certainly it is not a defense. That is absolute. In discussing Superior Orders, we talked of necessity of Superior Orders as a whole. A totally different picture is presented in the crimes committed by individuals who are not members or who were members of such criminal organizations as the Gestapo, SS or SD. Those who belonged to those organizations knew before they joined or learned soon after they joined and before they committed their criminal acts that these organizations were engaged on a large, systematic and planned scale of murder, torture, beatings and various violations of the rules of land warfare, yes, and the laws of humanity. As members of these organizations and by remaining members thereof and committing criminal acts, they can not be heard to say that their crimes were justifiable because they were done pursuant to Superior Orders. It is extremely doubtful whether any Superior Order constitutes any valid defense whatsoever. The Court realizes that the basic doctrine in American law is to exclude it entirely in defense. A person does not normally escape liability for an illegal act on a plea that he was acting on orders of a higher authority and I take that statement from an old United States Supreme Court decision, Little v. Barreme (1804) reported in 2 Cranch 170. Judicial authority has generally rejected superior orders as a defense where the orders were manifestly illegal or where the defendant knew they were illegal. U. S. v. Jones (Circuit Court District of Pennsylvania 1513), being Federal Case Number 653.

The defense of Superior Orders offers no sweeping immunity. In the light of the case law rejecting the defense, there is a serious question as to whether the doctrine, even in its restricted form, is applicable to war crimes prosecutions.

While the basic doctrine of American law excludes a "Superior Order" as a defense, the United States Army provides in FM 27-10, par. 345.1, as follows:

> "Individuals and organizations who violate the accepted laws and customs of war may be punished therefor. However, the fact that the acts complained of were done pursuant to an order of a superior or government sanction may be taken into consideration in determining culpability, either by way of defense or in mitigation of punishment. The person giving such orders may also be punished."

It should be noted very carefully that the Army doctrine is that Superior Orders may be taken into consideration. The fact that the accused knew or should have known that he was committing a crime --now I repeat that "knew or should have known"--should be determinative of his guilt.

The accused in this case were all men of mature age and are normal human beings to whom would come the normal reaction that accompanies the commission of a killing that is illegal. There is no human being of any race or creed, be he pagan or saint, that does not instinctively react to the violation on his part of the inborn, natural laws of humanity. We saw that demonstrated in this trial when the accused themselves, who were the so-called "trigger men", each in turn said that after the shooting of the flyers they were shaky and nervous and upset and in general felt shocked. They told you that themselves, either in written statements or on the stand. The only answer to that is that they were experiencing the same reaction that any criminal, no matter how low a form of humanity he may be, experiences simply because he is a rational human being, and he experiences that when he commits what he knows is a violation of the laws of humanity.

In addition to all of that, the compulsion under which the accused follows orders may be taken into consideration--these orders that they are always talking about--whether he should have or could have avoided or evaded its commission by way of defense or in mitigation. Several witnesses produced by the prosecution and many by the defense told this court that they had been ordered to shoot the particular flyers and had refused and avoided the deed and as we have pointed out before, witnesses for both sides of this case have come into this court and have said that they were closely associated with and under the command of the various SS and Police Commanders and Party Leaders, who gave them orders, as early as 1944, but that they had refused and are still alive today to testify before this Court.

The members of Murder, Incorporated and Al Capone's gang and the notorious gangs that operated in prohibition times in the United States made a practice, for example, of taking people for a "ride" in somewhat the same fashion as the accused Fuehr and Koehler did. They are not excused from punishment on the plea that they followed their superior's orders. Germany was engaged in international brigandage. Its people knew or should have known that there would be punishment of the captured individual offenders. If these gangster policemen did not desire to be branded as war criminals, they should have deserted the gang as did Gunther, Kalesko and many other people who have come before this Court, still free because they had courage of their moral convictions.

All right, for the sake of argument, let us assume that a deserter from Al Capone's gang would have risked assassination. Remaining in the gang, and this has always been the rule in any decent country, and committing its crimes, with or without orders, subjects him to punishment as a criminal.

In any jurisprudence, where logic and sensible and correct principles of law are advocated and enforced, we know for example that a man can not be excused for the commission of a crime because for example he has become intoxicated before committing the act. To grant that man such a defense would invite all future would-be murderers to become intoxicated before committing the act, as advance assurance of not being convicted. All right, this world will probably go on for many years. It's probably inevitable that there will be another war. We hope not, but to grant to these accused the right to Superior Orders would be an invitation to all future would-be war criminals to obtain an order that they can hang their hats on from a superior as an advance assurance that they would not be convicted.

The brutality of the Axis soldier is not justifiable, simply because he was a cog in a huge criminal machine. It follows that the plea of Superior Orders raised by individual non-members and members of the SS and other organizations, such as the Gestapo, SD and others, independent of the German Army, who commit war crimes must be rejected. The German law on the subject--their own law--is clear that the defense of Superior Orders is not valid, even in mitigation, and in that connection I have to support that statement The Llandovery Castle case in Leipzig, in which the court stated: "The order does not free the accused from guilt...if such an order is universally known to be against the law."

Goebbels in his article in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, May 23, 1944, threatening to execute British pilots taken prisoner in Germany says: "The pilots cannot claim that they were acting under orders. There is no provision in the Laws of War that a soldier who has committed a disgraceful crime is exempted from punishment by his plea of having acted according to the orders of his superiors, especially when these orders are in glaring contradiction to every notion of human morality and to all customary international rules for the conduct of war". And Goebbels said the same thing in the article that we received in evidence in this case, Exhibit P-21.

In the Nuremberg Judgment on page 16988 of the copy of that judgment now available to this court, in considering the case of Keitel, the Court said: "Superior orders, even to a soldier, cannot be considered in mitigation where crimes as shocking and extensive have been committed consciously, ruthlessly and without military excuse or justification." In the case of Jodl, the court said: "His defense, in brief, is the doctrine of 'superior orders', prohibited by Article 8 of the Charter as a defense. There is nothing in mitigation. Participation in such crimes as these has never been required of any soldier and he cannot now shield himself behind a mythical requirement of soldierly obedience at all costs as his excuse for commission of these crimes." That appears on page 17047.

It is interesting to note the article in the Reader's Digest of February, 1946, by Murray C. Bernays. The headnote of that fine article is significant: "The war crimes are being tried according to recognized law. True, what is happening in Nuernberg is revolutionary. But it is not a revolution in the law. It is a revolution in law enforcement."

Sheldon Glueck of Harvard, in the New Republic, 22 November, 1943, in his article said , and I would like to adopt it, "where, patently, the order is violative of the laws and customs of war as embodied in the rules of land warfare, or of elementary concepts of criminal law, it is illegal and the offender should not be excused even though his domestic law or the 'will of the Fuehrer' had declared such laws to be lawful. It would be a mockery of elementary justice for a German or Japanese soldier to claim as a defense that he did not know it was illegal to use children as a shield against the enemy; or to torture and slay surrendered prisoners of war....The Fuehrer, Hitler, had decreed that allied 'air gangsters'--that's the term he used--"and others should be killed when captured. If "Superior Orders" were a defense, the 'Fuehrer' decree would absolve every person except Hitler who, if captured alive, would be the only person subject to punishment for the murder and torture of millions of persons by several hundred thousand henchmen."

In conclusion, I might say that when I began the preparation of this final argument I believed it proper and also believe it to be helpful to review the evidence in detail. The task, however, was colossal. The prosecution's evidence alone, both by witnesses and by document, is so extensive and overwhelming that a detailed restatement of the main part of the evidence would be unnecessary. This court without doubt has been impressed by the veritable mountain of evidence and consistent clear proof which was supported, corroborated and strengthened by the evidence of the defense.

Some of the accused have less blood upon their hands than others of the accused, but if there is upon their hands one slight stain, he should pay the penalty equally with the others. That always has been the law of humanity.

Accordingly, the Prosecution, in the name of the United States Government, prays this Court to deny the motions for findings of not guilty made by the defense and prays that this Court find each accused guilty of each and every charge as alleged and further the prosecution prays this Court that as punishment therefor, each and every accused be sentenced to death by hanging.

PRESIDENT: The Court will recess until 1:30.

(Whereupon at 1145 hours, the Court recessed.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

(Whereupon the court reconvened at 1330 hours.)

PRESIDENT: Court will come to order.

PROSECUTION: May it please the court, let the record show that all the members of the court; all the members of the prosecution; all the members of the defense; all of the accused; the reporter and interpreter are present.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: May it please the court, the defense in presenting its argument will argue to the case as a whole, and will disregard any special address to this court with reference to the motions which were made the other day and will leave it to the court when to pick such portions of the argument as will be germane to the motions which I have in mind.

I should like to call the court's attention to the fact that the argument will be made by the seven of us. All the arguments will be in English. Because the German counsel do not have a sufficient familiarity with the English translations of their arguments, they will be read for them by the interpreter. It follows, therefore, too, that our argument cannot be divided by charges. Major Saxon, for instance, has represented in the trial of the cause certain individuals who are concerned with several charges. His argument will be in defense of those individuals, and consequently, our argument, I regret to say, may be a little bit more difficult to follow than if we were able to argue charge by charge.

It is my province on behalf of the defense, may it please the court, to bring to the attention of the court our interpretation of the legal principles which are germane to the issues in this case and which we believe to be binding upon the judgment of this court. However, before going into my argument proper, which has been reduced to writing, there are certain matters referred to by the prosecution we feel called upon to discuss at more or less length, one or two of them which seem to be elemental and unnecessary to mention before a court made up of officers trained in the American tradition. However, I am going to trespass and refer to them because, in our opinion, the prosecution in the course of its argument, inadvertently or not, made references which contravene in one form or another what we believe to be basic principles.

The first, may it please the court, is the presumption of innocence. That fundamental law of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence has not been changed at all. These men are presumed to be innocent unless and until the prosecution has proven beyond a reasonable doubt by the facts in the case, free from surmise, suspicion and presumption, that these men are so guilty. The facts in the case must be inconsistent with a finding of innocent. If the facts in the case are such that they support or could support a finding of innocent, then that finding of innocent must be made.

Now, I mention all of this because the prosecution, in referring to the letter or note or written message that Gochrandt is supposed to have sent to Offenbach, concerning the contents of which there is no testimony, said to this court, "Why, the court knows what was in that message. We all know what was in the message." My purpose is to inform the court most respectfully that in the absence of specific information as to what was in that note, the court has no right to engage in hypothesis of any kind as to what the contents of that note might be. This principle of law is applicable to a number of illustrations of the same kind referred to by the prosecution in its argument.

There has been some talk or some stress laid by the prosecution about these heroic individuals, these titans, who came into court and said, "Yes, we got an order but we didn't obey it because it wasn't legal." Well, that is an illustration of just what I have been talking about, that we have no right to presume or surmise as to what the truth might be. But the court knows, from the existence of affairs in Germany, that no halfwit or no peanut individual such as these witnesses have been are going to tell somebody in Germany during the war years, "We are not going to carry out the order." Chances are that if they got an order, they carried it out and are lying about it. But I mention that because of one instance, and that is the case of this man Von Eberstein, who was a witness and has been mentioned by the prosecution.

He got the orders; he disobeyed them. The first order he got was with respect to an army colonel. He says, "I know I had no legal right to arrest him. I had no jurisdiction over that fellow." The second order was about killing everybody here in Dachau; the third order, about moving the defense line to Munich. He disobeyed, but he said, "It is a good thing for me" — and he emphasizes that — "It is a good thing for me that the war was almost over." But despite that fact, eight days before the capitulation he was removed from office. Himmler, despite the thousand and one things he had to do, still could take the time to remove a man from that high position, the higher SS and police leader, because he didn't suit some gauleiter and didn't carry out some order.

Now, in arguing the case on No. 4 with respect to Hoehler, an analogy is made of men going out on a bank robbery without any attempt or intention of committing a murder, and yet a murder is committed and so they are all guilty. That is fundamental law. We agree that is the law. Everyone who is engaged in the commission of a felony, actively engaged in the commission of a felony, is responsible for the actions of every one of his co-criminals. There is no question about that, but the point I want to make now is that those people who had been punished for the murder were men who actively participated in the robbery, and not a person like Moehler, who stands by and witnesses it, so that if I were standing by and saw a gang going into the bank to commit a robbery, or rode on the same street car with them with no part, no active part in the robbery itself, I couldn't be held responsible for a single thing.

Later on in my written argument I am coming back to that, but I want to emphasize with this final word that that bank robbery is no analogy to these standing by cases, to these so-called consenting part cases, where all a man does is pass an order down or just doesn't interfere with somebody else perpetrating something.

Now, may it please the court, if knowledge of a conspiracy were enough to make a man a conspirator, then five million policemen in Germany must be conspirators. Ten million members of the Party must be conspirators, and they would all have to be conspirators with each other on this theory of one common design. I haven't any doubt that when Kaltenbrunner and his gang started this business of shooting people, however you want to characterize it, that that fact came to the knowledge of millions of people, so that they all would be guilty of conspiracy because of that knowledge, which is not the law. To be a conspirator, one must actually do something with the intent to further the conspiracy and not for any other reason. We can't emphasize that too often. If Dirks or Hallenbroich came to a meeting under an order and listened to Somann read this non-interference order, that couldn't possibly make them conspirators by itself, because by so listening there was no intent on their part to further any common design. And even in passing it down in obedience to an order, there is no general intent to engage in a common design with five million policemen and ten million civilians.

Now, there is one other thing, may it please the court. I can stand on the street corner and issue unlawful orders from morn till dusk. If nothing is done in consequence of those illegal orders or unlawful orders, there has been no offense committed. Somann got an order. He read it. What happened? Taking Hallenbreich's testimony, he added something to the order. Hallenbreich says that the whole business was superseded, that what he did, he did on the basis of the order to shoot, and Trummler said the same thing. If Somann's passing down the non-interference order resulted in no crime, then where is Somann's crime? I will come back to this non-interference business way further on.

It is not what a man knows, may it please the court, it is what he acts on. It is what makes him act, it is the motivating force behind what he does, which is the thing that counts.

Now, there has been a lot of reference to that chart. I am going to make one very brief reference to it, and that is this: That what happened on the right side, on the secret police side from inspector on down, never had any effect in any way whatsoever with what happened in the Ordnungs Police from the commander on down, and vice versa. And I stress that because Trummler, the fourth case in which he admits knowledge of, couldn't be held responsible for what the Wahrwolf did. He had nothing to say about the Wahrwolf, and the mere fact that he talked to Stroop and Stroop talked to Case doesn't make Trummler a conspirator with Case and Best.

And certainly Trummler and Somann and all the others mentioned on the right could have had nothing to do with Charge III, which is the Lasaak business; or VII, which is the Ordnungs Police, Albrecht, etc.; or VIII, which is on that side; or IX, the Wahrwolf. They just couldn't have anything to do with each other.

Now, the prosecution has talked about the unbridled despotism of those in command. There just is no word available to me, at least, to express the degree of the unbridled despotism exerted by those men who ran Germany. It was unlimited beyond any conceivable bound of the human imagination before they reached the limits to which other people could go. But the sufferers of all that are these same puppets that are sitting in this dock at the present time on trial for their lives. They are just as much the victims of Himmler and Kaltenbrunner and Hitler as were the people of Poland and Russia. They got it in a different way. To say that this business applies to soldiers, of the law of superior orders applies to soldiers but not to police -- they were subjected to just as stiff a regimen of disciplinary control as any police. The German police force was built along military lines. Command was exercised along military lines and they functioned along military lines. The defense of superior orders applies not because a man wears a uniform of a soldier, but because of the position he finds himself in, because of the forces to which he is subjected, and that is the determining factor in this case.

Now, I would like to call this court's attention most respectfully to an obvious fact, and I do so again only because of certain portions of the prosecution's argument. This tribunal is not the Nuernberg tribunal and we are not trying before this court the four major organizations. I say that for this reason. A great deal of argument was spent showing the development in the minds of these higher ups so far as this order to kill is concerned. It shows how they speculated and conceived to give a color of legality to this order to kill. We admit that these men, that Hitler and Himmler and Kaltenbrunner conspired. We admit that, and we admit that the things they did were illegal, and we admit that the organizations to which they belonged were illegal. We have no choice. The facts are there. The decision is there, but the question for this court to decide is not the mental processes by which these men conceived this ugly scheme and gave it to the world. The important thing for this court is the fact that they did it and the fact that they did it so successfully that they convinced their own people it was legal, and that is the position we take in this case. It was a Machiavellian scheme, a dastardly thing to do, but it worked, and it worked on them, and that is the important thing in this case. [illegible] The language used by the prosecution -- I don't have it here or I would quote its very words -- had something to do with the fact that they schemed to make this thing look legal. I would be interested in having the court, when it gets a chance, look at the exact words used by the prosecution. But what they succeeded in stating for us, in language I personally can't improve upon, was that Hitler and that bunch were successful in throwing up a camouflage of legality, deliberately sought to do it. So far as we are concerned, they deliberately sought to do it and they succeeded, may it please the court. They fooled their own people. The rest of the world they didn't, but it doesn't make any difference. I will come again to it, and so will the rest of the accused. The court will come to it when it comes to make its final argument, were these men reasonable in their belief that the order they got was legal. [illegible] One of the things that the court will have to consider is the very effort mentioned by the prosecution made by their leaders to fool not only the outside world but their own people as well. [illegible]

Now, may it please the court, in addition to arguing the general law of the case -- and I am afraid I am going to have to repeat a little bit as I go along -- I am going to argue at the end in favor of Muller and Oechsendt, who are both mentioned in Charge VII, specifically for them, although of course I will refer from time to time to others as well. [illegible]

Much has been said during this trial about crimes worse than murder. There are murders which are more heinous and nefarious than others, but, may it please the court, the only crime known to mankind worse than murder is the crime of treason, faithlessness to one's country. That is the crime worse than murder recognized by all civilized nations. For treason, two witnesses are required; for murder, one. Furthermore, the killing of a human being is graded at the top as murder in the first degree, then down to murder in the second degree, down further to various forms of the crime of manslaughter.

In determining which crime involving a killing shall be charged, the law, and the conscience of mankind, require the consideration of a number of factors. Was the killing deliberate and premeditated? Was it done with malice aforethought? What were the motives for the killing? What was the compulsion behind the killing, with respect to these killings?

There are other factors the court must consider. What are the standards of the man charged and of the society to which he belongs? What has he been taught? What is the law of his land? In Sparta, to be caught stealing was the offense, not the stealing itself.

Times and customs change. New circumstances create new laws. In high school, in studying Latin, I remember the speech that Cicero made in which he talks about other customs and other times. In our own legal history, the deliberate killing of a few to save the many is permitted under some circumstances. I have in mind the permitted killing of some individual in a lifeboat where the lifeboat is overcrowded and one person has to be sacrificed to the many, though there are safeguards around that.

I would like to call attention to another fact, as stressed by Trumbler in his testimony: Under all times and under all circumstances, loyalty to government or country where a common enemy was concerned has always been esteemed the highest virtue tied to and blood brother to loyalty to God. For the American Legion and for countless thousands of groups and untold millions throughout human history, it has been for "God and Country." It was Milton, I believe, in his poem, "Horatius at the Bridge," who said, "For how can man die better than facing fearful odds, for the ashes of his fathers and the temples of his gods." It was Stephen Decatur who said, "My country--may she be ever right, but my country right or wrong."

I should like to emphasize here, and I shall return to the subject. We have to keep factors of that kind in mind. When we, a victorious enemy, come to judge the actions of a defeated opponent, there are uses and laws and forces which must be concerned independent of abstract ethical legal concepts. What these men did here they did in the final violent death throes of a defeated nation. They did it after subjection to unbelievable punishment. They did it after seeing their homes, their churches, their cities and their families destroyed. They did it in times of war, in times where their localities were near front lines and our forces nearby, under the orders, chiefly in writing, of the government and the men in whose hands lay the destiny of their nation. These were new times, new customs were being created. Out of these times came the order of their government. Can it be said that men not only trained to obey, but stemming from a people like the Germans, notorious for their susceptibility to regimentation, goose-steppers all, subjected to propaganda for 15 years, men beaten and destroyed as they were, were guilty of premeditated killing with malice aforethought when they obeyed the orders of their government? Were they free agents? Can it be said that they acted without any reasonable belief in the rightness of what they did? Those are some questions for the court to consider, and

I think in passing judgment upon some of the things done here, the court might well consider the analogy of some of the things which have been done even in our own country. I hesitate to make these analogies because once I did it before and I was accused of disrespect for my own country, which really isn't so. There have been times within the recent years, during this period of strikes, when according to the daily press of our country, responsible police officials gave orders to their police not to interfere with strikers, to stand by, even when according to others the strikers were engaged in what were alleged to be illegal acts. Was that a non-interference order? Without going into the merits of unionism or otherwise, I think there is an analogy there to which we respectfully call the attention of the court.

In arguing before this court, I am not unmindful of the history of the origin of the late war nor of the origin of aerial bombardment. I know of Coventry and Lidice, of concentration camp, of Ghetto destructions and the murder of women and unborn babies. The German people have been and will continue to be punished. That is only right and as it should be. Those who led and made policies of destruction have been and shall continue to be punished.

But what we as lawyers contend before this group of American officers sitting as a Court is simply this. These accused were not the leaders of the people but subordinates of these leaders and in most cases very minor subordinates indeed. They were not creators but were instruments in the hands of these leaders. They were not free agents but were under continuous compulsion of the most compelling kind.

Now, always in the trial of every case, there comes a time when the court must evaluate conflicting testimony, and in this case there are many such instances. I should like to remind the court that where the necks of men are involved, chivalry slips through the noose in the hangman's rope. Men will lie to save themselves, not only outside of court but in court as well, but not to save others. Men in fear, in confinement faced with hostile interrogators will lie and point the finger of suspicion at everyone they can, hoping to hide in the shadows of guilt cast upon others. That is evident in some of the statements some of these people made. Even when the chips are down and they face their judges, they may continue to lie to save themselves. If what they say then helps a fellow accused, the court can rely that they are doing it just because it is the simple truth. There is no chivalry here, nobody lying to help somebody else when they come before the court.

As the prosecution has said, Moller told the truth. Those are the words of the prosecution. They are to be believed. Moller says Goehrendt wasn't around until he and the flier started on the way from the police station. Albrecht says the same thing. That is what I mean, may it please the court. When Fuehr says that Koehler never got out of the automobile and Koehler says he doesn't know whether Fuehr fired or not, it was to the interests of Fuehr and Koehler both to lie. It wasn't to the interest of Moller or Albrecht to pull Goehrendt out of the picture. If anything, it was to the interest of both of them to keep him in the picture. And so I say, may it please the court, that when men before this court tell stories which happen to be favorable to the other accused, when it would be so easy to lie or to do something differently -- then these people must be believed.

When Trummler says yes he knew of certain cases but not of others, he is to be believed. When he says that he believed in the legality of his order, the court, we submit, has to believe that he did believe in the legality of his order.

It it remains, at this time, may it please the court, to comment briefly on inconsistencies which were emphasized by the prosecution in statements made in these statements which were introduced in evidence and the the testimony in open court. The ability of the court to see witnesses, to watch their facial expressions, the inflection of their tones, to judge what is said by seeing the man who said it--that has always in our law been considered a very valuable right. Because it is so, the supreme courts of our states will never reverse a court until it is plainly ruled where that court has had a chance to see and hear the witness. The Appellate Court, of course, does not have this chance. I am not going to argue it, but I have already commented on the fact of the circumstances under which some of these statements were written.

You have your accused here subject to cross examination by the prosecution, subject to cross examination by other defense counsel, subject, in some cases, to examination by the court. Everything he says is heard, and not, as Colonel Kohlers testified that he talked with one of these witnesses and a lot was said but only a part of it went down on paper. Here the court has everything. So, where there is this conflict, we ask the court to do just one thing. It isn't so important why a man lied. The question we urged and the position we urge upon the court is that the difference between whether a man is telling the truth now or was telling the truth then -- the odds are so strong that he is telling the truth in open court, that that is the evidence which should be controlling.

There is a charge of conspiracy here, may it please the court. We have admitted that there undoubtedly was a conspiracy among federal leadership. Conspiracy is a very dangerous offense. It is so easy to charge so that our federal decisions have ruled consistently that because conspiracy is a dangerous charge it to be used with caution and scrutinized carefully. A conspirator is one who would actively, with intent so to do, contribute to a common purpose. What he does must be for the purpose of aiding the common plan and for no other reason. The big majority of these people didn't even know the existence of a general order to kill or of any general order affecting parachuted flyers. There existed not volition but only obedience. How could they be guilty of conspiracy? Others attended meetings under orders and without forewarning heard general orders. How could this act make them conspirators. Others like Seemann merely obeyed an order to pass down an order. How could Best, whose only act was to convey an order which was not carried out, be a conspirator? The fact that their actions may have contributed to the execution of the aim of the conspiracy does not make them conspirators. They were robots, automatons, men who carried out orders created for the purpose of getting the effects of the conspiracy and so assumed a mantel of the appearance of a conspirator, but we are asking the court to go behind the mantel and see just what the fact was. On the theory of the prosecution every stenographer who typed out a copy of that order and passed it down and handed it out would also be a conspirator.

Now, may it please the court, we come to a charge, which before the defense counsel came to Dachau, we never heard of. That is the charge of "taking a consenting part." What kind of a crime is this? What do the words mean. A citizen of the U. S. can stand up on any street corner and see any crime committed and either through fear or indifference not lift a finger and he can't be charged with any crime. He can be charged with a crime only when and if a police officer touches him on the shoulder and says, "I want some help." and then as a citizen he has to give it, but If I stand on a corner of Times Square and see a cold blooded murder or anything happen I am under no legal duty to interfere--none. Koehler, who was present at the commission of a crime, who even knew a crime was going to e committed, was under no legal duty to stop it. It is unnecessary for me to tell the court that I am not arguing the morals of this business, it is just a strict legal principle. The same thing applies to Hewitt. Sure, he was present in charge ? when somebody gave an order--whoever did--but he was under no duty to stop it--none. That is one of the principles the defense stands on. We don't know what "consenting" is. If all it means is a standing by and not interfering, we submit it is not a crime--at least there is no definition of it.

We also ask the court this question: How many people through whom an order to kill--through whom these hands it goes--how many of these people can be killed in America? Kaltenbrunner gave the order to Brunnler who gave it to Birke who gave it to Hollenbreich who gave it to Stattman and Ruf. Are they all guilty of murder, is that where the consenting business comes in? If that is the position and that is the definition of "consenting", may it please the court, we argue that merely passing an order along is no crime.

We have a number of these defendants, may it please the court, who have admitted membership in some of these four criminal organizations and as such they are technically subject to punishment. We submit that it is like the case of a man who through his neglect causes damage. He is entitled to nominal damages even without proving specific damage, but for him to get any appreciable amount of money he has got to prove damage. To give the accused any sentence of consequence because of membership in a criminal organization there must be proof as to what his contribution to the worth of this organization was.

So far as Sauer is concerned, to prove my point, the evidence is only that he belonged but he took part in none of the work which was the basis for the foundation of criminality and in his case and in other cases we submit that the twenty months or almost two years confinement is plenty of punishment for a nominal criminal offense where that is all that can be proven against an individual. Now there is just one other thing I would like to comment about with respect to this charge number 2.

The Nuremberg decision states that men who were guilty of membership in an organization can't be in, etc. It says further that men who were compelled to join and who had no volition should not be charged as members of the criminal organization, unless, despite the fact that membership was involuntary, they participated in the criminal nature of the work, and that is the basis for the last sentence or two which appears in charge two. It is the aim to get at these people who holler to high heaven, "They made us do it.", but they were in it just as enthusiastically, and putting the prod on people, just as the man who did it and joined voluntarily. So far as Koehler is concerned, let the court find, as it may, that he, in charge 4, cooperated with the Gestapo. Either that fact cannot make him a member--he either is or he isn't.

Now, I would like to come down and discuss with the court what is one of the most important parts of this case--probably the most important part, and that is this business of superior orders. We have heard in this case time and time again the statement that superior orders are not a defense. I am not personal in the slightest way when I say that that is an absolute misconception of the law. The citations which I am going to analyse for the court make it plain that superior orders is not an absolute defense but may be a defense or may be used in mitigation. They make a difference between an absolute defense and a defense and that difference, may it please the court, is not a question of language. It is a difference that goes throughout the law, the civil law and the criminal law. For instance, if a superior order was an absolute defense Spattmann, Ranf, Moller and Fuehr could come before the court to put in evidence that some superior order had them to do it. It is an absolute defense and out they go. Circumstances and conditions would have no weight at all. What these decisions say is not so. It is not an absolute defense, but whether it is a defense or not depends on the circumstances of each case. That this court has to decide is not whether it is a defense, but whether the factors and circumstances of this case make it a defense. It is unfortunate that the authorities do not lay down a clear cut line as to when a superior order is a defense or not. But there is some occasion in the cases to which I should like to call the attention of the court, for instance this extract from the London Agreement in 1945, and all of my citations are taken from the manual--every single one of them. I would like to read a part of a quotation.

"The fact that a defendant acted pursuant to order of a superior or government sanction shall not constitute an absolute defense but may be considered either in defense or in mitigation of punishment if the tribunal before which the charges are being tried determines that justice so requires."

The language "but may be considered either in defense" must mean something or it wouldn't be there. The language "in mitigation" must mean something or it wouldn't be there. The fact that the language talks about absolute defense then talks about defense and then talks about mitigation proves beyond a doubt that these three things are totally indistinct leaving open three separate courses of conduct. That decision is interesting because it gives the court some hint as to when superior orders may be a defense. It is a big burden that it puts on the court, but the hint is plain. It says that the case may be considered a defense and in mitigation if the tribunal before which the charges are being tried determines that justice so requires, so that this court in reviewing the facts and the circumstances in these cases, individually and collectively determine the fields that justice requires--simple justice requires--that superior orders can be considered a defense, then that is a defense.

The same thing applies to our own field manual. It says that the fact that the acts complained of were done pursuant to orders may be taken into consideration in determing culpability either by way of defense or mitigation.

Mr. Justice Jackson stated: "There is doubtless a sphere in which the defense of obedience to superior orders should prevail. If a conscripted or enlisted soldier is put on a firing squad, he should not be held responsible for the validity of the sentence he carries out."

If a conscripted or enlisted policeman, subject to even a stiffer control than a soldier, is put on a firing squad it is not up to him to decide the legality of the order which he has to carry out. For him an order is just the same as a sentence. That is the size of the case of Stattmann, Knaf, Moller and Fuehr. They were all men commissioned enlisted soldiers; according to Mr. Justice Jackson's language, "conscripted enlisted personnel". What they did was to carry out an order or a sentence the same as any soldier who appears as a member of a firing squad.

Mr. Jackson continues and gives some more language which is helpful to this court in determining when an order is a defense. "But the case may be greatly altered where one has discretion because of rank or the latitude of his orders."

The language which helps is the language in which he says that rank is a factor and latitude of orders is a factor. If a man had enough rank and his orders gave him latitude in what he was to do and what he was not to do it would not be a defense. Take a look at the rank of these people. What latitude did they have. They had no rank and no latitude. They were told, "Go out and do this." No ifs, ands or buts about it. According to Mr. Jackson's language they come well within the purview of what he said.

Now our own good old manual for court martial. I am not going to quote the language in extenso. "The general rule is that the acts of a subordinate officer or soldier done in good faith and without malice in compliance with his supposed duty or of superior orders, are justifiable unless such acts are manifestly beyond the scope of his authority and such that a man of ordinary sense and understanding would know to be illegal."

I am not going to put myself in the position of the members of this court, but I know of a number of cases where an officer in the army gets an order to do something and somehow or another he thinks it isn't quite right. It is against some directive, against some regulation. So, under some circumstances he may say to himself, "I had better ask for this in writing.", and if he gets it in writing he no longer worries about it. I know of one such case where the commanding officer of a large field--well perhaps I shouldn't say this because I am arguing evidence not before the court, but the court of its own personal knowledge will know that such has often happened--received an order from his commanding general with respect to the use of PX funds--a very ticklish subject in the army. He asked for and received the order in writing. I was his executive officer. I didn't know the facts, but I knew the fact that the order was in writing relieved my commanding officer of a lot of worry. Having the order in writing he was absolutely safe even though he suspected the legality of that order.

You had orders in writing here from officers who got it from their superiors. If it is all right for us to take an order in writing which is illegal why isn't it all right for them to do so and further, imagine any of these people saying to their superior, "That doesn't look kosher to me. It doesn't look right. I would like to have it in writing." See how far he would get.

Now I would like to refer to just one more decision that is the opinion of our own Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate in the case of the United States versus Thomas. There was a superior order in that case and the review held that it wasn't a defense in that instance and the accused--I don't know what happened to him but it was held not to be a defense. Reference is made to the Dandovery Castle case as an authority and I am coming to that case in just a moment. I would like to call the court's attention to some language in that decision which is also held in determining whether a superior order is a defense or not. I would like to point it out to the court now and come back to it later. I am quoting. "It is also noteworthy that Eich who gave the order was not present at the time accused carried it out, and that it was carried out sometime later and at a distance from the place where the order was given. In other words, accused was not acting under any sort of immediate compulsion."

Now that language makes it plain that it would be the opinion of the deputy theatre Judge Advocate that if the man who gave the order was present or nearby present and the order was carried out almost immediately after the receipt of the order and was carried out in the neighborhood of where the order was given and that there was compulsion to carry it out, then it could be a defense. That what we claim is here. Take every single one of these charges. 6 and 10 and 7 and 4 and 5. Either as in charge 4 Trumler's headquarters was next door to the Gestapo where Fuehr and Boehler worked or either like in 6 and 10 they were in the same office. In 7 the order was given in the headquarters of the police. The orders were carried out practically immediately. In some of these cases it was a question of minutes between the receipt of the order and the execution of the order and thirdly there was definitely an immediate compulsion. Moller testifies that he thought that his superiors were following behind him to make sure that he carried out the orders--the most obvious kind of compulsion.

Now I would like to take a few minutes and analyze that Dandovery Castle case.

That was a nonbelligerent vessel sunk by a German submarine. After the sinking of the ship the submarine floated to the surface and four men appeared on deck. Every other member of the crew was below deck. The four men were the Captain, two officers and the gunner. The hatches were battened down so that nobody below deck could come topside. The two officers argued with the Captain that the order was illegal. They knew it was illegal.

You have the difference between that case and our case right there. The rules governing conduct at sea are old and well established. This air warfare is something new. The two officers knew the order was illegal. These people believed it was legal.

The two officers, after their protests were overruled, used their glasses to find the life boats and direct the fire. These people didn't take a foot looking for the people who were shot.

Another fundamental difference is this: You had two men and the Captain out in the middle of nowhere. All they had to do was give him one little push and he would be out of the picture. Imagine Fuehr or Heller or somebody else trying to stop this sort of business. Furthermore the two men knew that that order to shoot at the lifeboats was the order of the Captain. These people knew the order came from their top government heads. So, without taking any more time, may it please the court, we submit that the Dandovery Castle case is not a precedent. Certainly the prosecution would not argue it as precedence from the point of view of the sentences. All these two junior officers got out of that was 4 years.

As we stated before may it please the court, there is no clearly defined set of rules which determines when a superior order is a defense or not. However, there are some eight situations in this case to which I would like to refer by way of summary.

1. There is first the undoubted fact that the order to kill was issued by Kaltenbrunner an had the highest government sanction. All this business about examination by the Gestapo at Frankfurt etc, is just digressing. There was an order to kill. That was the order carried out. That is what is being tried in this case. That order came from the very top.

2. These cases all happened during the closing months of the war when the crescendo of air attack reached an all-time high.

3. Wehrkreis 12, where these killings took place had more than its share of visitations because of its location across the air routes.

4. Rhein Westmark had been declared a near front area.

5. These men believed in the justice and legality of what they were doing. No one could listen to Trummler and question the sincerity of his belief. I say so most respectfully. I have questioned the sincerety of his basic conviction of the legality of what he did.

6. They were reasonable in their belief in the legality. This sort of warfare was a new thing. It was the decision of their government. It was directed against a special group of terror flyers described by Trummler. It is no reflection on our army or on our leadership to contend that among 100,000 recruited from all walks of life there were some who went beyond their instructions. There can be no doubt that the German people as a whole and the accused in particular were passionately and whole-heartedly convinced that terror flyers were criminals beyond the pale.

7. It is also argued on behalf of all of the accused and particularly on behalf of the enlisted, noncommissioned, and clerical personnel, that they had no choice. German law offered no appeal, no recourse to the courts or otherwise. Punishment was swift, often without the color of judicial process. You couldn't take Himmler into court the way an American citizen could take the president of the United States.

8. Finally following out the opinion of the Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate in the Thomas case, the orders were given by superiors on duty at Headquarters in the same city. Trummler's office was in Wiesbaden but he travelled. His office was next door to Gestapo Headquarters from which came Koehler and Fuehr. In some cases, as with Hellenbreich, Stattmann, and Graf they worked in the same office and were directly under the eye of their superiors. In all cases, the orders were carried out very shortly after their receipt. In some cases it was only a matter of minutes and always near the scene of the order. It follows that all these accused, at least the very big majority of them have the benefit to the full of the extenuating circumstances mentioned by the Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate in the Thomas case referred to above.

The court will have in mind these elements mentioned in the Thomas case. It follows that all of these accused or at least a very big majority of them, have the benefit to the full of the extenuating circumstances mentioned by the Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate.

Now, may it please the court, we have naturally looked for some factor which, if it were present, would put the clincher on this defense of superior orders. If we do dream up evidence what evidence should we dream up which would put on ice the question that this is a superior order and a defense under superior orders. The only thing we could think of would be a situation where all these other factors are present and somebody with higher rank stood with a gun behind the person who carried out the sentence and said "Say you shoot or else." That is the only thing we could think of. Actually and figuratively even if that were true--you heard what Moller believed was true in his case--in all these cases there is Trummler's evidence and the evidence of everybody else. They actually had a gun in their back. "Get out and do it. You know what the order is." The actual compulsion, the physical compulsion to obey was there.

Much headway of the fact that two of the Higher SS and Police Leaders deny receipt of such an order. My comment to that is that neither was in a position such as Rhein-Westmark was and consequently might not have received the order or else might have a reason to say they didn't get it. There just is no question that Trummler got it, and that seems to be the big thing.

I should like to close my argument by reminding this court that most of the directives, regulations and precedents which have weight with this court are new ones. The London Agreement of 1945. The change in their own manual, November, 1944. The opinion of Mr. Justice Jackson at the Nuernberg judgement. The opinion of our own Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate. These are all new opinions. To hold the rank and file to ethical concepts springing out of new situations is to give them credit for sociological and ethical intuitions they do not have. Leadership responsibility is one thing, but when responsibility reaches down to people who had so little voice in the management of their lives as some of these accused did, it lays its hands not on a free people but on robots shaped like men. To see how far these new decisions, the product of new times, go, I suggest to the Court a glance at these citations from Winthrop which have been made a part of the record.

I would like to add, now, a few words on behalf of Moller and Goehrendt. Both have been found not guilty of charge 2. I am not going to argue that the whole name "guilty of conspiring" requires the widest possible stretch, well I would say, even of the imagination. To call them conspirators is to make a farce of such a charge. Even with not so big a shot as General Streep. I limit myself to discussing only charge 7.

Goehrendt and all the witnesses with one possible exception say he appeared on the scene when the flyer was already out of the station. Lueck, the one possible exception, testified both ways. Even Lueck was not certain. At one time he testified Goehrendt was not at the police station while the flyer was there and later on he changed his testimony. I think the court has that change in mind. Kiwitt and Eichel say they didn't see him and Moller, the man whose testimony should be believed according to the prosecution, says that he was on the way out with the flyer when Goehrendt showed up from somewhere down the street. Albrecht, who is definitely involved in the case, said Goehrendt knew nothing about it. I need only refer to my original argument. If Goehrendt is in this thing so is Gano. Just the same hard luck made Goehrendt present there on an errand which took him past his home as made Gano. Personally I don't know why one got nailed in this charge and the other one got off.

There is no doubt that somebody gave Moller an order. I am not going to argue for this court who gave him that order but let us follow the sequence of events having in mind the opinion of the Deputy Theatre Judge Advocate. The order was given to him personally in his own headquarters. It was to be carried out at once along a route near the scene of the order. This man of inferior intelligence, according to the testimony of the medical expert, this man of low rank, could very reasonably have believed that the pistol on the person of his superior was being held at his back to compel obedience. What choice did he have. What element is missing to make superior orders a defense in his case. Certainly there was no premeditation with malice aforethought, no freedom of choice and action necessary to constitute murder. Then in this case so far as Meller is concerned and because of the facts in Meller's case, the complete absence of any evidence in justifying a conviction of Goehrendt, I respectfully ask for a finding of not guilty as to both of them.

PROSECUTION: May it please the court, the prosecution is required to present their argument first and the defense last except where it is necessary that prosecution call attention to error on the part of the defense in quoting from the record. In connection with Meller's testimony to the effect that he saw Goehrendt for the first time on the street will the court please keep in mind the cross examination on pages 1655 and 1656.

"Q Did Goehrendt go into the cellar with you?
A No.
Q So you do not know where Goehrendt was after you went into the cellar, do you?
A No.
Q You did not see Goehrendt any more until you saw him out in the Street, is that correct?
A The first time I saw him again was when I was in Rebstock Street.
Q So you do not know where Goehrendt was from the time you went to the cellar until the time you saw him in Rebstock street, is that correct?
A Well, if he had been in the police station I would have had to see him.
Q You could not see him if you were in the cellar, could you?
A When the flyer was brought in I went up from the cellar to the police station."

DEFENSE COUNSEL: I would like to say right now with respect to a possible reappearance of this sort of interruption that I object to it. I certainly, on behalf of myself and my co-defense counsel disclaim two things. In the first place, of course, we claim that when we refer to the record we sincerely hope we are telling the truth but we don't claim what we say is the evidence is the evidence. I think we ought to be allowed to continue the argument.

Dr. Rau's argument is the next one, may it please the court. All these German arguments have been translated into English. It is about to be read.

PRESIDENT: The court will recess for a half hour.

(Thereupon the court recessed until 3:30)

(Whereupon the court reconvened at 1530 hours.)

PRESIDENT: Court will come to order.

PROSECUTION: May it please the court let the record show that all personnel of the court, all personnel of the prosecution, all personnel of the defense, all the accused, the interpreter and reporter are present.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: May it please the court argument of Dr. Rau for the accused Stroop and Albrecht will be read by Mr. Rosenstock, the interpreter.

(Whereupon the English translation of argument by Dr. Rau was read by Mr. Rosenstock as follows.)

"The curtain is down. We have been bombarded by a large number of impressions of all sorts; a part of those impressions have not ceased yet. Defense counsel have not found it easy to do their duty in view of conflicting interests. Every case depends upon the determination of truth and justice. The striving for truth and justice is like all other striving for the exalted, a fight, a battle for justice and law. We must not fail. Now what is the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth? Are we humans at all able to determine the pure absolute truth? In accordance with the words of the poet, is this determination not one of God's own privileges?

We must deliberate upon everything calmly one more time, tempered by the wisdom of life of the old philosophers, "scio ut nescio" (I know that I know nothing).

We read something about a flier slaughter case somewhere. Murder! That word has been occupying human emotions ever since Cain slew his brother Abel. Murder is the deliberate unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought, according to the police officials who otherwise are the guardians of law and order in every city. Is that possible?

It is my duty to work in behalf of two of the accused.

Stroop, says the charge sheet, is a perpetrator in every charge. He gave us orders and we carried them out, say the accused Best, Goss and Trummler; we are not ones to forget what we ordered two years ago they say. Does that accusation sound convincing? Is Stroop trying to evade responsibility today? Goss and Trummler were very pompous. Do we not have a feeling telling us that he who is pompous also is not honest? The witnesses Trummler, Best and Goss come to us from the dark where they sit next to Stroop. Does that not make us somewhat wary? Can we evaluate the testimony of one accused higher than that of another? Are not all of the accused personally interested in their testimony? Do they not expect their total defense to derive from that?

What do the court psychologists tell us? Do they not tell us that the witnesses who are concerned with the result of a case are the ones that are least likely to be objective? The court psychologists and physician, Dr. Plant, in his book "The Witness and His Testimony in Criminal Cases", published in 1931, has reached the conclusion, after thorough investigation, that the accusation of a personally interested witness can not suffice for a verdict of guilty because, in his case, the burden of proof and the burden of experience do not usually coincide. Usually that becomes obvious by the utterance of a multitude of annoyances, extrinsic and intrinsic contradictions, improbabilities and variance in his testimony.

Let us visualize the testimony of the witnesses one more time. Stroop says: "I have not received any order to shoot fliers. I have not transmitted any such order, nor did I know of any such an order or the carrying out of any such an order".

Goss says: "I received from Stroop a general order to shoot all fliers that come into my hands". (Page 1079 and 1020 of the record.) "It was not just an expression of opinion, it was in the form of an order".

(Page 1021 of the record). "About the middle of March I met Best under the oaks and he brought me an order of Stroop's to shoot a flier in my custody anew". Best confirms this on (Page 1022 of the record). Goss continues on (Page 999 of the record) "I had the order, the order came from Stroop personally". "With Best I discussed the best method of carrying out the order. Best and I agreed on Buhlmann, for he was an old soldier". Best says the same thing on (Page 1070 of the record). Goss continues on (Page 990 of the record), "I then went to Hellrubenstein and transmitted to Buhlmann the order I had received from Stroop by way of Best. Buhlmann then received the order to take the flier to Easterbush and to shoot him on the way" but after forty-five minutes Buhlmann came back. The flier had not been shot. Buhlmann reports to me (Page 993 of the record) that it had been impossible on account of the presence of civilian population. [illegible]

I do not wish to burden the Court by further quotations but I should like to request it to reread the testimony of Goss on (Page 991 of the record) where Goss discusses the matter of the fears he had for himself and Buhlmann on account of the failure to carry out the order, at length. I only want to quote (Page 1015 of the record) one more time, there he says, "Had I not had the order of General Stroop, by way of Best, which I would not have ordered the execution either" (also Page 1016 of the record). [illegible]

Now what has Buhlmann to say? (Page 2015 of the record). "I refuse to shoot the flier and replied to Goss, 'that the only person who can give me such an order was General Stroop'. Goss replied, 'I shall take him there anyway'." Note well: "Anyway". Question: "Did he say I have an order from General Stroop, or did he not? Answer: 'No, he did not say that. [illegible] not because civilians interfered, but because Buhlmann refused to carry out Goss' order and called upon Stroop to support his refusal. How does not Goss say, I did receive such an order from General Stroop and if we do not carry out the order, we will both be court-martialed, but rather he accepts the refusal.

Did we hear and read correctly? The flier was not shot by Buhlmann.

The next day somebody other than Buhlmann carries out the shooting of a flier.

We must get this point clear in our minds: Goss and Best today use Stroop to justify Goss's taking the life of a flier. Buhlmann, at that time, used Stroop to justify not the taking, but the saving of the life of a flier.

But the undeviating speech of the truth has not come to an end; let us read the former statement of Goss found in Prosecution Exhibit P-141 and (Page 1025 of the record), "I can definitely confirm", mind you definitely, "that the murder committed by Micholy at that time was the direct result of the orders which reached me from Best", mind you, "from Best". So, at that time, on the 4th of June 1945, it was not an order from Stroop as Goss claims today. He then continues on (Page 1026 of the record) "On account of my knowledge of the organization of the SS in Wehrkreis XII, I am sure that this order mentioned above was given from Stroop to Best". On account of his knowledge of the organization, on account of a conclusion, therefore, and not on account of the clear facts as they are stated today, that Best had inquired at Stroop's and that he had relayed the order to him under the oath.

Thus, did not Goss make Best's statements lies? What does Micholy have to say (Page 1039 of the record) "On 15th of March 1945, I took a report from Goss to Best and related that we had captured a flier. Upon that, Best asked me why that man was still alive". So at that time, he didn't even make sure what General Stroop's opinion was.

We know his opinion. We know it from the order of which Best told us on (Page 1061 of the record), that great caution should be exerted when fliers who had made an emergency landing were captured and that a gun should be kept ready and off-safety. That order dates from the end of February 1945. Why did General Stroop order fliers to be captured with danger to one's own life if they were to be shot in the end anyway? Why didn't he simply say that fliers are to be given no quarter and were to be shot on the spot?

Compare that to what is the significance of the vague speculations in the indefinite testimony of the witness Hoecker, that she heard how Stroop told Goss 'you know/the what treatment of parachuted fliers is to be'. "That too is one of the missions of the Werewolf". That could not have been an important or secret conference, as the witness Kaleski reports on (Page 2304 of the record), for the witness would not have been able to attend it otherwise.

Furthermore, the entirely wrong impression of the witness also strikes us from her interpretation of this entirely indefinite statement of Stroop as an excitement for lynching. Here we see a confirmation of the old forensic saying, "Female witnesses forget less, but falsify more". And we again find justification for the above mentioned conclusion of legal psychology that no findings can be based upon statements of witnesses interested in the case.

Stroop is further incriminated by the accused Trumpler. Trumpler, it is true, says that he received the order to shoot terror fliers in its original form in Berlin, and that Stroop confirmed it in a general manner only and that the individual cases were not discussed. (Page 2168 of the record).

Again we have the testimony of one accused against the testimony of another accused, Vestigia terrent. The traces in the case of Goss make us fearful.

Suppose I concede the testimony of Trumpler for the moment in order to follow through with legal argument: What is an order? It is the expression of the will of the superior, given in a commanding manner with the invocation of the authority of the State. In that manner, we have gained a clear separation between it and private comments, perhaps, comments expressing annoyance and bitterness as they became audible from all sides towards the end of the war.

As Trumpler himself, and Eberstein (Page 2054 of the record) Wuensenberg (Page 2082 of the record) and Stroop have stated, he was a superior of Trumpler's only in the case of internal disturbances, otherwise the Reich Main Security Office remained Trumpler's headquarters. There was no case of internal disturbances at that time, so there was no superior - subordinate relationship between them either.

But let us not worry about that, the following seems more important to me. In its general legal nature an order is a corollary of encouragement. Former criminal law already knew the concept of omnimodo seu alius facturus, ie., the concept of the third person determined to take action under any conditions, and in that case it denies the culpability of the encourager, on account of the missing causal connection between the act and the will of the person encouraging. In other words, a person already thoroughly determined to do certain acts can no longer be encouraged to do these. So if Trumpler did receive the binding order to shoot terror fliers in Berlin and if, as he says, he was willing and compelled to carry out that order, then any further statement of anybody, as for instance Stroop, is of no significance, neither factually nor legally.

But Stroop, as we have said, denies ever having known of such orders. It is, therefore, my duty as the defense counsel to examine Trumpler's testimony critically. Not the least of the reasons for that is in order to refute the prosecution's theory of a conspiracy. That is not to say that the other accused could not be of the bonafide opinion that, on the basis of Trummler's orders there was an order from Berlin and that they were duty bound to obey that order.

One factor in contradiction to Trummler's explanation that he received an order in Berlin to shoot terror fliers is the Nuernberg sentence of the International Military Tribunal, which I believe the Court has taken judicial notice of. The sentence is very thorough and of a universal applicability and the non-interference order, the Bormann decree and the command group order are mentioned. On the other hand, it doesn't say a word about a Kaltenbrunner order claimed now by Trummler to have existed. I think one can hardly correct the judgment of Nuernberg.

In the second place, two higher SS and Police Leaders, namely, Baron von Oberstein and Prince Waldeck did not receive an order to shoot terror fliers, or have such an order transmitted to them. But since, according to Trummler, (Page 2161 of the record) it was a government measure for the energetic combatting of air warfare, these offices would have had to be notified of it too, it seems.

In the third place, the same holds true for General Kuennsberg, the commander of the regular police for the whole Reich with about three and a half million policemen and auxiliaries under him.

In the fourth place, the same holds true for Colonel Niemann. He was not informed by Colonel Trummler either.

In the fifth place, Trummler apparently did not transmit the order even to all his subordinates, for instance not to Breder or Berger in Frankfurt.

In the sixth place, about one thousand fliers were captured in Wehrkreis XII after September 1944, most of them by the police, and were sent to the IV camp Oberursel.

In the seventh place, the commanding officer of the police anti-aircraft organization, Feyhrauch, did not receive a shooting order.

In the eighth place, when Breder reported to General Muller in December 1944, that fliers were being turned over, he was not surprised at all and was in fact in agreement with this.

In the ninth place, in Stroop's staff, there was no one who knew about a shooting order. Neither Stroop's deputy Schluma nor the adjutant, Kaleske, nor his O-3 Guenther, and all that in spite of the fact that Kaleske was always very curious as he has confirmed to us on (Page 2906 of the record).

In the tenth place, Trummler did not announce the order in the command conferences of Stroop, in accordance with his own testimony in spite of the fact that that was an important matter of government of all Wehrkreis XII.

In the eleventh place, Breder is asked by Buth in March 1945 what he was to do about an order of Trummler's enjoining him to shoot fliers. So Buth found out about such an order as late as March 1945, and Trummler wants us to believe he received this order as early as September 1944.

In the twelfth place, Trummler states that he had mentioned the order to Stroop only when they were alone, upon express instructions of Kaltenbrunner. But he contradicts himself on (Page 2192 of the record) where he states that he knew that it had been Stroop's desire to shoot terror fliers. That was the reason he said he made the report, and, therefore, not upon orders of Kaltenbrunner. One could continue this series of expressed and implied discrepancies. I should only like to point at the semi-darkness about the question of whether Kaltenbrunner or Trummler ordered the method of shooting, and whether Trummler belongs to the Waffen SS or not.

Trummler claims he informed Stroop of part of the shootings, but he himself, cannot say (Page 2175 of the record) whether the phone calls were taken by Stroop or a member of his staff.

Kaltenbrunner is dead. Müller is probably dead. They speak no more, but Stroop speaks. In view of the facts described, his word must be at least as good as Trummler's. One cannot prove a case against Stroop with Trummler. The prosecution witnesses against Stroop themselves feel that their credibility is shaken. For that reason, they made the witness Stemmler show up. I have to add nothing to the excellent examination Colonel Hunter conducted for the Court (Page 2137 of the record and following) in order to prove that the accused Goss and Trummler did not do themselves a favor with that witness.

Now I should like to point briefly to the peculiar similarity of coinciding circumstances in the cases of Goss, Trummler and Stemmler: Nobody was present when they received the order and they talked about it to nobody. Stemmler adds that no shootings took place on account of the order.

Now the case of Lassak remains. I assume that one of my colleagues will argue that Lassak did not give an order to shoot fliers, what orders he did receive and which orders he transmitted. But, if there is no order of Lassak's to shoot fliers, then neither he nor Stroop can be made responsible for any possible shooting. Lassak made his first statements under the influence of severe mistreatment and duress. The witnesses Niemann and Coates confirm this. Lassak says, that he did not repeat the order in its entirely for that reason and that the statements had been put into his mouth. The order had read that fliers who were spies or agents or saboteurs were to be shot. (Page 196 of the record). That is different from what he said at first and is not declared criminal in international law. Stroop comments that the order which he transmitted to Lassak was the so-called "command group order" of the supreme commander of the armed forces which had been addressed to the armed forces and sent to the police only in the form of information copies, and for that reason Lassak destroyed it promptly. The witness Hoecker confirms in her statements on (Page 200 of the record and the following) that the order concerned was not a general shooting order for fliers but as can be gathered unambiguously from Prosecution Exhibit 1-26 which was submitted to her, the command group order against saboteurs.

Critical examination of the evidence presented, therefore, in the case that a conclusive proof against Stroop beyond a reasonable doubt has not been presented in any of the charges from 3 to 10. If, however, he did not participate in the shootings, and that has not been proven either, or have knowledge of them, then charge 1 and 2 also collapse.

I shall now turn to Albrecht.

Albrecht has never been accused of having issued or carrying out a shooting order. I therefore suppose that what he is charged with is going along, knowing that the shooting of the flier was intended and not preventing it in a culpable manner. Albrecht denies having known that the flier was to be shot by Moller upon orders of Eichel.

But do not all conditions seem to contradict that statement? Did not Kiwitt, Lueck and Como tell that the police director had said, "The flier will be bumped off"?

We heard that Albrecht permitted the flier to sit down and had water given to him before the police director came in. Smoking in the police station was generally prohibited to prisoners, Como says. (Page 1631 of the record) Albrecht permitted him to smoke, all the witnesses say.

This man who is evidentally easy-going, is then supposed to have deliberately condoned the killing of this flier half an hour later, or even encouraged it. That man who has served the police for a quarter of a century and whose hair has turned grey in that service? There is some feeling within us that objects to that assumption.

Let us calmly consider further: When was that statement, "He will be bumped off", made? Kiwitt, Lueck and Como say it was made shortly after the arrival of the police director, and Kiwitt says "Before I had a look at the room." What did Albrecht say upon this comment of Eichel, "He will be bumped off"? "Not by me, though", "I refuse to do that." Compare Lueck (Page 461 of the record and Kiwitt (Page 1502 of the record and 1602)

That would be the first confirmation to our vague feeling that Albrecht might not have anything to do with the matter. What did the other police officials do when they heard about the bumping off? They disappeared says Lueck and even Koller, (Pages 462 and 1411 of the record). Koller received the order from the police director, with nobody present but the two. Eichel denies having issued the order, completely. Koller walked out with Como. He did not talk to Como, particularly he said nothing about a shooting order and Como did not know about it. Koller did not talk to Albrecht either; but didn't Albrecht know? Had he not told Koller personally: "You know the order of the police director". What order? Did not Kiwitt say on (Page 1595 of the record) that the police director had suggested to Albrecht that the flier be shot, but that Albrecht refused categorically and that "I, therefore, considered the matter closed." This particular, in view of the fact that the police director told a police official as he left (Page 1592 of the record), "Take him to the police headquarters". Is it not then the last order that would be generally applicable, namely the one "Take him to the police headquarters"? (On Page 1595 of the record) Kiwitt continues, "My impression was that the flier would be turned in". Could it then not be also Albrecht's impression that the police director had given up the idea of shooting the flier in view of the opposition he was meeting? I do not have to remind the Court of the further conversation which Albrecht claims took place but which Eichel denies, to the effect that Eichel wanted to take the flier along to Offenbach in his own car even.

Why did Albrecht come along at all? Why did they walk along a back way and not the direct road? All witnesses affirm that there was a crowd outside the building, that the crowd was excited and it followed the flier. Was it, therefore, wrong for Albrecht to state even then according to the witnesses testimony that he did not want to go through the excited crowd and town, but rather use the almost uninhabited back way which also took you to Offenbach, as the witnesses confirm? Was it, not in fact, not practically his duty to avoid that danger? And was it not also his duty in view of the danger the flier was subjected to, to accompany him to the limits of his district? As Moller picked the wrong way, Goehrandt runs after him upon the urging of Albrecht. Moller turned back and while Albrecht is talking to the witness Behrod and tells him that this flier would be duly sent to Offenbach, the shots are fired. Why? Moller says, "Suddenly it flashed through my mind, you have to fire here, and I fired because I had the definite order" (Page 1501 of the record). Did he not also say (Page 1507 of the record) "I wanted to go along until I got an additional order or until something else would be said to me"? He never received any such additional order and nobody ever told him anything about things flashing through his mind.

So, we have some more doubts, but are not entirely convinced yet that Albrecht had no knowledge of anything. Now, how did Albrecht act after the deed? Let us again listen to the report of others. Lueck and Como. "Der hat uns eine geschafft", which means "He did something undesirable to us". What else did Albrecht do? On the same day, he issues the order, "I don't want to see any flier in the police station any more." "They are to be turned over to the Army promptly", as Lueck says (Page 1621 of the record and the following) and Goehrandt (Page 1570 of the record). But the tragic development has not come to its end yet. When another flier comes to the police station, taken in by a civilian, while Albrecht was gone, he gives the order by telephone that the flier is to be taken to the headquarters of the Protective Police by the shortest route.

e hear, "Promptly, by the shortest route, to the superior headquarters." We say the accompanying guards picked by Goehrendt, namely, Michel and Schneider. And I think we are all convinced that these two were not capable of harming a fly, much less a flier. In spite of all precautions taken, the flier is still shot in the end, At any rate without any participation by Albrecht. The details and the tragic chain of events I assume be described to you by my co-counsel Mr. Machael. The tragic fate initiated by Koller is not at its conclusion yet. A few days later another flier comes up to the police station again while Albrecht is gone, and again taken there by a civilian. Albrecht, at once sees to it that the Luftwaffe is notified. A captain and a sergeant of the Air Corps come to pick up the flier soon later. The flier is turned over to them. Compare Goehrendt (page 1581 of the record) Bluemel (page 1643 of the record). All seems to go well. Then Unger comes in and has the flier turned over to himself by the Air Corps officer for a receipt. A short time later, he secretly shot him.

Did Albrecht try, carefully and by every conceivable means, to prevent a repitition of the bitter experiences he had with Koller? He did. And that permits us to set aside the last doubts that he did not try to do the same thing in the case of Koller. He did not succeed in any of the cases. That is his tragic misfortune, but not his guilt. Is it not striking that the two men who present the most impressive contrast with each other, Michel and Koller, agree in stating that Albrecht is free from guilt. Did not Koller practically say (page 1492 of the record) that Albrecht could not have prevented the shooting of the flier, "I had my order from Michel and that is the one I carried out". I have already pointed to the significance of the animodo sed alius facturus. Koller was such a person. That excludes any criminal responsibility of Albrecht's for he was in no position to prevent Koller's act. Albrecht may be guilty, but he is not necessarily guilty, and it is better to acquit a guilty person than to sentence an innocent one. Albrecht can actually be innocent.

At the beginning and in the course of my argument I opened up the question how it was possible for police officials to permit themselves to perform these extraordinarily regrettable killings. I can answer this question for you (in a translation) with the statements of the American Captain Willis C. Rowe in the American periodical "The Infantry Journal" of April 1946; "Citizens and civilians are shocked at the idea of having enemy soldiers who have surrendered, killed. But how can one who never saw his comrades mangled or shot pass judgment?"

Did Beat not see it and did he not loose his father on account of the airwarfare?

A further quotation, "The British as well as the Germans felt bitter hatred towards enemy fliers who had come down during a bombing attack. On both sides, there were many places where such fliers were lynched or beaten by civilians. Only through interference, many of them were saved. How can we condemn a man who has just seen his child lose its sight or his wife become a cripple because he attempts to take revenge on those he feels responsible?"

To the many questions which this case has brought up I should like to add the one Shakespeare has his Julius Caesar utter, "Who is here so vile, that will not love his country! If any speak for him I have offended." And, with Shakespeare, I want to continue, "I call for a reply". We are all pausing for a reply. The dead and the living, on both sides.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: Major Saxon will now argue for various accused, whose names he himself will give to the court.

MAJOR SAXON: May it please the court, in the preparation of the defense of this case, it was decided and ordered by Lieutenant Colonel William Bernen, Chief of the Defense Counsel, that the above named accused, Hans Trummler, Julius Lassak, Georg Best, Erwin Goss and Heinrich Matthias Micholy be represented by this officer as one of the duly appointed American counsel. The accused Trummler, Best, Goss and Micholy, in addition to the appointed American counsel, requested the services of Dr. Max Buerger, and he likewise appears as counsel for these four. In presenting this argument, Dr. Buerger and I have agreed that in addition to these five, he will also present a short argument at the end on behalf of the accused Rauf. In order to present this argument properly, I prepared part of it as counsel for these accused and he prepared a part, and we will read mine first and Dr. Buerger second. Therefore, this closing argument is devoted mainly to the five above named accused and is presented to this court by counsel as their names appear in the sequence given heretofore. It is submitted to the court that none of the above accused is in conflict with one another. Trummler, for example, as Chief of the Security Police of Wehrkreis 12, exercised no command function over any of the other four named accused and had no contact with them. (2171, 2177).

I might state to the court that in preparing this written argument from which I am reading to you, we have inserted various references to the record, which I will not burden the court with reading at this time.

Trummler took his orders directly from Dr. Kaltenbrunner in Berlin and his secondary orders from General Juergen Stroop, Police Commander of Wehrkreis 12.

Colonel Lassak, as the Director of Police over the cities of Giessen, Friedburg and Bad Nauheim, was part of the Order Police, who through a successive chain of command, received his orders through General Wunnenberg in Berlin.

The three accused Major Best, 1st Lieutenant Goss and Private Michely were directly under the command of General Stroop. None of these last three were a part of the police system of Germany but were members of the Waffen SS and in varying capacities connected with the Werewolf School at Wallrabenstein, Germany, a few kilometers outside of the city of Wiesbaden (R1055).

Therefore, we find these five accused in three separate categories: Colonel Trummler as Chief of the Security Police, Colonel Lessak as Director of the Order Police, Major Best, 1st Lieutenant Goss and Private Michely as members of the Waffen SS.

The first part of this argument is devoted to Colonel Hans Trummler. Colonel Trummler is a native born German who, as a boy 17 years of age, fought in the field of battle on the western front in the first World War, returning thereafter to complete his high school education and then served as a German soldier until 1920, helping to supress internal revolt in the German Reich. Thereafter, he graduated from the University of Leipzig with a degree in Political Science and graduated from the Business University of Leipzig, with a degree in Economics. Then after ten years, until 1933, he participated in the economic and political affairs of his country in the banking and automotive industry. He joined the NSDAP in 1928, when this political party was a minor one of some twenty odd parties striving for control of the German Reich and he did so as an idealist. He successively thereafter belonged to the various NSDAP Sub-organizations, mainly as a paying member or as an instructor without any executive or command function until the time around 1941 when he became the Commander of the Security Police School in Furstenburg.

On the 5th of September 1941, he received a summons to appear before Dr. Kaltenbrunner in Berlin, to which place he went on the 18th day of September 1944 and after spending the day with Dr. Kaltenbrunner and General Mueller, received his instructions and orders to take over the position of Commander of the Security Police in Wehrkreis 12 with his Headquarters at Wiesbaden, Germany. The developments of the war made Wehrkreis 12, at this time, the aerial roadway for allied air assaults on Germany. It also at that time was obvious to the German High Command that this would be the main point of assault on the part of the allied ground forces. Colonel Trummler was informed by Kaltenbrunner and Mueller of the magnitude and seriousness of his new command, he was given great and extensive powers of command and was, amongst other things which are pertinent to the issues in this trial, told in substance that so-called allied terror fliers were to be summarily executed upon capture. Kaltenbrunner explained to Trummler that a terror flier was one who bombed and strafed defenseless civilians and non-military objectives. Colonel Trummler dared to question Dr. Kaltenbrunner on the advisability of this action because he thought it would bring the German Reich into conflict with foreign powers for violations of the usages of land warfare and put the German Reich in conflict with the precepts laid down at the Geneva Convention. Kaltenbrunner's reply was sharp and to the point and to the effect that the German Government had already considered these features and determined its future action and that he, Trummler, was in no position to question the orders of his government. (R 2159-2163)

On the 20th of September 1944, Colonel Trummler took over his duties in Wiesbaden. On instructions from Kaltenbrunner, he reorganized the various sub-branches and personnel of the Security Police im Wehrkreis 12 and found that in addition to his own headquarters in Wiesbaden, he had approximately 120 sub-offices and 6200 personnel under his command. (R 2165-2166)

Among his other instructions and orders that he received from Dr. Kaltenbrunner, were orders to the effect that he was under the command of General Juergen Stroop and that he must coordinate his efforts and cooperate to the fullest with the three gauleiters of Wehrkreis 12.

A few days after assuming his new command, he reported to General Stroop and the evidence discloses that Trummler and Stroop immediately were incompatible to one another and Trummler called Kaltenbrunner and asked to be relieved and Kaltenbrunner ordered him to carry on. The evidence thereafter discloses that although Trummler and Stroop were not always in accord, Trummler followed the orders given him by Kaltenbrunner, attended command conferences of General Stroop's approximately once a week and performed the duties he was ordered to do until the end of the war. (R 2167-2168)

Thereafter and on the 19th of October, 1944, the gendarmerie brought to Colonel Trummler's office in Wiesbaden, an American flier that they designated as a terror flier. The flier was examined by Captain Wreda, Trummler's adjutant, and this interrogation of the alleged terror flier sustained the gendarmerie that he was actually a terror flyer. Thereupon, Colonel Trummler ordered Kriminalrat Luckart to send him "two men" to perform the execution. The details of this execution are set out in Charge 4 and need no further explanation here. Trummler, in so doing, was following out the direct order given him by his government. (R 2172-2173)

Substantially as to facts, a similar execution was ordered by Colonel Trummler on the 30th of December 1944, the details of which are set out in Charge V. (R 2174-2175)

As to Charges VI and X, Colonel Trummler has frankly told this court as to the sixth, he has no personal recollection and as to the tenth, it would have been physically impossible for him to have been contacted. Nevertheless, he frankly tells this court that the executions had in these two charges, he assumes the full responsibility for because they were performed in compliance with the order he received from the German government through Dr. Kaltenbrunner and which he passed on to certain of the lower echelons of his command. (R 2176)

The above is a statement of facts covering the charges against Colonel Trummler and from which he must be found either guilty or innocent.

For counsel to say to this court that the orders given by Colonel Trummler for the execution of terror fliers were justifiable, lawful and proper would be a subterfuge and to beg the question. It would be an insult to the United States Government and all countries who have attempted to carry on war in accordance with the law of land warfare and would be a reflection upon the intelligence of this court. Since the facts in Colonel Trummler's case are clear, counsel desire to call to the court's attention certain premises of fact and certain substantive law that governed the action of this accused.

On the 1st of September 1939, the following exchange of communications were had between President Roosevelt and Adolf Hitler, relating to war. These are taken from the so-called White Book No. 6, which was introduced in evidence before the International Tribunal in Nuernberg in the so-called Nuernberg trials. Without the official headings, I would like to read briefly the two exchanges of correspondence. The first is from President Roosevelt addressed to Adolf Hitler, dated the first of September 1939.

"Your Excellency, I have the honor to inform your Excellency that my government has asked me to give the German National Government the following message in the name of the President of the United States. During the armities which are raging on various places of the earth in the last years, merciless bombing attacks from the air upon civilians in unfortified areas have brought about the mutilation and the death of thousands of defenseless men, women and children. They have caused the greatest horror among all civilized men and women and have horrified all of humanity to a great extent. If this form of inhuman barbarism will again be used in the tragic war which the world now faces, hundreds of thousands of innocent human beings will lose their lives, people who have absolutely no guilt in the enmities which have just broken out and who are not in the least involved in them. Therefore, I direct the urgent appeal to all governments who are involved in these hostilities to publicly declare that they are decided to allow their armed forces under no conditions and at no time to make bombing attacks from the air upon civilian populations or unfortified cities and that all their opponents will abide by these rules of warfare. I beg you for an immediate answer.

Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Following that in the same letter is this short paragraph by Alexander Kirk:

"I have the honor to add that I have been requested to send an answer to the above message by telegraph immediately and for that reason have placed myself at the disposal of your Excellency and my government in order to bring about the transfer of this answer and I use this opportunity in order to again assure his Excellency of my highest respect.

Alexander Kirk"

Adolf Hitler's reply on the same date was as follows:

"Mr. Representative!

I have the honor to give you the following answer of the German National Counselor in regard to your note of today in which you gave me a message from the press of the United States of America in regard to the dropping of bombs upon nonmilitary objectives: "the opinion which is raised in the message of Mr. Roosevelt that it is a commandment of humanity to avoid dropping bombs on nonmilitary objectives under any conditions during military actions corresponds completely to my own point of view and it is a point of view which I have always represented. I, therefore, agree to this proposal in every form that the governments which are now involved in hostilities publicly make a corresponding declaration. For myself, I have already made official public notice in the speech which I held today in the Reichstag in the Parliament; that the German Air Force have received the order that during enemy maneuvers they must restrict themselves to military objectives. It is, of course, a condition which is self-understood that if this order is to be maintained, the enemy air forces will have to abide by the same rule.

Adolf Hitler"

"I would be very thankful if you would immediately hand over to President Roosevelt the answer which is stated above.

At the same time, I use this occasion in order to tell you, Representative, that you can be assured of my highest respect.

Von Ribbentrop."

I have indulged on the patience of the court to read these two exchanges of communications between the two representatives of the United States and Germany. The purpose, I hope will be hereinafter made plainer.

Now, after this exchange between President Roosevelt and Adolf Hitler, World War 2 actually came into being and gained momentum until all belligerents were referring to World War 2 as "Total War." These phrases were used repeatedly by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler. Modern destructive devices came into being and use by both sides except the use of poison gas and of this instrument of war, both sides had huge quantities ready for action and had made elaborate and extensive preparation for the defense against it but, for reasons unknown to this counsel, it was never used.

As regards aerial warfare, the Geneva Conference stated as follows: I am taking this from Field Manual 25-10, page 12:

> "Bombardment of undefended places forbidden. - The attack of bombardment, by whatever means, of towns, villages, dwellings or buildings which are undefended, is prohibited." (H.R. Art. 25).

Regardless of this prohibition, both sides in World War 2 bombed indiscriminately prohibited places and defenseless civilians.

As regards punishment for violations of the laws of war, the Geneva Conference provided as follows:

> "Liability of offending belligerent. - A belligerent party which violates the provisions of said regulations (H.R.) shall, if the case demands, be liable to pay compensation. It shall be responsible for all acts committed by persons forming part of its armed forces. (H.IV,Art.3)." See Page 86, FM 27-10.

Further than that, and in Field Manual 27-10, the following is provided:

> "Individuals of the armed forces will not be punished for these offences in case they are committed under the orders or sanction of their Government or Commanders. The Commanders ordering the commission of such acts, or under whose authority they are committed by their troops, may be punished by the belligerent into whose hands they may fall."

On November 1st, 1944, the War Department of the United States attempted to amend the last quotation by stating in substance that individuals who violated the rules of land warfare on the direct order of their commanders were not immune to punishment as war criminals but such a command having been given and obeyed which was in violation of the rules of land warfare, would mitigate the offense of the accused and be taken into consideration in determining degree of guilt and in mitigation. This change reads as follows:

C1

RULES OF LAND WARFARE

Changes)
No. 1) War Department,
Washington 25, D.C., 15 November 1944.

FM 27-10, 1 October 1940, is changed as follows:

345.1. Liability of offending individuals (Added).--Individuals and organizations who violate the accepted laws and customs of war may be punished therefor. However, the fact that the acts complained of were done pursuant to order of a superior or government sanction may be taken into consideration in determining culpability, either by way of defense or in mitigation of punishment. The persons giving such orders may also be punished.

347. Offenses by armed forces.- The principal offenses ... inhabitants in occupied territory.

(AG 300.7 (11Nov44).)

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

G. C. MARSHALL,
Chief of Staff.

Official:
J. A. ULIO,
Major General,
The Adjutant General."

It is the contention of defense that Change 1, above quoted, is illegal and contrary to the established rules of the Geneva Convention because the United States, on its own volition and without the concurrence of some thirty odd signatory nations, did, in the midst of a war, attempt to change the rules of land warfare.

I desire to call to the court's attention a few citations in regard to conspiracy, taken from JAG of the Army. I want to call the following to the court's attention. This is cited as the law:

454 (24) "A soldier, not engaged in criminal practices, was incited and lured into the commission of a criminal offense by a military police officer, acting through an assistant. The soldier was convicted of conspiring with the assistant to commit the offense. Held, that the conviction was illegal as the offense of unlawful conspiracy requires a combination or meeting of minds and since the assistant to the military police officer had no intention of committing the offense himself there could not be that combination or meeting of minds. Held further, that there was a failure of proof as to the overt act, for since accused was incited or lured into committing the deed alleged as the overt act it could have no legal significance in its relation to the offense charged.

I call this to the court's attention, taken from Underhill's Criminal Evidence in regard to burden of proof relating to crime:

772 "Burden of proof -- One who alleges a conspiracy has the burden to prove it by sufficient testimony consisting of substantive facts. Mere suspicions, speculation, relationship or association and companionship, do not establish a conspiracy. But association for an illegal purpose may establish a conspiracy. The proof must establish the conspiracy beyond a reasonable doubt, and must show that accused did something other than participate in knowledge of the illegal agreement or common design, he participated therein. However, if a conspiracy is established, slight evidence of one's participation therein is all that is required to connect him with the conspiracy.

1671 "But it needs something more than a proof of mere passive cognizance of fraudulent or illegal action of others to sustain conspiracy. There must be shown some sort of active participation by the parties charged."

In addition to that, on behalf of these accused, I call the court's attention to Wheaton's International Law, page 351, 1944 Edition, to a somewhat extensive citation there that I will not read to the court but which will be furnished in the record.

"In some cases allied airmen, as opposed to Germans, seem to have abandoned bombing expeditions lest they should injure civilians, but the idea that this forbearance can be looked for as a rule seems utterly idle, and it appears clear that the German practice must be expected to be generally adopted in any future war if bombing is allowed at all. It was widely practiced in the war of 1939 onwards. It is not surprising, therefore, that no enthusiasm has been felt for the draft code elaborated at the Hague in 1923, but not ratified. Aerial bombardment for the purpose of terrorizing the civilian population, or of destroying or damaging private property not of a military character, or of injuring non-combatants, is prohibited. (Article 23.) Aerial bombardment for the purpose of enforcing compliance with requisitions in kind or payment of contributions of money is prohibited. (Article 23.) (1) Aerial bombardment is legitimate only when directed at a military objective, that is to say, an object of which the destruction or injury would constitute a distinct military advantage to the belligerent; (2) such bombardment is legitimate only when directed exclusively at the following objectives:- military forces; military works; military establishments or depots; factories constituting important and well-known centres engaged in the manufacture of arms, ammunition, or distinctively military supplies; lines of communication or transportation used for military purposes; (3) the bombardment of cities, towns, villages, dwellings, or buildings not in the immediate neighbourhood of the operations of land forces is prohibited. In cases where the objectives specified in para. (2) are so situated that they cannot be bombarded without the indiscriminate bombardment of the civilian population, the aircraft must abstain from bombardment; (4) in the immediate neighborhood of the operations of land forces, the bombardment of the operations of land forces, the bombardment of cities, towns, villages, dwellings, or buildings is legitimate, provided that there exists a reasonable presumption that the military concentration is sufficiently important to justify such bombardment, having regard to the danger thus caused to the civilian population. (Article 24). Breach of these limitations renders a belligerent State liable to pay compensation for injury to person or property. There are the usual provisions for protection of buildings dedicated to public worship, art, science or charitable purposes, hospitals, hospital ships, and even public monuments, but the probability of the rules being effective in practice is obviously negligible; they seem open to as many objections as the older distinction between defended and undefended areas."

In conclusion, so far as the accused Colonel Trumler is concerned, I want to state as follows:

1. The offenses charged to this accused in Charges I, III, VII, VIII and IX are fully without foundation or proof as a matter of fact or law.

2. The offenses charged to the accused in Charges II, IV, V, VI and X have foundation in fact both by proof and admission of the accused.

3. It is uncontroverted, I believe, that total war existed and that unquestionably the rules of land warfare were violated by all participants.

4. It is also an uncontroverted fact that the accused Trumler had a direct order from his government to direct the execution of the allied airmen termed "terror fliers."

If the court will permit me to briefly comment on what I have termed "Proposition No. 1." -- It seems unnecessary for counsel to burden the court with argument regarding the charge of conspiracy in Charge I, in which this accused is named. However, this brief statement should be made. If a conspiracy existed to violate the laws of land warfare, it was conceived and born in Berlin by the men who ran the German Government and who were, as a matter of fact, the German Government and who are now either dead or in hiding and none of whom are named as conspirators in this charge. There certainly is no evidence that Colonel Trumpler conspired with any of the named accused. It was shown conclusively by the evidence that he merely passed on the direct order of his government to his subordinates and neither he nor they had in any way initiated, formulated or carried into execution a personal plan of their own conception to violate the laws of land warfare. Colonel Trumpler has not been connected by one iota of evidence in Charges III, VII and VIII and further, it should be noted by this court that the above named accused thereunder were all members of the Order Police (Ordnung Polizei) over whom he had no command, no contact or intercourse and whom he did not so much as even know until long after the end of the war and, of course, after the dates on which these offenses are alleged to have been committed.

Further than that, it is conclusively shown that Colonel Trumpler had nothing to do with the Werewolf School, nor the offense charged in Charge IX, under the date of March 18th, 1945, and that he did not so much as even know the accused Best, Goss and Michely until after the end of the war. Further argument on Proposition 1 seems to this counsel to be superfluous.

Now as to Proposition No. 2, it could not be denied that the executions enumerated in Charges IV, V, VI and X either emanated by the direct transmittal of Kaltenbrunner's order by Colonel Trumpler or by the fact that Colonel Trumpler transmitted Kaltenbrunner's order for the execution of terror fliers as a manner for future disposition of such fliers. It is the contention of the accused that under the law cited above he obeyed the direct order of his government as given to him by Kaltenbrunner on the 18th day of September 1944, and that he had no alternative except to obey it and that he believed that this was a lawful and legal order because both sides had violated the laws and rules of land warfare. Kaltenbrunner defined what constituted terror fliers and this definition was clear to Colonel Trumpler to this extent, that terror fliers certainly were violating the rules of land warfare, that they were criminals in so doing and that it could not be expected that they would be entitled to the protection of surrendered prisoners of war of a belligerent state. In this connection, it should be noted that Colonel Trumpler was strictly a soldier, that the prosecution has admitted that he was a soldier. The court should take into consideration in this connection his general demeanor, his utter frankness and candor on the witness stand and the fact that he told this court the truth and he frankly told the court the truth regarding some of the accused who did not have the courage to tell this court the truth.

As regards Charge II, Colonel Trumpler, by virtue of the Nuernberg decision is, of course, automatically guilty of being a member of organizations determined by that decision to be criminal in nature. Further in defense of Colonel Trumpler, it should be noted that no evidence of facts have been introduced that show that he was guilty of any of the crimes personally for which these organizations were found guilty and the court's attention is called to Prosecution's Exhibit No. P-18, which in detail therein gives the substance of what constituted the crimes these organizations were found guilty of.

That is what I have to say on behalf of Colonel Trummler except a brief summary at the end. Now I come to Colonel Julius Lassack.

This accused, the evidence discloses, was a railroad man from 1931 up until the time he was drafted to become the Director of Police on the 11th of January 1944. He had held for some time the honorary title of Colonel in the Allgemeine SS but held no function and made no contribution to the SS other than to being a dues paying member at the rate of fifty pfennigs a month up until September 1939, from which date he did not so much as pay dues. He did not seek this job but due to the stress of the war and the shortage of manpower in Germany, he was drafted from his railroad job to this one in Giessen (R 871) and the only monetary gain being an increase in pay of eighteen marks a month. The evidence is clear as to the facts regarding this accused. He was, as a matter of fact, so poorly informed as to the work he was about to do that they had to send him to a training school near Regensburg to inform him on the duties he was to perform. He was, as a matter of fact, extremely "small fry" in the Police System of Germany, having under his command the small cities of Giessen, Bad Nauheim and Friedburg, with a total personnel of approximately one hundred. (R 874-875). The uncontroverted evidence of both the prosecution and the defense discloses that he personally received the so-called Bormann "non-interference" order. Then he received the order directing that captured fliers be turned over to the Gestapo for interrogation (R 883) and subsequently he received an informational copy of the so-called "Terror Flyer Shooting Order" (R 884) (R 895). He secretly destoyed these orders and never passed on the information contained therein to any of his subordinates. (R 877). It is further uncontroverted that no allied flier was ever so much as harmed in his jurisdiction by either himself or any of his subordinates but that quite to the contrary, he gave definite instructions that captured allied airmen were to be protected and aided. (See evidence of Captain Rust on page 857-859-858-860 of the transcript.) The evidence is clear that the flier in question in Charge III was first captured by Gestapo men who did not want to disclose their identity, that the Policemeister Mannah relieved the unidentified Gestapo men of the flier because of the threatening gestures of the crowd, in following out the orders of Colonel Lassak to protect all fliers (R 898), that Mannah brought the flier to the air raid shelter in order to determine his proper disposition. That Lassak, who had been out in the area checking up on the bombing damage, then returned to Headquarters and received a call from Gestapo Chief Winzer stating that the Gestapo had first captured this flier and that they wanted him back for interrogation and that Winzer would send a man over to bring him to Gestapo Headquarters, that Winzer did this and that Lassak directed Mannah to accompany the flier to Gestapo Headquarters so that the flier would not be injured en route by the populace. (R 889)

It is obvious that Colonel Lassah is in no way guilty under Charge 1 because there is no evidence that he conspired with any of these named accused, none of whom he so much as even knew or even had even a speaking acquaintance, although General Streep and Major Girke had on one occasion each paid him an official call after he took this official position. (Record 896-899). As to Charge II, while it is true he was a member of the Allgemeine SS and held the honorary title of Colonel, it cannot be said that any evidence discloses that he held any function or position of authority of any kind, nor that he was guilty of any of the crimes charged to the SS organizations and as determined by the Nuernberg decision heretofore cited to the court. (NOI-902).

It seems nothing further need to be said as to Charge 3 because he was in no way a participant in the final disposition of this flier as clearly shown by the evidence.

I further call the court's attention to the fact according to the Prosecution's own evidence, the so-called "confession", which as a matter of fact was a statement against interest, was obtained from Lassak by cruelties, threats, beatings and general intimidation and that the witness Coates for the Government testified that when Zinn got through with the so-called question and answer statement of Lassack, dated the 5th of August 1946, that this statement was to quote Coats as follows: "This statement was the way Zinn wanted it and in his words and not those of Lassak."

The uncontroverted evidence is that previous to that time Lassak had been interrogated regarding concentration camps, which he had nothing whatever to do with, and that he was unmercifully beaten, one tooth was knocked out and he was under medical care for a week or ten days and that he showed black and blue marks for at least two weeks thereafter. The manner of treatment of this accused was strictly un-American and in direct violation of all of the concepts of democracy and certainly is a sad commentary on some of the methods to secure evidence of war crimes. The only excuse I can see for the conduct of Zinn and Coates is that both of these gentlemen, prior to 1939, lived in Germany or Austria, and both of them are of German or Austrian origin.

The worst thing that can be said against Colonel Lassak is the mere fact that he was a member of the Allgemeine SS. He has now been in prison twenty-two months and has, in the judgment of this officer, been more than adequately punished.

I desire now to go to Charge IX, which involves Major Best, 1st Lieutenant Goss, and Private Heinrich Matthias Richely. The evidence here discloses that Major Best was an officer of the German armed forces who had fought on the front in Africa, Sicily, Italy and in France. That he was sent to General Stroop's Headquarters by General Preitzmann to organize and to put into operation a training school known as "W-12".

commonly known as Werewolf. (R 1053-1054) That when arrived at General Stroop's Headquarters, General Stroop told him in no uncertain terms that only he was in charge of the Werewolf School, and he relegated Best to a staff position at his Headquarters without any authority or command function and made him a sort of a liaison officer between Stroop's Headquarters and the Werewolf School. (R-1055)

1st Lieutenant Goss, the record discloses, was a highly educated and intelligent individual who fought with the German Wehrmacht for years on the eastern front against the Russians and suffered some sixty odd wounds, the result of which crippled him for life. That he carries many steel fragments in his body still, including three in his brain and that he lost one eye. That he suffered these injuries in combat and he was discharged from the service after a year or so in the hospitals and then was drafted into the Waffen SS in October 1944 when the war became so crucial in Germany. (R 962) That by virtue of his former rank as a Wehrmacht soldier and officer, he was given his same rank as 1st Lieutenant. (R 962) He was originally intended to act as Stroop's Adjutant but Stroop determined that he would command the Werewolf School at Wallrabenstein and would also act as security commander in that area. (R 983-985) Among other orders given him by General Stroop in a personal conference in Stroop's office in February 1945 and in the presence of Elisa Hoecker, the personal secretary of General Stroop, Stroop gave him the order that Terror Fliers were to be executed (R-985, R-2143).

Private Michely, the record discloses, was a soldier of the Wehrmacht, in the Spring of 1939, and in June 1939 while still serving in the Army, was gravely injured in a motorcycle accident, which, among other things, caused him to lose one eye. He was a school teacher by profession and after spending a couple of years in the hospitals, he was released unfit for military duty and resumed his profession until the Fall of 1944, when due to the crucial shortage of manpower in Germany, he was drafted into the Waffen SS and sent to the Werewolf School at Wallrabenstein (R 1030-1031). The pertinent facts to this charge are as follows:

On the 15th of March 1945, a captured flier was brought to Lieutenant Goss' headquarters in Wiesbaden. Goss telephoned Best, asking that he, Goss, be given orders from General Stroop as to what disposition should be made of this flier. It should be borne in mind that while Lieutenant Goss had specific orders in February "to do away" with parachuted fliers and terror fliers, that this was the first one that he had captured and that he wanted specific instructions from his commander, General Stroop, as to actual disposition. Best was not in when Goss called, so Goss left a message that one of Best's subordinates should, in turn, inform Best upon his return of the request of Goss and thereupon Best went to General Stroop and asked for instructions. Stroop told Best to tell Goss that it was his order that the flier should be executed. Best met Goss "under the oaks", that being their common meeting place in Wiesbaden, that evening around six or seven o'clock and transmitted General Stroop's order to Goss. Goss in turn directed that one Ruhlmann, an SS man under his command, perform the execution. Further, as disclosed by the evidence, this execution was not performed. (R 988-991) R 1000-1001)

Following that up, on the 18th of March 1945, Goss learned through some children that an allied flier was in the fields adjoining the town of Wallrabenstein and he directed Private Michely to apprehend him. This was about two o'clock in the afternoon, and Michely, after pursuing the flier for about onehalf hour did apprehend him. The flier was armed. He carried money of several different European countries. He had maps of Europe and a quantity of rations on his person. When returned to Goss' headquarters and interrogated by Goss, the captured airman was evasive except to admit that he had been in the area for two or three days and declined to tell more of his activities. (R 1002-1004) R 1034-1037). Having heretofore been threatened by a severe punishment by General Stroop for having failed to execute the flier captured on the 15th of March (R 1000-1002; 1005-1005), Goss ordered the flyer to be executed by Private Michely who accomplished the fact the night of the 18th. The flier having been executed, was buried in a coffin in the cemetery of the town of Wallrabenstein (Prosecution Exhibit 1144-J) and his personal effects were turned over to the Burgomeister. It is clear from the evidence that General Stroop was the direct commanding officer of Lieutenant Goss and that he gave Lieutenant Goss a direct order to execute parachuted fliers and terror fliers and he followed that with a subsequent order on the 15th of March, which when not complied with, he threatened severe punishment to Lieutenant Goss, which Lieutenant Goss understood to mean the death sentence. In this charge, it seems obvious that Major Best was not a participant or a consenting party. He merely was the courier or message bearer regarding one flier who was not executed and it is clear that he had nothing to do with the flier that was executed. It is further a positive fact that Goss, in ordering the shooting of the flier on March 18th, followed the direct order of General Stroop, that Michely followed the direct order of General Stroop and that neither had an alternative or recourse to other procedure (R 1040-1042).

Clearly under Charge 1, none of these accused, and I refer to Best, Goss and Michely, could be said to be conspirators and further argument is unnecessary. Under Charge 2, Best, it is true was a member of the Waffen SS but at no place in the evidence was any accusation made against Best that he was guilty of any of the crimes charged against the SS organizations. As to Goss and Michely, they were drafted into the Waffen SS in the late fall of 1944 and therefore as heretofore decided, are not to be found as voluntary members or organizations of the SS found to be criminal in nature. Each of these accused, if guilty of a crime or participation in a varying degree are entitled to the protection afforded them under the arguments and statutes of law heretofore cited in behalf of Colonel Trumbler.

The attention of the court is called to the fact that on the 18th of March 1945, at Wallrabenstein, Germany, the allied armies were only 12 to 15 kilometers away. This was strictly the front line so far as these men Goss and Michely were concerned. Wallrabenstein was abandoned by these accused and all their German armed forces, five days later. Private Michely has told you that he left the front line area when the American soldiers were only a thousand meters away. The court should remember that Goss and Michely were both trained German soldiers to whom an order must only mean one thing, to-wit: it must be executed. I would also say to the court, you must remember also that Goss was merely a 1st Lieutenant and that Michely was a Private and that they had a direct order from a Lieutenant General of the German army, one which they had to obey. It is unconceivable that any American soldier of their rank would have challenged or questioned any order given by a General of the American Army in the front line.

Now, on behalf of particularly these last accused and for any of these accused here in the box, I do not mean to be facetious about what I am about to say, but I know it is a fact, having been an officer that served with troops throughout this war, our basic construction was that the main thing that a junior officer and a soldier had to do was first to receive an order and second, to execute the order. I know we never questioned these orders. No soldier carries around with him a law library or a lawyer to keep him advised upon his legal and statutory rights nor to keep him advised upon the rules and regulations of land warfare. I can say in utter candor myself that about all I knew as an officer of the American Army during the days of the war, regarding rules of land warfare and the Geneva Conference was that if I happened to get captured, I was to give my name, rank and serial number and to stand mute thereafter. I have never had the privilege of having talked to any other officers or soldiers that knew much more about the Geneva Conference than that and I certainly knew nothing more until I got into this case. If our enlightened democratic army did not know any more about the rules of land warfare than I have just stated, is it not reasonable to suppose that the German junior officers and soldiers knew about the same and certainly not more? To understand the state of mind that the members of the German armed forces were under when in what was the emergency zone and subsequently the front line in Wehrkreis 12, I beg the court to take into consideration the tremendous pressure that was exercised upon all personnel in this area, starting with the Goebbels propaganda in May and June 1944 and continuing with the various and varying "pressure" Government orders, pressure from the party, pressure on the mind from the witnessing of the terrific effects of bombing and strafing, and pressure from the general public themselves who were daily sufferin: daily before their own eyes the loss of their property, bodily injuries and even death.

In conclusion, may I call the following propositions to the court's attention, which I believe the court should give consideration in their findings:

First, Colonel Trummler, I realize cannot be acquitted, even though having received the order from the source that he received it I personally think he ought to be, but he should not lose his life because as a soldier, he obeyed the direct order of his government which he could not refuse.

Second, it is my opinion that Colonel Lessak should be immediately set free and acquitted because he is guilty of nothing here except being a non-functional member of the Allgemeine SS and he has already suffered two years imprisonment awaiting this trial.

Third, the puny little soldiers, Lieutenant Goss and Private Nichely, should be acquitted because they obeyed only the order of their commanding general and it was the order of their government. They followed out this order at the time they were on the front line and with the knowledge that they could not resist such an order.

It should be noted throughout this trial that only once has there come before this court any evidence of cruelties, physical mistreatment of captured fliers, or that indignities were perpetrated upon them. Whether the executions were ever such that may be called legal or lawful is not the point. To the German mind, these executions by shooting were honorable, that this was an honorable way to be killed. They were buried in coffins and their graves were marked and their identification tags were turned over to the proper German authorities so that their bodies could be found. All of these things, at least, show something in favor of these accused in determining their culpability and at least in mitigation. I might possibly correct that statement slightly as two fliers that were shot here. If the court will recall, they were shot after the Americans were advancing and they were buried in the garden of the Gestapo and the taking care of their personal effects was not possible.

It does not seem to me that the United States Government, certainly could not at this time go beserk on this question and hang everybody that had anything to do with any of these executions. If we are going to carry out these executions to the last man, these girls who were part of the Gestapo headquarters might as well be executed too. The persons who are really to blame are either now dead or in hiding and these comparatively small fry, that is, the above named accused, should have the full benefit that each one of them directly or indirectly followed the order of his government with the exception of Lassak, who is not guilty of anything.

MAJOR SAXON: As I mentioned to the court earlier, as a matter of trying to properly present this to the court, German counsel and American counsel prepared separate arguments. What I am about to read to you is the English translation of Dr. Max Buerger's argument on behalf of these accused of whom I have just spoken. (Reading):

"May it please the court, I would like to bring out a few points to the court briefly in order to get through in the time allotted to me, those points being the ones that in my opinion are of significance to the case now concluded. Their purpose is to point out in a general manner only the ideas the accused consider significant for their defense.

"During the trial you have heard a lot about subject to the superior orders and in order to make this absolute subject somewhat comprehensible, I think it is necessary to elaborate on the development of the German system of government briefly.

The German Reich became a democracy after the first world war. The constitutional head of the state was Reich President, the Reich chancellor was the chief of the government and the Reichstag represented the people and participated in legislation materially. No Reich Chancellor with his government was able to carry out his governmental duties without the confidence of the Reichstag. When Adolf Hitler took the reins of the government in 1933, a fundamental change took place. The empowering act alone gave the government headed by Adolf Hitler the authority to decree laws and regulations without the approval of the representatives of the people. Even before that, after the Reichstag fire in February, the fundamental laws guaranteed by the Weimar constitution of 1919 were partially invalidated. For practical purpose, the citizens rights of personal freedom and utterance of opinion did not exist any longer. Laws were issued in the form of fuehrer orders or of laws and regulations signed by Hitler or the particular minister in charge and at first still published by the official Reich legal bulletin. As long as the last president of the German Reich, von Hindenburg, was still alive, he could still make use of his war veto power towards all decrees of the governments. But, after his death this right became void since Hitler took the job of Chief of State as well carried out the legal duties of the Reich President. The connection with the NSDAP which was the only party existing after all others were outlawed was maintained by having the deputies of Hitler at the head of the party, namely Hess and later Bormann, appointed Reich Ministers. Thus a democracy had become a fuehrer state. The will of Adolph Hitler had become law to the state. No authority or parliamentary institution which might have given protection against abuses of a persons rights by fuehrer orders existed any longer (see Dr. Pinter, record page 2339).

As common law developed, fuehrer orders which were not published in the Reich legal bulletin were also considered laws since no legal or parliamentary authority dared doubt their legality.

This method of issuing laws and orders became stricter during the second world war, particularly when that war changed in the favor of Germany's enemies. As is common knowledge, the most severe penalties were put on the most trivial violations and were actually pronounced, and everybody tried, reluctantly as it might have been, to follow these decrees in order not to come in conflict with existing laws and decrees. Only thus, can it be understood that we are today trying acts of the type as the ones which formed the basis for this case.

The population of Germany was guided into a very definite line of thought by unlimited propaganda, the purpose of which was always reduced to the biblical proverb that everyone is subject to his superior who has power over him.

Now we must examine the question whether a citizen had a chance to examine and determine whether laws and orders were or were not illegal. That question must be answered with a "no" as can be seen from the above argument. All a citizen could do was to rely on the fact that powers leading him would not expect him to commit illegal or punishable acts and that his government would take the full responsibility for its measures.

Thus we can understand that the order or orders issued from above concerning the treatment of parachuted fliers were actually carried out. I am sure we must consider the fact that such orders from above existed as definitely proven.

The accused Trummler in his testimony (record page 2161) has repeatedly pointed to the order issued him by Dr. Kaltenbrunner. We can conclude that such orders existed even before the time he took office from the testimony of the witness Koenn (record page 2235). That witness was called to Berlin specifically to receive such an order. As a matter of fact, even the non-interference order shows what policies were followed by the leading elements of Germany. I should further like to point to the testimony of Trummler that he dared to mention possible difficulties in international law and that Kaltenbrunner replied, "we have already examined this and that is none of your business", (record page 2161). The fact that the orders became more severe until the order mentioned by Dr. Trummler was issued verbally is due to the influence of total war. The willingness to carry out these orders is a corollary of the Prussian education of subordinates as it was preached for centuries; that education had its last effect in the fuehrer state as I have described it. At the same time, the effect of air warfare upon the emotional state of the individual citizen became in that way willing to recognize the hints of the German propaganda concerning the illegality of this air warfare as justified and was, therefore, inclined to consider the order concerning the treatment of enemy flyers as a legal deterrent measure.

In the case of the accused who served in an area particularly endangered by air raids, we have the additional factor that all of them were working under the stricter regulations of military law, at least since 1941, and were daily reoriented about absolute obedience being the prime duty of a soldier. It is true that German military law did have a clause stating that the responsibility for the carrying out of a criminal order rests not only with the person issuing the order but also with the man who carries it out, but only in the case when the person carrying it out did realize or was in a position when he had to realize that the order concerned was an illegal one. But it has already been shown that this realization was impossible to the individuals concerned under the conditions existing.

The accused are charged with murder, or encouraging murder or participating in murder. But an element of murder is the intent of killing or consent thereto with the realization that the act is a punishable one, and it is being carried out knowing and deliberately as a punishable act. Was this realization of illegality present in the minds of the accused as they carried out the individual acts? That is the question which I ask you, gentlemen of the court, to consider particularly as you pass judgment on the acts of these accused. The defense doubts whether it was in view of the fact that, since the accused were available, the illegality of these acts could be understood by the accused as has been shown above. That can be very clearly seen from the testimony of the accused Rasf, (record page 1304 and 1308) who stated that he did not like to carry out that order but that he relied on the fact and had to rely on the fact that his superiors would not give him orders which could not be upheld under criminal or international law.

If in the Nurnberg decision the matter of superior orders was discussed, and if it was decided whether it could be used as a defense proper or only in mitigation, or should not be considered at all, then it should be pointed out that we have another situation involving superior orders here then in their case the persons involved in Nuernberg were members of the former Reich government and men as close to Adolph Hitler as anybody. They were the men who would have been the only ones to prevent laws and orders which were legally untenable from being issued by using their influence. They did not do that but rather participated in the issuance of these orders.

The Reich government itself has not been branded a criminal organization in Nuernberg, but if even these men approved and issued orders which were illegal, then how could a person in a subordinate position, such as Rauf or Wicholy or even Goss and Rost understand that they were now committing acts which would cause them to be hauled into court later as common criminals.

In the defense of Dr. Trummler, which will probably be presented primarily by Major Saxon, I should merely like to point out that he has stood up for his acts honorably before this court and that he made his position unambigiously at the head of his men. He himself has made his reasons for transmitting the order and for seeing that it was carried out in such an unambigious manner before this court that I do not think there is any need of my adding to it.

I should like to state the following briefly on behalf of Rost, Goss and Wicholy. Rost, in his testimony before this court, (record page 1061-1062) stated that upon the inquiry of Goss about the fate of the flyer he had called General Stroop to make a decision and had transmitted the direct order of a superior to Goss. It has been attempted to attack the credibilityof the accused Rost. The personal impression made by Rost in his examination on the stand, and the character testimony brought before this court by Schlums, Kelaske (record page 2298) and other witnesses are however so clearly in his favor that there can be no doubt as to his veracity or the truthfulness of his testimony. According to all these descriptions, Best was an honorable man whose whole personality would have made him stand up and admit that he had given that order on his own initiative had he actually done so, as the witness Kaleske (record page 2303) has told this court. Furthermore, Best was in no position to issue such an order since General Stroop did not give him or any other of the members of his staff any power of command, as Colonel Schlume (record page 1087) has stated. It should be further pointed out that the order transmitted by Best was not carried out and that he found out about the second case only after the act had been committed.

Dr. Gess states in his testimony (record page 985 and 1008) that he had received a perfectly general killing order from General Stroop. He had just come back into the service again from civilian life and had not known about flyer orders in his school; hence the order of General Stroop. His credibility is not subject to question either, for the witness Moecker (record page 2113) confirms having heard part of the conversation between General Stroop and Dr. Gess, that very part of the conversation, in fact, where General Stroop in conclusion, told Dr. Gess that now he knew what was to be done with flyers. Gess had to consider that statement a definitive order since in the course of this conversation, General Stroop had also submitted the written powers of authority from Heinrich Himmler to him which stated clearly and unambigiously and without limiting itself to any specific cases that the orders of General Stroop were to be obeyed unconditionally. The testimony of Stemmler (record page 2127) demonstrates that Stroop did give orders along that line. Kaleske (record page 2297) also confirms that visit took place and that Stroop used to give orders at such visits. Gess, in his part could not determine that the order was illegal. The highest ranking of his superiors who had absolute power of command had issued that order to him.

But that superior officer was, as he admits in his own testimony, the higher commander of prisoners of war in his area after 1 October 1944. It was, therefore, up to him to decide what measure should be taken concerning prisoners of war. So if he did make the decision he did make, then Goss had to assure that any difficulties in international law had been considered and eliminated. If he made an inquiry in spite of this in the case of the first flyer, then the reason for his doing so was that he as an experienced front line soldier knew that prisoners of war were to be interrogated in order to gather enemy intelligence. He himself testified to that (record page 989-1015). He too takes the responsibility for transmitting this order to Micholy without question. He too is a man who would not incriminate others in an attempt to save himself.

The person who carried out the order was Micholy. He was a newly drafted SS private. When he was sworn in, he and the other men were told by General Stroop that anyone who would not do as he was bid would disappear without a trace (record page 1040) testimony of Micholy. He, as a little soldier, had no other choice but to carry out the order issued him, particularly since he was told by Goss when he gave him the order that the order came straight from General Stroop. The accused were under the pressure of these orders and subjected to the fear that if the order was not obeyed not only themselves, but their families would have to suffer. That was, as the accused Micholy has said (record page 1040) the very time when the severe punishment of the officers who had failed to blast the Pemagem Bridge had been publicly announced, when every one in Germany knew of the severity of punishment, and was desirous of carrying out all orders to the letter.

The following should be said about the accused Paaf: If there is any typical example for the effects of obedience to superior orders, then Paaf is this typical example. I should like to remind the court of the impression Raef made on the witness stand and how he is suffering under the burden imposed upon him by this affair even today. He was acting in good faith, thinking that he was doing his difficult but, in view of the situation justified, duty as he was carrying out his orders. That he did not even like to stay with the Gestapo has been shown by the witness Gelbrich (record page 1335). He volunteered to get away, and did that repeatedly but never with any success because his applications were disapproved on account of a general order and on account of the fact that he was threatened with punishment if he tried to get away again. Thus he did everything in his power to avoid serving in the job he did not like.

One of my co-counsel will argue concerning the question of a conspiracy, and I concur with this. I should merely like to say that the accused Trummler, West, Goss and Michely were transferred into the area of Rhine-Westmark as late as the end of 1941, and that Raef has tried to be relieved from serving in the Gestapo, and that West and Goss also made unsuccessful attempts to be transferred. Furthermore, in my opinion, the prosecution has failed to prove that the accused participated in the formulation of a plan to commit criminal acts.

Charge Number II is a charge concerning collective guilt. The Nuernberg judgment states that for collective guilt to exist, the organization must have had criminal intentions in the performance of its work. The attitude of the individuals and particularly of the leading individuals must be directed towards the achievement of anti-social results and the members must be conscious of these deletorious tendencies. Anybody not conscious of guilt cannot be part of the collective guilt. This determination of collective guilt, therefore, does not give cause for the guilt of every individual member but merely forms a basis for evidence to be presented. Just like the objective acts of individual persons join to form collective injustice, the individual consciously criminal desires of the individual members join in forming collective guilt subjectively. I should like to ask the court to consider this concerning Charge No. II and to consider it also in their findings concerning that charge.

I have now reached my conclusion, it is not the intention of the defense to make wrong appear right, but rather to help in determining the objective truth by their arguments and to serve justice in that manner. I am now trustingly placing the fate of the accused in the hands of the court.

PRESIDENT: Court will recess until 0900 hours tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon at 1700 hours the court recessed until 0900 hours 18 March 1947.)

Camp Dachau, Germany

MORNING SESSION

(Whereupon the court reconvened at 0900 hours.)

PRESIDENT: Court will come to order.

PROSECUTION: Let the record show all the members of the court, all the members of the prosecution, all the members of the defense, all the accused, the reporter and interpreter are present.

PRESIDENT: Let the record show that Colonel Walker has advised the President of the court he has read the testimony which transpired on Wednesday, March 12th, on which day he was properly absent from court.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: May it please the court, I will now read for Dr. Hoster an English translation of his argument for Hans Michel and I will follow that up with an English translation of his argument on behalf of Sommer and Fischer. First, his argument with respect to Michel in Charge VII.

In Charge VII Michel denies vehemently to have given an order for the execution of the flier. Contrary to this the accused Müller claims that he received the order to execute the flier from the accused Michel. Uninvolved reliable witnesses who could verify the correctness of Müller's statement or the correctness of Michel's denial do not exist. Therefore the court will have to decide whether the testimony of Michel in denial or the testimony of Müller in affirmation without the assistance of such other facts to aid the court in its deliberation has to be believed according to all circumstances.

In the first instance I point out that Michel beginning with his first interrogation and also during this trial has always taken the same position that he did not give an order for the execution of the flier. On the other hand, Müller's statements have changed in some very important respects and Moller has made contradictory statements. On May 29, 1945 during his first interrogation, Prosecution Exhibit 115, Moller testified that the accused Albrecht had given him the order for the execution. To this testimony Moller stuck until he was together with Albrecht and Cochrendt in Hersbruck, and it was known that Eichel was dead. What was more obvious than to put the blame on the supposedly dead Eichel. From this time on, from the time Eichel was supposed to be dead, from that time on, the assertions that not Albrecht but Eichel had given the order were made, and at the same time, Moller heard that Superior Court Justice Jackson had said that the one acting on orders had to be punished in a milder fashion, therefore it is perfectly obvious why and for which reasons Moller changed his testimony. From additional circumstances, more clear proof can be had that Moller did not give his statements in the same manner, as he changed from Albrecht to the name of Eichel as the one who gave him the order. He claimed on the 29th of May 1945, Prosecution Exhibit 115 that the accused Kiwitt had been the one with whom he had gone to the place of the crime. On this point also Moller had to change his statement that it was not Kiwitt, but Lieutenant Blum who had been the one with whom he had gone to the place of the crime. It is especially interesting that during the interrogation, Moller mentioned the name Kiwitt, he had seen Kiwitt at the police station, a mistake in identity is therefore unbelievable. In other words, the substitution of Kiwitt for Blum was not an error, but deliberate. That is, the circumstances alone in view of the testimony of Eichel would be enough for the court to come to the conclusion that no verdict can be based on Moller's statement or his testimony. It can be proven that he really did not receive an order from Eichel. It is absolutely impossible that a police director while other officers are present issues an execution order in a by office of the police station without the officer in charge, that is, Albrecht, receiving any knowledge of it. It is furthermore impossible that Moller, supposing that he did receive the order did not discuss with his superior officer, that is, Albrecht, the execution of this order or ask how he should carry it out. Moller himself admits that such a discussion would have been necessary to make his testimony believable. Moller, therefore on page 4 of his interrogation of May 8, 1946, Prosecution Exhibit 116 claims: "It was my intention to keep on walking until I would receive an additional order or until I would be told something." Moller therefore was well aware that he did not have to shoot until something more would have been said to him. On this point also Moller realized that through this testimony he is defending himself poorly, therefore in this point too he changes his testimony and testified on the witness stand, it came to his head like lightening that he had to shoot now. If one adds to these many changes in Moller's testimony the fact that at the beginning of the trial he declared that he considered himself insane, it should not be difficult for the court to decide whether the testimony of Eichel has to be believed more, or the testimony of Moller. At that time it was generally known that the highest authorities of the Reich had ordered the killing of fliers. Moller therefore obviously thought out of his own initiative that he could take the responsibility for the killing of the flier.

Under these conditions it seems impossible that Eichel can be found guilty based on Moller's statements. In addition Eichel's testimony can be confirmed through the testimony of his secretary Mrs. Schwab. Mrs. Schwab testified as a witness that Eichel said the flier would be brought to police headquarters. Eichel's statement is furthermore confirmed by Albrecht and Kiwitt.

I think I have given sufficient reasons that Eichel cannot be found guilty based on the statement of a man who considers himself [illegible]ane and who had changed his statements on very important points.

I will now proceed, with the court's permission to give Dr. Wacker's argument on behalf of Fuehr and Somann. This apparently is a joint argument.

It is to the highest credit of the United States of America that the accused are given the chance to present their viewpoints before a court. The philosopher Spinoza once said, "Everybody in the world has as much right as is given to him. There is no doubt that the United States would have had the power to sentence the accused without trial. When the United States did not choose this alternative but expressed the desire that in each case justice should be done so the difficult question has to be decided which law system is applicable. In accordance with German law, all the accused could refer to paragraph 47 of the Military Criminal Code and would go out unpunished. But, also in accordance with Article 347, The Rules of Land Warfare, the attitude is the same, since here too only the man who issues an order is responsible when a superior order has been given. In the case of the accused Fuehr, we have the typical case of a superior order. He received the order for the execution of the flier from Colonel Trumler and he has carried out this order. I would like to interpolate at this point that he got the order directly from the horse's mouth itself - from Trumler, under the most innocuous circumstances, right in Trumler's personal office.

The argument of the prosecution sees the guilt of Fuehr in the fact that, as the prosecution has explained, Fuehr too knew or at least should have known that by shooting the flier, he was committing a crime. I think I can prove that this is not correct. I refer to the Nuernberg Judgment. Before the Nuernberg Tribunal, the Reich Government was charged as a criminal organization. The judgement did not declare the Reich Government a criminal organization. However, there cannot be any doubt that the Nuernberg Tribunal knew about the orders which were of importance in the trial here before the court. If to the Nuernberg Tribunal, the issuance of these orders would have been considered to be a crime, so certainly the Reich Government which had issued these orders would have been declared a criminal organization. However, if the Nuernberg Judgment does not find the Reich Government guilty, nobody can expect from Fuehr that he during the war should have recognized these orders to be criminal. Without repeating, I can merely refer once again in this man's special behalf to the effort referred to by the prosecution, exercised by the German Government to establish the legality of these orders. If now two years after the war a decision is made by a neutral German court on the question as to whether these orders were legal or not, how then could Fuehr during the war get the idea that an order of the Reich Government was criminal. It is my personal opinion that the air warfare as it was conducted could not be objected to. Every means to win the war has to be considered permissible. The United States has won the war through the air warfare and, therefore, the United States rightly will object to a statement that this means of warfare should not have been permitted. If the air warfare was legal, then after the war one cannot wonder about the steps which the German Government took against it. In view of the total war on both sides, this is a war measure and as a war measure, Fuehr considered the shooting of the flier. I have full understanding that the court thinks with regret of the killed fliers and their families, but at the same time, I beg the court to think at the same time of the many hundred times larger number of civilians who became victims of the air warfare. This sentiment perhaps makes it easier to understand my point of view that the shooting of the fliers was an act of war and not a crime. In conclusion, I come to the result that Fuehr in no way realized it was something wrong when he carried out the order to shoot the flier and I therefore ask the court to find him not guilty.

I would like also by way of interpolation to remind the court that not only did Fuehr get the order from the sanctum sanctorum, right from the horse's mouth, but instructions when it was to be carried out, where it was to be carried out and what was to be done after the execution. The place of execution was nearby, the time was practically immediate, it was only a question of hours and then the whole business was done exactly as ordered, and Fuehr carried out this order under these circumstances and helps us come to the conclusion that the execution of a superior order is a valid defense.

The argument which I made on behalf of Fuehr applies partly also to the accused Semann. Semann had to do only in one point with the orders regarding parachuted fliers. In accordance with his orders, he passed down the non-interference order by reading it orally, that was the way his written instructions told him so to do. That, may it please the court was the only order of any consequence with respect to parachuted fliers with which Semann had to do, and there was one other which said they were to be examined by the Gestapo and then sent to Oberursel, I am not sure of the exact language so don't want to attempt a quotation, but that is the only order which could be considered to be of an illegal nature.

And what is the evidence on Semann? As far as Prosecution Exhibit 20 is held over his signature, that was nothing but a easy inspection, if the court will read it, it will find that it is a recital of a number of facts which dealt with the business of the organization and there was one reference only to parachuted fliers and again I quote with reservations, "that order had to do with keeping the civilians from coming too close to the flier." That is all, and was just passed down for information. What is the evidence in this case? First, Prosecution Exhibit 20, second reading of non-interference order, which he admits and third this statement by Hollenbreich as to what Semann added after reading the order, which he interpreted to mean an order that every flier should be killed, and that is partly supported by the testimony of Christmann, who was as mean an individual as anybody in Germany, and he, instead of facing his accusers has gone nobody knows where and so the evidence which this court has on Somann rests on a statement of a fugitive from justice, on the statement of Hellenbroich who Somann himself says is an honorable individual and on Somann's reading that non-interference order.

I am going to leave out of consideration in my argument anything which has to do with Christmann. It is Hellenbroich's interpretation against Somann's statement he made no such statement as Hellenbroich understood it. The other people, Reiser and Breder and Berger got no such impression as Hellenbroich got. Somann gives a reasonable interpretation of what he might have said which could reasonably have been understood by Hellenbroich the way he did. We don't say that Somann said nothing, Hellenbroich made it up, all we say is that he didn't say it the way Hellenbroich said it and to give a reasonable explanation of it and in the absence of supporting testimony, that is, testimony to support Hellenbroich's interpretation, having in mind that neither person is accusing the other of being a liar, actually what happened, and not a question who honestly believes what happened, the court could very well find that Hellenbroich honestly understood that to be what Somann said, at the same time believe Somann when he says that is not what he said and not what he meant. All we are asking the court to do with respect to that small portion of the testimony -- the main thing is this: So far as charges VI and X are concerned, or charges III, IV and V, the prosecution makes no attempt to bring Somann in at all. Charges IX, VII, VIII and III, for which he is down here, he could not have had anything to do with, yet Hellenbroich definitely said he asked him; in charge VI, so far as he was concerned he was carrying out the order to kill. In my opinion that superseded the non-interference order, and Trumbler had only said the same thing, but he knew the non-interference order before he came to Wiesbaden. Now, may it please the court, how in God's name can you hang a man for something which came out of his mouth, which was never translated into action, and never asked or induced or persuaded to the slightest degree the conduct of a man who confessed to the offenses charged. It is Hellenbroich and Cirkc and Trumpler and Stattmann and Raaf who have to answer for VI and X, and they say Somann had nothing to do with what they did. Are you going to hang him because the prosecution attempts to say "Yes, they did," the men whose necks are in the noose say, "No, he didn't." The man is gone long before these things happened. Sure, he didn't rescind an order, how could he, it wasn't his order. He went away to an innocuous place and I want to add that all the effort of the government, and the court knows, it has been trained in investigation of Rhein-Westmark, has been unable to produce even an intention of violence against Allied personnel by the Schutz Polizei when Somann was in charge and that ought to be very persuasive. I am going to skip Charge II, as I have argued that for him before. I would like to say just this. There has been some talk in this case that every drop of American blood has to be avenged. This is not a court of avenge. It is a court of justice and its function is a very serious one — it is not only to punish, but for setting a lesson and guide for the future, not only of what future law breakers might expect, but of the type of even handed justice which we want to set as an example for the rest of the world to follow, in case it becomes necessary at some future time for other courts to sit in judgment on other people. The amount of punishment which should be handed out for a crime should be just enough to accomplish that purpose, to show that wrongs will not go unpunished, and also to show that a victor can sit in judgment as judges and not as avengers. The court will exact retribution where retribution is called for. Where one man can pay the penalty and satisfy the just demands of society, that man should pay it and no one else. Just because four or five people are mixed up into a picture, every-

DEFENSE COUNSEL: May it please the court, argument of Dr. Aheimer will be read by Mr. Nathanson, the interpreter.

(Whereupon the English translation of argument of Dr. Aheimer was read by Mr. Nathanson as follows.)

"May it please the court, in the particulars to Charge I, the charge sheet speaks of a common plan or design to violate the laws of war. This term "common design" has been discussed frequently before the courts of War Crimes Group here in Dachau. So far, it has been used only in the Charge Sheets of the big concentration camp trials. For instance, in the records of the first Dachau trial, one finds already at the beginning an argument about the so-called "common design". There, the chief defense counsel, in a motion had objected to this formulation of the charge sheet and requested a statement whether under this "common design" a conspiracy was meant or something else. The prosecution, at this time, replied very clearly that a conspiracy was something which it was not. In fact, the word "conspiracy" deliberately has never been used in these concentration camp trials by the prosecution in distinguishing the acts with which the accused were charged. How does this happen?

A conspiracy, in the legal sense, does exist only (1) if somebody either formulates a plan to commit certain criminal actions or when he cooperates in any capacity on such a plan or when he joins in a plan already existing: (2) in each of these three possible cases, the accused has to act not only wilfully, but also deliberately. However, for instance, does a man wilfully and deliberately participate in a conspiracy to mistreat prisoners, if in the spring of 1944 without being asked beforehand he has been transferred to a guard company in Dachau as a soldier and there outside the protective custody camp does guard duty without ever touching a prisoner or having reported for punishment or shooting of any prisoner, the answer is "no". And, in spite of that, a guard is being sentenced under those conditions even if nothing else could be proven against him. He could not be punished under the viewpoint of a conspiracy because his activity was not a voluntary one. The result, therefore, is: "common design" is an entirely new concept of law which distinguishes itself from the conspiracy. The conspiracy is a crime in itself. Whenever the conspirators remained passive, they still can be punished. As far as they became active, they can first be found guilty for the conspiracy and furthermore secondly for the individual acts committed, as for instance killings, etc. The acting according to common design on the other hand - correctly understood in this sense - is an enlarged form of participation on so-called mass atrocities. It takes in all participants beginning with the guard post who has never harmed a prisoner, over the non-commissioned officer who carried out ten executions, up to the Camp Commander who is made responsible for hundreds of death cases. This form of participation at the same time, however, takes in all individual acts with which these persons can be charged. All these persons are found guilty only in accordance with this one charge, that is namely to have acted under common design; the non-commissioned officer and the camp commander are not charged and sentenced in addition to this for ten or a hundred individual cases of murder or anything like that. Is it now possible to apply this new concept of common design which was developed for the particularities of the concentration camp trials, simply to flier cases by combining a number of individual cases? The charge sheet is trying to do so because the formulation of Charge I is similar to the formulation of the charge sheets in the large concentration camp trials. However, I think that this procedure is untenable since the conditions for these two types of cases are basically different. One might be able to say that everybody who for a long period of time was part of a concentration camp organization, which had to realize the existence of a certain system according to which prisoners were treated there; his punishment for acting in common design can be justified because the man exercised his functions - whether large or small - day for day - in the concentration camp, although he had to know and see daily what happened to the prisoners and that, therefore, he supported the mass atrocities. If, with the German police, certain special commands would have been organized which would have attended day for day exclusively to the search for enemy fliers, to their treatment and perhaps even their torture or killing, in this case perhaps the members of such a special command and their officer in charge would be charged just for acting in accordance with a common design. This, then would be a correctly understood parallel to the persons employed in the running of a concentration camp. However, such a charge cannot be made against persons as the accused who had to fulfill entirely different, that is, police duties. They had to do with orders concerning enemy fliers, only besides their other duties.

Under no condition the elements of a real conspiracy, that means of an independent crime, are given as the prosecution has claimed in this trial on several occasions. In this case, the prosecution should have proven that the accused wilfully and deliberately in any way participated on the claimed plan of a crime or that they joined also wilfully and deliberately the plan worked out by hi her authority. Against none of the accused, the prosecution has made such proof. Let's take for instance men of the medium level as for example Cirke or Hellenbroich or men of the lower level, as for instance Hoehler and Stattmann. Cirke, as he was ordered, only passed down to the departments of his headquarters orders regarding enemy fliers which he had received from higher up. Hellenbroich only once, in the absence of Cirke, informed Cirke of such a hi her order and the other orders he just took knowledge of. Stattmann took knowledge only of the orders which had been passed down by the commanding officer of his headquarters. And Hoehler has not even done this because he never received any knowledge of such general orders. All these people have acted neither wilfully nor deliberately. They had nothing to do whatsoever with any planning. We have not even to mention Mahrgang of the fire protection police and Hamann of the air raid protection police, they worked in such special fields of the Order police so that not even their superior officers received any general orders regarding enemy fliers, not even for information only.

If the prosecution should argue that these men, although not participating in the establishing of the plan, joined such a plan through their participation in the individual cases under Charges III - X, and, therefore, had to be punished for conspiracy this argument would not be tenable either. Because here too, the prosecution would have to prove that this had been done wilfully and deliberately. It is a problem of its own, whether they have to be punished under the charges of the individual cases III - X. However, they cannot be punished for conspiracy. I ask, therefore, for a finding of not guilty of Charge I.

Mahrgang and Hamann were already acquitted of the Charge II - membership in a criminal organisation - but the Charge is still applicable to the four other accused, whom I represent. As to Girke, Hellenbroich and Stattmann, nothing has to be said any more in regard to the principle question since they were members of the Gestapo and furthermore members of the Waffen SS, with the assimilated rank. For Stattmann, it has been proven further more that he tried unsuccessfully on several occasions to come to the front lines as a soldier, and that, therefore, he had to remain with the Gestapo only against his will. (See Record Page 1237, 1238, 1323, 1324, 1338, 1339, 1356, 1357).

If these applications, the last one of which was made around the turn of the year 1944 to 1945, would not have been rejected, Stattmann would not have been at headquarters Bensheim any more in February 1945 and so he would not have been involved in the cases VI and X. It is customary to make a charge for membership to a criminal organization only in connection with another charge; Stattmann, therefore, would not have been charged in accordance with Charge II, if his repeated requests for transfer to the front lines would not have been rejected. Therefore, I ask the High court to consider this as much as possible in his favor.

Anyway, it has to be pointed out for all the accused that during the war in Germany nobody could pick his place of work or could change his present work assignment; everybody had to do his job, wherever the Government authorities had ordered him.

For Hoehler, the defense has proven through the testimony of Kramer and Richard (Record Page 1132-1140) that during the entire time in question he had been a member of the Criminal Police and that he had been ordered only for temporary duty with the Gestapo without his active cooperation and against his own will. The applicable article of the Control Counsel Law No. 10 threatens with punishment expressively only "The Members" of the so-called criminal organizations. An official like Hoehler, however, who remained a member of the criminal police from the first to the last day, who received his papers, his identification mark, his weapon, his pay and his promotion only from the criminal police and who fought unsuccessfully just such a transfer to the Gestapo, for this reason never became a member of the Gestapo. This is shown most clearly through the fact that he was not a member of the SS and never wore a uniform. It is known that all regular members of the Gestapo automatically received a rank in the SS. He, Hoehler, may it please the court, should be acquitted of Charge II also.

Before I start with the particulars, I would like to add a few fundamental words:

The Charge III - I are being signified as cases of murders. Each of the accused including those which even shot an American flier stated under oath that theydid not feel guilty of any murder. This is not a mere fight for words because each one of them states:

1) I had to act under superior orders.

2) I had to depend that my government would give me only legal orders.

3) I also saw and experienced daily the air warfare against the civilian population in Germany in the years of 1944 and 1945; therefore, I was convinced that with this kind of warfare the other side had already renounced its ties of International Law which forbids such a warfare against the civilian population. Therefore, I did not have any doubts whatsoever about the legality of orders which had come from my government, or my superiors respectively in regard to so-called "terror fliers".

Let us take for example a soldier who upon orders of his superior at the front denies a pardon to an enemy who wants to surrender, because prior to that this enemy had not adhered to the International usages of war, for example by hindering the saving of badly injured soldiers and thus killing them. If this soldier according to his orders then shoots this enemy, it appears outwardly and superficially considered to have been a murder. No military court martial will consider this soldier or his superior to be a murderer and punish them for murder. No court martial will expect from this soldier that he should have disobeyed this order and rather had himself shot for disobedience of orders. Exactly the same is applicable for the accused in our trial.

What, for instance, was the accused Hoehler to do, whose only activity in Charge IV was that according to the orders of his superior he drove along in the back seat of the vehicle at the transport of this flier and only left it after the execution of the flier so ordered by Trumpler to Fraundt had already taken place? Had he not obeyed the order to drive along, the ordered execution of the flier would have taken place just the same. Hoehler would have been punished for disobedience of order; nothing would have changed the fate of the flier. One thing, of course, he could have done: He could have driven along and then pointed his pistol at his own comrades in order to try in this manner to stop the execution. Then, either:

1) Fraundt, who had to accomplish Trumpler's order, would have shot Hoehler or

2) Hoehler would have had to shoot Fraundt and possibly also Fuehr, or

3) In the most favorable case Fraundt could have been restrained from the execution under the threat of a weapon.

Considering possibilities 2 and 3, Hoehler would not have remained alive much longer because undoubtedly he would have been sentenced to death before a summary court (standegericht) or the SS and police court and in addition to that, he would have been stigmatized as a traitor to the Fatherland. It would be completely absurd to request from Hoehler to risk his own life. As he stated under oath (Record Page 1101) he had first refused Fraundt to go along. Only upon a specific order of his superior, Criminal Counselor Luckhardt, he finally rode along, but he did not participate in the execution at all; he, therefore can only be punished very mildly, if at all.

As to Charge VI, the facts here are very plain. This is the typical case of a superior order. The chain of command runs clearly from THUMMLER via GIRKE to STATTMANN and through him, at the same time, to BAAF. I refer to this fundamental point in order to avoid repetition of what has been said by my co-counsel or what will be said. The trial has shown clearly that HELLENBROICH should be eliminated. He only interrogated the flier and checked the accompanying files and reported the results to GIRKE. He, of course, according to the directives of GIRKE called STATTMANN. The order for the execution itself which GIRKE received from THUMMLER was given to STATTMANN directly by GIRKE.

In principle, however, Charge I is the same as Charge VI. It differs only insofar as the direct connection to THUMMLER is missing and GIRKE ordered the execution based upon the general orders. In addition to that, HELLENBROICH transmitted GIRKE'S order for the execution to STATTMANN and BAAF.

For both cases together, the following is applicable: The executions were not kept secret at the headquarters in Densheim. All identification marks of the executed American soldiers were put into the graves with them. They were buried in Densheim itself, namely, the first flier in the Public Cemetery, the two others in the garden of the headquarters building because at that time the Nastapo headquarters was already in a process of departure. Therefore, it can be seen again that all accused that have participated must have considered the executions completely lawful. Because it would have been very easy for them to conduct the executions 10 or 20 kilometers away from Densheim and bury the corpses there, if they had wanted to hide anything from the advancing American troops.

The accused acted also insofar in good faith as they checked previously whether the fliers were so-called "terror fliers" towards whom the actual execution order was directed. Insofar as they referred to findings of other authorities namely in Charge VI to those (findings) of the Rural Police Worms and in Charge X to findings of a German Anti-Aircraft-Unit, this was in accordance with the then usual procedure in Germany.

The prosecution tried in rebuttal to attack the testimony of GIRKE, HELLENBROICH and STATTMANN. This attempt did not succeed.

The prosecution, at first, called General Wunnenberg and Schuls on the witness stand to debilitate the testimony of these three accused that at a certain time the members of the Security Police were transferred to the German Army. General Wunnenberg as Chief of the Order Police did not hear anything about it. But as it came out in cross-examination, he had no opportunity at that time to speak to the Chief of the Security Police, Kaltenbrunner, about such questions. General Schuls was only in the Reichs Security Main Office until April 1944; since May 1944 he was as Higher SS and Police Leader away in the area of Salzburg which became front territory only in the last five days of the war. So, if he does not know about these things, it does not exclude at all that the explanations of GIRKE, HELLENBROICH and STATTMANN are correct. On the contrary, it has been proven by numerous defense witnesses and also by General Schuls that the members of the Security Police had pay books of the Waffen SS at least since the end of 1944. Since the pay book is the identity paper of the soldier in Germany and the Waffen SS formed a part of the German Army, the correctness of the statements of GIRKE, HELLENBROICH and STATTMANN is, therefore, further proven.

Neither the additional rebuttal witness Goetz, nor the witnesses Rechel, Geis and Appel have testified that except for the cases VI and X, there ever was an American flier at the Gestapo headquarters in Darmstadt or Bensheim. So, if, therefore, GIRKE said on

I did not mention so far Charge VIII in which MAHRGANG and HARMANN are co-defendants. The defense has decided with the approval of the accused that all direct participants of Charge VIII will be handled in the final argument of Mr. Bachael. This manner of separate and coordinated treatment is justified by the fact that Charge VIII is the only one where there is no "superior order" but where the reason for the shooting was the escape of the American flier.

May it please the court, the case which is about to be concluded is generally called the superior orders case. That shows that questions of a very fundamental nature must be decided. The verdict will decide not only the fate of the twenty-one accused sitting in the dock; it might also have importance as a precedent for numerous other Germans who were involved in similar flier cases on account of the miserable orders and decrees of offices of the German government and the Nazi Party.

The whole series of incidents can be understood only if the totality of conditions is taken into account as they existed in Germany at the time. The defense has demonstrated those conditions in its case as far as it was permitted to do so. The air warfare which increased in intensity constantly is part of those conditions. Only a person who was forced to experience this warfare on German soil can picture properly the extent of that warfare after spring of 1944 and of its effect upon the individual German. It was only this unlimited air warfare against Germany that caused the well-known propaganda and later the orders concerning the so-called terror fliers as they were issued by the German government. The German defense in this case has limited itself to giving a general picture of the air warfare by means of a few accused on the witness stand. A number of witnesses were available, and they could have described numerous occasions of bombing and strafing of purely civilian objectives and of the unprotected civilian population; and it would have been easy to get many times that number of witnesses. Those witnesses, it is true, could have served to prove specifically what the facts then existing actually were; but not a one of the tens of thousands of civilian victims of air warfare in Wehrkreis 12, nor a one of the American fliers who had to give their lives there on account of orders of the highest of German authorities would have been called back to life. The reason the defense voluntarily refrained from calling these witnesses to the stand was that they wanted to avoid breaking open old wounds.

The incidents that occurred during the last twelve months of the last war in the air above German soil and on German soil proper were unfortunate effects of the war, as it was conducted by both sides. In order to do justice to both sides one cannot fairly measure these incidents with the measuring rod of international agreements, the latest of which is dated 1926. When, twenty and more years ago the various nations agreed upon those conventions, they never considered that type of air warfare possible. The development of the technique of warfare simply by-passed those old agreements; the best proof for that fact is the invention and use of the atomic bomb.

The war in Europe has ended almost two years ago. Even today the victorious nations are discussing in Moscow how defeated Germany can be pacified by a peace treaty in order to put a definite conclusion to everything that happened during the last war. The accused as they were forced to obey the orders of their government during that war were acting under the belief that they were doing their duty to their country and in the very same manner as the American fliers who were sent out against Germany and had to give their lives.

Gentlemen of the Court, please do consider all of this as you deliberate upon the guilt of these accused.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: We have one more argument, may it please the court, one part of which we can finished before ten o'clock. However, there are one or two other matters which I will have to raise with the court. We might use the time remaining now for that purpose, whichever the court wishes.

PRESIDENT: Either one.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: As we understand it, when the final arguments are made, then all the prosecution's arguments and all the arguments of the defense will have to be read in German to the accused. I have been trying to estimate how long it will take to read this argument to the accused. We have spent six or seven hours in delivering it and estimate that it will take approximately three hours to read it. There is a possibility that this court might be ready to announce its findings before we finish this reading. So, I was going to suggest that when the court recesses for findings, the court announce, at least unofficially, approximately what time it will be back. Then, there is another question on which we would like information. Is the Court going to pass on the three motions before it recesses for deliberation as to findings or will it make its findings on the motions when it makes its other findings?

PRESIDENT: The court will rule on the motion before it makes its findings.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: Is it proper to assume that the court will recess for findings and then come in and announce the findings on the motions?

PRESIDENT: That is right.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: That answers everything I have in mind to ask. Mr. Rachael says that he has time to deliver part of his argument before recess. It will take about five minutes.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

MR. RACHAEL: My final argument on behalf of the accused in this case is divided into two parts. The second part will deal exclusively with Charge VIII and will cover all the defendants in that Charge. The first part will cover just that portion of Charge VII wherein the accused Kiwitt is named as defendant. Charge VII has been discussed at length and the various counsel for the defense have omitted, except by casual reference, to refer to the part which the defendant Kiwitt played.

Aside from the defendant Kiwitt's own testimony, the references made to him in the record concerning the incident alleged in Charge VII are as follows:

One: The witness, Peter Como, testified as to who was in the police station at Bieber and did not state directly that Kiwitt was there, and he does not state what Kiwitt did there.

Two: The witness, Oscar Lueck, testified that Kiwitt was in the police station at Bieber; that he had said nothing to the flier and that Kiwitt had talked only to him, Oscar Lueck, during which he stated, and I quote, "you are a fine man", and "it seems that you, too, haven't lost anything yet." That can be found on pages 460 and 461 of the record. I don't know what those words mean, but those are the words that Oscar Lueck said that Kiwitt uttered.

Three: The accused Hermann Heller, testifying in his own behalf, placed the defendant Kiwitt in the police station and said that Kiwitt was at the scene of the killing with a bicycle and that a conversation concerning a ring on the flier's hand occurred and he further testified that Kiwitt received the ring and placed it in his pocket. That can be found at pages 1497 in the record. He then went on and at page 1499 says that he knew Kiwitt by name only and that he did not know Kiwitt personally at all prior to seeing him at the police station. (Pages 1497 and 1500 of the record.) and then he went on to admit that he confused Captain Blum for the defendant Kiwitt (Page 1502), so that except for the placing of Kiwitt in the police station, Heller's testimony with regard to Kiwitt is a nullity because he has admitted confusion and besides it is perfectly obvious that the witness' testimony indicated a lack of Kiwitt's presence in the woods at the scene of the killing.

Four: Wilhelm Albrecht, the accused, taking the stand in his own behalf, testified and he also placed the defendant Kiwitt in the police station (Page 1513) and at that time testified that Kiwitt said "You play host to the flier and you let him sit down". That is on page 1535, and he also said "Kiwitt did not participate in any discussion", and "was a few steps away" when Eichel said the flier was to be done away with. That is on page 1536 on the record.

Five: Hans Eichel took the stand and he said this. "Kiwitt had nothing to do with the case. Kiwitt followed me, was always behind me like a young dog, and whenever his boss was yelling, Kiwitt felt obliged to do so, too". That is on page 1731. He also said "Kiwitt was cursing too, but I don't know what he said any more". (Page 1741.) and further, when the question was shed of Eichel, "You do recall that he (meaning Kiwitt) made some remarks, do you, in addition to the cursing?" the answer by Michel was "No.". That is on page 1742.

Six: The only other testimony with regard to Kiwitt came from Adam Jaeger. He is the witness who testified in Charge VIII and asked that the chart be turned upside down because he couldn't understand it the other way. He testified that in the early afternoon of the 22nd of February 1945, at about 2:00 PM, he saw a police captain drive by on his bicycle, stating, "all these fliers are going to be beaten to death." He then stated that he did not know who was driving the bicycle, and that the individual was a captain and that his information as to whether or not the rider of the bicycle was the defendant Kiwitt came from comrades who said it was. That is on page 502. The testimony by Adam Jaeger that the bicycle rider was Captain Kiwitt is evidently a mistake, in view of the testimony of all the other witnesses in the case that Kiwitt came to the police station at Bieber together with the accused Michel in an automobile and afterwards left in an automobile to return to Offenbach. That is the sum total of the prosecution's claim that Kiwitt is a murderer in Charge VII.

In view of the lack of evidence as to any activity by the defendant Kiwitt with regard to the flier in that particular Charge, it is respectfully submitted to the court that the defendant Kiwitt should be found not guilty in Charge VII.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: This is the break I mentioned.

PRESIDENT: Court will recess for twenty minutes.

(Thereupon at 1005 the court recessed until 1035 hours.)

(Whereupon Court was opened at 1025)

PRESIDENT: Court will come to order.

PROSECUTION: May it please the court, let the record show that all personnel of the court, all personnel of the prosecution, all personnel of the defense, all the accused, the interpreter and reporter are present.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: Mr. Rachael will now complete his argument, may it please the Court.

MR. RACHAEL: If the court please, as I recall at the close of the prosecution's main case, I argued a motion on behalf of the accused in Charge VIII and stated at that time that in my opinion I did not believe that the prosecution had made out a prima facie case against the accused, Eichel, Kiwitt, Wahrgang, Hermann and Fay, respectively, as they were named in that Charge. I made no reference to the defendants Stroop, Trummler or Somann, because at that time it was my opinion and it still is that Stroop, Trummler and Somann had absolutely no connection with what transpired in the Bierbrauer Weg on the evening of the twenty second of February, 1945, and I will make no further reference to those three defendants with regard to what took place on that small street.

I said that I didn't believe that the prosecution had made out a prima facie case. Since that time many witnesses, including the accused, have taken the witness stand and have added to my opinion so that now not only do I believe that there was not a prima facie case, but at this point there is no question in my mind but that a reasonable doubt positively exists as to the guilt of these defendants. Bearing in mind Colonel Berman's argument as to what is a "reasonable doubt", I will proceed with my analysis of the facts in Charge VIII.

It is not too difficult to analyze the evidence adduced by both the prosecution and the defense to determine the factual situation as it existed up to the time when the flier met his death during the evening of the twenty second of February 1945 on the Fierbrauer Weg in Bieber. The evidence shows that sometime in the afternoon the police station in Bieber received custody of a flier and that he was turned over to the two policemen, Schneider and Michel, with orders to deliver him safely to the police station in Offenbach. After walking approximately six kilometers with the flier, the two policemen and the flier came to the police station and reported to Lt. Alt. Lt. Alt was the duty officer at that time and he represented the commanding officer of the Shutzpolizei. It seems that Lt. Alt evidently knew what to do with the flyers. It seems that Lt. Alt may have had an order as to how to dispose of this flyer and it seems also that these two policemen had conflicting orders, with the orders that Lt. Alt had. Michel and Schneider had orders to see that the flier was safe. Lt. Alt evidently on the other hand had orders to another effect. At any rate Captain Kiwitt was called down. The testimony shows that he drove them from the office. Michel and Schneider both said that he practically threw them out with the flier. At that point the evidence is in dispute as to whether or not Kiwitt issued an order to shoot the flyer. At any rate, when Schneider took the stand he said that the language that Kiwitt used at that time he understood to have been an order. However, his friend Michel the otherpoliceman, says that what Kiwitt said he would not consider to be an order, so we have the two policemen with Kiwitt and Alt -- one says he considered it to be an order and the other did not so consider it. Kiwitt himself says that he told the policemen that if they had an order to shoot the flyer, there was nothing else they could do about it but obey it and the order Kiwitt was talking about, evidently was an order from Major Kuhlenbeck, which was in conflict with the policemen's orders, which they received from Goehrendt in the police station in Bieber. No matter what conversation was had, when the two policemen, when Schneider and Michel, left that police station in Offenbach, they most certainly did, in no uncertain terms, tell Kiwitt and Lt. Alt, who was there, that they were not going to shoot the flyer and thereupon they were driven out, as I said before. Something was said about shooting them on Mainzstrasse. To indicate that even if there was an order given in that police station these policemen were not going to carry it out, they went the entire length of Mainzstrasse and made no attempt or effort to shoot the flyer and to be sure that Lt. Alt would have something to report to his superior officer, he ran out of the police station a few minutes later, down the street and just caught up to them at the railroad station and asked them what they were going to do and Michel and Schneider both said that they were taking the flyer back to Bieber and when they said "back to Bieber", they said "back to the police station in Bieber", and they proceeded to Bieber.

Just about that time the airraid siren came. Now, it was very amusing to me sitting at the table listening to arguments of the prosecution, especially that point where they tried to say that the air raid siren was sounded to get the people off the streets. Certainly it was sounded for that reason. Those air raid sirens can be heard for miles and that siren was sounded in Frankfurt which is the headquarters of that area and how the people in Frankfurt could know that a flyer was walking along the street in a suburb of Offenbach, strikes me as amusing. But, the prosecution is grabbing at straws in order to pull out a theory in this case. What is more, there was an air raid or at least a threat of an air raid because Schneider says that Michel ran ahead at that point because he was afraid of falling flak and that Schneider and the flier proceeded about three hundred meters behind him. At any rate, they got to the gate. There they were met by two guards, Jaeger and Zahn. There was a third person there too. A man by the name of Guenther. What happened at that particular point or right inside the gate is in dispute. The witness Zahn said he spoke to Nahrgang; that Nahrgang called for Hammann and that Hammann didn't come, but he says that Fay came. As to what occurred there, some of the witnesses state one thing and other state something entirely different. Nahrgang is a defendant, Zahn is not. Nahrgang is charged with murder, Zahn is a free man. Did Nahrgang do anything more than Zahn did?

As I say, some witnesses said one thing and others another. At any rate, we have two disinterested witnesses to go by. Two people who do not know personally any of the defendants or any of the witnesses and they are Michel and Schneider. They have no interest whatsoever in this case and their testimony is to be believed. They say that they walked in through the gate with the flyer and prodeeded through that courtyard and part of the way through they were joined by Fay. Now, this is all during an air raid and people have rushed out of their houses and to the cellars and others are still hurrying and they have only one thing in mind and that is to get to that air raid shelter. So, we have going through the courtyard four men, Michel, Schneider, Fay and the flyer. Now Fay says that the two policemen were unarmed, that only the guards were armed and they were armed with Italian carbines and as they approached the place near the wooden shack, what happened? The flier made his mistake. Maybe at that time he didn't think so. The people were all off the streets, he saw that while walking through the streets. He saw that the streets and roads were clear -- that nobody was on the street. That was his intent. He couldn't do it at the railroad station because all the people had come out of their houses and there were many people in the streets, but at that time in the courtyard the streets were clear and if he could make a break then, he was free and he did. There he was with two policemen who wouldn't harm a fly and with Fay who was unarmed and so he broke away. He threw his arms like this (indicating). He didn't reach the policemen because they were a little behind him but he struck Fay on his left side and he ran, and there was only one way for him to run and that was down that stairway and through the path. What was going to happen -- if I were there I would have done the same thing as Fay did. If I were there I would have done the same thing as the policemen did. They yelled "The flier is escaping". Fay got one of the guns and fired a shot in the air. He couldn't see the flier. He had gone down the stairway. Then Fay says he chased the flyer. It is very amusing, the next bit of testimony, because Fay says there was a flight jacket on the stairs and he fell down the stairs and then he got up and chased the flier some more and that there were still people coming to the air raid shelter. They were late comers and he fired another shot in the air. That is just what I would have done to avoid hitting any of the people who m ight have still been on that path and then the prosecution says something about "broken field running". I think it was the most beautiful piece of "broken field running" that ever existed, except for one thing. Nobody knew there was a flyer there. Nobody knew the person running was a flyer. How were they to know? The flyer got out on the road and there he was on the road turning to the right and he knew that if he ever got to the cross-path the woods were there to his right and he was free.

Hammann was Sergeant of the Guard. He was in his guard room when he heard the shouts and the shots. He ran out and did what any Sergeant of the Guard would do. When he ran out to the gate he saw Jaeger standing there and as these guards were unarmed, so was Hammann and he grabbed the gun from Jaeger and went out into the Bierbrauer Weg. He saw that the flyer had a head start, quite a head start because they ran a hundred and fifty yards before the flyer was shot and he was shot as he was turning to the woods and he was shot at the third shot. The prosecution would want this court to believe that this whole thing was a stage -- the everything was being played -- that Hammann was standing there with his gun waiting for the flyer to come out the gate and shot him. If this was a stage the flyer would have been shot in the court-yard by Fay. Why did Hammann miss twice if he were waiting for the flyer to come through the gate. At any rate, it was very unfortunate that those things happened. Unfortunate for the flyer because he is dead and unfortunate for the defendants because the flyer put into action by his conduct a series of natural acts by the defendants, which resulted in the flyer's death and which are causing them to be defendants here. It is unfortunate for everybody because of a misjudgment by the flyer.

To get back to Bierbrauer Weg, Hamman says he shot three times. Why wasn't he at the flyer's body first? There was noone between him and the flyer. Fabian was off on the side. If there was nobody between Hammann and the flyer, why wasn't he first at the body? The answer is very logical. At the end of the third shot, when Hammann tried to shoot the fourth round, the gun jammed. He tried to open it and in opening it the fourth round flipped out. He drove the fifth round in and the fifth round went off accidentally right down in front of his feet. He finally got the sixth round in but by that time the people following him had passed and that is why Hammann says he never got to the flyer's body.

Now, let's come to Eichel. Eichel is named as a defendant. I don't know why. I suppose the only reason is because he was named in the seventh charge. But, during the entire time of this case he was in his air raid shelter. Between seven and eight o'clock he had been at the police station and from eight to ten o'clock he was in his air raid shelter until Hammann came to him and reported to him and he came out for some ten minutes, just long enough to walk from his shelter down that dirt path, meet Hammann and asked him what happened. Hammann told him and he then walked back to the court yard where the flyer's body was placed and then went back to the shelter and as having issued instructions or having a conversation at that spot, Eichel is named as a defendant in this case. If there is a stage here at all, the stage was prepared a year and a half ago, when statements were gotten and this is where the theater is. Can the prosecution say that there was a stage on Bierbrauer Weg and this thing went on without rehearsals?

If the court please, I have been getting all warmed up about this case but I have my own ideas of what happened there and I am firmly convinced of what happened at that place. I am sure the court has listened very patiently to me because the court has heard the witnesses and I am sure the court knows as much about this case as I do. I respectfully submit to the court that from the evidence in this case, Charge VIII, that there is no doubt, no doubt, not a question of reasonable doubt -- there is no doubt that the defendants mentioned in Charge VIII are to be found not guilty.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: May it please the court, that ends the arguments by the defense. I am very happy to see that we made it in the time alletted us.

PRESIDENT: Court will be closed.

(Whereupon at 1050 hours the court was closed.)

(Thereupon the court reconvened at 1330 hours.)

PRESIDENT: The court will come to order.

PROSECUTION: May it please the court, let the record show, that all the members of the court, all the members of the prosecution, all the members of the defense, all of the accused, the reporter and interpreter are present.

PRESIDENT: The motion by each and all of the accused made March 12, 1947 for a finding of not guilty as to charge 1 and the particulars thereunder is denied.

The motions of certain named accused made March 12, 1947 for a finding of not guilty with respect to charges 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 and the particulars under each of said charges are each and all denied.

The motion of Jurgen Stroop, Wilhelm Koehler, Fritz Cirbs, Heinz Hellenbreich and Wilhelm Albrecht, made March 12, 1947 for a finding of not guilty of the crime of murder in each instance where such offense is charged is denied.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: There was just one question concerning which I would like to invite the attention of the court. The interpreters tell me that at the rate they are reading these speeches back it is going to take a very long time. The suggestion was made by the interpreters that perhaps we start reading the addresses of defense counsel as being of more interest to the accused. Has the court any instructions in the matter?

PROSECUTION: There is no objection by the prosecution.

PRESIDENT: The court desires that all of the argument be read to the accused.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: We will do that in the same sequence in which they were delivered.

PRESIDENT: That is correct.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: Does the court desire to set a time before which it will not reconvene?

PRESIDENT: The court desires that when you finish the reading of all of the arguments you notify the court that it is finished.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: The estimate is unanimously that it will take the entire rest of the afternoon at the minimum.

PRESIDENT: There is no need for rushing it. I want it read to them and read properly.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: That includes, of course, the extemporaneous remarks which were part of the record?

PRESIDENT: Yes.

IV. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE:

1. Common Plan and Design: Orders and directives to kill unarmed prisoners of war were conceived and passed down by various persons holding high official positions in the hierarchy of the then German Reich. These orders were transmitted through official channels to accused STROOP, SOMANN, and TRUMPLER in Wehrkreis XII. STROOP was the Higher SS and Police Leader in said Wehrkreis, SOMANN was the Inspector of the Security Police and Security

Service and was later succeeded by accused TRUMMLER. These accused held conferences at various times concerning these orders among themselves and w th their subordinates, and they passed them on through official channels to lower commands. Acting in accordance with these orders, their subordinates killed unarmed and surrendered American prisoners of war.

Most of the accused in this case admitted their guilt and the respective parts played by each in this common plan and design to violate the laws of war. Such confessions of guilt appear in the extrajudicial sworn statements made by them and in their testimony given during the trial. Most of them contended that they acted pursuant to superior orders emanating from higher civil and military authority. This and other legal questions raised during the trial will be discussed in Section VI, post.

2. Organization of German Police: Himmler, as Reichsfuhrer SS and Chief of the German Police, by decree dated 26 June 1936 reorganized the German Police into two separate branches, i.e., Ordnungspolizei (ORPO, meaning Order Police or regular police) and the Sicherheitspolizei (SIPO, meaning Security Police).

The Order Police was composed of the uniformed forces consisting of the schutzpolizei (protection police), the gendarmerie (rural police), and the administrative police. The Security Police was made up of the Criminal Police (short title KRIPO) and the State Secret Police (Gestapo). The Security Service (SD) was consolidated with the Security Police (SIPO) by decree of 27 September 1939. The consolidation placed both the Security Police and Security Service under the Reich Security Head Office (RSHA), which was at the same time both one of the principal offices (Hauptamter) of the SS under Himmler as Reichsfuhrer SS and an office in the Ministry of the Interior under Himmler as Chief of the German Police. The SD was the intelligence agency of the SIPO. This change, above referred to, necessitated the appointment of certain high police officers to supervise the work of the ORPO and SIPO in their respective spheres and also to act as liaison officers with the local governments and the central police departments in Berlin. To each wehrkreis or military district was assigned an inspector of ORPO and of SIPO. The accused SOMANN was appointed to the latter position in Wehrkreis XII and was subsequently succeeded by accused TRUPPLER. Their tasks were to co-operate with the gauleiters and commander of the wehrkreis to which they were appointed as well as with the administrative authorities. Subsequently, in order to concentrate police power in the hands of a trusted few, Himmler elevated the inspectors of ORPO and the inspectors of SIPO to the positions of befehlshaber der ORPO (BDO) and befehlshaber der SIPO und des SD (BDS). They were then commanders. As commanders, they had complete command of their respective forces and were responsible for their training, preparedness, equipment, etc.

Later, Himmler appointed a police leader in each wehrkreis, who was his personal representative. For this job he chose the SS fuhrer or leader of the SS forces in the SS oberabschnitte. (The oberabschnitte was the territorial division of the SS in the German Reich coextensive with the wehrkreis or military district.) As such, he was the head of all police forces. In Wehrkreis XII he appointed the accused STROOP, who was at that time SS leader, as Higher SS and Police Leader. By virtue of his rank and position, he was the "Little Himmler" in the wehrkreis. At his disposal he had Allgemeine SS regiments, units of the Waffen SS in local garrison and all branches of Regular Police, Security Police and Security Service in the wehrkreis. His job was to assure co-operation between the regional SS, police officers, and the local military and civil authorities and in the event of emergencies was to take over command of the combined SS and police forces in his area. Himmler gave STROOP this extraordinary authority in September 1944.

3. Chain of Command:

a. From the Nazi Hierarchy: Himmler, as Reichsminister of the Interior and Commander-in-Chief of the SS and German Police, was the supreme commander. He had a direct channel of command to the Reichssicherheitshauptamt (RSHA), Reichs Security Head Office, headed by the Chief of the Security Police and Security Service, General Kaltenbrunner, and to the Hauptamt Ordnungspolizei (ORPO), Head Office, Order Police, headed by the Chief of the Order Police, General Kummenberg. Both of these head offices were located in Berlin. Included in the organization of these head offices were the "Amts", i.e., the departments similar to our general staff sections. From these head offices there existed a channel of command to the Higher SS and Police Leader and to the commander of the Security Police and Order Police in Wehrkreis XII. There was also a direct channel of command from Himmler to the Higher SS and Police Leaders (R 61; P-Ex 9).

b. From the Higher SS and Police Leader: From the Higher SS and Police Leader in the wehrkreis there was a direct channel of command to the commander of the Security Police and Order Police in the wehrkreis. The Higher SS and Police Leader was the commander of all police forces in the wehrkreis. STROOP's territorial command consisted of Wehrkreis XII and that part of Wehrkreis IX known as Hessen. The entire area under his command was called the Rhein-Westmark area. By virtue of his rank of lieutenant general, he was the appointing and reviewing authority of the SS and police courts and in charge of the prisoners of war in the wehrkreis. He was also commander of the SS in his area, maintaining SS offices at Frankfurt, Saarbrucken and Koblenz. His area was comprised of three gaus, Gau Westmark, Gau Hessen-Nassau, and Gau Moselland, the last named included Luxembourg. Each gau was governed by a gauleiter. In the performance of his duties STROOP was assisted by a chief of staff and a staff organized into "Amts". These "Amts" were similar to those in the head offices of both branches of the police in Berlin. The wehrwolf undertaking, sabotage activities behind enemy lines, in his wehrkreis was under his command and the accused BEST aided in the supervision thereof (R 61, 71; P-Exs 9, 13). Accused GOSS was in charge of the wehrwolf school located at Vallrabenstein. Accused MICHELY was an instructor in the school (R 1032).

c. From Inspector and Commander of the Security Police and Order Police: The inspector or commander of the Security Police and Security Service in Wehrkreis XII, the accused SOMANN and his successor the accused TRUMMLER had a direct channel of command to the branch offices in the wehrkreis, viz., the Criminal Police (KRIPO), the State Secret Police (Gestapo), and the Security Service. The Gestapo headquarters for this wehrkreis maintained offices at Darmstadt, Frankfurt, Koblenz, and Saarbrucken. The Darmstadt office was under the command of the accused GIRKE assisted by the accused HELLENBROICH. These branch offices in turn had a channel of command down to the suboffices in their respective areas.

The channel of command for the Order Police followed the same pattern.

The commander of the Order Police had a channel of command to the higher police authorities and state governments, the lord mayor, national police administration headquarters, and district police authorities. The higher police authorities and state governments were of wehrkreis level and the last three of regional and local level.

The national police administration headquarters had jurisdiction over the SCHUPO (protective police) in large cities with channels of command to police law enforcing agencies subordinate thereto. The district police authorities had jurisdiction over police agencies in small towns and administered police protection through the gendarmerie (R 61, 71; P-Exs 9, 13).

4. Incidents: The incidents covered by charges 3 through 10 will hereinafter be referred to as "incident number 3", "incident number 4", etc. There follows a description of these incidents:

a. Incident Number 3: On or about 3 October 1944 in the vicinity of Giessen, Germany, the accused LASSAK turned over a captured American flyer to the Gestapo. The flyer was shot by BRANNER in conformity with orders issued by his immediate superior Wintzer. The shooting was done in the Philosophen forest, near Giessen, Germany, on or about 3 October 1944.

b. Incident Number 4: On or about 19 October 1944 accused TRUMMLER ordered accused HOHLER and FUHR and one Fraund, Gestapo agents under his command, to kill a captured American flyer who was in the Gestapo headquarters in Wiesbaden. In conformity with this order, HOHLER, FUHR and Fraund drove the flyer in an official car toward Frankfurt. On the Wiesbaden-Frankfurt road, the flyer was ordered out of the car and shot by Fraund.

c. Incident Number 5: On or about 30 December 1944 accused TRUMMLER ordered accused FUHR and one Fraund, both Gestapo agents under his command, to kill a captured American flyer who was in the Gestapo headquarters in Wiesbaden. That evening, in conformity with this order, FUHR and Fraund drove the flyer in the direction of Frankfurt, Germany. On the Wiesbaden-Frankfurt road the flyer was ordered out of the car and they both shot him, resulting in his death.

d. Incident Number 6: On or about 15 February 1945 a captured

American flyer was brought to the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, Germany. Accused GIRKE was in charge of the headquarters. He telephoned accused TRUMMLER, his superior, for instructions regarding the disposition to be made of this flyer. Upon being informed by TRUMMLER that the flyer had to be shot, he ordered his assistant, accused HELLENBROICH, to have accused STATTMANN and RAAF, Gestapo agents under his command, kill the flyer. In conformity with this order, accused STATTMANN and RAAF walked the flyer to a forest in the vicinity of Bensheim where they both shot the flyer, resulting in his death.

e. Incident Number 7: On or about 22 February 1945, a captured American flyer was brought to the police station in Bieber, Germany. Accused ALBRECHT, a police lieutenant, was the commanding officer of the police station. Accused MOLLER and GOEHRENDT were policemen under his command. Accused EICHEL, a lieutenant colonel of the police, was the police director of the area and accused KIWITT, a police captain, was one of EICHEL's assistants. While the flyer was being interrogated by ALBRECHT and others, EICHEL and KIWITT entered the police station. EICHEL tore the scarf from the flyer's neck and hit a cigarette out of his mouth. Both EICHEL and KIWITT reprimanded ALBRECHT and the others present for showing consideration to the flyer. In ALBRECHT's office EICHEL gave him an order to shoot the flyer. ALBRECHT refused to do this, whereupon EICHEL ordered MOLLER to kill the flyer. Outside the police station both EICHEL and KIWITT incited the crowd by making inflammatory remarks directed at the flyer. The flyer left the police station with MOLLER, accompanied by ALBRECHT and a policeman named Como. ALBRECHT ordered accused GOEHRENDT to follow them. In a forest near Bieber, MOLLER shot the flyer to death.

f. Incident Number 8: On or about 22 February 1945, accused GOEHREN turned over a captured American flyer to policemen Michel and Schneider in the Police station in Bieber, Germany, with instructions to deliver him to police headquarters in Offenbach. They took the flyer to Offenbach and reported to accused KIWITT who ordered them to kill the flyer. On the return trip an air raid alarm sounded and the policemen together with the flyer went to an air raid shelter on Bierbrauer Weg for cover. The air raid shelter consisted of an open area and an underground shelter at one end which was used as a command post by accused EICHEL. EICHEL was present in this underground shelter at the time. With the exception of the main gate the only other exit from the area was on Bierbrauer Weg. Near the main gate one of the policemen told accused NAHRGANG they had a flyer who was to be shot. NAHRGANG called for accused HAMMANN and FAY. They engaged in a whispering conversation and FAY was heard to say that this was an easy matter. Thereupon, FAY shoved and pushed the flyer toward the stairway accompanied by NAHRGANG and one of the policemen. In the meantime a policeman had given FAY his pistol. Suddenly, FAY fired the pistol into the air and shouted that a flyer was escaping. The flyer ran down the stairway toward the secondary exit. HAMMANN, who remained behind, ran to the main gate, took a carbine from the guard who was standing there and ran down Bierbrauer Weg to head off the flyer who could only come out of the secondary exit. Shortly thereafter the flyer came out and HAMMANN fired three shots, killing him.

g. Incident Number 9: On or about 18 March 1945 a captured American flyer was brought to the wehrwolf school in Wallrabenstein, Germany, by accused MICHELY. MICHELY was an instructor in the school and accused GOSS was the director. GOSS ordered MICHELY to take the flyer to Idstein and kill him on the way. The order given by GOSS to MICHELY was in conformity with an order from accused STROOP through accused BEST. That evening, in conformity with this order, MICHELY took the flyer toward Idstein and shot him on the way.

h. Incident Number 10: On or about 24 March 1945 two captured American prisoners of war were brought to the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, Germany. Accused GIRKE ordered accused HELLENBROICH to have accused STATTMANN and RAAF kill the two prisoners of war in the garden in the rear of the headquarters. In conformity with the order STATTMANN and RAAF shot the two prisoners.

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was the Higher SS and Police Leader for the Rhein-Westmark area with the rank of lieutenant general in the SS since 9 November 1943 (R 239, 1947; P-Ex 41). As Higher SS and Police Leader, he was in command of the Order Police and Security Police in said area (R 227; P-Ex 354, p. 9). The area was comprised of Wehrkreis XII and that part of Wehrkreis IX known as Hessen (R 65; P-Ex 11). The headquarters for the area was located in Wiesbaden, Germany (R 1947).

About the middle of September 1944, accused received an order, hereinafter referred to as the "noninterference order, from Himmler to the effect that the police were not to interfere in actions by the civilian population against captured Allied flyers. The order was passed down from Himmler's office. This order contained a request that he transmit it to the commanders of the Regular Police and Security Police (R 91; P-Ex I9). The accused subsequently transmitted it to the commander of the Order Police in his area. Later, at a conference held in his office, the order was read to the commanders of the Order Police and Security Police (R 98, 100; P-Exs 27A, 28A). He also discussed the order at a conference of the heads of the Order Police for Rhein-Westmark area held in Metz in 1944 (R 100; P-Ex 28A). At another conference held in his office in about October 1944, attended by accused TRUMMLER, commander of the Security Police, STROOP complained that the Order Police were not complying with Himmler's order (R 184-186, 202, 203, 215). He threatened to punish severly any members of the Order Police who protected captured flyers. At that time he directed that captured flyers should be turned over to the Security Police (R 126, 216). STROOP insisted upon strict obedience to his orders. In November 1944, he recommended severe punishment for a police official who gave aid to a captured flyer (R 129, 187). He also voiced approval of Goebbel's article published in a party newspaper inciting the German people against Allied flyers (R 92, 132; P-Ex 21). STROOP received his orders and directives from Himmler, Kaltenbrunner and Wunnenberg (R 199). In about September 1944, he received an order from Kaltenbrunner to the effect that captured parachuted flyers would be turned over to the SIPO and shot (R 96; P-Ex 26). He passed this order to the commanders of the Security Police, Regular Police and SS Colonels in command of SS Regiments (R 200, 201). During 1944 he received Bormann's order to the effect that no police action would be taken against the civilian population who lynched flyers (R 93, 201, 202; P-Ex 22). The Bormann order and all other principal orders were discussed by STROOP with commanders of the Order Police and Security Police (R 202).

STROOP passed these orders to agencies under his command. In the summer of 1944 it was known among police officials under his command in a kreis surrounding Koblenz that STROOP had passed down the noninterference order (R 227, 230; P-Exs 35A, pp. 14, 15, 37A, p. 7). In February 1945 this order was discussed in a conference of the commanders of the gendarmerie and schutzpolizei of the Koblenz area. It was agreed that captured flyers were to be turned over to the Gestapo and that the police should not interfere in clashes between the civilian population and the flyers (R 227; P-Ex 35A, pp. 15, 16). A written order from STROOP to the effect that all captured flyers be shot was also read at this meeting (R 230; P-Ex 37A, pp. 3-6). The shooting order and the order that flyers be turned over to the Gestapo were transmitted by STROOP to police presidents and police directors. This occurred in August or September 1944. These orders were marked "Secret" and were to be destroyed immediately after they were read (R 266, 267; P-Exs 56A, 57, p. 3). In June or July 1944, the shooting order was verbally transmitted by STROOP to the SS colonel in command of the Allgemeine SS in Saarbrucken (R 2127). In September 1944, at a conference of the leaders of the Allgemeine SS at his headquarters, STROOP reminded those present of the order to shoot flyers (R 2128, 2132). During a police conference of the schutzpolizei of the Koblenz area in Wehrkreis XII held in August or September 1944 in Koblenz, those present were informed of the order issued by STROOP that flyers would be turned over to the Gestapo instead of the Wehrmacht. About two weeks later, the police officials received this order in writing, through channels, from STROOP's headquarters (R 230; P-Ex 37A, pp. 2-4).

As a result of these orders passed down by STROOP to the agencies under his command, captured American flyers were illegally killed by his subordinates. On or about 3 October 1944 three American flyers were turned over to a kreisleiter and another flyer was turned over to the Gestapo in compliance with these orders, in the Giessen area, incident number 3. These flyers were shot (R 267; P-Ex 57, pp. 3-5). On or about 19 October 1944, accused TRUMMLER ordered his subordinates to kill a captured flyer, incident number 4. This flyer was killed in conformity with the shooting order from Kaltenbrunner to TRUMMLER (R 2173). An order in the same form as the Kaltenbrunner order was also passed by STROOP to TRUMMLER (R 2161, 2169). In December 1944, after a captured flyer was killed near Wiesbaden pursuant to an order from TRUMMLER, the latter telephoned STROOP and informed him of this fact, incident number 5 (R 312; P-Ex 65A). On or about 15 February 1945 accused GIRKE ordered his subordinates to kill a captured flyer near Bensheim, Germany, incident number 6. GIRKE gave this order in conformity with a similar order received from TRUMMLER over the telephone (R 1449). The order to GIRKE originated from Kaltenbrunner and was transmitted by STROOP to TRUMMLER (R 2169-2176). In March 1945, an American flyer was killed by a member of the wehrwolf school in Wallrabenstein on orders from STROOP, transmitted by accused BEST, incident number 9 (R 616, 618; P-Exs 141A-143, p. 6).

Evidence for Defense: The accused testified under oath. He denied the receipt of any general order to kill captured enemy flyers (R 1954). He denied issuing any such shooting orders, as well as any connection with or knowledge of the incidents set forth in charges 3 through 10 (R 1977, 1978, 2006). He admitted receiving written orders concerning treatment of captured flyers, either from Himmler or from the main office of the Order Police (R 1953). The first order was received in 1944 to the effect that flyers were to be turned over to the Wehrmacht. Later, he received an order that flyers were to be turned over to the Security Police. In July or August 1944 he received the noninterference order (R 1954). He transmitted all these orders to his subordinates (R 1955). On one occasion, the accused TRUMMLER informed him that three or four flyers were killed while attempting to escape (R 1960). On another occasion, the accused expressed the opinion that captured flyers should be shot. This utterance was induced by the suffering and misery caused by incessant bombings (R 1976). He testified that he attended conferences with Himmler and Kaltenbrunner but never discussed treatment of Allied flyers with either of them (R 1980-1982). Orders were received by him from Himmler, or direct from his headquarters, from Bormann and his staff, from the main office of the Order Police, and sometimes from the main office of the Security Police (R 1988, 1989). He transmitted all orders which he received (R 1989). He denied he ever saw an order issued by Keitel dealing with captured flyers (R 94, 1990; P-Ex 24). However, he admitted knowledge of an order issued by Hitler dealing with the same matter (R 89, 1991; P-Ex 17). The noninterference order received from Himmler in June or July 1944 was passed on by him to his subordinates at a conference attended by commanders of the Order Police and the Security Police (R 1992). He admitted receiving the Bormann order (R 93, 1994; P-Ex 22)

STROOP's chief of staff testified that he never saw an order directing that captured flyers be shot and particularly that he never saw any such order leave in the mail (R 2094). There was further evidence that the Gestapo headquarters in Frankfurt, the Higher SS and Police Leader in Wehrkreis IX, and the Police President of Saarbrucken never received any such shooting order (R 2115, 2325, 2332, 2333).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused STROOP's membership in the SS and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 3 through 6 and 9. The evidence is clear that the accused received orders regarding the illegal treatment of captured Allied flyers. It is also clearly established that these orders were transmitted by STROOP to all agencies under his command. It was proven that his subordinates, acting in conformity with such orders, illegally killed unarmed and surrendered American flyers throughout the area under his command, and the Court was warranted from the evidence concerning the vigorous manner in which he transmitted the various orders to all his agencies and his efforts to enforce them that he encouraged and provoked the killings involved in incidents numbers 3 through 6 and incident number 9.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Two Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Max Rau, German defense counsel, 19 April 1947, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1945. One of the petitions filed by Dr. Rau urges a new trial upon the ground that the accused was convicted upon the perjured testimony of accused TRUMMLER to the effect that he had received the shooting order from STROOP. The fact is that TRUMMLER did not so testify. He testified that he received the shooting order from Kaltenbrunner in Berlin at the time he was assigned to Wehrkreis XII. He further testified that STROOP gave an order during a conference which was identical in content. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

2. HANS TRUMMLER

Nationality:	German
Age:	46
Civilian Status:	Banking and Automobile Industry; Colonel, Security Police, 1 August 1937 to 1945; Commander of the Security Police and Security Service, Rhein-Westmark area, since 15 September 1944.
Party Status:	Nazi party since 1928
Military Status:	SS Colonel from 1 July 1935 to 1945; SA since 1928.
Plea:	NG Charges 1 through 10
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6; NG Charges 3, 7, 8, 9 and 10
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidonce for Prosecution: Accused TRUMMLER was a member of the SS (R 239, 2155; P-Ex 42) and the SD (R 167, 213, 811, 2170). The accused was Commander of the Security Police and Security Service in the Rhein-Westmark area with the rank of SS colonel from 15 September 1944 (R 2154). He succeeded accused SOHANN (R 153). On one occasion he told the Gestapo chief of the Frankfurt office who was under his command that he thought it proper to shoot captured Allied flyers (R 157). In March 1945, a commissioner of one of the suboffices of the same Gestapo chief reported to the latter that accused TRUMMLER had ordered that captured Allied flyers be shot (R 157, 158). In December 1944, at a conference of the Security Service in Frankfurt, the head of the agency announced an order that all captured enemy flyers were to be rendered harmless on the spot (R 167, 168). The witness as to this believed the order came from TRUMMLER (R 169). Toward the end of the war, at meetings of inspectors, the accused said that all captured flyers turned over to or apprehended by the Gestapo were to be shot (R 181; P-Ex 34A, p. 2). The accused was also present at a conference with STROOP when the shooting order from Kaltenbrunner (R 96; P-Ex 26) was discussed. At that time STROOP said the order was to be strictly enforced (R 202, 203). The order that captured flyers were to be killed was known at the Gestapo headquarters and at the office of the Security Service in Koblenz. The witness who testified as to this thought that the order came from superior authority, accused TRUMMLER (R 228; P-Ex 36A). The Gestapo headquarters at Darmstadt, as well as other Gestapo headquarters, constabulary headquarters, and the offices of all other leaders under TRUMMLER's command, received the same order (R 383; P-Ex 106A, pp. 3, 4). In conformity with these orders transmitted by accused TRUMMLER, subordinates under his command illegally killed unarmed and surrendered American flyers.

In October 1944, the accused ordered Fraund, and accused FUHR and HOHLER to drive a captured American flyer in an official car toward Oberursel after darkness and shoot him at an opportune moment, incident number 4. They were also ordered to notify the local gendarmerie to arrange for the flyer's burial. After darkness, these three drove the flyer in the direction of Frankfurt. Near an inn on the Wiesbaden-Frankfurt road the flyer was killed. They then drove to Wallau and notified the local gendarmerie to bury the victim. Upon their return to Wiesbaden they reported the execution of the order to TRUMMLER (R 312; P-Ex 65A). The next day HOHLER made a written report to TRUMMLER to the effect that the flyer was shot while trying to escape. TRUMMLER then handed out a box of cigars (R 314; P-Ex 66A). The victim was identified as an American soldier, one Willard F. Perry (R 309; P-Ex 62).

On about 28 or 29 December 1944, an American flyer, believed to be Robert Garrison, parachuted to safety in the vicinity of Langenhain, Germany (R 270, 272). This flyer was taken to accused's headquarters located on Paulinenstrasse, Wiesbaden, Germany (R 280). TRUMMLER then ordered one Fraund and the accused FUHR, both employees of the Gestapo in Wiesbaden, to shoot the flyer that night after dark, incident number 5. Pursuant to this order, Fraund and FUHR drove the flyer toward Frankfurt, and on the Wiesbaden-Frankfurt road they both shot the flyer resulting in his death. They then notified the gendarmerie at Wallau to bury the body. They returned to Wiesbaden and reported the accomplishment of the mission to TRUMMLER. Thereupon, in their presence, TRUMMLER telephoned STROOP and informed him the flyer had been done away with (R 311, 312; P-Exs 64A, 65A).

On 15 February 1945, an unarmed and surrendered American flyer was shot by members of the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, commanded by accused GIRKE and HELLENBROICH, in conformity with orders issued by the accused TRUMMLER, incident number 6 (R 387; P-Ex 107A).

Evidence for Defense: TRUMMLER testified that on 15 September 1944 he reported to Berlin and received the assignment of Commander of the Security Police and Security Service for the Rhein-Westmark area (R 2159). On 13 September 1944, in a conference with Kaltenbrunner concerning his new duties, the latter gave him an order that captured flyers were to be shot (R 2161). He later received a similar order from Major General Muller, Chief of Office No. 4, Reich Head Security Office (R 2162). Since these orders had been decided upon by the Reich government, he accepted them as legal orders (R 2161). He took over his duties at Wiesbaden on 20 September 1944 (R 2165). The accused STROOP held conferences of his subordinate commanding officers about once a week (R 2167). During these conferences, STROOP transmitted the order to the accused and others present, that captured flyers were to be shot. This order was in the same form as the previous order the accused had received from Kaltenbrunner (R 2169).

He denied any guilt concerning charges 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9 and 10, but admitted full responsibility for the killings mentioned in charges 4, 5 and 6 (R 2169-2178). Regarding charge 4, he testified that on 19 October 1944, he was informed that the rural police had turned over a flyer. He telephoned the Gestapo chief in Wiesbaden, one Luckhard, and ordered a detail of two men to shoot him. Fraund and accused FUHR reported to him for this purpose, and he thereupon gave them the order to shoot the flyer. The shooting took place that evening and both Fraund and FUHR reported that the order had been executed (R 2171-2173). He testified that, if these men had refused to carry out his order, they would have been severely punished (R 2174). As to charge 5, he testified that on 30 December 1944 Luckhard reported to him that the rural police had turned over a captured enemy flyer. He ordered Luckhard to furnish a detail of two men to shoot the flyer. Fraund and FUHR reported for this purpose and he thereupon gave them an order to shoot the flyer. They returned that evening and reported that the order had been executed. On his order, the execution of this flyer was reported by telephone to STROOP's office (R 2174, 2175). Concerning charge 6, he testified that it was quite possible that on 15 February 1945, the accused GIRKE told him by telephone that the Gestapo headquarters in Darmstadt had a flyer and that he thereupon ordered the flyer shot (R 2176). He testified that had he failed to carry out Kaltenbrunner's order he would have been shot (R 2179). Throughout his testimony concerning incidents 4, 5 and 6, he emphasized that the victims were "terror flyers".

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused TRUMMLER's membership in the SS and SD and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 4, 5 and 6. By his testimony, the accused freely admitted his part in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war; that he received the so-called shooting order from higher authority and transmitted the same to his subordinates; and that, in incidents 4, 5 and 6, he ordered his subordinates to kill unarmed and surrendered American flyers pursuant to the order. With regard to the evidence offered in support of his plea of superior orders, the accused failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post. While his actions may have been in conformity with orders from superiors, it appears that he willingly co-operated and it does not appear that his actions in incidents 4, 5 and 6 were under immediate compulsion.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, 24 March 1947, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. A recommendation, 21 March 1947, was submitted by six members of the Court which heard the case urging that his death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment because of his honesty and truthfulness in accepting full responsibility for his acts. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

3. OTTO SOMANN

Nationality:	German
Age:	47
Civilian Status:	Agriculturist. Security Service from 1936 to 1944; Inspector of Security Police and Security Service, Rhein-Westmark area from January 1943 to 28 July 1944; Inspector of customs police from 1944 to 1945.
Party Status:	Nazi party since March 1927
Military Status:	SS Colonel of police, date unknown; Allgemeine SS from 1937 to 1945; Waffen SS from August 1943 to November 1943
Plea:	NG Charges 1 through 10
Findings:	G Charges 1 and 2; NG Charges 3 through 10
Sentence:	4 years, commencing 30 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused SOMANN was a member of the SS (R 239, 2246; P-Ex 43) and the SD (R 239, 2246; P-Ex 43). The accused was Inspector of the Security Police and Security Service with headquarters located in Wiesbaden, Germany, from January 1943 to the end of July 1944 (R 2246). During his tenure of office, the accused received orders directing illegal treatment of captured Allied flyers from the Nazi hierarchy. He passed down these orders to agencies under his command. In June or July 1944 at a conference held in his headquarters at Wiesbaden attended by all leaders of the Gestapo, Criminal Police and Security Service in the Rhein-Westmark area, he read the noninterference order from Himmler (R 155, 160). He directed that this order be made known to all the members of the Security Police and Security Service (R 155, 161). In discussing the noninterference order, he made a statement which could only be interpreted to mean that captured enemy flyers turned over to the Security Police were to be shot (R 104, 181, 383; P-Exs 30A, p. 3, 34A, p. 3, 106A, p. 4). After the publication of Goebbel's article in the summer of 1944 branding Allied flyers as murderers, SOMANN announced the order to shoot captured flyers (R 387; P-Ex 107A).

About August 1944, the accused or his successor transmitted an order to the police directors and police presidents under his command that captured flyers were to be turned over to the Gestapo (R 266, 267; P-Exs 56A, 57, p. 3).

Evidence for Defense: The accused, in his testimony, denied any guilt regarding the matters set forth in charges 3 through 10 (R 2268). He denied that he discussed or planned any violation of the laws of war with any of the other accused as alleged in charge 1 (R 2272, 2273). He testified that he was never involved in any of the criminal activities of the organizations declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal (R 2275, 2276). He testified that his duties were limited to inspection of the offices of the Security Police and Security Service (R 2254). At the time he took this assignment, several orders were passed down to him concerning treatment of Allied flyers. The original order was that captured flyers were to be turned over to the army. In the beginning of 1944, he received an order from

"Amt" 4, Reich Head Security Office, that captured flyers in the hands of the Security Police were to be sent to Oberursel through the Gestapo at Frankfurt (R 2257). This order was received verbally and was transmitted verbally to the offices of the Gestapo, Criminal Police and Security Service in his area (R 2258). Toward the end of June 1944, he received the noninterference order (R 2258). This order was received from Himmler with instructions by Kaltenbrunner that it was to be transmitted verbally (R 2259). In June or July 1944, he transmitted this order to the chiefs of his agencies during a conference held in his office in Wiesbaden (R 2259). He denied that he ever made any explanation of this order which could be interpreted as an order to shoot captured flyers (R 2260, 2263). He admitted that he might have stated an opinion concerning this order which might have led to some misunderstanding (R 2264, 2265). He also admitted receiving an order in the middle of 1943 from Kaltenbrunner to the effect that enemy agents had to be turned over to the Gestapo for final decision (R 2266, 2267) and receiving one from Adolf Hitler to the effect that parachuted commando units, agents, etc., were to be killed on the spot (R 2268). During the time he held the position of Commander of the Security Police and Security Service, not a single case of a murdered flyer was called to his attention (R 2268). The punishment for failure to carry out an order during war time was death (R 2272). All orders received by him from proper authority were transmitted to chiefs of Gestapo, Criminal Police and Security Service (R 2284). However, he denied that he ever issued orders to his chiefs that captured flyers were to be shot (R 2289). During his tenure of office, no captured flyer was ever killed in the area under his command (R 2289).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused SOHANN's membership in the SS and SD and as to his being implicated in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war. The evidence is clear that the accused received orders from higher German authority directing illegal treatment of captured flyers, which orders he transmitted to subordinates under his command. His participation in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war is thus established.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review, 24 March 1947, was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

4. ARTHUR FUHR

Nationality:	German
Age:	37
Civilian Status:	Chauffeur and mechanic; Secret State Police (Gestapo) from April 1937, with the rank of SS Master Sergeant since 1944; Security Service from 1939 to 1945
Party Status:	Nazi party from 1931 to 1945
Military Status:	SA from 1931 to 1932
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2, 4 and 5
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 4 and 5
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused FUHR was a member of the SS (R 1143, 1183); the SD (R 239; P-Ex 44); and the Gestapo (R 239, 288, 298, 306, 1183, 1216, 1218; P-Ex 44). The accused was employed as a driver and mechanic at the Gestapo headquarters in Wiesbaden, Germany (R 1142).

On 19 October 1944, the accused, HOHLER, and one Fraund, employees of the same Gestapo headquarters, were ordered to report to accused TRUMLER (R 1145, 1146). TRUMLER ordered them to drive a captured American flyer after darkness in an official car in the direction of Frankfurt, shoot him at an opportune moment and direct the local gendarmerie to bury the body, incident number 4 (R 1147). After darkness, FUHR drove the flyer with HOHLER and Fraund in the direction of Frankfurt. On the road between Wiesbaden and Frankfurt, they stopped near an inn. HOHLER and Fraund got out of the car with the flyer, and while accused was turning the car around, he heard shots and saw the dead flyer two or three meters from the edge of the road. All [illegible] drove to [illegible] and directed the gendarmerie to bury the road. All three drove to Wallau and directed the gendarmerie to bury the body. They returned to Wiesbaden and reported to TRUMPLER that the order had been executed (R 312; P-Ex 654). The flyer was buried in the cemetery at Wallau (R 296, 302, 304). The body was exhumed on 14 December 1945 and identified as that of an American soldier, Willard F. Perry (R 309; P-Ex 62).

On or about 30 December 1944, an American flyer, believed to be Robert Garrison, was brought to the Gestapo headquarters in Wiesbaden, Germany, incident number 5. After an unsuccessful attempt to interrogate him, accused FUHR was ordered to take him to the cellar of the headquarters (R 286, 312; P-Exs 61, pp. 13, 14, 65A). That afternoon FUHR and Fraund were ordered to report to accused TRUMPLER who ordered them to shoot the flyer after dark. That night FUHR drove Fraund and the flyer in the direction of Frankfurt and on the road between Wiesbaden and Frankfurt stopped the car near an inn. Fraund ordered the flyer out of the car and each fired a shot at him. The flyer collapsed, dead. They then drove to Wallau and directed the gendarmerie to bury the body. They returned to Wiesbaden and reported the accomplishment of the mission to TRUMPLER (R 311, 312; P-Exs 64, 65A). The victim was later buried in the cemetery at Delkenheim, Germany (R 297). In December 1945 or January 1946, the body was exhumed (R 307). It was identified as that of an unknown American soldier (R 310; P-Ex 63).

Evidence for Defense: In his testimony the accused admitted that he participated in the incidents covered by charges 4 and 5 in substantially the same degree as indicated by the evidence for the prosecution (R 1145-1155). He testified that he assumed the orders he received from his superior, accused TRUMPLER, who held the rank of SS colonel, were proper and that he was duty bound to obey them (R 1157). Disobedience of such an order in war time meant death (R 1158).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused FUHR's membership in the SS, SD and Gestapo and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 4 and 5. The guilt of this accused is satisfactorily established. He admitted his guilt both in extrajudicial sworn testimony and from the witness stand under oath. His allegation that he thought the acts were proper is overcome by the very nature of the acts, the secret manner in which they were executed and the general intelligence one must infer that he of necessity possessed. By his compliance with the illegal orders to kill the unarmed and surrendered flyers involved in incidents 4 and 5, he took part in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war. His guilt under charge 1 is clear. With regard to the evidence offered in support of superior orders, it appears that he took a consenting part in the common design and incidents 4 and 5. The killings were accomplished at points remote from superiors and he is not shown to have acted under immediate compulsion. He failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Richard Wacker, German defense counsel, 27 March 1947, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. A Petition for Clemency was filed by his parents, Wilhelm and Gertrude FUHR, May 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

5. WILHELM HOHLER

Nationality:	German
Age:	37
Civilian Status:	Protective Police from 4 April 1929 to 15 March 1933; 6 March 1936 to 31 December 1937; Criminal Police from 1 January 1938 to 4 April 1945. Gestapo from September 1939 to 4 April 1945
Party Status:	None
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 4
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2 and 4
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused HOHLER served as a Gestapo agent from 1939 till the end of the war (R 239, 1093, 1094, 1114, 1133, 1134; P-Ex 45). On 19 October 1944, the accused, together with accused FUHR and one Fraund, were ordered to take a captured American flyer to Oberursel and shoot him, incident number 4 (R 1099-1101). According to the plan made known to the accused, the car was to be brought to a stop, the flyer asked to get out on some pretext and then shot. All three, together with the flyer, drove in the direction of Frankfurt. The car was stopped near an inn on the Wiesbaden-Frankfurt road. Fraund and the accused got out and asked the flyer to leave with them. FUHR turned the car around and several pistol shots were fired in rapid succession. The three then drove to Wallau and notified the gendarmerie to bury the body. The next day HOHLER made a written report of the incident to accused TRUMMLER to the effect that the flyer was shot by Fraund while attempting to escape. TRUMMLER then gave him a box of cigars to distribute among the members of the Gestapo in Wiesbaden (R 312, 314, 1937; P-Exs 65A, 66A, 146A).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the witness stand and testified under oath. By his extrajudicial sworn testimony and by his testimony in court he insisted that he remained in the car at the scene of the killing (R 314; P-Ex 66A). Otherwise, his testimony was substantially to the same effect as the evidence for the prosecution (R 1099-1113). He admitted that the report he made to TRUMMLER to the effect that the flyer was shot by Fraund while attempting to escape was false (R 1126). He was of the opinion that the order received from an SS colonel was legal (R 1128). Refusal to obey the order would have meant death (R 1131). He admitted that his extrajudicial sworn testimony containing an account of his report to TRUMMLER was false (R 1937, 1940, 1941; P-Ex 146A).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence that accused HOHLER served as a Gestapo agent from 1939 till the end of the war and that he was implicated in incident 4. While the evidence is not too clear, the Court might well have concluded that he was a member of the Gestapo. The evidence clearly indicates that the accused was guilty of participating in the killing of an unarmed and surrendered prisoner of war as alleged in charge 4. He knew the flyer was to be killed according to a pre-established plan and played his part in carrying it out. Whether he fired the fatal shot is not shown by the evidence. However, it appears that he accompanied the others on the trip and actively participated throughout the incident. Acting jointly with the others he was liable for all the consequences that naturally flowed from their acts, i.e., all who join in a common design to commit an unlawful act, the natural and probable consequence of the execution of which involves the contingency of taking human life, are responsible for a homicide committed by one of them while acting in pursuance of or in furtherance of the common design, although not specifically contemplated by the parties (United States v. Hartgen, et al., October 1945, 29 Corpus Juris, Sec. 46, p. 1073). It was shown that he took a consenting part in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war as alleged in charge 1. With regard to the evidence offered in support of superior orders, it appears that he took a consenting part in and freely participated in incident number 4 at a point distant from superiors. It was not shown that he acted under any immediate compulsion and the Court would have been warranted in not giving weight to his testimony to the effect that he thought the order was legal and proper. Consequently, the accused failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947, and Dr. Trost, German defense counsel, 7 July 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by his wife, Luise Hohler, 22 March 1947; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hohler, 28 March 1947; Leonhard Wilke, 26 March 1947; Lena Fercke, 19 June 1947; Johannes Budde, 15 June 1947; Franziska Fourman, 24 June 1947; Erna Debus, 24 June 1947; Karl Rudolf, 6 June 1947; Luise Vogt, 21 May 1947; Maria Kohlhof, 27 April 1947; Lieselotte Pfeil, 30 May 1947; Edith Weckman, 9 June 1947; Wilhelm Wahn, 16 June 1947; Ernest Richhardt, 7 June 1947; Alexander Hoffman, 27 June 1947; Reinhard Breder, 14 July 1947; Karl Knapp, 8 June 1947; Angelika Seidel,

6. HANS EICHEL

Nationality:	German
Age:	56
Civilian Status:	Police Director at Offenbach, Germany since 1 July 1941, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel
Party Status:	Nazi party since 15 December 1931
Military Status:	Colonel in SA
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2, 7 and 8
Findings:	G Charges 1, 7 and 8 NG Charge 2
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: The accused was police director of the protective police, Offenbach, Germany, following 1 July 1941 (R 1664). In September 1944 at a conference of police officials in Offenbach, Himmler's noninterference order was read by Major Kuhlenbeck, Commander of the Protective Police in Offenbach. The accused was his immediate superior (R 484; P-Ex 122, p. 3). The accused had issued orders that captured flyers were to be shot (R 585, 1690; P-Ex 135, p. 3).

On or about 22 February 1945, a captured American flyer was taken to the police station in Bieber, Germany, incident number 7 (R 441, 442). An identification card found on the person of the flyer indicated his name to be William Duke (R 457). In the police station the flyer was permitted to smoke (R 442). Shortly thereafter, the accused and accused KNITT arrived (R 442, 460). At the sight of the flyer smoking, the accused tore the scarf from the flyer's neck and knocked the cigarette out of his mouth (R 442). Accused KNITT and ALBRECHT testified that EICHEL ordered ALBRECHT to kill the flyer but that he refused (R 1514, 1602, 1603). Accused MOLLER testified that accused EICHEL gave him an order to shoot the flyer (R 470, 475, 1482; P-Exs 111A, 116, p. 3). EICHEL stated that he was considering putting the flyer on the radiator of his car and driving him through the town (R 470, 1515; P-Ex 112A). He directed that the flyer be brought before the crowd (R 484; P-Ex 122, p. 7). Outside the police station he vigorously incited the crowd against the flyer (R 470, 484, 1515; P-Exs 112A, 122, p. 5). Pursuant to the accused's order, accused MOLLER, together with accused ALBRECHT, GOEHRENDT, and a policeman by the name of Como walked the flyer to a forest in the vicinity of Bieber (R 445, 446, 475; P-Ex 116, p. 4). In the forest, accused MOLLER shot the flyer twice, resulting in his death (R 470, 471, 1519, 1520; P-Exs 111A, 113A).

The same evening, an American flyer was taken to the police headquarters in Offenbach from the police station in Bieber by two policemen, Michel and Schneider, incident number 8 (R 1774, 1775). They reported to accused KNITT, who reprimanded them for not having killed the flyer (R 1775, 1776). By his extrajudicial sworn statement KNITT asserted that he ordered them to kill the flyer in conformity with a previous specific order relayed to him from accused EICHEL (R 585; P-Ex 135, p. 3). The flyer was shot to death an hour or so later near an air raid shelter on Bierbrauer Weg, Offenbach, by accused HARMANN with the co-operation, if not the aid, of Michel and Schneider (R 507, 523, 524).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He admitted that in the summer of 1944, he received Himmler's noninterference order either from Berlin or from the commanding officer of the regular police in Wiesbaden (R 1664). He testified that on 22 February 1945, he saw flyers parachuting to earth (R 1665). He left in his car, together with accused KNITT, to check up on security measures (R 1666). He drove through the town of Bieber, where he was told that there was a flyer in the police station. He proceeded to the police station with KNITT (R 1668). He saw the flyer in the police station but denied that he slapped the cigarette out of his mouth and testified that he merely took the scarf from the flyer's neck and laid it on the table, incident number 7 (R 1671). He told accused ALBRECHT to take the flyer to police headquarters stating that, "he will be bumped off anyway" (R 1672). He testified that he made this remark because the gauleiter had once said while surveying bomb damage that all flyers would be shot (R 1672). He did not consider this remark as an order but merely meant that others would do it because of the propaganda and the general feeling of the civilian population (R 1672, 1673). He also denied that he gave accused HOLLER an order to kill the flyer (R 1677). He further testified that a few hours later on the same day accused ALBRECHT personally reported to him that the flyer had been shot while trying to escape. That evening he received a written report to the same effect (R 1684). He denied that he ever informed members of the police that captured flyers were to be shot (R 1690).

He also denied that he had anything to do with the orders given to the policemen Michel and Schneider concerning the captured flyer who was killed on Bierbrauer Weg, incident number 8 (R 1873). He admitted he was present in his command post near Bierbrauer Weg the evening of 22 February 1945 (R 1873). While at his command post, a policeman rushed in and told him about a parachutist. He then heard several shots and a wild chase ensued down the staircase toward his command post (R 1874). He ran out toward Bierbrauer Weg and saw three or four men carrying a corpse (R 1875). A person with whom he was not familiar told him that he had shot the flyer while trying to escape. He later found out that the person in question was accused HAMMANN (R 1876).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The evidence, a substantial part of which is supported by his own admissions, indicates that the accused issued orders to his subordinates to kill captured flyers involved in incidents numbers 7 and 8 and that in conformity with these orders unarmed and surrendered the town of Bieber, where he was told that there was a flyer in the police station. He proceeded to the police station with KLITT (R 1668). He saw the flyer in the police station but denied that he slapped the cigarette out of his mouth and testified that he merely took the scarf from the flyer's neck and laid it on the table, incident number 7 (R 1671). He told accused ALBRECHT to take the flyer to police headquarters stating that, "he will be bumped off anyway" (R 1672). He testified that he made this remark because the gauleiter had once said while surveying bomb damage that all flyers would be shot (R 1672). He did not consider this remark as an order but merely meant that others would do it because of the propaganda and the general feeling of the civilian population (R 1672, 1673). He also denied that he gave accused HOLLER an order to kill the flyer (R 1677). He further testified that a few hours later on the same day accused ALBRECHT personally reported to him that the flyer had been shot while trying to escape. That evening he received a written report to the same effect (R 1684). He denied that he ever informed members of the police that captured flyers were to be shot (R 1690).

He also denied that he had anything to do with the orders given to the policemen Michel and Schneider concerning the captured flyer who was killed on Bierbrauer Weg, incident number 8 (R 1873). He admitted he was present in his command post near Bierbrauer Weg the evening of 22 February 1945 (R 1873). While at his command post, a policeman rushed in and told him about a parachutist. He then heard several shots and a wild chase ensued down the staircase toward his command post (R 1874). He ran out toward Bierbrauer Weg and saw three or four men carrying a corpse (R 1875). A person with whom he was not familiar told him that he had shot the flyer while trying to escape. He later found out that the person in question was accused HAMMANN (R 1876).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The evidence, a substantial part of which is supported by his own admissions, indicates that the accused issued orders to his subordinates to kill captured flyers involved in incidents numbers 7 and 8 and that in conformity with these orders unarmed and surrendered

American prisoners of war were killed by subordinates under his command. That he participated in the common design involved in charge 1 is also satisfactorily established.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947 and by Dr. Richard Wacker, German defense counsel, 27 March 1947 and 22 April 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by his son, Helmuth Eichel, 4 April 1947; Buchner, 25 March 1947; Dr. Fruhauf and Dr. Kallab, 29 March 1947; A. Herold, 2 April 1947; Philipp Hechler, 4 April 1947; and one Schultheis, 28 March 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

7. JOSEF JOHANN KITTT

Nationality:	German
Age:	52
Civilian Status:	Captain, Order Police, Offenbach, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party since 1 May 1933
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2, 7 and 8
Findings:	G Charges 1, 7 and 8; NG Charge 2
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: The accused was a captain in the Order Police in Offenbach, Germany. One Major Kuhlenbeck was his immediate superior and accused EICHEL was his next higher superior (R 1589).

In January 1945, the accused knew of the existence of Himmler's noninterference order. He also knew of a direct order from Himmler to the effect that all captured flyers were to be killed by the police (R 473; P-Ex 114, p. 4). In about December 1944, he told a French deportee that captured American flyers were to be shot and a report then made that the flyer was shot while attempting to escape (R 495; P-Ex 124). He also received an order from his superior, accused EICHEL, that captured flyers were to be shot (R 585, 1690; P-Ex 135, p. 3).

On about 22 February 1945, three American flyers parachuted to safety in the vicinity of Bieber, Germany (R 441, 473; P-Ex 114). One witness testified that at about 1400 on 22 February 1945 during an air raid in Offenbach, Germany, a police captain who was identified as Captain KNITT, drove by his guard post and said, "All these flyers are going to be beaten to death"; and that just prior to this, the crew of a four motored bomber had parachuted to earth nearby (R 501, 502). The accused, together with accused EICHEL, went to the police station in Bieber, incident number 7. One of the flyers was already there (R 442, 460, 473; P-Ex 114). Accused ALBRECHT and four or five other policemen were also there (R 473; P-Ex 114, p. 2). The accused reprimanded the policemen and called them cowards, for permitting the flyer to remain alive. He told them that the pilot should be beaten (R 470; P-Ex 112A). He also instigated the crowd that had gathered outside the police station against the flyer (R 471, 473; P-Exs 113A, 114, p. 5). While still in the police station EICHEL, in the presence of KNITT, ordered ALBRECHT to kill the flyer (R 1514, 1602, 1603). The flyer was taken out of the police station by accused ALBRECHT and two or three other policemen. ALBRECHT, the flyer, and the other policemen walked away. The accused then returned to his office in Offenbach. That afternoon a written report from ALBRECHT, to the effect that the flyer was shot while attempting to escape, passed through the office of the accused (R 473; P-Ex 114, p. 5).

During the evening of the same day another captured flyer was brought to police headquarters in Offenbach from the police station in Bieber in custody of policemen Michel and Schneider, incident number 8 (R 571, 572). They reported to the accused KNITT, who reprimanded them for not killing the flyer while walking him six kilometers through the woods (R 572, 1775, 1776). KNITT then ordered them to get out and kill the flyer (R 573, 1777). The accused, in his extrajudicial sworn statement, asserted that he ordered them to kill the flyer pursuant to a previous specific order relayed to him from accused EICHEL that the flyer be killed (R 585; P-Ex 135, p. 3). He testified in Court that he ordered them to kill the flyer after Lieutenant Alt told him that a major had ordered that the flyer be killed (R 1907). He [illegible] left his office, further testified that, after the two policemen and the flyer left his office, he called up Major Kuhlenbeck to confirm the shooting order and that he received a confirmation of the order from the major (R 1908). Lieutenant Alt, in his extrajudicial sworn statement, said that the accused ordered the two policemen to shoot the flyer and that accused ordered him to accompany them and supervise the execution of the order (R 1689, 1690; D-Ex 19). Later that night this flyer was killed on Bierbrauer Weg, near an air-raid shelter, by accused HAFFMANN with the co-operation, if not the aid, of Michel and Schneider (R 507, 523, 524). Policemen Michel and Schneider testified that nothing was said to them indicating this accused had received an order from a superior relative to the shooting of the flyer (R 1768, 1780).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He admitted that he grumbled a bit and made a few silly remarks in the course of the discussion concerning the flyer who was in the police station in Bieber on 22 February 1945 (R 1591). He testified he then left the police station and drove to Offenbach with the accused EICHEL. That afternoon he received a report from the police in Bieber that the flyer had been killed while attempting to escape (R 1593, 1594). During the evening of 22 February 1945, two policemen came to his headquarters in Offenbach with another captured flyer (R 1906). He asserted that he reprimanded them for not taking the flyer to a nearby anti-aircraft unit, and told the policemen to take the flyer to the police jail. He asserted that Lieutenant Alt, duty officer, who was present at the time informed him that a major had ordered that the flyer be killed. The accused admitted that he then ordered the policemen to shoot the flyer. He asserted that he ordered the policemen out of the office when they told him they would not carry out the order, but would return the flyer to Bieber (R 1907). Later the accused called Major Kuhlenbeck, his superior, regarding the order. The major informed him that the order had to be carried out. During this conversation, the major also informed the accused that Lieutenant Alt should carry out the order (R 1908). Accused asserted that he sent Lieutenant Alt after the flyer and the two policemen with instructions to have the army pick up the flyer. The next morning he was notified by Lieutenant Alt that the flyer had been shot. He denied the existence of any orders in the headquarters of the Protective Police concerning the shooting of flyers (R 1909).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The accused received and passed on an order to kill illegally surrendered and unarmed flyers. He took a consenting and voluntary part in the common plan and design to violate the laws and usages of war and his guilt under charge 1 is thus established. His participation in incident number 7 warrants the findings of guilty, however, whether he was involved therein to a sufficient degree to warrant the death sentence is not free from difficulties. Concerning incident number 8, the appropriateness of the death sentence depends somewhat on whether the accused acquiesced in the assertion of the policemen that they would return the flyer to Bieber. In his testimony, he asserted that he acquiesced in the plan. However, his testimony conflicts with the testimony of Michel and Schneider on the question of his acquiesence in their refusal to shoot the flyer. Under the circumstances the Court would have been warranted in condluding that the accused ordered the flyer involved in incident number 8 shot pursuant to general orders issued prior to the capture of the flyer and that the accused did not indicate that he approved of the policemen's suggestion that the flyer be returned to Bieber, but that on the contrary he ordered them to get out of his office and kill the flyer. He played a vital and voluntary part in incident number 8.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Maria Kiwitt, wife, 20 April 1947; Anton Passmann, 25 April 1947; Otto Schmidt, 26 April 1947; Alfred Hild, 23 April 1947; H. Heinrichsbauer, 4, 11 and 24 April 1947; L. Nachstein, 10 April 1947; and Maria Kiwitt, sister, 28 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

8. WILHELM ALBRECHT

Nationality:	German
Age:	57
Civilian Status:	First Lieutenant, Order Police and Chief of Police in Bieber, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party since 1940
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 7
Findings:	G Charges 1 and 7 NG Charge 2
Sentence:	15 years, commencing 29 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: The accused was a first lieutenant of the Order Police and chief of police in charge of the police station in Bieber, Germany (R 475; P-Ex 116, pp. 2, 3). In September 1944 at a conference of police chiefs held in Offenbach, Himmler's noninterference order was read by his superior, Major Kuhlenbeck (R 484; P-Ex 122, p. 3). On about 22 February 1945, three American flyers parachuted to safety in the vicinity of Bieber, Germany. One of them was captured and taken by a policeman to the police station in Bieber where he was searched by the accused and a policeman named Lueck (R 441, 442). An identification card found on the flyer indicated his name to be William Duke (R 457). Shortly thereafter, accused EICHEL and KNITT arrived (R 442, 460). EICHEL, KNITT, and ALBRECHT all entered ALBRECHT's office (R 475; P-Ex 116, pp. 2, 3). KNITT testified that he did not enter the room, but that the door was open and that he heard most of the conversation (R 1592). Accused EICHEL then told ALBRECHT that the flyer must be killed. The latter replied that he would not do it whereupon EICHEL said, "Well then, somebody else will do it." (R 484; P-Ex 122, p. 4). ALBRECHT testified that he then went to change his uniform (R 1514). Accused MOLLER testified that EICHEL ordered him to kill the flyer (R 470, 475, 1482; P-Exs 111A, 116, p. 3). Accused ALBRECHT ordered accused MOLLER to get his steel helmet and weapon. ALBRECHT or MOLLER then took the flyer out of the police station. A policeman named Como followed them out (R 475, 1483; P-Ex 116, p. 4). MOLLER walked the flyer to a forest in the vicinity of Bieber (R 470; P-Ex 111A).

ALBRECHT, together with accused GOEHRENDT, followed them and they in turn were followed by policeman Como (R 445). It may be that ALBRECHT walked with rather than followed MOLLER (R 469; P-Ex 110A). Accused ALBRECHT and GOEHRENDT were armed with pistols (R 445, 475; P-Ex 116, p. 5). In the forest, accused MOLLER shot the flyer twice killing him (R 470, 471, 475; P-Exs 111A, 113A, 116, p. 4). Accused ALBRECHT then ordered Como to guard the body (R 447, 471; P-Ex 113A). The body was later buried in the cemetery in Offenbach (R 471; P-Ex 113A). Later that same day ALBRECHT ordered policeman Heberer to make a written report of the incident (R 484; P-Ex 122, p. 7). The body was disinterred on 27 February 1946, and the victim identified as an American, William A. Duke (R 482; P-Ex 121).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that on about 22 February 1945 a captured flyer was brought to the police station in Bieber. The flyer was an American, William Duke (R 1511, 1512). The accused ordered the policemen Lueck and Como to take the flyer to the headquarters of the Order Police pursuant to an existing order. Before the flyer was taken away, accused EICHEL and KITTT arrived (R 1513). EICHEL and KITTT reprimanded the accused for showing consideration to the flyer. Then EICHEL gave the accused an order to do away with the flyer, The accused replied that he would not do it to which EICHEL said that someone else would. The accused decided to go along with the flyer (R 1514). The accused ordered Como to go with the flyer and, when Lueck another policeman who the accused intended should go along failed to appear, the accused ordered accused MOLLER to go (R 1516). Outside the police station the accused saw accused GOEHRENDT and ordered him to go along to aid in keeping the people back (R 1518). MOLLER and Como walked some 20 to 30 meters in front of the accused (R 1518). The group walked to the forest and when MOLLER took the wrong path, that is a path into the forest and not the one to Offenbach, the accused ordered GOEHRENDT to run up and direct MOLLER as to the correct one (R 1518, 1519). At this point the accused stopped to talk to a passer-by, and while so engaged in a conversation, the accused heard two shots (R 1519). He ran toward MOLLER and asked him why he had shot the flyer. MOLLER told him the flyer tried to escape. The accused ordered Como to stand guard over the body. The accused and MOLLER returned to the police station (R 1520). Because of this incident he ordered the policemen under his command to take captured flyers to the air force instead of bringing them to the police station (R 1521). With the exception of the noninterference order issued by Himmler, the accused knew of no other orders regarding the treatment of flyers (R 1525).

Sufficiency of Evidence: If he was not ordered to accompany MOLLER to the scene of the shooting, he must have done so through a desire to assist or because of curiosity. Furthermore, the Court might well have concluded that the accused had no intention of taking the flyer to Offenbach.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Max Rau, German defense counsel, 4 April 1947 and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

9. HERMANN MOLLER

Nationality:	German
Age:	45
Civilian Status:	Clerk, Master Sergeant of the police in Bieber, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party since 1937
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 7 by reason of insanity
Findings:	G Charge 7 NG Charges 1 and 2
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: The accused pleaded not guilty to the charges by reason of insanity (R 36). The Army psychiatrist who examined him at the request of the Court testified that there was no history indicating that the accused was at any time insane. He further testified that the accused was fully capable of understanding the proceedings of the trial (R 110). The psychiatrist testified that in his opinion the accused was sane on 22 February 1945, the date of the incident covered by charge 7 and that the accused was then able to distinguish between right and wrong (R 111). He further testified that the accused had a chronic, moderate tension state; that he was of average intelligence; and that the chronic tension had been present all his life (R 110)

The accused testified that on 22 February 1945, while a captured American flyer was in the custody of the police in Bieber, Germany, he was given an order, by accused EICHEL, to shoot the flyer. When he indicated his unwillingness to carry out the order, accused EICHEL threatened him with courts-martial. The accused then left the police station with the flyer accompanied by policeman Como. The accused was armed with a carbine. He walked to the woods with the flyer accompanied by accused ALBRECHT and GOEHREHDT (R 469, 474, 1482, 1483; P-Exs 1104, 1154, pp. 3, 4). Accused EICHEL vigorously denied giving the order to the accused and insisted that he had never seen him prior to being brought to Dachau and that the accused did not know him at that time (R 1675-1677). In the woods the accused fired two shots at the flyer, killing him (R 469-471, 474; P-Exs 1104, 1114, 1134, 1154). Como was ordered to guard the body. The accused returned to the police station and later went to his home. While at home, a policeman appeared with a written report prepared at the police station, which the accused signed. The report was to the effect that the flyer had been shot while trying to escape (R 469, 474, 475; P-Exs 1104, 1154, 116, p. 5). The victim was buried in the cemetery in Offenbach (R 471; P-Ex 1134). The body was disinterred on 27 February 1946 and identified as that of an American, William A. Duke (R 482; P-Ex 121).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. His testimony was in most respects substantially to the same effect as the evidence offered by the prosecution. He denied knowledge of any general orders concerning the illegal treatment of flyers, but admitted receiving an order from the accused EICHEL to kill the flyer (R 1482). The accused testified that the order given to him by accused EICHEL was given while the two were alone in a room. This was stated by the accused to have happened immediately after ALBRECHT had asked for volunteers. The accused asserted that EICHEL told him he would be courts-martialed if he refused (R 1482). Failure on his part to carry out the order would have meant death (R 1488,. Pursuant to the order, he, policeman Como and the accused ALBRECHT and GOEHRENDT walked the flyer toward the woods. Twenty meters in the woods, the accused fired two shots at the flyer, killing him (R 1484-1486). While at home later that day, he signed a written report, which had been previously prepared in the police station, to the effect that the flyer was shot while trying to escape. He admitted this report was false (R 1488).

Sufficiency of Evidence: That the accused participated in incident number 7 by firing the fatal shot is admitted by him. However, there is evidence from which the Court might have concluded that it was with some degree of reluctance that the accused participated after receiving an order from one greatly his superior. Furthermore, while the real purpose of ALBRECHT's accompanying the group to the scene of the shooting is not too apparent, the Court might well have concluded that he went to supervise or to assure effective execution of EICHEL's order. This presence of a superior during the shooting by a somewhat unwilling inferior created a degree of immediate compulsion. With regard to the evidence offered in support of superior orders, the accused met the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post, and proved that he acted under immediate compulsion to a comparatively small degree.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Rudolph Heckelmann and Philipp Krill, 25 March 1947; Anton Lippert and Anton Glas, both undated; Gustav Woell and three other persons, undated; and Josef Sommer, 24 March 1947.

Recommendations: That the findings and sentence be approved, but that the sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

10. WILHELM FRIEDRICH GOEHRENDT

This accused was acquitted (R 2578).

11. PAUL HAHRGANG

Nationality:	German
Age:	46
Civilian Status:	Locksmith and Master Sergeant, Fire Protection Police, Offenbach, Germany
Party Status:	None
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 8
Findings:	G Charge 8; NG Charges 1 and 2
Sentence:	5 years, commencing 6 December 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused HAHMANN and FAY were subordinates of this accused (R 583; P-Ex 134A). During the evening of 22 February 1945, accused GOEHRENDT turned over a captured American flyer to the policemen Michel and Schneider in the police station at Bieber, Germany, with instructions to deliver him to police headquarters in Offenbach, incident number 8 (R 571, 1774, 1775). In Offenbach the policemen reported to accused KNITT, who ordered them to kill the flyer (R 573, 1777). The policemen indicated their refusal to carry out the order and suggested to KNITT that they would return the flyer to Bieber (R 1777, 1907, 1908). During an air raid the two policemen with the flyer entered an air raid shelter area on Bierbrauer Weg (R 574, 1756). The air raid shelter area consisted of an open space with an underground shelter at one end. A stairway led to this underground shelter. With the exception of the main gate, the only one other exit from the area was on Bierbrauer Weg (R 500; P-Ex 126). A portion of the underground shelter was used by EICHEL as a command post. The guard at the main gate to the shelter area was informed by the policemen that they had a flyer who was to be shot (R 574, 575, 1778). The accused appeared from the guard room on the shelter area and was told that the policemen had a flyer who was to be killed (R 524, 525, 542). The accused called for accused HAHMANN who was sergeant of the guard, and both engaged in a whispering conversation (R 503, 525, 1043, 1867, 1868). The accused then called for accused FAY and informed him by whispering that the flyer had to be killed (R 525, 588, 1867, 1868; P-Ex 138, p. 2). FAY who then heard to say that this was a small matter and would get it fixed up right away (R 504). Accused EICHEL was in his command post at the time of the incident (R 1873). FAY pushed and drove the flyer toward the stairway. This accused also accompanied FAY (R 504-506, 526, 588; P-Ex 138, p. 4). Accused FAY stated in his extrajudicial sworn testimony that, although the flyer was then surrounded by three or four policemen, the flyer hit him and started to run, whereupon FAY fired a shot into the air and yelled halt (R 538; P-Ex 138, pp. 4; 5). The guards heard the shot and then shouts to the effect that a flyer was escaping (R 506, 512, 526, 527). Accused HAMMANN took the guard's carbine, who was standing at the main entrance, and ran to the secondary exit, there being only one in addition to the main entrance (R 500, 513, 564; P-Ex 126). HAMMANN fired three shots at the flyer at close range, killing him (R 507, 1827). Two or three pistol shots were also heard (R 527). Accused NAHRGANG and HAMMANN were seen standing by the body of the victim very soon after the shots were fired (R 527, 530). The body was brought back by NAHRGANG, HAMMANN and others and laid in the air raid shelter area (R 507, 508, 583, 1851; P-Ex 134). The next day a policeman assigned for duty at the air raid shelter told accused KNITT that the policeman who had been assigned to kill the flyer acted cowardly and that he had to shoot the flyer. This policeman was identified as "Nartrat" (R 585; P-Ex 135, p. 4).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He was the platoon leader of the extinguishing platoon and was stationed at the air raid shelter on Bierbrauer Weg (R 1748). During the evening of 22 February 1945, a police sergeant and one of the guards at the air raid shelter appeared in front of his office. The policeman told him he was seeking cover with a captured flyer. The accused called the accused HAMMANN, who was the sergeant of the guard. In the meantime the guard at the gate, one Zahn, told the accused that the policemen with the flyer had an order to shoot him but were not going to carry it out. When accused FAY appeared, this accused gave him the information he had received from the guard (R 1846-1848). FAY remarked while leaving that he was going to examine the situation. The accused then started to pick up his coat and boots to go out. A short time later he heard someone yell "halt" and a short time after that a shot. He ran into the yard where he heard another shot. Consequently, he went toward the secondary exit. On the way he heard that accused HAMMANN had fired at the flyer. He went to the spot where the flyer lay dead (R 1848-1850). Together with FAY and one Gunther, he helped carry the body to the garden (R 1851). He testified that he did not see accused HAMMANN at the spot where the flyer lay (R 1850) and was mistaken regarding the statement in his extra-judicial sworn testimony to the effect that he had seen him there (R 1851). He further testified that he had never heard of any general orders from higher authority concerning the treatment of enemy flyers (R 1852).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The Court might well have concluded that the flyer was shot during a simulated escape planned by the accused and others to give the killing a color of legality.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

12. PHILIPP HAMMANN

Nationality:	German
Age:	51
Civilian Status:	Carpenter, Sergeant, Air Raid Police, Offenbach, Germany
Party Status:	None
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 8
Findings:	G Charge 8; NG Charges 1 and 2
Sentence:	15 years, commencing 12 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: During the evening of 22 February 1945, in Offenbach, Germany, two policemen approached the guard at the main gate to the air raid shelter area located on Bierbrauer Weg with a captured American flyer, incident number 8 (R 502). One of the policemen informed the guard that the flyer was to be killed (R 503). Accused NAHRGANG appeared from the guard room (R 503, 504, 524). The guard told what the policemen had said (R 525). NAHRGANG called for accused HAMMANN and they engaged in a whispering conversation (R 503, 525). Accused FAY was also called. He engaged in a short whispering conversation and then was heard to say, "That is only a small matter. We will get it fixed up right away".(R 525, 504, 1867, 1868). The accused FAY, with a pistol in hand, pushed and drove the flyer toward the stairway which led down in the direction of a bunker (R 526). The guards heard a shot and then shouts that a flyer was escaping (R 506, 512, 527). Accused FAY stated in his extrajudicial sworn testimony that, although the flyer was then surrounded by three or four policemen, the flyer hit him and started to run, whereupon FAY fired a shot into the air and yelled halt (R 588; P-Ex 138, pp. 4, 5). Accused HAMMANN ran past the guard at the main gate, grabbed the latter's carbine, and ran to the secondary exit to the air raid shelter area, there being only one in addition to the main entrance (R 500, 513, 564; P-Ex 126). This accused fired three shots at the flyer at close range, killing him (R 507, 1827). Two or three pistol shots were also heard (R 527). Accused NAHRGANG and HAMMANN were seen standing by the body of the victim very soon after the shots were fired (R 530, 555). NAHRGANG, HAMMANN, and others picked up the body and carried it to the air raid shelter area (R 507, 508, 555, 583; P-Ex 134A). Accused EICHEL appeared and HAMMANN reported that he had shot the flyer while attempting to escape (R 556, 588; P-Ex 138, p. 6).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. On 22 February 1945, he was sergeant of the guard of the air raid police stationed at the air raid shelter on Bierbrauer Weg (R 1822). While in his room, he heard some shots followed by shouts as a result of which he went outside (R 1823). He assumed that someone was escaping and, inasmuch as the individual could only leave by the secondary exit, he ran to that point (R 1824). Enroute he took a carbine from the guard at the main gate. When he arrived at a point a few meters from the secondary exit, the flyer ran out on the street (R 1825). He called, "Halt", several times. The man kept running and he chased him for 80 to 100 meters (R 1825). He then fired one shot at him from a distance of 40 to 50 meters. The man appeared to turn to the right to escape into the woods. He fired two more shots and the man disappeared from view (R 1827). When he arrived near where the victim fell, some others were carrying back his body. On the way back he met accused EICHEL and reported the incident to him (R 1828). The next day he appeared at the police headquarters in Offenbach and made a written report (R 1829). He further testified that he had never received any general orders from higher authority regarding the treatment of Allied flyers (R 1830).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The Court might well have concluded that the flyer was shot during a simulated escape planned by the accused and others in order to give the killing a color of legality.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. A Petition for Clemency was filed by Margarete Hammann, wife of accused, 26 March 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

13. BERNARD FAY

Nationality:	German
Age:	52
Civilian Status:	Skin and Leather Merchant; driver and machinist with Air Raid Protection Police, Offenbach, Germany
Party Status:	None
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 8
Findings:	G Charge 8; NG Charges 1 and 2
Sentence:	5 years, commencing 22 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: During the evening of 22 February 1945, two policemen brought a captured American flyer to the air raid shelter on Bierbrauer Weg, Offenbach, Germany, incident number 8 (R 571, 574). They informed the guard at the gate that the flyer had to be killed (R 574, 575). Accused NAHRGANG, platoon leader of the extinguishing platoon stationed at the shelter, appeared from the guard room. The guard gave him the information received from the policemen (R 524, 525, 542). NAHRGANG called for accused HAMMANN, sergeant of the guard, and engaged in a whispering conversation with him (R 503, 525). NAHRGANG then called accused FAY and told him by whispering that the flyer had to be killed (R 525, 588, 1867, 1868; P-Ex 138, p. 2). FAY said that this was only a small matter and it would be fixed up right away (R 504, 525). With a pistol in hand, which he received from one of the policemen, accused FAY pushed and drove the flyer in front of him toward the stairway which led down in the direction of a bunker (R 504, 506, 526). NAHRGANG and the policemen were with FAY (R 588; P-Ex 138, p. 4). At the stairway, a shot was heard followed by shouts that a flyer was escaping (R 506). Accused FAY stated in his extrajudicial sworn testimony that, although the flyer was then surrounded by three or four policemen, the flyer hit him and started to run, whereupon FAY fired a shot into the air and yelled halt (R 588; P-Ex 138, pp. 4, 5). Pistol and carbine shots were heard. The flyer was killed near the secondary exit by accused HAMMANN (R 500, 507, 527, 1827; P-Ex 126). Policeman Michel testified that he did not see the flyer hit anyone immediately prior to the time he began to run (R 1789).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that during an evening toward the end of February 1945, while in the guard house at the air raid shelter area on Bierbrauer Weg, he was awakened either by NAHRGANG or some other person and told that a captured flyer had to be shot (R 1792-1794). Upon inquiry as to who ordered the shooting, he was informed it had been ordered by accused EICHEL who was the police director (R 1794). He suggested going to the police director whose command post was in the rear of the courtyard. He walked with the flyer, followed by the policemen, toward the stairway leading to the underground bunker. In front of the stairway he suddenly received a blow on his chest and fell backwards. He made a grab and had a pistol in his hand. He yelled "stop" and fired one shot in the air. He ran after the flyer and fell down the steps. He fired another shot in the air and continued up the street. He heard three or four shots. When he reached the spot where the flyer lay, he observed he was dead (R 1795).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The Court might well have concluded that the fl flyer was shot during a simulated escape planned by the accused and others in order to give the killing a color of legality.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947 and by Dr. Max Rau, German defense counsel, 19 April 1947. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

14. GEORG BEST

Age:	39
Civilian Status:	Engineer, NSV, 1936 to May 1945; Reichs Security Main Office, July 1935 to June 1943; Higher SS and Police Chief, France, October 1943 to November 1944; Higher SS and Police Chief, Rhein-Westmark Area, December 1944 to May 1945
Party Status:	Nazi party, 1 August 1932 to 8 May 1945
Military Status:	Major and Commanding Officer of Wehrwolf school for Wehrkreis XII; Allgemeine SS (Major, 1 June 1931 to 8 May 1945); Waffen SS (Major, 5 December 1944 to 8 May 1945)
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 9
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2 and 9
Sentence:	15 years, commencing 8 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused BEST was a member of the SS (R 239, 606, 1053; P-Ex 46). The accused was in charge of the Wehrwolf school for Wehrkreis XII (R 606). About 15 March 1945, one Buhlmann, an instructor in the Wehrwolf school at Wallrabenstein was ordered by accused GOSS, the director of the school, to kill a captured American flyer (R 605, 607, 990). GOSS gave this order in conformity with an order previously received from this accused to the effect that STROOP had ordered the flyer shot (R 617, 988, 989; P-Ex 142A). Because of interference by civilians, the order was not carried out and the flyer was taken to Idstein (R 607, 991). Later, on 17 March 1945, BEST told GOSS that STROOP was quite angry over the failure to carry out the order and advised GOSS to keep Buhlmann out of sight should STROOP appear (R 609, 1001, 1063). About 18 March 1945, GOSS ordered accused MICHELY to shoot a captured American flyer, indident number 9 (R 1002, 1004). Thereupon accused MICHELY executed the order and made a written report (R 1005). The report was transmitted to accused BEST for STROOP (R 1005, 617; P-Ex 142A). The order to kill the flyer carried out by accused MICHELY was given in accordance with an order previously transmitted by this accused that Allied flyers were to be shot. BEST passed on the order in conformity with an order from STROOP (R 616; P-Ex 141A). In his testimony on the stand, GOSS strongly implied that he directed the shooting solely because of the general order he had received direct from STROOP (R 1005, 1006).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. His testimony was substantially similar to the evidence introduced by the prosecution. He testified that he was assigned to the Higher SS and Police Leader, Rhein-Westmark area, as commanding officer of the Wehrwolf school for Wehrkreis XII in December 1944 (R 1053). On 15 March 1945, personnel in his office informed him that accused GOSS had called and left a message that he had a flyer in Wallrabenstein and requested orders from STROOP regarding the flyer (R 1061). The accused reported this matter to STROOP, who ordered the flyer to be shot (R 1062). Later that day the accused met accused GOSS and gave him the order (R 1062). Still later, but prior to incident number 9, GOSS reported to the accused that the order was not carried out due to interference by civilians. The accused so informed STROOP who was irritated about the failure to carry out the order. On 17 March 1945, the accused informed GOSS as to STROOP's reaction to the failure to carry out the order (R 1063).

The accused further testified that he knew nothing about the murder of the American flyer, which occurred on 18 March 1945, incident number 9, and denied that he had anything to do with the incident before the shooting (R 1063). He personally never gave an order to kill any prisoner of war but merely conveyed the one order from STROOP to GOSS (R 1064). He denied that he ever conspired with any of the other accused to commit violations of the laws of war (R 1066). He specifically denied any guilt under charge 9 (R 1066).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused BEST's membership in the SS and as to his being implicated in incident number 9. The evidence as to the accused's guilt under charges 1 and 9 is clear. The accused failed to establish that he acted under immediate compulsion as an incident of superior orders to a material degree, thus failing to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel and Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, 24 March 1947. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

15. ERWIN GOSS

Nationality:	German
Age:	41
Civilian Status:	Economist; adjutant to Gauleiter Sprenger, Frankfurt a/m, from 15 September to December 1942
Party Status:	Nazi party, 1939 to May 1945
Military Status:	First Lieutenant, Waffen SS from August 1944, and director of Wehrwolf school at Wallrabenstein, Germany, Cav. SS (Sergeant) 1938 to May 1945
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 9
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2 and 9
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused GOSS was a member of the SS (R 239, 605, 606, 962; P-Ex 47). The accused was director of the Wehrwolf school in Wallrabenstein, Germany (R 605). About 15 March 1945, Buhlmann, an instructor in the school, brought in a captured flyer (R 605, 606). The accused called accused BEST for instructions regarding the flyer. BEST inquired of accused STROOP concerning such instructions and the latter ordered the flyer to be shot. BEST relayed the order to the accused (R 617; P-Ex 142). That evening the accused ordered Buhlmann to kill the flyer (R 607). Because of interference by civilians, the order was not carried out (R 990, 991). The flyer was then taken to Idstein (R 607).

About 18 March 1945, accused MICHELY captured an American flyer and brought him to the school in Wallrabenstein, incident number 9 (R 607, 608, 618; P-Ex 143, pp. 2, 3). That evening GOSS gave MICHELY an order to take the flyer to Idstein and shoot him on the way. MICHELY left with the flyer and returned later to report the accomplishment of the mission (R 608, 616, 618; P-Exs 144, 143, pp. 4, 5). GOSS gave this order to MICHELY in conformity with an order previously received from accused BEST to the effect that Allied flyers were to be killed. BEST received a like order from STROOP (R 616, 618; P-Exs 144, 143, p. 6). GOSS ordered Buhlmann and four others to take the body to the cemetery (R 608). The body was identified as that of an American, Jimmie R. Heathman (R 618; P-Ex 143, p. 5).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that in February 1945, at a conference held in Wiesbaden, accused STROOP told him that captured Allied flyers were to be shot (R 985). After he assumed charge of the school, he became familiar with Bormann's order, as well as Goebbel's propaganda relating to flyers (R 986).

About 15 March 1945 on his order, Buhlmann brought a flyer to the school (R 986, 987). The accused called BEST for instructions regarding the flyer. That evening BEST ordered the accused to shoot the flyer. The order was transmitted by BEST from accused STROOP (R 989). They both agreed upon Buhlmann as the person to carry out the order. GOSS then returned to Wallrabenstein and ordered Buhlmann to shoot the flyer. Later Buhlmann reported that he had failed to carry it out due to interference by civilians (R 990, 991). The flyer was taken to Idstein (R 991).

On 13 March 1945, accused MICHELY brought another captured flyer to the school on orders from the accused (R 1002, 1003). That evening he directed MICHELY to take the flyer to Idstein and shoot him on the way (R 1004). MICHELY left with the flyer and later returned and reported the execution of the order. Accused directed MICHELY to make out a report which was sent to STROOP through BEST. The flyer was shot on the direct order previously received by the accused from STROOP (R 1005, 1006). The accused denied that he conspired with any of the other accused to commit violations of the laws of war (R 1075, 1076).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused GOSS' membership in the SS and as to his being implicated in incident number 9. Concerning incident number 9, there was no superior present requiring him to issue the order to kill the flyer. A few days before the accused had obviously not considered the general order to kill flyers too binding or he would not have inquired as to STROOP's wishes. A specific order was received in the former case directing the killing of the flyer, but no punishment was imposed for failure to carry it out. In the incident at hand no inquiry was made of any superior. It is apparent that it was STROOP's desire that all captured flyers be killed but it also appears that the accused's desire to please STROOP was stronger than other considerations and had that not been true a method of avoiding directing the killing of the flyer might well have been devised. Thus the accused failed to establish that he acted under immediate compulsion and failed to meet the burden of proof as to superior orders required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, and Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, 24 March 1947; Dr. Trost, a German lawyer, 23 July 1947; and by accused, 23 June 1947. Three Petitions for Clemency were filed by Irmgard Goss, wife of accused, 10 June 1947, 7 July 1947, and 1 August 1947; and one by Rudolf Velte and ten other former officers who served with him in the same regiment, undated.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

16. HEINRICH MATTHIAS MICHELY

Nationality:	German
Age:	33
Civilian Status:	School teacher
Party Status:	Hitler Youth (Technical Sergeant) May 1944 to November 1944
Military Status:	Waffen SS (Private) instructor at Wehrwolf school, Wallrabenstein, Germany. Waffen SS, (Private) November 1944 to May 1945
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2 and 9
Findings:	G Charges 2 and 9; NG Charge 1
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused MICHELY was a member of the SS (R 1030, 1032; P-Ex 48). On 18 March 1945, the accused brought a captured American flyer to the Wehrwolf school in Wallrabenstein, Germany, incident number 9 (R 607, 608, 616, 618; P-Exs 144, 143, pp. 2, 3). That evening he received an order from accused GOSS to take the flyer to Idstein and shoot him on the way (R 616, 618; P-Exs 144, 143, pp. 4, 5). He left the school on foot with the flyer in the direction of Idstein. He directed the flyer on a little road off the highway and fired several shots, killing him. He returned and reported the execution of the order to GOSS. He kept and wore the flyer's bracelet which bore the name of Jimmie R. Heathman (R 616, 618; P-Exs 144, 143, pp. 4, 5). The flyer was buried in the cemetery at Wallrabenstein (R 618; P-Ex 143, p. 7).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified he was an instructor in the Wehrwolf school, which was under the command of accused GOSS (R 1032). On 18 March 1945, upon GOSS' order, he brought in a captured American flyer (R 1034, 1036). That evening GOSS directed him to take the flyer to Idstein and shoot him on the way (R 1035). He executed the order and reported the same to GOSS. He further testified that he kept the flyer's bracelet (R 1038). Subsequently, he made a written report of the incident, which report was sent to Wiesbaden (R 1038). He testified that failure on his part to obey the order would have meant death (R 1042).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused MICHELY's membership in the SS and as to his being implicated in incident number 9. The accused was not required to nor did he kill the flyer in the presence of a superior. The Court might well have concluded that the accused took a consenting part in the incident and that his desire to co-operate with and please his superior was stronger than other considerations; that he did not act under immediate compulsion; and that he failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, and Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Anna Michely, mother of accused, 6 May 1947; Nikolaus Hiell, 12 and 25 May 1947; Wilhelm Eberle, 12 April 1947; Police Kommissar of Dudweiler, 10 April 1947; Parson Bersch, 29 July 1947; and Catholic Pastorship Relchingen - Hanweiler, 15 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

17. LEONARD BRANNER

The accused escaped from confinement prior to being served with charges (R 19, 20). In conformity with Section 5-327.7, Title 5, "Legal and Penal Administration", of "Military Government Regulations", published by Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, 30 November 1945, his trial in absentia was commensed, but no attempts were made to make any findings or to impose any sentence as to the accused. The accused was the criminal secretary in the Gestapo office located in Giessen, Germany. In his extrajudicial sworn testimony, the accused admitted that on 3 October 1944, he killed a captured American flyer in Philosophen Forest on the order of his superior Kriminal-Rat Wintzer, incident number 3 (R 269; P-Ex 58A).

Sentence:	3 years, commencing 6 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: The accused was a colonel in the Allgemeine SS and Police Director, Giessen, Germany (R 239, 870, 903; P-Ex 49). In August or September 1944, he received three orders regarding the treatment of captured enemy flyers. One order was received from accused STROOP and Gauleiter Sprenger to the effect that the police were to turn over captured flyers to the Gestapo. The second order was received from STROOP to the effect that captured enemy flyers were to be shot. The third order was received from the commanding officer of the Security Police and was to the effect that captured enemy flyers would be turned over to the Gestapo. These orders were all marked "Secret" and were to be destroyed upon acknowledgement. On about 3 October 1944, in the vicinity of Giessen, Germany, the accused, in conformity with the above mentioned orders, delivered a captured American flyer to the Gestapo with the belief that he would be killed under the order issued by accused STROOP. The flyer was reported to have been killed (R 266, 267, 269; P-Exs 56A, 57, pp. 2, 5, 58A).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He admitted receiving the three orders concerning the illegal treatment of allied flyers (R 875, 883, 884, 907). He denied ever passing these orders to his subordinates or ordering them to mistreat or shoot captured Allied flyers or prisoners of war (R 890). He further testified that his statements in his extrajudicial sworn testimony regarding his knowledge that the flyer would be shot were made under duress and were not true (R 267, 891-893; P-Ex 57, p. 5). The accused contended that he was abused by unnamed CIC investigators during an interrogation in Camp No. 5, Natternberg, Germany, in August 1945, and again by a CIC investigator in Giessen, Germany, in early July 1946 (R 879-881, 884, 885). No attempt to test the truth of these assertions with the testimony of other witnesses was made. The accused also contended he was pressed against a wall and told not to lie during an interrogation in Wiesbaden, Germany, in August 1945, by a war crimes investigator, Mr. Zinn (R 924, 925). This was conceded on the stand by Mr. Coates, War Department civilian war crimes employee who was present acting as an interpreter (R 967). However, it appears that Mr. Zinn, the investigator in the Wiesbaden interrogation, expressed no general threats and merely admonished the accused not to lie (R 967-980). When Mr. Zinn pressed the accused against the wall Mr. Coates said to Mr. Zinn, "Joe, come back. Don't do a thing like this. We don't touch prisoners" (R 970).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused LASSAK's membership in the SS and as to his being implicated in the common plan and design to violate the laws of war. While the testimony taken in Giessen was introduced, it was duplicated in most pertinent respects by the Wiesbaden extrajudicial sworn testimony. Although the action of the investigator at Wiesbaden is to be frowned upon, the Court might well have concluded that it was not such as to put the accused in fear of physical violence, particularly in view of the immediate admonition of Mr. Zinn by Mr. Coates in the presence of the accused, and that it was not shown that the accused was in such a state of fear as might induce him to state untruths.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. No Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

19. FRITZ GIRKE

Nationality:	German
Age:	35
Civilian Status:	Lawyer; Gestapo, 1 December 1940 to May 1945; Chief of Gestapo office, Bensheim, Germany, 1944 to 1945
Party Status:	Nazi party 1 May 1937 to May 1945
Military Status:	SS Major; SA (Staff Sergeant) 1 May 1933 to 1937
Plea: -	NG Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused GIRKE was a member of the SS (R 336, 1232, 1448) and a member of the Gestapo (R 163, 239, 326, 1448; P-Ex 50). He was chief of the Gestapo office located in Bensheim, Germany (R 326, 350). This office was originally located in Darmstadt. After the office was bombed out in September 1944, it was moved to Bensheim (R 335 336). In August or September 1944, he received an order marked "Top Secret" from the Reichs Head Security Office directing the police to shoot captured Allied flyers. He made known the contents of this order to the men under his command (R 102; P-Ex 29A). This secret state order was then entered in a special book kept for that purpose (R 318, 319). He also knew of the two orders issued by Himmler, the noninterference order and the order that the police would turn over captured flyers to the Gestapo to be shot (R 181; P-Ex 34A, pp. 3, 4).

On two occasions, 15 February 1945 and 24 March 1945, incidents numbers 6 and 10, respectively, the accused gave orders to accused HELLENBROICH, STATTMANN, and RAAF, Gestapo agents under his command, to shoot captured flyers (R 387; P-Ex 107A). On 15 February 1945, the accused ordered HELLENBROICH, STATTMANN, and RAAF to kill a captured American flyer. Acting in conformity with directions by the accused, accused STATTMANN and RAAF walked the flyer to the woods outside the village of Bensheim where STATTMANN killed him with his pistol. The flyer was buried in the cemetery in Bensheim (R 374, 380; P-Exs 103A, pp. 2, 3, 104A). The body was disinterred on 2 April 1945 and identified as that of an American, Ray F. Hermann (R 358, 363; P-Exs 73, 90, pp. 11, 12).

Similarly, on 24 March 1945, he ordered accused HELLENBROICH to have accused STATTMANN and RAAF kill two captured American soldiers then in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim. HELLENBROICH relayed the order to STATTMANN and RAAF, who thereupon killed the two prisoners of war in the garden in the rear of the Gestapo building. Upon HELLENBROICH's order, the victims were buried in the garden by STATTMANN and RAAF. On 27 and 28 March 1945, the bodies were disinterred and identified as those of Americans, Lieutenant William H. Forman and Pfc. Robert T. McDonald (R 358, 374, 382, 383; P-Exs 73, p. 26, 103A, 105A, 106A, p. 1). The identifications were made from the pay books and other papers found on the bodies of the victims (R 369; P-Exs 94-98).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that he became the chief of the Gestapo in Darmstadt on 2 June 1944, with the rank of SS major (R 1448). He admitted that he issued an order to HELLENBROICH in the middle of February 1945, to shoot a captured American flyer. He issued the order pursuant to a shooting order previously received by him from accused TRUMMLER, his superior. The shooting order was confirmed during a telephone conversation which the accused had with TRUMMLER immediately prior to the issuance of the order in question to HELLENBROICH (R 1449, 1450). He also admitted that on 24 March 1945 he gave HELLENBROICH an order to shoot two captured American flyers who were then in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim (R 1454, 1455). He later received a report that the mission had been accomplished and that the flyers were buried in the garden. He further testified that failure upon his part to carry out these orders would have meant death (R 1456).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused GIRKE's membership in the SS and Gestapo and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 6 and 10. No superior was present requiring the accused to issue the orders. They were merely issued in conformity with general instructions of a superior stationed at a distant point. Thus, the Court might well have concluded that the accused's desire to co-operate with and please superiors was stronger than other considerations; that he did not act under immediate compulsion; and that with regard to superior orders he failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Borman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Luzi Girke, wife of accused, 24 March 1947; the accused, 23 April 1947, and 2 July 1947; and Rudi Gabelmann, Heinrich Gabelmann and Martha Gelbrich, 23, 24 and 29 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

20. HEINZ HELLENBROICH

Nationality:	German
Age:	31
Civilian Status:	Lawyer; Criminal Police (Criminal Commissar) 15 April 1932 to January 1935; Gestapo (SS Major) January 1935 to May 1945; Assistant Commander of the Gestapo headquarters, Bensheim, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party, 1 May 1933 to May 1945
Military Status:	SS Major
Plea:	NG . Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused HELLENBROICH was a member of the SS (R 239, 336, 1232, 1360, 2263; P-Ex 51) and a member of the Gestapo (R 239, 336, 1360; P-Ex 51). He was second in command in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, Germany, and a principal assistant to the chief of that h quarters acc[illegible] (R 336). [illegible]56. [illegible], various [illegible]

headquarters, accused GIRKE (R 326). Following 1943, various orders were issued by higher party and police authorities directing various types of illegal treatment of captured flyers. By virtue of these orders a plan was created to violate the Geneva Convention relating to the treatment of prisoners of war (R 104; P-Ex 304, p. 5). On two occasions the accused ordered accused STATTMANN and RAAF, Gestapo agents under his command, to shoot captured American flyers.

On 15 February 1945, the accused ordered STATTMANN and RAAF to kill an American flyer then in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, incident number 6. This was in conformity with a specific order he had received from accused GIRKE. After the flyer was killed, STATTMANN and RAAF reported the execution of the order to the accused. The accused ordered the body to be buried. It was buried in the cemetery in Bensheim (R 374, 380; P-Exs 1034, pp. 2, 3, 1044).

On 24 March 1945, in conformity with orders received from accused GIRKE, the accused ordered accused STATTMANN and RAAF to kill two American prisoners of war who were then in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, incident number 10. In conformity with the order, STATTMANN and RAAF took both prisoners of war to the garden in the rear of the Gestapo building and shot them. The victims were buried in the garden (R 358, 374, 382, 383; P-Exs 73, p. 23, 1034, p. 4, 1054, 1064, pp. 1, 2).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that on about 15 February 1945 an American flyer was delivered to the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim by the police from the Worms area. A report was received to the effect that the prisoner was a terror flyer who had strafed civilians (R 1365, 1366). Papers found on the flyer's person indicated his name to be Hormann (R 1368). The accused then reported the matter to accused GIRKE, who ordered the flyer to be shot in accordance with existing orders. The order was to be carried out by accused STATTMANN and RAAF in the vicinity of the woods near Bensheim. This accused so directed the two men. Sometime later they reported to him the accomplishment of the mission (R 1369, 1370).

During the evening of 24 March 1945, two flyers were delivered to the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, while the office was in the process of moving (R 1372). An interrogation report prepared by the unit which had delivered the flyers indicated that they were terror flyers who had strafed civilians (R 1374). The report also contained an endorsement by a major requesting that existing orders be carried out (R 1375). The accused reported the matter to GIRKE, who ordered that the flyers be shot. The accused then ordered STATTMANN and R[illegible]F to shoot the flyers in accordance with GIRKE's orders. He also informed the flyers that they were to be shot (R 1376, 1377). STATTMANN and R[illegible]F left with the flyers. They later reported to him that the order had been executed (R 1378, 1379). He denied any guilt under charges 1, 6 and 10 (R 1386, 1418), but admitted that he was a member of the Gestapo (R 1418).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused HELLENBROICH's membership in the SS and Gestapo and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 6 and 10. The accused relayed orders to those who were to perform illegal killings in accordance with the directions of a superior of virtually the same rank who it appears was present. Under all the circumstances, including the evidence as to his rank and positions held in vital Nazi organizations, the Court might well have concluded that his desire to co-operate with and please superiors in those organizations was stronger than other considerations; that he did not act unwillingly or under the immediate compulsion of superior orders; and that with regard to superior orders the accused failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Klare Hellenbroich, wife of accused, 22 April 1947; Josef Hellenbroich, his father, 10 May 1947; and accused Fritz Girke, 2 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

21. KARL FRANZ STATTMANN

Nationality:	German
Age:	37
Civilian Status:	Dental assistant; Security Service (Technical sergeant) February 1940 to May 1945; Gestapo (criminal assistant) 1 February 1945 to May 1945; Gestapo, criminal assistant in Gestapo headquarters, Bensheim, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party, 1 May 1938 to May 1945
Military Status:	Allgemeine SS (staff sergeant) 17 September 1939 to February 1940; SA, April 1937 to September 1937 and 1 May 1938 to February 1945; SS Technical Sergeant
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused STATTMANN was a member of the SS (R 1230; P-Ex 52); a member of the SD (R 239, 1232; P-Ex 52); and a member of the Gestapo (R 239, 326, 327, 337, 1230, 1236; P-Exs 52, 67, pp. 3, 4). On about 15 February 1945, the accused, together with accused RAAF, received an order from accused HELLENBROICH to kill a captured American flyer who was then in Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, incident number 6. The accused and RAAF walked the flyer to the woods outside the village, where this accused shot him to death. The victim was buried in the cemetery in Bensheim (R 358, 374, 380; P-Exs 73, pp. 10, 12, 103A, pp. 2, 3, 104A). On 24 March 1945, the accused and RAAF received an order from accused HELLENBROICH to kill two captured American prisoners of war who were then in the Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, incident number 10. The prisoners of war were to be killed in the garden in the rear of the headquarters (R 382, 383; P-Exs 105A, 106A, pp. 1, 2). They took the two prisoners of war to the garden and shot them (R 358, 374, 382, 383; P-Exs 73, pp. 18-21, 103A, pp. 3, 4, 105A, 106A, p. 1). They reported the execution of the order to HELLENBROICH, who ordered the bodies buried. STATTMANN and RAAF thereupon buried the bodies in the garden (R 383; P-Ex 106A, pp. 1, 2).

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that on about 15 February 1945, a flyer was delivered to the Gestapo headquarters by the rural police from the Worms area (R 1239). The rural police also transmitted a report that the flyer was a terror flyer (R 1243). The accused was ordered to report to accused HELLENBROICH, who told him that accused GIRKE had directed that the accused shoot the flyer in the woods in the vicinity of Bensheim (R 1244, 1245). The accused was ordered to take accused RAAF along (R 1245). The accused and RAAF walked the flyer to the forest where the accused shot him. RAAF also fired a mercy shot at the flyer (R 1247). They returned to Bensheim and reported the execution of the order to HELLENBROICH and GIRKE (R 1247, 1248). Shortly thereafter, the accused made a written report to the effect that the flyer was killed in accordance with orders. The victim was identified as Captain Ray Hermann (R 1248). During the evening of 24 March 1945, the accused was again ordered to report to HELLENBROICH. HELLENBROICH told him that GIRKE had ordered that the accused kill a captured American flyer then in Gestapo headquarters, in the back yard (R 1249, 1250). The accused took the flyer out to the garden and shot him (R 1250). Thereupon, he returned to the building and reported the execution of the order to HELLENBROICH (R 1251). Accused RAAF then came in and reported that he had also shot a flyer. RAAF was then ordered to bury the bodies in the garden (R 1251, 1259). The accused denied any guilt under charge 1 but admitted knowledge of some of the orders regarding the treatment of flyers which he had received at official meetings (R 1255, 1256).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused STATTMANN's membership in the SS, SD and Gestapo and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 6 and 10. In view of the place where incident number 10 occurred, i.e., the close proximity of the superior, the question of whether mitigating factors are in favor of the accused is not free from difficulties. However, concerning incident number 6, the order required that the killing take place at a distant point with no superiors present.

Under all these circumstances, including the responsible positions held by him in vital Nazi organizations, the Court might well have concluded with regard to the accused's state of mind in connection with incident number 6 that the accused's desire to co-operate with and please superiors in these organizations was stronger than other considerations; that he did not act unwillingly or under the immediate compulsion of superior orders; and that with regard to superior orders the accused failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: A Petition for Review was filed by Lieutenant Colonel William Berman, Chief Defense Counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Wilfriede Stattmann, wife of accused, 23 March 1947; Gustav Hartwig, 27 April 1947; Heinrich Werner and two other persons, 12 May 1947; Willy Krause, 22 April 1947; Heinz Neuberg, 17 April 1947; Werner Bunte, 14 April 1947; Ingart Bunte, 17 April 1947; Heinrich Tatte, 9 April 1947; and accused Fritz Girke, 2 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

22. MICHAEL RAAF

Nationality:	German
Age:	41
Civilian Status:	Member of police force; Protective Police (staff sergeant) 1 September 1924 to 1 January 1941; Gestapo (criminal secretary) 1 January 1941 to May 1945; criminal secretary in Gestapo headquarters, Bensheim, Germany
Party Status:	Nazi party, 1 May 1940 to May 1945
Military Status:	SS Master Sergeant
Plea:	NG Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Findings:	G Charges 1, 2, 6 and 10
Sentence:	Death by hanging

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused RAAF was a member of the SS (R 1245) and a member of the Gestapo (R 239, 324, 327, 337, 1293; P-Exs 53, 67, pp. 3,4

The evidence introduced against the accused is the same in all pertinent respects as that introduced against accused STATTMANN. Reference is hereby made to the evidence for the prosecution introduced against the latter accused.

Evidence for Defense: The accused took the stand and testified under oath. He testified that on about 15 February 1945, a captured enemy flyer was in Gestapo headquarters in Bensheim, Germany (R 1302). While he was in his office, the accused STATTMANN came in and told him that accused GIRKE had ordered the accused along on an execution. The accused and STATTMANN walked the flyer outside of the town in the direction of the woods (R 1303). In the woods, STATTMANN fired one shot at the flyer. Inasmuch as the victim still showed signs of life, the accused also fired a shot at him (R 1304). They returned to the office and reported the execution of the order to HELLENBROICH. On HELLENBROICH's order, the accused arranged for the burial of the body in the cemetery in Bensheim (R 1305).

During the evening of 24 March 1945, the accused and STATTMANN were ordered to report to HELLENBROICH in the guard room. Two captured American flyers were there. HELLENBROICH told the flyers that they were to be shot and then gave the accused and STATTMANN an order to shoot them in the garden next to the building (R 1307). He and STATTMANN each took a flyer and went in the direction of the garden where they killed them (R 1308). They then reported the accomplishment of the mission to HELLENBROICH, who ordered the accused to bury the bodies. He helped bury them in the garden (R 1309, 1310, 1314, 1315). He denied his guilt under charge 1 (R 1312).

Sufficiency of Evidence: There is considerable evidence as to accused RAAF's membership in the SS and Gestapo and as to his being implicated in incidents numbers 6 and 10. In view of the place where incident number 10 occurred, i.e., the close proximity of the superior, the question of whether there are mitigating factors in favor of the accused is not free from difficulties. However, concerning incident number 6, the order required that the killing take place at a distant point with no superiors present. Under all these circumstances, including the responsible positions held by him in vital Nazi organizations, the Court might well have concluded with regard to the accused's state of mind in connection with incident number 6 that the accused's desire to co-operate with and please superiors in those organizations was stronger than other considerations; that he did not act unwillingly or under the immediate compulsion of superior orders; and that with regard to superior orders the accused failed to meet the burden of proof required by pertinent authorities discussed in Section VI, post.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: Petitions for Review were filed by Lieutenant Colonel Berman, Chief Defense Counsel and Dr. Buerger, German defense counsel, 24 March 1947. Petitions for Clemency were filed by Hanz Heizmann, 21 March 1947; Johannes Jorg, 1 April 1947; Josef Hammele and 32 other persons, 27 March 1947; Ann- Kirchbach, March 1947; and accused Firtz Girke, 2 July 1947.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

VI. QUESTIONS OF LAW:

1. Jurisdiction: The Military Government Court which heard this case was properly constituted and had jurisdiction of the accused and the offenses. Near the outset of the trial the defense moved to quash the charges and particulars on the grounds that certain of the accused were members of the German armed forces at the time of the alleged offenses, that certain accused were not only members of the German armed forces at the time of the alleged offenses but also at the time they were captured, and that one was a member of the German armed forces not only at the time of the alleged offenses and his capture but also at the outset of the trial (R 30). It was argued in support of the motion that by virtue of the Geneva Convention, apparently the defense relied upon Article 63, the Court did not have jurisdiction of certain of the accused, that a trial of them by the Court under the prescribed procedure for Military Government Courts would be illegal, and that they were entitled to be tried by the same courts and under the same procedure as in the case of members of the armed forces of the capturing power (R 30, 31). This question arose in United States v. Altfuldisch, et al., February 1947, known as the Mauthausen Concentration Camp case. The question was thoroughly discussed therein and was resolved in favor of the jurisdiction of the Court and reliance was placed upon the Yamashita case, 66 Supreme Court Reporter 340, At page 350 the Court was considering Article 63 of the Geneva Convention which provides:

> "Sentence may be pronounced against a prisoner of war only by the same courts and according to the same procedure as in the case of persons belonging to the armed forces of the detaining power."

In disposing of the contention that the accused war criminal could not be tried before a Military Commission, the Supreme Court of the United States said:

> "But we think examination of Article 63 in its setting in the Convention plainly shows that it refers to sentence 'pronounced against a prisoner of war' for an offense committed while a prisoner of war, and not for a violation of the law of war committed while a combatant."

The motion to quash was properly overruled.

It is well settled by accepted international law that members of an enemy armed force, or civilian nationals of an enemy country, may be punished by properly constituted courts established by the occupying power for crimes against the laws and usages of war committed prior to the cessation of hostilities. (See War Department Basic Field Manual 27-10, "Rules of Land Warfare", paragraph 345.1 set forth in Change 1, 15 November 1944, and paragraphs 346 and 347, as the latter is amended by said Change 1; In re Yamashita, supra; United States v. Wiegand, November 1945, and authorities cited therein, which case is digested in Section 122, "Manual for Trial of War Crimes and Related Cases", 15 July 1946; and the Mauthausen Concentration Camp case, supra).

2. Membership in Criminal Organizations: The accused STROOP, SOMANN, TRUMMLER, FUHR, HOHLER, BEST, GOSS, MICHELY, LASSAK, GIRKE, HELLENBROICH, STATTMANN, and RAAF were found guilty under charge 2 of membership in criminal organizations, i.e., the Gestapo, the SD, or the SS. Article 9 of the Charter annexed to the London agreement of 8 August 1945, Concerning Prosecution and Punishment of Major War Criminals of the European Axis, provided that at the trial of any individual member of any group or organization the International Military Tribunal may declare (in connection with any act of which the individual may be convicted) that the group or organization of which the individual was a member was a criminal organization. Article 10 of the Charter provides that the declaration of criminality against an accused organization is final and cannot be challenged in any subsequent criminal proceeding against a member of the organization in national, military or occupation courts. In view of these provisions of the Charter, Law Number 10 of the Control Council of Germany, 20 December 1945, specifically recognized as a crime membership "in categories of a criminal group or organization declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal". Among others, the Tribunal found the Die Geheime Staatspolizei (commonly known as the Gestapo), Der Sicherheitsdienst des Reichsfuhrer SS (commonly known as the SD), and Die Schutzstaffeln der Nationalsozialistischen Deutschen Arbeiterpartei (commonly known as the SS) to be criminal organizations. With regard to the three organizations, the Tribunal included all local Gestapo officials, all local SD representatives and agents, and all persons who had been officially accepted as members of the SS including members of the Allgemeine SS, members of the Waffen SS, members of the SS Totenkopf Verbande, and members of any of the different police forces who were members of the SS, when it appears that they became or remained members of any of the three organizations with knowledge that they were being used for the commission of war crimes, or who were personally implicated as members of those organizations in commission of such crimes, within the groups declared to be criminal.

3. Motions: After the prosecution had rested, the defense made several motions, the first being a motion on behalf of all of the accused to quash charge 1 and the particulars thereunder on the ground that it when read together with the particulars thereunder, disclosed more than one offense, i.e., conspiracy, assault, murder, etc., (R 635). This motion was properly overruled (R 647). The particulars under the charge are, in all pertinent respects, like the common designs alleged in United States v. Weiss, et al., March 1946, known as the Dachau Concentration Camp case and the Mauthausen Concentration Camp case, supra. The prosecution aptly pointed out that only one offense is alleged which when reduced to its simplest terms is that the accused engaged in a common design to commit violations of the laws of war. It is true that formal words precede the vital ones stating the offense, which are descriptive for the Court and the accused as to roles the accused are alleged to have taken. Also formal words follow those stating the offense, which merely describe acts done pursuant to the common design.

The next motion by the defense sought findings of not guilty as to all the accused under charge 1 and the particulars thereunder for the reason that the prosecution "has failed to sustain its burden of proving the guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt" (R 647). The evidence theretofore adduced by the prosecution, which linked the accused with a series of similar criminal acts, had established a prima facie case of concerted action as to those acts and that the incidents were but parts of a common whole. (See Wharton's Criminal Law, Volume II, page 1939.) It is not error for a war crimes tribunal to overrule a motion for a finding of not guilty made at the close of the case for the prosecution if it believes there is sufficient evidence to support the charge and that the accused should be required to answer it (Section 5-327.2, Title 5, "Legal and Penal Administration", of "Military Government Regulations", published by Headquarters, US Forces, European Theater, 30 November 1945 and Section 501, page 409, "Manual for Trial of War Crimes and Related Cases", 15 July 1946). A similar practice is followed in Courts-Martials (Paragraph 71, d., "Manual for Courts-Martial, U.S. Army", 20 April 1943). The motion was properly overruled (R 655).

The third motion by the defense following the close of the prosecution's case sought findings of not guilty on behalf of accused EICHEL, KIWITT, ALBRECHT, MOLLER, GOEHRENDT, NAHRGANG, HAMMAN, FAY, BRANNER, and HOHLER as to charge 2 and the particulars thereunder on the ground that the prosecution had "failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that they or any of them was a member of any of the organizations for the period in question as stated in the particulars as to charge 2". The motion was sustained as to all but accused BRAUNER and HOHLER (R 665). A prima facie case having been established as to those two, the motion was properly denied as to them.

The fourth motion by the defense sought (R 655):

a. To strike certain exhibits from the record on the ground that the prosecution had failed to sustain its burden of proof that the accused or any of them had "conspired in any way wilfully and deliberately with any of the persons named in any of the exhibits".

b. To strike from the record all references to the Wehrwolf on the ground that the prosecution had failed to sustain its burden of proof that the organization was actually formed or that it participated in any war crime.

c. To strike from the record all references and testimony with respect to Stoll on the ground that the prosecution had failed to sustain its burden of proof to connect any of the accused with Stoll.

d. To strike a number of specified exhibits from the record on the ground that the prosecution had not sustained its burden of proof as to the confessions, i.e., that they were voluntary and obtained without duress.

In final analysis, the defense sought to strike the evidence covered by the first, second, and third portions of the motion on the ground that it was too remote, not directly related to the charges against the accused, and in fact involved crimes by individuals not named. While this is not a conspiracy, in Anglo-American practice concerning a true conspiracy, the evidence is permitted to take wide range and all facts or circumstances which taken together show a common plan or purpose are admissible (Underhill's Criminal Evidence, Fourth Edition, pages 1406-1409). In any event it is sufficient answer that tribunals trying violations of the laws of war may admit any evidence which they deem to have probative value, i.e., helpful in arriving at a true finding (In re Yamashita, supra, and Section 270, "Manual for Trial of War Crimes and Related Cases", 15 July 1946). It may have been the position of defense counsel that the evidence should have been stricken because it involved crimes by persons not identified in the charges. The common designs alleged in the Dachau and Mauthausen Concentration Camp cases, supra, did not identify by name or class all of the other numerous individuals who obviously participated in those huge mass atrocity operations. However, by the charges in those cases and in this one, the accused were fully apprised of the nature, character, and purpose of the common designs and the results effected in pursuance thereof, as well as the names of some of the individuals with whom they were alleged to have acted in concert.

As to the fourth portion of the motion, there is some authority in American criminal law to the effect that confessions are presumed to be voluntary and are admissible without foundation evidence in the absence of reason to suspect the use of violence, threats, torture, etc. (See 20 American Jurisprudence, Evidence, Section 536). The regulations in connection with the trial of war crimes cases by Military Government Courts in this Theater have never required such foundation evidence. In this connection it is of interest to note that Regulation 5 d (7) of the SCAP Regulations, supplemented by Rules of Procedure and Outline of Procedure for Trial of Accused War Criminals, issued by Headquarters, United States Eighth Army, 5 February 1946, and amended by a letter of General MacArthur, 27 December 1946, provides that all confessions or statements of accused shall be admissible in evidence without any showing that they were voluntarily made, and, further, that, if it is shown that they were procured by means which the commission believes to have been of such character that the accused may have been caused to make a false statement, the commission may strike out or disregard any portion thereof as was so procured. While probably not binding on the Court in the trial of these cases, the "Manual for Trial of War Crimes and Related Cases", 15 July 1946, as amended 1 February 1947, provides by subparagraph c (4), Section 270, that war crimes tribunals will not require foundation evidence to establish that sworn statements offered in evidence were voluntarily procured, but on the other hand will presume subject to be rebutted by competent evidence that the sworn statements were voluntarily made.

The Court did not err in overruling the fourth motion in its entirety and no injustice resulted to the accused (R 691).

The fifth motion made by the defense at the end of the prosecution's case was a motion on behalf of certain accused for findings of not guilty under charges 3 to 10, inclusive, and also for findings of not guilty as to the [illegible] of illegal killings as to certain accused under any of the 10 charges (R 692). It was properly overruled (R 716).

4. Superior Orders: As indicated in Section V, supra, accused TRUPPEL, FUHR, HOHLER, HOLLER, BEST, GOSS, MICHELY, GIRKE, HELLENBROICH, STATTMANN, and RAAF sought to justify their actions by offering evidence to show they were acting in compliance with superior orders. Compliance with superior orders does not constitute a defense to the charge of having committed a war crime (Trial of Henry Wirz, 40th Congress, 2nd Sess., House of Representatives, Ex. Doc. No. 23, page 812; Vol. II, Sixth Edition, Oppenheim, "International Law", paragraph 253, page 453; Llandovery Castle Case, 16 American Journal of International Law, page 708; United States v. Dominikus Thomas, December 1945; United States v. Alfons Klein, et al., (Hadamar Murder Factory Case), February 1946; and French Republic v. Wagner, et al., Court of Appeals, July 1946). This rule is followed in Anglo-American jurisprudence (Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115, and "Manual for Courts-Martial, U.S. Army", 1928, paragraph 148).

Compliance with superior orders may, under certain circumstances, be considered in mitigation of punishment. However, an accused who seeks relief on such grounds assumes the burden of establishing (a) that he received an order from a superior directing that he commit the wrongful act, (b) that he did not know or, as a reasonably prudent person, would not have known that the act which he was directed to perform was illegal or contrary to universally accepted standards of human conduct, and (c) that he acted, at least to some extent, under immediate compulsion. Having satisfactorily established these elements, the amount to which his sentence should be mitigated depends upon the character and extent of the immediate compulsion under which he acted. (See London Agreement of 8 August 1945, Concerning Prosecution and Punishment of Major War Criminals of the European Axis; FM 27-10, War Department, U.S. Army, "Rules of Land Warfare", paragraph 345.1, Change 1, 15 November 1944; Oppenheim, "International Law", supra, and the Llandovery Castle Case cited therein; "Manual for Courts-Martial", supra; "Report to the President of United States", 7 June 1945, by Mr. Justice Jackson, U.S. Chief Counsel for the Prosecution of Axis Criminality; Extract from Goebbels' "The Air Terror of Our Enemies", found in footnote, page 53, "Military Occupation and the Rule of the Law", by Ernst Fraenkel; and opinions of the Deputy Theater Judge Advocate for War Crimes in United States v. Bury, et al., September 1945, United States v. Dominikus Thomas, supra, and United States v. Beck, et al., December 1946).

5. Special Findings: In addition to the findings respecting each accused, the Court made special findings of fact regarding the existence in the Third German Reich, on and after 13 March 1940, of certain memoranda, directives, orders, decrees, and propaganda concerning the treatment by the German armed forces, police, and civilian population and the civilian population of countries occupied by Germany during World War II of Allied commandos, saboteurs, parachutists, and captured flyers (R 2595-2637). The findings are amply supported by documents and evidence adduced in the trial. It could be contended that the Court, in making these findings, exceeded the allegations in the charges, and particulars and that, therefore, the findings are improper. However, there is ample authority for additional findings by military courts (Winthrop's "Military Law and Precedents", Second Edition, Reprint 1920, at page 385, and the Mauthausen Concentration Camp case, supra). The Court may well have thought that its findings would clarify its views as to the evidence covered by the findings and that such clarification would aid in the trial of later cases involving the killing of surrendered flyers.

6. Swearing of Court: The Court overruled a motion by the defense to set aside the death sentences imposed on the ground that the members of the Court were not sworn (R 2587-2589). No error was committed. Members of Military Government Courts specially appointed for the trial of violations of the laws and usages of war are not sworn (Section 501, page 402, "Manual for Trial of War Crimes and Related Cases", 15 July 1946).

7. Conduct of Trial: The case was well and thoroughly tried and accused were all represented by competent American and German counsel. One member of the Court was a legally trained officer. Sufficient interpreters were provided at all times. A full right of cross-examination was extended throughout the trial. All accused were given an opportunity to testify in their own behalf and all convicted accused chose to do so. Both the findings and sentence as to each accused were approved by a two-thirds vote of the members present. The trial was conducted with fairness to all accused.

VII. CONCLUSIONS:

An examination of the entire record of trial fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused and discloses that the evidence is legally sufficient to support the findings of the Court. Accordingly, it is recommended that the findings of the Court be approved as to all the accused and that the sentences to death by hanging as to accused STROOP, TRUMLER, FUHR, HOHLER, EICHEL, KIVITT, GOSS, MICHELY, GIRKE, HELLENBROICH, STATTMANN and RAAF be approved and ordered executed; that the sentence to death by hanging as to accused MOLLER be approved, but commuted to imprisonment for life and as commuted ordered executed; that the sentences to imprisonment for fifteen (15) years as to accused ALBRECHT, HALLMANN and BEST be approved and ordered executed; that the sentences to imprisonment for five (5) years as to accused NAHRGANG and FAY be approved and ordered executed; that the sentence to imprisonment for four (4) years as to accused SOMANN be approved and ordered executed; and that the sentence to imprisonment for three (3) years as to accused LASSAK be approved and ordered executed.

Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish these results are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

U N I T E D S T A T E S	)	REVIEW OF THEATER JUDGE ADVOCATE
V.	)	ON
Tito Roncaglia, an Italian national	)	RECORD OF TRIAL BY
	)	MILITARY COMMISSION

---

1. The above named accused was tried by a Military Commission appointed by the Commanding Officer, Fort of Leghorn, Leghorn, Italy, on 3, 4, 5, 7 and 8 August 1947 on the following charge and specification:

CHARGE: Violation of the Law of War.

Specification: In that Roncaglia, Tito, then a member of the Fascist Federazione of Terni, Italy, acting with and in support of combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, did, near Folino, Italy, on or about 24 January 1944, wrongfully, unlawfully and contrary to the law of war, summarily kill S/Sgt Dale E. King, a member of the Military Forces of the United States of America by shooting him with a gun.

The accused was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead. The sentence was approved by the reviewing authority on 19 September 1947 and forwarded, together with a brief submitted on behalf of the accused, to this headquarters for action of the Commanding General as confirming authority.

2. Briefly, the evidence shows that Staff Sergeant Dale E. King, a member of the crew of an aircraft of the 319th Group, 440th Squadron, 15th Air Force, had been shot down following a raid on Foligno, Italy, on 19 December 1943. Dressed in civilian clothes he worked his way to Folino, Italy where he was finally taken in by Matteucci. On 23 January 1944, two Italian Fascists were killed by Italian partisans in Folino. A unit of the 104th Legion of the Republican National Guard and Fascist Federazione of Terni, under the command of a German officer, were ordered to Folino. The accused, a member of the Guard and detached to the Federazione accompanied the unit to Folino on 24 January 1944. Subsequent to his arrival it was rumored that there was an American airman in hiding in the home of Matteucci. The accused and another soldier, both of whom were armed with pistols and guns, entered the home of Matteucci. Upon entering the house Sergeant King was observed sitting in a chair before a fireplace opposite the door leading into the house. Immediately upon seeing Sergeant King, then dressed in civilian clothes, the accused and his companion called "Halt" and fired at King, called "Halt" a second time and fired again. Sergeant King rose from the chair in which he was seated on the second shot and fell to the floor. The accused then approached Sergeant King and fired another shot at him. Shortly after the shooting, Sergeant King died, and the accused asserted he had killed him. This assertion was made on later occasions. Witnesses testified they had been told by the accused and his companion that at the time of the incident Sergeant King had been hiding behind a cupboard armed with a dagger and had lunged at them whereupon the accused shot Sergeant King. A dagger had been found in the room where the incident occurred. The only eye witness present before the Commission denied that King was hiding behind a cupboard or that he was armed, but firmly maintained that at the time of the shooting King was unarmed; that he was seated in a chair before the fireplace and that the dagger which had been found was his and had fallen behind a bread box on 1 January 1944 and had not been seen from that date until it was shown him after King had been removed from the house.

The accused denied admitting he had killed Sergeant King and testified he entered the Mattenucci house after he heard two shots, and then saw Sergeant King lying on the floor in a dying state.

Further detailed evidence will not be set forth here, but the recapitulation of evidence and discussion of the brief filed on behalf of the accused contained in the review of the Acting Staff Judge Advocate, Port of Leghorn, contained in the papers accompanying the record of trial is adopted herein.

3. Trial was had by a Military Commission appointed under authority delegated by the Commanding General, Mediterranean Theater of Operations (Ltr. Hq. MTOUSA, 21 July 1947), which is proper under the provisions of War Department Field Manual 27-5. In my opinion, all conditions of the letter of delegation have been met in this case and the Theater regulations relating to the trial of war crimes have been followed. Therefore, I conclude that the trial in this case was conducted under appropriate authorization, and that it conformed to the terms of the delegation of power and to the standards of international law for a fair trial.

4. The charge in this case is not laid under any Article of War but under the laws of war. It is alleged that accused, then a member of the Fascist Federazione of Terni, Italy, acting with and in support of combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, wrongfully and unlawfully summarily kill Staff Sergeant Dale E. King, a member of the military forces of the United States by shooting him with a gun. Under a charge of this nature, it is upon the prosecution to prove that the accused killed a certain person by certain means as alleged. This involves proof that the person alleged to have been killed is dead; that he died in consequence of an injury received by him; that such injury was the result of the act of the accused and that death took place, normally, within a year and a day of such act.

From a consideration of the entire record, including the brief submitted in behalf of the accused, there is indisputable evidence that Staff Sergeant Dale E. King is dead and that he died on the 24th day of January 1944. The evidence, except for the testimony of the accused and his counsel, clearly shows that on 24 January 1944, a man, identified as the accused, after questioning one Mattenucci and demanding to know the whereabouts of an American alleged to be hidden in Poling, entered a house in that town in company with the owner thereof and another soldier; that accused was armed with a pistol and a gun; that upon entering the house, Staff Sergeant King was seen to be seated in a chair before the fireplace, unarmed; that apparently accused and his companion immediately called "Halt" twice and fired twice, whereupon Sergeant King rose from his chair and then fell to the floor; that thereafter the accused, knowing King to be wounded, stated that he must be killed and thereupon fired another shot at Sergeant King; that Sergeant King was then carried from the house and died a few moments later; and that accused asserted he had killed the American. There is a conflict of evidence with respect to how the accused was dressed and armed, although it is clear from the witnesses present that accused was armed with a pistol and rifle and that the accused fired at Sergeant King with the pistol. This conflict is not, in my opinion, material when considered in the light of all the positive evidence, and the Commission after considering the evidence was quite competent to give such weight to the evidence as the circumstances warranted. In my opinion, the accused was adequately identified.

The evidence, in my opinion, is also clear that the accused knew that the individual who he shot was an American and, at that time, an enemy. There is likewise little doubt from the evidence that the court could infer the accused intended to summarily kill Sergeant King. This inference assumes a factual status when considered in the light of the evidence that immediately upon seeing Sergeant King, who was at the time seated and turned so that he was unable to observe the entrance of the accused, the accused fired at him and thereafter, knowing Sergeant King was wounded and against the admonition and plea of his companion, shot him again. While intent, premeditation and malice aforethought are not considered essential elements of proof under the specification to the charge in question, it is my opinion such proof is existent in the record.

Medical and other testimony introduced at the trial shows beyond doubt that while the accused may have been and now is suffering from nervous disorders, he was and is mentally competent.

From the foregoing, I am of the opinion that all elements of the offense charged were established beyond a reasonable doubt.

5. The defense has submitted a brief and an appeal on behalf of the accused. The Acting Staff Judge Advocate, Port of Leghorn, has adequately discussed the brief and statements included therein, hence such matters will not be reiterated here. I fully concur with his views that the brief considered as a whole is little more than an argument of the law and evidence considered by the Commission, and that the same presents no grounds for a disapproval of the findings and sentence of the Commission based thereon.

The appeal referred to is in the form of a letter dated 23 September 1947. Special defense counsel asserts that with the coming into force of the Treaty of Peace on 15 September 1947 a new juridical situation has arisen which deprives the United States of any jurisdiction over this case. His assertion is based upon the following points:

a. That in view of the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2, Manual for Courts-Martial 1928, Article of War 46, paragraphs 131 and 133, TM 27-255, and Circular 114 WDUSA 1945, a sentence is not complete and final until confirmation.

b. That since 15 September 1947, United States Forces in Italy are no longer an occupying force within the meaning of Article XLII of the second Hague Convention and jurisdiction over Italian citizens is vested in Italian courts for crimes committed against American citizens or interests.

c. That jurisdiction assumed by military courts has been personal or universal and not territorial. However, according to Coules in his Universality of Jurisdiction over War Crimes (XXXIII Cal. Law Review, pp 178, 180 & 181) an independent State has legal power to vest jurisdiction in its courts to hear and determine alleged war crimes unless it is prohibited from doing so by international law and therefore, the question is one of the existence val nem of a limitation by international law on the legal power of jurisdiction of the State; that this limitation is established in this case by the fact that accused is an Italian citizen presently on Italian territory and any act of the assumption of jurisdiction by a United States court is an infringement on Italian sovereignty.

In other words special counsel for the accused asserts that since final action in this case was not taken prior to the coming into force of the Treaty of Peace the United States no longer has jurisdiction over the accused for the reason that Italy has now become a sovereign nation and hence has sole jurisdiction over her nationals. In my opinion this position cannot be maintained. The United States Supreme Court, discussing the question whether the authority to create a Military Commission and direct the trial by military order continued after the cessation of hostilities, in the case of Yamashita vs. Lt. General Styer (Sup. Ct. Nos. 61 Misc and 672, 4 Feb 46), stated:

> "An important incident to the conduct of war is the adoption of measures by the military commander, not only to repel and defeat the enemy, but to seize and subject to disciplinary measures those enemies who, in their attempt to thwart or impede our military effort, have violated the law of war. Ex parte Quirin, supra, 28. The trial and punishment of enemy combatants who have committed violations of the law of war is thus not only a part of the conduct of war operating as a preventive measure against such violations, but is an exercise of the military sanctioned by Congress to administer the system of military justice recognized by the law of war. That sanction is without qualification as to the exercise of this authority so long as a state of war exists - from its declaration until peace is proclaimed. See United States v. Anderson, 9 Wall. 56, 70; The Protector, 12 Wall. 700, 702; McElrath v. United States, 102 U.S. 426, 438; Kahn v. Anderson, 255 U. S. 1, 9-10. * * *"

"We cannot say that there is no authority to convene a commission after hostilities have ended to try violations of the law of war committed before their cessation, at least until peace has been officially recognized by treaty or proclamation of the political branch of the Government. * * **

"No writer on international law appears to have regarded the power of military tribunals, otherwise competent to try violations of the law of war as terminating before the formal state of war has ended. (Footnote: The Commission on the responsibility of the authors of the war and on the enforcement of penalties of the Versailles Peace Conference which met after cessation of hostilities in the First World War, were of the view that violators of the law of war could be tried by military tribunals. See Report of the Commission, March 29, 1919, 14 Am. J. Int. Law 95, 128. See also Memorandum of American Commissioners concurring on this point, id., at p. 141. The treaties of peace concluded after World War I recognized the right of the Allies and of the United States to try such offenders before military tribunals. See Art. 228 of Treaty of Versailles, June 28, 1919; Art. 173 of Treaty of St. Germain, Sept. 10, 1919; Art. 157 of Treaty of Trianon, June 4, 1920 * * *) * * *."

"The extent to which the power to prosecute violations of the law of war shall be exercised before peace is declared rests, not with the courts, but with the political branch of the Government, and may itself be governed by the terms of an armistice or the treaty of peace. * * *"

The United States Supreme Court has reiterated the well recognized principle of International Law that a belligerent has the right to punish, during the war, such war criminals as fall into his hands and that it is a right of which he may effectively avail himself after he has occupied all or part of enemy territory, and is thus in a position to enforce war criminals who happen to be there for the accused are, in effect, in his power. The Supreme Court has further recognized the principle that the extent of the power to prosecute violations of the law of war after peace is declared may be governed by the terms of the treaty of peace. In this connection Oppenheim in his work on International Law by Lauterpacht (Vol II, Disputes, War and Neutrality, pp 437-438) states:

* * * * And although normally the Treaty of Peace brings to an end the right to prosecute war criminals, no rule of International Law prevents the victorious belligerent from imposing upon the defeated State the duty, as one of the provisions of the Armistice or of the Peace Treaty, to surrender for trial persons accused of war crimes. In this, as in other matters, the will of the victor is the law of the Treaty." See to the same effect, address by Major Gowns before the section of International Law of the American Bar Association (Am Bar Assn. J. June 1944); Mueller "The Legal Nature and Punishment of Criminal Acts of Violence Contrary to the Laws of War" (37 Am J. Int. L. (1943)); Wheaton, International Law,

p. 623; Glueck, War Criminals, Their Prosecution and Punishment, pp. 74-75 and notes; Kelsen, Peace Through Law, pp. 106-110 discussing surrender of war criminals to another belligerent under a treaty places the legal basis for jurisdiction on the treaty and likens it to legal extradition, but arrives at the same conclusion.

Paragraph 29 of the instrument of surrender of Italy provides:

"Benito Mussolini, his chief Fascist associates and all persons suspected of having committed war crimes or analogous offenses whose names appear on lists to be communicated by the United Nations and who now or in the future are on territory controlled by the Allied Military Command or by the Italian Government, will forthwith be apprehended and surrendered into the hands of the United Nations. Any instructions given by the United Nations for this purpose will be complied with."

Article 45 of the Treaty of Peace with Italy, which became effective 15 September 1947, provides in pertinent part:

"1. Italy shall take all necessary steps to ensure the apprehension and surrender for trial of:

"(a) Persons accused of having committed, ordered or abetted war crimes and crimes against peace or humanity.

"(b) At the request of the United Nations Government concerned, Italy shall likewise make available as witnesses persons within its jurisdiction, whose evidence is required for the trial of the persons referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article. * * * *"

In this case it has been, as must be, admitted that prior to the coming into force of the Treaty of Peace with Italy, the terms of surrender made it obligatory upon the Italian Government to apprehend and surrender war criminals. It must be further admitted that as the accused had, in effect, been surrendered to the United States pursuant to the terms of the surrender instrument and as an occupying force, the United States military tribunals had sole jurisdiction of the accused. He was tried and convicted of a violation of the law of war and sentenced to death by a United States military commission. Under the rules governing the trial of the accused, the sentence was not to become final until acted upon by the Theater Commander. This action had not taken place on 15 September 1947, the date upon which the Treaty of Peace with Italy became effective. However, on that date the accused was still in the custody of the United States. On 15 September 1947, Italy agreed with, among others, the United States to surrender for trial any person accused of having committed a war crime. The accused in this case had not only been accused of committing a war crime but had been tried and found guilty of such offense by a tribunal of the United States which, when rendering its findings, had jurisdiction of the accused. Shall it then be necessary for the United States now to request of Italy the surrender for trial of the accused who is at this moment in the custody of the United Nations Government concerned, the United States, particularly since Italy had earlier agreed under the terms of surrender which continued in effect to the date of the coming into force of the Treaty of Peace, to surrender the accused? I am of the opinion that this formality is unnecessary and that Italy, by virtue of its basic agreement, continued under the terms of the Treaty of Peace, to surrender the accused, has, in effect, waived any jurisdiction it may have claimed over the accused and consented to his trial and/or punishment in accordance with the internal policy of the United States. Accordingly, the United States having acquired jurisdiction of the accused during the war does not lose that jurisdiction upon the formal conclusion of the war but continues its jurisdiction by virtue of the above-quoted provisions of the very document terminating the war, ie., the Treaty of Peace with Italy, and may, therefore, pursue this case to its ultimate conclusion. The authority to try and convict war criminals in this area and to punish them has been vested in the Theater Commander by the United States.

6. In my opinion, the record of trial discloses no errors or irregularities which can be construed as prejudicial to the substantial rights of the accused in a case such as this. The evidence is compelling as to the guilt of the accused. The evidence submitted with the brief in fact presents no legal grounds for a disapproval of the sentence or for commutation thereof. The grounds of appeal attacking the jurisdiction of the United States is not, in my opinion, well founded and should be denied. The only matter left, therefore, for consideration is that of clemency.

Newspapers in Italy have carried on a campaign to request people and organizations throughout the country to write asserting the innocence of the accused. Many articles have been published attacking the Commission. The Vatican has transmitted a request from the wife of the accused that the sentence be commuted. His Excellency, Count Carlo Sforza, Minister of Foreign Affairs addressed a communication to the United States Ambassador to Italy on 12 August 1947 as follows:

"The Allied Military War Crimes Court has recently completed the trial of the ex-squad leader of the Republican National Guard, Vito (sic) Ronsaglia, accused of having killed, at Poline, near Terni, an American aviator who had descended by parachute and who was wearing civilian clothes at the time of his death.

"The Court-martial has sentenced Ronsaglia to death by hanging.

"For the same reasons I presented to you in my letter No. 931 of June 6, 1947, regarding the case of the fireman Ido Turchi, that is, that the August 10, 1944, Decree No. 224 of the Lieutenant General of the Realm provided for the abolition of the death penalty in Italy, commuting it to life imprisonment, and that this principle has already been applied in similar cases, the Italian Government trusts that the Allied Military Authorities will please concede also to Ronsaglia the commutation of the death penalty.

"I shall therefore be very grateful to you, dear Ambassador, if you will please interpose your high offices with the appropriate Allied Authorities to the end that they be pleased to perform this act of clemency, which will surely find an echo particularly in Italian public opinion, especially at this moment when, following ratification of the Peace Treaty, a broader spirit of understanding and generosity in judging facts and deeds connected with the tragic vicissitudes of the war is looked for on the part of the Allies.

"In earnestly requesting your courteous reply in the matter I send you, dear Ambassador, together with my thanks, my sincere regards."

On 19 September 1947, Count Sforza addressed a second communication to the Ambassador as follows:

"I refer to your letter of August 27, 1947, in which you kindly informed me that you had interposed your high offices with the appropriate authorities to the end that the death sentence pronounced by these authorities at Leghorn on the Italian, Vito (sic) Ronsaglia, be commuted.

"In view of the kind interest you have taken in this matter, I again appeal, while awaiting the decision of the Allied Military Authorities, to your high and trustworthy spirit of understanding and beg you please to point out again to the above mentioned Military Authorities that the Italian Government trusts--particularly now that the Peace Treaty has come into force—in their sense of humanitarian generosity and awaits a gesture of clemency, the more so since the sentence is based on circumstantial evidence."

In connection with the first letter, it should be observed that Count Sforza is mistaken in several respects: (1) That the accused was not tried by an "Allied" Military Commission; (2) That the United States military authorities have at no time commuted a sentence in a war crimes case on the basis of the Italian decrees abolishing the death sentence. It should also be observed, as heretofore stated, that under the provisions of the surrender terms and Article 45 of the Treaty of Peace with Italy, the Italian Government has undertaken to take all necessary steps to insure the apprehension and surrender for trial of persons accused of war crimes. By this undertaking Italy has, in my opinion, waived its jurisdiction over such persons and has submitted them to the jurisdiction of the requesting power, which jurisdiction includes the rules of procedure and jurisprudence applicable to war crimes cases, without reference to the laws of Italy. Regardless of these facts the appeal of the Italian Government has been given careful consideration. I am of the opinion that legally the sentence in this case should be confirmed. However, considering the possible political effect in United States relations with Italy of the execution of a death sentence pronounced upon a subject of a country with which the United States has so recently entered into a Treaty of Peace, regardless of the provisions of Article 45 thereof, and a country which has within its own competency since the liberation of Italy abolished the sentence of death (a basic principle of jurisprudence changed only by the Fascist regime, ascribed to by the accused), and particularly since the Government of Italy has officially requested consideration of clemency, it is my opinion that the sentence in this case should be commuted to life imprisonment (ergastolo). This action would, I feel confident, serve the ends of justice by punishing an offense against the conscience of civilized humanity and by removing a menace to the social order in a manner in keeping with the basic principles of criminal punishment in many of the jurisdictions of our United States and in Italy.

7. I recommend that the appeal submitted on behalf of the defense be denied and that the finding and sentence be approved and confirmed but the sentence to death be commuted to imprisonment at hard labor for life (ergastolo). Ergastolo is recommended since, if this recommendation is approved, the accused will, in accordance with the agreement with the Italian Government, be confined in an Italian penal institution. A form of action appropriate to the foregoing recommendation is appended hereto.

REVIEW OF THE POSE JUDGE ADVOCATE

ON RECORD OF TRIAL BY MILITARY COMMISSION

U N I T E D S T A T E S

vs

TITO MENGAGLIA, an Italian National

---

1. The above named accused was tried by a Military Commission appointed by the Commanding Officer, Post of Leghorn, Leghorn, Italy, on the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th and 8th of August 1947, on the following charge and specification:

CHARGE: Violation of the Law of War.

Specification: In that Mengaglia, Tito, then a member of the Fascist Republicans of Parma, Italy, acting with and in support of combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, did, near Poligno, Italy, on or about 26 January 1944, wrongfully, unlawfully and contrary to the law of war, summarily kill S/Sgt Dale E. King, a member of the Military Forces of the United States of America by shooting him with a gun.

He was found guilty as charged and sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead.

2. CHALLENGES. The defense challenged the commission on the ground that it had no JURISDICTION. The commission apparently considered this a plea to the jurisdiction and overruled it (R. 3). While normally under courts-martial procedure challenges are dealt with in closed session, it is apparent that when the defense failed to assert any ground for challenge the case was treated as a plea to the jurisdiction and the commission denied the plea. This was proper under the provisions of paragraphs 6 and 8, Circular 114, HEADQUARTERS, 1945.

3. PLEAS. The defense entered a plea to the jurisdiction on the ground that no war CRIME had been committed. This plea was overruled (R. 3). In my opinion this was proper since the ground upon which the plea is based must be based upon facts which the commission could not determine until after hearing all the evidence.

4. ARRAIGNMENT. The accused did not plead to the charge and specification. The COMMISSION thereupon entered a plea of "not guilty" (R. 4).

5. EVIDENCE.

a. For the Prosecution: On 18 December 1943 an aircraft of the 319th Group, 440th Squadron of the 15th Air Force, piloted by Lieutenant Whildren Stewart, participated in a raid on the marshalling yards at Poligno, Italy. At about 1555 hours Stewart's plane was hit by enemy anti-aircraft fire, burst into flames and later crashed. S/Sgt Dale E. King, radio gunner, apparently parachuted to safety (Pros. Ex. Nos. 1 and 2). At any rate, on 29 December 1943, two Fascist soldiers brought S/Sgt Dale E. King to the home of Orsini Gallerano in Poline, Italy (R. 5-8, 40-41; Pros. Ex. Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8). He stayed with Mrs. Orsini and her husband 21 days and until the 19th or 21st of January 1944 when, because she feared trouble, Mrs. Orsini took him to the home of Domenico Mattoucci (R. 6, 9, 39; Pros. Ex. No. 8). During this period Sgt King was dressed in civilian clothes (R. 6, 9, 25).

On 25 January 1944 two Fascists were killed by partisans at Poline. As a result the Terni unit of the 104th Legion of the Republican National Guard and Fascist Federazione of Terni were ordered to Poline to secure the bodies of the two Fascists who had been killed. The Legion was a military organization of the Italian Army and the Federazione was a military-political unit allied with the Italian Army, then an ally of Germany.

The accused, Vito Maneaglia, was a corporal of the Guard detached to the Federazione (R. 19, 28, 42, 116, 118; Pros. Ex. Nos. 9, 14). The unit mentioned which consisted of approximately 30 men, including the accused, departed from Terni for Poline on the morning of 26 January 1944, and arrived in Poline between 9:00 and 10:00 o'clock (R. 20, 33; Pros. Ex. Nos. 9, 10, 14). Upon arrival in Poline an order was issued that all male persons of Poline over 16 years of age immediately report to the village square, and if they failed to do so they would or could be subject to execution (R. 20, 29, 55, 56; Pros. Ex. No.9). One witness stated that if a man over 16 failed to report he would be shot dead but he later changed this statement because he did not know (R. 56). One witness testified that there was an order not to fire unless there was aggression (R. 35).

During the period between arrival and the assembling of the men of Poline, apparently some of the women of the town told some of the soldiers that there was an American aviator hiding in the home of Mattoucci (R. 55). About this time Mattoucci approached the square where he was accosted by a member of the unit who was dressed in civilian clothes. This man who was identified as the accused asked Mattoucci where the American was (R. 10, 17; Pros. Ex. No. 14). Mattoucci answered that he did not know. The question and answer were repeated again and a third time at which latter time the civilian, who was armed with a machine-gun or automatic rifle and pistol, pointed the pistol at Mattoucci's breast. Mattoucci then said that the American was in his house and lead them there (R. 10, 58, 158, 156).

Mattoucci escorted them to his home with the accused on his left and a soldier named Lancia on his right. There Mattoucci opened the door and the accused and Lancia pushed past him into the living room. S/Sgt King was at the moment seated in a chair before a fireplace which was built into the wall of the room to the right of the door. Immediately, upon seeing Sergeant King seated before the fireplace, one or both the two who had entered cried "Halt" and fired, cried "Halt" a second time and fired again, whereupon Sergeant King rose from the chair and fell to the floor. Each apparently had fired one shot, although this is not clear. The soldier, presumably Lancia, approached the American and said to the one in civilian clothes, accused, "He is wounded, we must take him as he is, we must not shoot". Accused in civilian clothes said, "We must kill him", whereupon he advanced a step and fired a third shot at Sergeant King from about 6 feet distance (R. 10, 11, 14-17, 66, 156-158; Pros. Ex. Nos. 13, 14).

Mattoucci then departed for the square in the company of soldiers who were outside the house (R. 10, 18, 157). A soldier, Dolci, who was a short distance from the house and a Captain Moscani hearing the three shots went immediately to the Mattoucci residence and entered. Dolci entered first. Lancia and Maneaglia were alone with Sergeant King who was then in a dying state. Upon inquiring how the American was killed, Dolci was told that Maneaglia had killed Sergeant King. Moscani testified that he was told upon entering the house that Sergeant King had been hiding behind a cupboard and immediately lunged at the soldiers with a dagger, whereupon Ronsaglia fired; that he (Moscani) had found a dagger 30 or 40 centimeters from Sergeant King's body and that the body was about one and one half meters from the fireplace; that he immediately sent for means of taking King, who was still alive, to a doctor; that a ladder was brought and King laid upon it and transported from the house to the square and that he had reported this to his superior, Lt. Colonel Bonanni (R. 20, 22, 33-35, 38, 40, 47, 101, 102, 104, 105, 150, 151; Pros. Ex. Nos. 9, 10).

On the way from the house to the square Sergeant King died (R. 64, 46; Pros. Ex. No. 14). At the square the accused asserted he had killed the American (R. 10, 20, 23, 35, 145, 148, 149; Pros. Ex. Nos. 9, 14). Mattousci firmly denied that at the time of the shooting the victim was armed or had any weapon and that he had not made any lunge toward the two who entered the house with him. He asserted that the dagger which had been in the family a long time had fallen behind the bread box around the first of January where he had not seen it until it was brought to the square (R. 10, 12, 14, 156, 186, 187). Sergeant King's body was placed upon a trunk and taken to Terni where he was buried on 29 January 1944 (R. 45, 55-57; Pros. Ex. Nos. 11, 12, 14). After the incident Ronsaglia asserted on many occasions that he had killed the American, referring to Sergeant King (R. 107; Pros. Ex. Nos. 9, 10). It was stated in evidence by one not an eyewitness that Ronsaglia had stated that King was throwing himself, with the dagger raised, against the soldiers. It is not clear when Ronsaglia so stated (R. 22, 24, 55).

b. For the Defense: Special counsel for the defense took the stand and made an unsworn statement on behalf of the accused in which he stated that accused has always insisted upon his innocence; that the accused told him that between 6:00 and 7:00 on the morning of 24 January 1944 one Donati came to his house and told him to dress as they had to go to Poline; that he dressed in his military uniform with the help of his wife and then took his rifle but not his pistol as he had no right as a corporal to carry a pistol; that when he arrived at Poline he found himself in front of a house where shots were fired; that after he heard the shots he went into the house and saw on the floor a person dressed in civilian clothes and near the body he saw a dagger; that he felt badly and his head started to spin; that at that moment Captain Moscani entered and that he (Ronsaglia) departed; that he did not remember having accused himself as having killed the American as he was not present when the shots were fired (R. 128, 129).

Accused was sworn and took the stand as a witness. He testified that he was awakened by Donati on the morning of 24 January 1944 and told to dress because two Fascists had been killed at Poline the day before; that he dressed in his uniform and took his automatic rifle; that at Poline an order was given for all men over 18 to meet in the square; that he saw Pattaressi talking to a civilian; that Pattaressi told them to look out as someone was hiding in a house; that as they arrived at the house the door was opened by the owner or "the other"; that as the two went into the house he heard two shots; that upon hearing the shots he entered the house and saw a man in civilian clothes who was still moving; that Captain Moscani entered the house at the same time whereupon he (Ronsaglia) departed and was ordered to take the owner of the house to the square (R. 131). He further testified he always wore his uniform except when authorized to wear civilian clothes (R. 132). He denied that he had told anyone that he had killed the American, Sergeant King, nor did he hear anyone make a report that he (accused) had killed King. He stated that he saw Lemmia enter the house (R. 133-136).

Colonel Bonanni stated that he saw accused after the latter's return from Poline and he was dressed in uniform and carried a rifle. The witness further testified that he did not see a pistol (R. 120).

The wife of accused, Anita Santori, testified she helped accused dress in his uniform on the morning of the 24th and that when he left he took with him his rifle but left his pistol at home. She also testified that upon his return from Peline he was in uniform. At this time he told her something of the killing but did not tell her that he had killed the man or that it was an American. She denied having heard the suggestion of Pitotti to place the blame for the killing on Pattarozzi (See Ex. 10) although she admitted having talked to Pitotti in Rome in June 1946 (R. 86-89, 91-94).

Witnesses were introduced showing accused to be a braggart but not a man who would commit a crime (R. 72); that he would not escape from confinement while in the MTOUSA Disciplinary Training Center although having an opportunity to do so (R. 80, 81); that he was brave as evidenced by an act in 1945 when he accompanied an officer who removed an explosive charge set on a bridge by Germans, and that he never bragged (R. 83-85); that in March 1946 he went into a convent and later told the padre of the killing of the American and proclaimed his innocence; that thereafter he voluntarily left with a war crimes investigator after having been advised by the padre of the extraterriteriality of the convent area (R. 75, 79).

A doctor testified that he had made a mental examination of the accused; that he showed signs of hyper-sensitiveness of the nervous system; that he has a low capacity to be attentive and is an individual who believes himself to be the motive center of everything and reacts exhuberantly to verbal stimulants; that he is imaginative and tends to exaggerate and tell things which are not true but seems to be persuaded of their truth; and that he is mentally competent (R. 111, 114).

6. DISCUSSION. At the close of the prosecution's case, the defense moved for an acquittal on the grounds that at no time had it been shown who killed Sergeant King; that there was no war crime because Sergeant King was not dressed in uniform; and that Sergeant King had a dagger. This motion was overruled by the commission. It is my view that this action was proper. At the time of the motion the prosecution had introduced the evidence of an eye witness to the killing who had testified that a man in civilian clothes, whom he had been told was accused, shot Sergeant King and thereafter ample evidence was produced showing that accused at the time and shortly after the shooting had stated that he had killed the American. One witness testified he had been told by accused and one other that Sergeant King had a dagger and had lunged at accused when he had entered the house. This was not corroborated and in view of the statements of the eyewitness that at the time accused entered the house Sergeant King was seated in a chair before the fireplace, was unarmed and that the dagger had dropped behind the bread box about 1 January and had not been seen since, would clearly permit the commission to discount the uncorroborated hearsay testimony. The fact that Sergeant King was not in uniform would not authorize his summary execution in view of the fact that the evidence indicated at the time the accused and others entered the house it was known to them that the person in the house was an American and was not to be affected by a supposed order, if there was one, that any male persons over 16 who failed to report to the village square would be "shot dead". These elements sufficiently established a case to warrant the action of the commission.

The accused in this case, as a member of the Fascist Federazione of Terni, acting with and in support of the combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, is charged with wrongfully and unlawfully and contrary to the laws of war summarily killing S/Sgt Dale E. King then a member of the United States Forces by shooting him with a gun on or about 24 January 1944 at Peline, Italy, in violation of the laws of war.

The evidence is clear that the accused was a member of the 104th Legion of the National Republican Guard and on 24 January 1944 was on detached service with the Fascist Federazione of Terni, the latter being a military-political organization of the Italian Government and army both of which at the time were allied with the German Reich. The evidence is also clear that the accused accompanied a unit of the Republican National Guard to Peline on the morning of 24 January on a military-political mission, i.e., to collect the bodies of two Fascists who had been killed by partisans the day before, to determine whether there were any men in Poline over 16 years of age who could be utilized for military service, and to take hostages for the killings which had taken place the day before. The evidence indicates that upon arrival in Poline the accused and others learned that an American aviator, amply identified as S/Sgt Dale E. King, was in hiding in one of the homes in Poline and, upon learning the identity of the owner, forced the latter at pistol point to reveal the whereabouts of the home and S/Sgt King.

There is some question as to how the accused was dressed and armed at this point. The owner of the house testified a man in civilian clothes forced him to reveal the location of Sergeant King and that he was later told this civilian was Ruscoglia. He also testified that the civilian was armed with an automatic rifle and pistol. Another witness, Coppo, stated he could not recall how accused was dressed but that he was armed with a machine gun and pistol. Another witness, Captain Moscoui, stated that it appeared to him that accused was in uniform and later in describing soldiers inferred that they were all dressed in uniform. He further testified accused was armed with a rifle and pistol. Bolci asserted in a pretrial statement that accused was in civilian clothes and armed with a machine-gun and pistol and saw him pointing a pistol at the home owner and later accompanying him to the house. On the trial this witness could not remember how Ruscoglia was dressed although he believed him to be in civilian clothes but did not see a pistol. Colonel Bonanni stated that accused was dressed in uniform and armed with a rifle. This is also the statement of the accused's wife and the accused. Having the witnesses before it, the commission could properly weigh the apparently conflicting statements in connection with all the evidence and believe those witnesses who were most convincing.

The evidence is clear that two men accompanied the owner of the home in which Sergeant King was hidden to the house and upon entering fired two shots at King who was then dressed in civilian clothes, unarmed, and seated in front of the fireplace. The evidence is also clear that after the two shots Sergeant King rose from his chair and fell to the floor. After he had fallen to the floor one of the men fired another shot at him. This man, although he could not be identified at this time by Matteucci, matteucci was told was accused. Furthermore, the evidence is clear that immediately after the shooting at least two persons entered the room and found only the accused, one Lancia and the dying American, therein, and were told that accused had killed the American, which accused did not deny. A short time later the accused stated to several people that he had killed the American and on occasions at a much later date reiterated that he had killed the American.

Under the circumstances it matters little how the accused may have been dressed or whether the one eyewitness could presently point out the accused at the trial. Those who found accused and Lancia in the room alone with the dying Sergeant King and who heard him reiterate he had killed the American amply identified him.

At the time the accused and Lancia were found by witnesses in the house alone with the dying Sergeant King, and later it was asserted that Sergeant King had been hiding behind a cupboard in the room armed with a dagger and had lunged toward accused and Lancia and to defend themselves they were forced to shoot him. A dagger was apparently found on the floor of the room 30 or 40 centimeters from the body of Sergeant King. However, the eye witness Matteucci at the trial firmly and convincingly stated that the knife in question was his and that it had fallen behind the bread box about the first of January 1944 and was not seen again until it was brought to the square after the shooting. He also testified that when he and the two men who later shot King entered the house, Sergeant King was seated in a chair in front of the fireplace and that immediately the two who accompanied him called "Halt" and fired, called "Halt" again and fired a second shot. He further testified that on the second shot King rose from his chair and fell to the floor and was in that position when one of the men who later was identified to him as the accused, after stating the American must be killed, stepped forward and shot him again. He stated emphatically that at the time of the shooting Sergeant King was not armed, that he did not see a dagger in his hand, and he was not hiding behind a cupboard.

The brief is largely a re-argument of points raised during the trial and disposed of as the trial progressed. It is contended that because of the fact that Buscaglia was a member of the Italian armed forces at the time of the acts, although taken into custody after the fighting ceased, he is a prisoner of war and not a war criminal, and should have been tried by and under the rules of procedure and evidence governing courts-martial. This position is untenable. The evidence established the fact that that Buscaglia knew the man was an American although it was later shown he was of Italian stock. As an American he was entitled to be treated as a captured enemy prisoner and not summarily executed as was done. This was clearly a violation of the laws of war and the perpetrator was a war criminal. As a war criminal the international conventions for the protection of prisoners of war do not apply.

The brief attacks the findings and sentence of the court by re-arguing the evidence on such controversial points as identification of Buscaglia as the killer, admissions and statements by Buscaglia that he killed King, the type of clothing worn by and kind of arms borne by Buscaglia solely in favor of the accused. These matters were properly disposed of by the commission in its deliberations upon the findings and should not now be disturbed. There is ample evidence on each point to support the findings.

The policy and rules for the conduct of proceedings of trials of war criminals embodied in Circular 114, SHAEF, 1945, were promulgated with a view towards a full and fair trial for each accused. The strict rules of procedure and evidence governing the Anglo-Saxon courts and courts-martial proceedings were relaxed for reasons of necessity. The rules promulgated in Circular 114 assure an accused a full and fair trial and this point in the brief is not well taken.

The accused in his testimony asserted that he saw the owner of the house and a civilian enter the house and then he heard two shots. He stated he did not go into the house until after he had heard the two shots fired and then he entered where he saw the American mortally wounded on the floor. He then testified he saw Lamela enter and then he departed after Captain Pecnani arrived and escorted the owner of the house to the square. He further testified that at no time did he say he had killed the American.

After considering all the evidence, I am of the opinion that the commission could, without any reasonable doubt, arrive at the conclusion as it apparently did, that the accused without any legal justification summarily shot and killed Sergeant King as alleged. The act in itself was unlawful and wrongful under the laws of war. The accused was aware that the person in the house was an American and therefore a belligerent. The fact that he was in civilian clothes and thereby might have been considered a spy would not have warranted summary execution without legal justification. If the defense had established that the killing was done in self defense, which it did not, this would have shown legal justification. However, sufficient evidence to establish such justification was not shown. In my opinion, and apparently in the opinion of the commission such defense was not established under all the facts.

The evidence is clear that as the result of the shooting Sergeant King died within a few minutes after being shot while being transported from the Matteucci house to the public square and that his body was transported on 24 January 1944 to Terni where he was buried on 29 January 1944.

7. BRIEF OF SPECIAL COUNSEL FOR ACCUSED. Mr. Mario Lenire, Special Defense Counsel, submitted to the Reviewing Authority a brief on behalf of the accused. The substance thereof may be properly broken down as follows:

Attacks upon jurisdiction of the commission.
Attacks upon findings and sentence of the commission.
Attacks upon legal policy of rules governing procedure and evidence in trials of war criminals.
Miscellaneous.

There is an implication contained in the brief that the commission caused certain matter to be excluded or stricken from the record. There is no specific charge made that the action was improper but it is claimed that such action was unfair to the accused. It is sufficient to state that the record of trial has been authenticated by the regularly appointed defense counsel and accepted as correct.

It is also charged that a number of the prosecution's staff tried to persuade a witness to change his deposition. Apparently the deposition was not changed. Such conduct is not commendable, but it is not considered that it affected the deliberations of the commission or in any way adversely affected the rights of the accused.

The commission had jurisdiction of the accused and of the offense charged and the record of trial is legally sufficient to support the findings and sentence. There were no errors or irregularities which may be considered as injuriously affecting any substantial right of the accused.

8. APPEALS FOR COMMUTATION. The Secretariat of State of His Holiness the Pope at the instance of the wife of Runeglia has addressed to the Assistant to the Personal Representative of the President of the United States Mrs. Runeglia's request that the sentence be commuted. This message was communicated to the Chief of Staff, Headquarters, MTOUSA, through diplomatic channels.

His Excellency Count Carlo Sforza, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has addressed a communication to the United States Ambassador, Rome, Requesting that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. He submits that the Decree of 10 August 1944 abolishing the death penalty in Italy has been recognized by the Allied authorities in former cases and requests that similar action be taken in this case.

The Foreign Minister also appeals on the ground that with the return to a state of peace such an act of clemency will exhibit a broad spirit of understanding and generosity on the part of the Allies in judging facts and deeds connected with the tragic vicissitudes of the war and will surely find an echo in Italian public opinion. The latter communication was also forwarded to the Chief of Staff, Headquarters, MTOUSA, through diplomatic channels.

These two communications are concerned only with commutation of the sentence which is outside the jurisdiction of the reviewing authority. The message from the Secretariat of His Holiness is considered as an ordinary appeal from a clergyman in behalf of an aggrieved parishioner.

The first ground stated in the appeal of the Minister of Foreign Affairs is not seriously considered as the action in the former case referred to does not constitute a binding precedent. The second ground stated in the appeal is based largely upon grounds of political expediency. The first ground stated, that the abolition of death sentences in Italy was considered in a previous case, is not accurate, for as a matter of fact this argument has never been used as the basis of commutation in any war crimes case, and in the present case it is recommended that it be not so recognized. The facts herein show a brutal murder of a helpless man without the existence of any extenuating circumstances.

The other grounds stated by the Minister of Foreign Affairs is that the Italian people will respond favorably to a charitable act of the Allied forces in recognizing the confusion and indecision which existed in the Northern parts of Italy subsequent to the landing of the Allied Forces on Italian soil and the continued occupation of the Northern parts of Italy by the Germans.

There was no doubt untold confusion and varying loyalties, the latter often determined by trifles. In some individuals loyalties run deeper than in others. As an act of Christian charity embodied in our religious teachings, regardless of religious sects, to extend clemency would be proper and would no doubt strike a responsive chord among Italians who are deeply schooled and disciplined in Christian teachings. This headquarters has also received large numbers of letters and appeals from others asserting the innocence of Bonaglia.

These matters are all for consideration in connection with the question of commutation of the sentence, which sentence in my opinion is fully justified from the evidence in the case. The power to commute the sentence lies wholly within the power of the confirming authority and no recommendation is made in this regard.

9. RECOMMENDATIONS. Accordingly, it is recommended that the sentence be approved and the record of trial forwarded, pursuant to paragraph 12, Circular 114, Headquarters MTOUSA, dated 22 September 1945. A form of action designed to accomplish the foregoing recommendations is attached.

WAR CRIMES NO. 510 - RONCAGLIA

26 July 1947.

SUBJECT: Advice of Staff Judge Advocate

TO : Commanding Officer, Port of Leghorn

CHARGE : Violation of the Law of War

Specifications: In that Roncaglia, Tito, then a member of the Fascist Federazione of Terni, Italy, acting with and in support of combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, did, near Foligno, Italy, on or about 24 January 1944, wrongfully, unlawfully and contrary to the law of war, summarily kill S/Sgt Dale E. King, a member of the Military Forces of the United States of America by shooting him with a gun.

I. EVIDENCE

The submitted evidence indicates that an American aircraft, a B-26 of the 15th Air Force, 319th Group, while on a combat mission to Foligno, Italy, was disabled on the 19th of December 1943. The plane crashed about 12 miles from Lake Bolsena. Five members of the crew bailed out. S/ Sgt Dale E. King landed at Lake Bolsena, obtained civilian clothing and during the next ten days traveled to Foligno, Italy. King was in an exhausted condition because of lack of food, but the inhabitants of Foligno furnished him food and shelter until the 24th day of January 1944. On the 23rd of January 1944, a group of partisans entered the village of Foligno, arrested two civilians and executed them on the public square. The following morning about 80 Fascists from Terni and neighboring cities surrounded Foligno, ordered all men above the age of 16 years to the public square and searched the houses in the town. At that time the deceased Dale E. King was in the home of Domenico Matteucci. Matteucci led a patrol consisting of Roncaglia, Edoardo Lancia and two or three other members of the Fascist party to his home. King was in the house when Roncaglia and Lancia entered. The two of them fired several shots without warning. King dropped to the floor and died within a few minutes. The evidence is conflicting as to whether King was sitting in front of the fire, hiding behind a dresser or attempting to escape when shot. There is evidence that King had his hands up in token of surrender at the time, and all agree that he was shot without warning.

The missing air crew report of the 440th Sq., 319th Gp., 15th Air Force shows that a B-26 was disabled by enemy anti-aircraft fire in the vicinity of Lake Bolsena while on a mission to Foglingo, Italy, on 19 December 1943. There were six crew members, four of whom returned. Lt Walton R. Stewart, the pilot, was found near his plane and S/Sgt Dale E. King, radio gunner was listed as killed in action.

On or about 2200 hours on the 28th of December 1943, an American airman reached the village of Poline. He went to the house of Giovannelli Cesira where he was given food and then taken to the Town Hall. Many inhabitants were present and it was decided to take him to the home of Orsini, Calleramo, where he remained for 18 days. Being afraid to keep him longer, Orsini made arrangements for the transfer of the American airman to the home of Domenico Matteucci where he remained until the 24th of January 1944.

On the 23rd of January a group of partisans executed a Fascist lawyer, Orsini, Carlo, and a corporal, Combi, Francesco.

The Fascists at Terni, learning of the executions, organised an expedition to recover the bodies of the Fascists and to exact reprisal on the people of Poline for the execution. A group of 80 Fascists surrounded the village on the morning of 24 January 1944. Federale Coppo, Alberto, ordered all male citizens of Poline to assemble at the public square and that all houses in the village be searched. There is some conflict in the evidence as to his exact orders, that is, whether any man found would be shot or would be arrested and brought to the public square. The evidence, however, favors the latter view.

Tito Ronsaglia and Edoardo Lancia, Gaetano Pattaressi and Domenico Matteucci went to the Matteucci home. Ronsaglia opened the door, cried: "Stop!" and fired. The American airman fell to the floor. It appears that several shots were fired and that the American airman was unarmed at the time although Ronsaglia and Lancia state he had a knife in his hand and attacked them. Matteucci identified the knife and states that it is his knife and that the knife was behind a chest of drawers at the time.

The American airman's body was then taken to the public square and later in the day transported to Terni where he was buried in Plot No. 10, Row 5, Grave 180. The body was disinterred and reburied at US Military Cemetery at Nettuno, Italy, on 7 March 1946, as "Unknown American X-988."

The loss of two crew members of a B-26 near Lake Bolsena, Italy, on the 19th of December 1943 is shown by a certified copy of the Missing Air Crew Report. This fact is further confirmed by a certified statement of S/Sgt John L. Wagner, a tail gunner in #3 plane of #2 flight. S/SgtDale E. King was in Lt Steward's plane which was in #2 position. The arrival of an American airman in Poline, Italy, about 10 days after the plane crashed is shown by the statements of many witnesses. The fact that the American airman remained in Poline is p proven by the statement of Calleramo Orsini, Domenico Matteucci and Annaria Pellini, two of whom, at least, can identify S/Sgt Dale E. King from photographs supplied by his mother, Mrs. Bessie Jacobsen.

The accused admits being armed and being at the scene of the crime, but denies shooting S/Sgt Dale E. King, although he bragged to Giovanni Pittotti, Coppo Alberto and Don Francesco Bigioni that he had killed the American flier.

Domenico Matteucci was an eye witness to the killing of S/Sgt Dale E. King and states that the accused is solely responsible and that the deceased was not armed with a knife.

Gaetano Pattaressi saw the accused and Lancia Edoardo burst into Matteucci's home and heard the call "Surrender!" and at the same time several shots were fired.

Many witnesses will testify that they heard the shots; that the body of the American airman, who had been killed in the Matteucci home, was carried to the public square and was then transported to Terni.

Otello Ricceetti also saw the airman's body carried to the square. He placed the body on his truck and delivered it to the caretaker at the civilian cemetery in Terni. Alvin H. Hall, 1st Lt, Ord Dept, O-1566150, certifies that the records of Air Force Clearance Detachment show the following facts:

a. That he, Otello Ricceetti, placed the body in a truck and took it to the civilian cemetery in Terni and personally turned the body over to COLLEMAGGIO, Massimo, grave digger.

b. That COLLEMAGGIO, Massimo, Vicolo San Giuseppe 25, Terni, did bury the body in Grave No. 150, Block 20, Section 8, in the civilian cemetery in Terni.

c. That the body recovered in Terni and reburied in the US Military Cemetery of Nettuno, Italy, Plot E V, Row 24, Grave No. 6761 is the body of the murdered American.

The reburial report shows that the body buried in March had all teeth in perfect condition, no fillings or cavities.

A cable from the Adjutant General, Washington, D. C., states that the dental chart in S/Sgt Dale E. King's enlistment record indicated all teeth present.

II. COMMENT

This case was referred to this Command by letter dated 26 July 1947 from Headquarters, Mediterranean Theater Of Operations.

The evidence in the file is sufficient to establish a prima facie case. However, to obtain conviction, the Government will have to depend on Italian witnesses. Past experience has shown that Italians are reluctant to testify against a fellow countryman and more than three years have elapsed since the crime was committed thereby giving them an excuse to forget essential details of the crime.

This question presents itself: Under the Law of War, was a war crime committed?

The evidence shows that S/Sgt Dale E. King had bailed out from a disabled plane and landed in territory held by the enemy. Thirty-six days after he landed while he was in the home of Domenico Matteucci he was killed by the accused. There is no evidence that he was armed or attacked the accused except the accused's own statement and the statement of Lancia Edoardo who has not been apprehended. It can be safely said that S/Sgt Dale E. King was unarmed, offered no defense, was not attempting to run away when shot, but neither was he a prisoner of war. Article 23-b of the Annex of the Hague Convention, No. IV, 18 October 1907, provides as follows: It is forbidden "to kill or wound treacherously individuals belonging to the hostile nation or Army."

Paragraph c. of the same article provides that it is unlawful "to kill or wound an enemy who, having laid down his arms, or having no longer means of defense, has surrendered at discretion".

Paragraph d. of the same article provides that it is unlawful "to declare that no quarter will be given".

Oppenheim's International Law by Lauterpacht, at page 270, states: "But combatants may only be killed or wounded if they are able and willing to fight or to resist capture. Therefore, combatants disabled by sickness or wounds may not be killed. Further, such combatants as lay down their arms and surrender, or do not resist being made prisoners, may neither be killed nor wounded, but must be given quarter. These rules are universally recognized, and are now expressly enacted by Article 23 (c) of the Hague Regulations, although the fury of battle frequently makes individual fighters forget and neglect them".

According to the facts in the file, an American soldier has been unlawfully killed in violation of the [illegible] rule[illegible] enacted at the trial may show a cold-blooded murder or in such cases as [illegible]

III. RECOMMENDATION: [illegible]

Accordingly, it is [illegible] that the accused will be brought to trial by a "Military Commission" for a violation of the law of war in the killing of S/Sgt Dale E. King.

NUMBER 114) 23 September 1945

REGULATIONS FOR THE TRIAL OF WAR CRIMES

1. As used in these regulations the expression "war crime" means a violation of the laws or customs of war.

2. Military commissions appointed by the Theater Commander or by other commanders under authority delegated to them by the Theater Commander, shall have jurisdiction to try all cases referred to them of persons accused of committing war crimes.

3. A military commission shall consist of not less than three officers, the senior present at any trial being president. For each military commission there shall be appointed a judge advocate and a defense counsel with such assistants as may be required, whose duties shall be similar to those of like officers before general courts-martial.

4. The president of a military commission is empowered to appoint court reporters and interpreters who shall be entitled to such compensation as may be authorized by law and regulation.

5. A formal charge and investigation as provided for court-martial procedure is not required for military commissions. The charge may state the offense by its legal name or may describe it in terms of international law. The specification may in non-legal terms set forth the details of the act constituting the offense. It should also include expressions to enable the commission to determine its jurisdiction both in respect of the offense and the accused. The charges should be subscribed by any person subject to military law but need not be under oath.

6. Members of a military commission may be challenged for cause either by the accused or by the judge advocate, but they shall not be subject to removal upon a peremptory challenge.

7. The oaths prescribed by Article of War 19 for courts-martial shall be applied to military commissions, judge advocates, interpreters and witnesses with such modification as to make them appropriate to military commissions.

8. Military commissions may conduct their proceedings as may be deemed necessary for a full and fair trial, having regard for but not being bound by, the rules of procedure prescribed for general courts-martial.

9. The fact that an accused acted pursuant to order of his Government or of a superior shall not free him from responsibility, but may be considered in mitigation of punishment if the commission determines that justice so requires.

The military commission proceeded to the trial of Romolgio Tivo, an Italian national, who appeared before the military commission and was given the opportunity to introduce civil or military counsel of his own selection.

Prosecution: The accused is present in court, represented by the regularly appointed defense counsel and assistant defense counsel. Does [illegible] the accused desire to introduce as counsel? y.

Defense: The accused wishes to introduce as his counsel the regularly appointed defense counsel, Captain Frank H. Robinson, JAGD, and an Italian lawyer, resident in Livorno, by the name of Mario Lenzi, a regularly licensed advocate under the laws of Italy, and Captain O'Leary, the assistant defense counsel regularly appointed.

Prosecution: Does the accused desire to introduce another special defense counsel?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The accused states that he does not.

Marguerite B. [illegible] was then sworn as reporter.

Valentino D. Rocchio was then sworn as interpreter.

The Judge Advocate then announced the names of the members of the commission present and absent and the names of the accuser and the person who referred the case for trial.

Prosecution: A copy of the charges in this case was served on the accused on the 30th day of July 1947.

The general nature of the charges in this case is an alleged violation of the Law of War. The charges were preferred by William V. Cornett, First Lieutenant, AGD, Headquarters MTOUSA. The charges were referred for trial to Lieutenant Colonel Clyde W. Hailes, Infantry, Judge Advocate of the Military Commission appointed by Special Order No. 84, Paragraph 5, Headquarters First of Leghorn, by order of Colonel Ottinger, under indorsement dated 28 July 1947, which apparently is in proper form.

The judge advocate does not expect to call any members of the commission now present as witnesses in this case, nor is any member an accuser; the records in this case disclose no grounds for challenge. If any member of the commission is aware of any facts which he believes to be a ground for challenge by either side against any member, it is requested that he state such facts.

President: Apparently none.

Prosecution: The prosecution has no challenge for cause. Does the accused desire to challenge any member of the commission for cause?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The accused has no challenge for cause other than the overriding jurisdiction of the entire commission and this entire tribunal.

President: The objection is overruled.

Prosecution: The commission will be sworn.

The members of the commission and the personnel of the prosecution were then sworn.

Prosecution: Vito Ranauglio, I will now read the charge and specification under which you are about to be tried.

CHARGE: Violation of the law of war.

Specification: In that Ranauglio, Vito, then a member of the Fascist Federazione of Terni, Italy, acting with and in support of combatant forces of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, did, near Foligno, Italy, on or about 24 January 1944, wrongfully, unlawfully and contrary to the law of war, summarily kill S/Sgt Dale R. Haig, a member of the Military Forces of the United States of America by shooting him with a gun.

The interpreter then read the charge and specification to the accused in Italian.

Prosecution: Before pleading, does the defense have any special pleas or motions to offer?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The defense enters a plea as to jurisdiction of this commission, contending that no war crime has been committed and objecting to the jurisdiction by this commission.

President: Subject to objection by any member of the commission, the objection of the defense is overruled.

Prosecution: Any further motion at this time?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): There are none at this time.

Prosecution: How does the accused Tito Ronzaglia plead to the specification and the charge?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the accused is relying on one of the rights as laid down in the Manual for Courts-Martial, which, as we understand it, augments the rules before this commission, and if this accused does not plead at all and thereby does not submit himself to the jurisdiction in any manner whatsoever, we rely on the fact that the commission will, according to the Manual for Courts-Martial, enter a plea of Not Guilty on behalf of the accused.

Prosecution: Does the accused refuse to plead?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The defense counsel has read into the record the position, in which he is asking that the commission enter a plea of Not Guilty, similar to our court-martial proceeding.

President: The commission will enter a plea of Not Guilty for the accused.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, the prosecution expects to prove that an American aircraft, a B-24, of the 15th Air Force, 319th Bomber Group, while on a combat mission to Foligno, Italy, was disabled on the 19th of December 1943. The plane crashed about twelve miles from Lake Bolsena. Five members of the crew bailed out. Staff Sergeant Dale E. King landed at or near Lake Bolsena. The evidence will show that Staff Sergeant King obtained civilian clothes and during the next ten days, traveled over the mountains to Palino, and arrived in Palino about the 29th of December 1943. At that time he was weak from hunger, exhaustion, and cold. He was taken to the home of Salleranan Orsini, where he remained until the 15th or 16th of January, 1944. At that time Mrs. Salleranan, fearing that his presence might have been discovered in her home, took him to the home of Domenico Matteucci. He lived in the home of Matteucci until the 24th day of January. On the 23rd day of January, the partisans descended on the little town of Palino and killed two Fascists in the town. There was an expedition organized at Terni to go to Palino. That expedition left Terni early in the morning of the 24th. The accused in this case was a member of that expedition. The expedition reached the little city of Palino, about 80 armed men. The town was surrounded. All male citizens over the age of 16 years were ordered to the public square, and patrols were sent out to see that everybody reported. The accused, Ronzaglia, and one Lancia, went towards the home of Matteucci. They had been informed that an American was hidden in Matteucci's home, and on the road to Matteucci's home they met him and threatened him that unless he divulged where the American was hidden they would kill him. Matteucci led them to his home. He opened the door. The American, Dale King, was sitting in front of the fire. The two men hollered, "Halt!" and shot at the same time. King was wounded, fell off his chair near the fire. Lancia, seeing that the American was wounded, said, "Don't shoot any more," but the accused in this case fired a third time into the body of the wounded American who was lying on the floor of the Matteucci home. King died in a few minutes, as he was being transported to the public square of Palino. He was transported to the public square wrapped in a blanket and lying on a ladder. After being taken to the public square, he was later transferred to Terni, where he was buried, and later the body was taken up by American military authorities and he was buried in an American cemetery.

Gentlemen, we expect to submit evidence to substantiate every word of that statement. It was a cowardly thing on the part of the accused to do, and if we prove these statements we will expect a conviction in this case.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Objection. The defense objects to the last statement and will let the Commission determine about the cowardly act. We object to the testimony of the judge advocate.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): We ask that the commission be admonished not to consider that part of—

President: The commission is admonished not to consider that last statement.

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution offers in evidence Missing Air Crew Report of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 1 for identification.

Defense: There is no objection.

Prosecution: May I read the pertinent parts to the commission?

President: It will be admitted and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 1.

(Prosecution's Exhibit 1 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution offers in evidence Prosecution's Exhibit 2 for identification, being a report of Lieutenant Malden R. Stewart's plane, which was missing, signed by John L. Wagner.

Defense: There is no objection.

Prosecution: No objection?

President: It will be admitted in evidence marked Prosecution's Exhibit 2.

(Prosecution's Exhibit 2 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

Prosecution: The prosecution calls as its first witness Orsini Calderaman.

Orsini Calderaman, Puline, a witness for the prosecution, was then brought into the courtroom, and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

Q. Do you recognize the picture of the airman as shown in Prosecution's Exhibit No. 7 for identification as being a picture of the airman that arrived at your home in November 1944 and remained there until some time in January 1945 [illegible]

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution now offers in evidence Prosecution's Exhibit No. 7 for identification.

Defense: You are offering just exhibit--the pictures?

Prosecution: At this time, the one identified by the witness.

Defense: There is no objection.

President: It will be admitted in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 7.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. I hand you Prosecution's Exhibit No. 4 for Identification and ask you do you recognize that photograph?
A. I recognize him as though he is there talking to me, but it has been forty years and I am old, and-but he wore a shirt; and he looks different in a khaki shirt. My wife supplied him.

Q. I now hand you Prosecution's Exhibit No. 5 for Identification and ask you if you recognize the picture shown there?
A. They are all the same.

Q. I now hand you Prosecution's Exhibits 5 and 6 and will get you to state whether or not the airman who stayed at your home is shown on those exhibits? If so, point him out.

Q. Will you mark--place an X--on the picture of the airman who was at your home in December 1943 and January 1944 on Exhibits 5 and 6?

Defense: There is no objection.

President: They will be accepted in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibits 3 to 6 inclusive.

Prosecution: You may have the witness.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): At this time the defense asks that all witnesses be retained for possible recall at any time during the trial. If that is done, at this time there are no questions of this witness.

President: All witnesses will be retained through the trial.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, subject to objection by the defense the prosecution now offers in evidence Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8, which consists of an affidavit by Mrs. Ruth V. Jacobsen, together with a series of photographs and an envelope. Objection?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, there is an objection to the introduction of these exhibits on the grounds of the fact that the exhibits are not sufficiently identified to show that the exhibits contained in the envelope are the exhibits shown to.

President: Objection by the defense is overruled; the document and the photographs will be admitted into evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8.

Prosecution: May I read the affidavit?

(Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8 was then read by the judge advocate.)

Prosecution: I'd like to ask this witness one more question.

A. Yes. His mother.

Q. The airman, then, told you that his mother was Italian?
A. Yes.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): There are no further questions.

Prosecution: Any questions by any member of the commission?

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Tucker:

Q. Did I understand that the Fascists brought this airman to your home?
A. The Fascists of Poline.

Q. Did I understand that this man told you his mother was Italian, or his father Italian?
A. His mother.

A. I kept him hidden--who could pay me?

President: No more questions by the commission; the witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Mateusz Ramunio, Poline, a witness for the prosecution, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. State your name.
A. Mateusz Ramunio.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Poline.

Q. Is that in Italy?
A. Yes.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Laborer.

Q. Where did you live in December 1943 and January 1944?
A. At Palina.

Q. Do you know Gallerstein Daniel?
A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him?
A. Since we were kids.

Q. Did Gallerstein Daniel bring a man to your home in January 1944?
A. Yes.

Q. When was that?
A. He was an American.

Q. What was his name, if you know?
A. I was never able to know his name.

Q. How long did he remain at your home?
A. From the evening of the 19th to the morning of the 24th, when they killed him.

Q. You mean the evening of the 19th of January 1944?
A. Yes, the 19th of January and the 24th of January.

Q. 1944?
A. 1944.

Q. I hand you here Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8 and will get you to state whether or not you recognize that man?
A. I have already said that I did recognize this man.

Q. Is that a picture of the man that Gallerstein Daniel brought to your home?
A. This is the man, but I do not distinguish these things, because I saw other photographs.

Defense: Will you let the record indicate what "these things" are?

Q. What do you mean by "these things"?
A. Those stripes here, because he was dressed in civilian clothes, but as far as the face is concerned it represents him.

Q. The stripes referred to being the service ribbons.
A. It seems that the others that I saw, other photographs that I saw, you can see him better. I believe this is he too.

Q. Referring to Prosecution's Exhibit 8-A.
A. It is hard to distinguish him in a photograph like this when I saw him in civilian clothes.

Prosecution: The witness is referring to Prosecution's Exhibit 8 (A).

Q. Do you distinguish the airman in that photograph?
A. I believe this is he. I believe this person represents him.

Q. Pointing to photograph marked 2--did anything unusual happen on the morning of January 24th, 1944?
A. When I awoke on the morning of 24 January 1944, I went out of my house--

Q. Just speak slowly and loudly so the defense can hear you.
A. --and I went about 20 or 30 meters when I met a squad of these Fascists or Republicans, whatever they were. Among these was a man dressed in civilian clothes, and he stopped in front of me and said, "Are you Matteucci, called Cumbelli?" and I answered, "Yes." "Where is the American?" "I don't know." And again he repeated to me, "Where is the American?" "I don't know." The third time he pointed the pistol to my breast and obliged me to say that the American was at my house. And then they followed me to my house, where I led them. When I was in front of the door of my house I opened the door, when--as soon as I opened the door--I had one on either side, one dressed in civilian clothes on the left and one dressed as a soldier on the right--they went forward in front of me, and they immediately saw the American on the right in front of the fire. As soon as--they hardly saw the American when they said, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom.

Q. Boom--do you mean they fired a shot?
A. They shot the pistol, shot toward the American. At the second shot, the American fell to the floor of my house. Then the soldier approached the American and said to the civilian, "He is wounded, we must take him as he is, we must not shoot," and he advanced another step and said, "We must kill him," and fired another shot.

Q. Who advanced another step?
A. The civilian, the man dressed in civilian clothes.

Q. Proceed.
A. As I withdrew, I left them in my house, and the soldiers, other soldiers, that were on the right, at the door and just outside, took me and brought me to the square and there I was guarded until the time they loaded us on trucks and took us away. After they had brought us away just a bit below the town called Palino they stopped, the trucks stopped, and then the civilian who had shot the American said, "Mr. Federale, we have killed the American; the man who was hiding him is here, here he is." What I continue?

Q. Do you know who the civilian was that entered your home and shot the American?
A. You mean the one I have just spoken of?

Q. That is correct.

Interpreter: He doesn't understand.

Defense: The defense asks that the original question be read back and re-interpreted.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness: After four and a half months that I had been in jail, and when I returned I heard from the warrant officer of the carabinieri that his name was Buonaglia.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Would you be able to recognise that man today?
A. No, because I only saw him once and I was frightened and I do not feel that today I can recognise the person.

Q. Will you look around the courtroom and see if you recognise that man?
A. They can bring him here, but as I say and repeat, I don't feel that I can recognise the man. I am unable to recognise the man.

Q. Will you stand up and look around the courtroom and see if you can recognise the man?
A. I can also look around the court, but during the investigations the questura took me to a place where there were prisoners and they had me look around and I was not able to recognise the man.

Q. Will you stand up and look around the courtroom and see if you recognise him?
A. I don't recognise anyone (complying).

Q. How far is your home from the public square in Palma?
A. About 100 meters or so.

Q. Will you describe the room in which the American airman was sitting?
A. We have already described it yesterday morning.

President: Tell him he do as he is told to do.

Interpreter: What, sir?

President: Tell him to answer your question.

Interpreter: He doesn't understand.

President: Repeat the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness: We can write it down.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Before writing it down, was there a window in front of this house?
A. My house?

Q. Yes.
A. No.

Q. Where was the fireplace in your house?
A. As soon as you go in the door of my house, it is on the right.

Q. Where was the American airman that was killed sitting with reference to the fireplace?
A. This is the road that goes to my house (indicating). This is the door of my house (indicating). This is the door of my house that opens. This is the fireplace (indicating). Here is the wall. Here is the wall of the room. This is the corridor that goes to the fireplace in the kitchen.

Q. Just a minute. Was the airman sitting in front of the fireplace?
A. Yes, in front of the fireplace.

Q. What other furniture was in the room?
A. There was the bread box, the table, and other things that are needed in the kitchen.

Q. Had the American airman armed?
A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, during the course of the day, and before you were taken to jail, see a knife or a dagger?
A. When this man that had shot the American came down to the square and he carried that small dagger, he said, "Do you see what the American had? This dagger. This is a French-type dagger."

Q. Had you ever seen that dagger before?
A. I have not seen this dagger since the first of January, as I have already said.

Q. Where was the dagger on the first of January?
A. As I have already once said, I used to keep this knife in the drawers, in the small drawers, of the bread box, and looking for some objects which are in the drawers I placed it on top of the bread box, and then my wife, looking for something, was opening the lid of the box, made the dagger go down behind.

Q. To whom did that dagger belong?
A. That dagger was in my house ever since my father was still living.

Q. Was the dagger bright and shiny, or tarnished?
A. I don't know, because this dagger had a tin sheath.

Q. How long was the dagger?
A. It could have been from 15 to 20 centimeters.

Q. How long was the blade?
A. That's all, the whole length of it.

Q. How large was the room in which the American airman was sitting at the time he was shot?
A. About six and a half by four meters.

Q. Did you later see the American airman after he was shot in your home?
A. I saw him when they brought his body to the square.

Q. How did they carry the body from your house to the square?
A. With a ladder, the quilt of my bed and a woolen blanket, and they brought him to the square. Then they loaded him on a truck and took him to Borni.

Prosecution: You may have the witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. Did you talk with the American soldier at all?
A. Yes.

Q. What language did you speak to him?
A. I said a word or so, because I had been in America.

Q. How much time have you spent in America?
A. Three times.

Q. How long did you stay in America the first time?
A. I went in 1914 and came back in 1915 or 1916, when the war was going on in Italy.

Q. About how many months or years, total, did you stay in America?
A. 40 or 50 months, in all.

Q. Did the American that remained in your home tell you what was his World stock?
A. He told me he was of Italian descent. He said his father was an Italian, of Italian descent--his father was of Italian descent.

Q. Did he tell you where his father was born?
A. He told me that he was in California, but did not tell me anything about his father.

Q. Is it a matter of your knowledge whether his father came from Italy?
A. I do not know. He told me that his father was of Italian descent.

Q. Will you describe to the commission how the American that stayed in your home appeared, as to whether he was dark of skin?
A. Fairly rather dark-complexioned,

Q. Calling your attention now to the time a man in civilian clothes put a pistol at your chest, will you describe that man, first telling me how old you thought he was?
A. According to his features, from 27--28 or 30 years of age.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): No further questions at this time.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by president:

Q. Do you remember if the American had a moustache?
A. He did not have a moustache.

Q. What about the civilian--do you remember the civilian, if you can recall--do you remember if the civilian had a moustache or not?
A. I did not stop to look to see if he had a moustache or not.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. This American who was shot in your home by this Italian civilian--did the American have his back toward the man who did the shooting at the time he was shot?
A. No.

Q. Where was the American shot from?
A. May I illustrate, may I show you in what position he was?

Q. Yes.
A. This is the door of my house, right in front of me (indicating). You go this way to go toward the fireplace (indicating).

Defense: Let the record show that the witness is indicating that as you enter the house you turn to the right.

Witness: And when you go down, the fireplace is this way (indicating) and the American was sitting this way, because the fireplace was in this direction (indicating).

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. When the American was sitting in the position as you have indicated, was the door of your house to his rear or to his side or in front of him?
A. Like this--when I opened the door in front, there is the wall of the other room. You go to the right, and on the right is the fireplace. When you go into the room, on the right is found the fireplace.

Q. Did the American do anything, such as trying to escape, at the time he was shot?
A. No, he was shot and he fell to the floor. I was the ground I opened [illegible] and I was [illegible].

Questions by Col. Rhoda:

Q. What part of his body did the bullet hit?
A. In the right side.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. Let the record so indicate, indicating the right and back.
A. Because he was in this position, and therefore he was shot on this side.

Defense: May it please the commission, I believe the witness indicated side.

Capt. Young: All right, have him stand up here again and indicate where this boy was shot.

Q. Was the [illegible] of you gun or out of the gun?
A. Witness (indicating): Right there, on this side.

Capt. Young: Let the record indicate the right side, to the rear.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Let him point exactly on my body. (To witness:) Put your finger on the spot.

Witness: I cannot say where exactly the shots hit, but I know it is on this side.

Defense (Lieutenant): Pardon me--the interpreter has forgotten something. He said, "I cannot say"--the witness said, "I cannot say where he was hit because I didn't look at him, at his wounds."

[illegible]

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the special defense counsel is a university graduate and understands Italian thoroughly and fluently. The defense has been careful not to disturb this commission, but there are numerous small places where the interpretation is not satisfactory, and this is one of them; so we insist upon this particular interpretation being correct, and the commission has heard--the special defense counsel has stated that this witness says that he does not know the spots where the bullets actually struck.

Presentation: I think that was the interpretation of the official court interpreter.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, I think it would clear this whole thing if the court will ask this witness is the witness assuming or did the witness see the wounds upon the victim.

President: Very well.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness: No.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Which is no, he did not see the wounds, or no, he did not assume?

Witness: I did not see them.

Questions by president:

Q. Did you see any blood?
A. No, because as soon as I--as soon as he fell to the ground I was--I backed up and I was brought to the square.

Q. Did you hear the American make any remark--did he say anything when he was shot?
A. No, Sir, because when the Fascists took me away from there they brought me to the square and they guarded me--I was not able to move--then I was loaded on the truck.

Q. How many shots were fired?
A. I heard three.

Q. Did you see who fired the shots?
A. As I have already said, as soon as these two went into the house, as soon as I opened the door when these two saw the American--"Hali"--boom--"Hali"--boom.

Q. Were the shots fired out of one gun or out of two guns?
A. I heard the first two shots together and the other alone.

Q. The one that you heard by itself, who fired?
A. The man dressed in civilian clothes.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. When the third shot was fired was the American lying on the floor of your house?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whether he was lying face down or face up?
A. Like that (indicating).

President: Let the record show that when the last shot was fired the man was facing down.

Defense: Halfway--

President: On the side.

Questions by Major Lozano:

Q. Did those shooting call "Hali" in English or Italian?
A. Italian.

Q. When the civilian fired the third shot, did he approach the American before he shot?
A. As I have already said, before shooting he advanced one step, about, and fired the third shot.

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. How far was the pistol from the airman when he fired the third shot?
A. From here to there (indicating).

Defense: Let the record show about six feet.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Q. You previously testified that the soldier in uniform made a statement about the Americam being wounded, is that right?
A. Where is the wounded? He was wounded after they shot.

Q. You made a statement that the soldier in uniform said, "He is wounded, we must take him"?
A. Yes.

Q. And then you made a statement that the man in civilian clothes made a statement that he must kill him, is that right?
A. Yes.

Q. Then you have testified that the man in civilian clothing fired all three shots?

Prosecution: Objection. That is not the testimony.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robiseau): You testified that the civilian--the man in civilian clothing--fired the first shots.

Prosecution: Objection again--he testified two shots were fired at the same time, or approximately the same time.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robiseau):

Q. I ask you this question--who fired the shots?
A. The two whom I have already said, the two who stopped me and came to my house and who were one on each side of me when I opened the house.

Q. Did you see the man in uniform shoot at all?
A. Yes.

Q. What did he shoot with?
A. With a pistol.

Q. Did the man in uniform shoot with a pistol?
A. Yes.--No, the civilian.

Q. The civilian. Then did the civilian fire all of the shots?
A. The first two shots, when they entered the house--they said, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom, when they entered. They said, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom.

Q. I ask you to carefully tell the court who fired the shots.
A. When I opened the house and these two advanced, one on my right and one on my left, the soldier on the right and the civilian on the left. I opened the house and they advanced. As soon as they turned there, turned their eyes toward the fireplace, I heard, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom.

Q. I ask you now specifically did the civilian fire all of the shots?
A. I can say that the last shot was fired by the civilian.

Q. Who was the first shot fired by?
A. I cannot say whether it was the one on the left or the one on the right who shot first.

A. I did not see him.

Q. All right. I ask you now, do you know how the man in uniform was armed?
A. The soldier?

Q. What weapon did the soldier carry?
A. I could not see what weapons the soldier carried.

Q. But did you see the weapon the civilian carried?
A. I saw that the civilian was carrying a pistol, because he pointed it to my breast.

Q. What is the same pistol the civilian pointed to your breast out in the street a few moments before?
A. I don't know if it was that one or another one.

Q. Did the civilian point a pistol at your breast in your house?
A. Yes.--No, not in my house, outside where they stopped me.

Q. Did you see a pistol in the hands of the civilian in your house?
A. He was holding it in his hands while we were going up to the door of the house.

President: The commission will take a ten-minute recess.

The commission then took a recess for ten minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution, the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats. The witness who was on the stand at the time the recess was taken resumed his seat and through the interpreter was admonished that he was still under oath.

Questions by defense (Capt. Rubiosen):

Q. I ask you now that you have had a recess, time to refresh your memory, whether you recall definitely who fired all three shots in your house.
A. I have said that as soon as I have opened the door and they advanced--as soon as they have opened the door of the house, they said, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom. But I did not see, I did not hear, which of the two it was. I only heard, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom.

Q. I will ask you one more time, now--did you see the soldier shoot any shot?

Prosecution: If the commission please, we object. This has been repeated and repeated and repeated.

Defense (Capt. Rubiosen): May it please the commission--

President: Objection over ruled.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): I did not see him, I only heard the words, "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom. Then the soldier went to the American and saw that he was wounded.

Defense (Capt. Robleson): There are no further questions.

Prosecution: Any further questions from members of the Commission?

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Col. Sparr:

Q. Was there anyone else in the room?
A. You mean outside of these people?

President: Outside of yourself and the American.

Col. Sparr: Outside of yourself and the people that you came in with and the American.

Witness: There was nobody else when we entered.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robleson):

Q. Was there anyone outside of your house while the shooting was going on inside?
A. No one belonging to my house was in there, because my wife had left with my daughter. My wife and my daughter had left.

Q. Were there any soldiers or Fascisti outside your house during the time the shooting was going on?
A. Yes.

Q. How many?
A. Seven, eight, or ten--I did not count them.

Q. Were they armed?
A. Yes, they were armed.

Q. Were there any civilians standing in front of your house while the shooting was going on?
A. I do not know. I could not see this, because I just--I could not see this. When we went to the house there were already soldiers standing outside the house.

Q. And how many civilians total were in the group?
A. I only saw that one. I cannot state of others.

Defense (Capt. Robleson): There are no further questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Loewus:

Q. Were there any windows in your kitchen?
A. Yes, one, opposite the fireplace.

Q. Opposite the fireplace? Answer yes or no.
A. Yes, one.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. The one window in your house was at the back of the house, is that correct?
A. No, it was frontways. That corresponds to the side the town is on.

Q. With reference to the steps into the kitchen, what side of the kitchen was the window on?
A. These are the steps. This is the door. The fireplace is here and the window is opposite the fireplace (indicating).

Q. And also opposite the steps, is that correct?
A. No. The steps are here, the fireplace is here, and the window is there (indicating).

Prosecution: No further questions. May the witness be excused?

President: The witness will be excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Prosecution: The prosecution calls as its next witness Alberto Ceppo.

Ceppo Alberto, Foligno, a witness for the prosecution, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. What is your name?
A. Ceppo Alberto.

Q. Where do you live?
A. At Foligno.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Professor in letters.

Q. What was your occupation in January, 1944?
A. Federal commissary of the Federazione--of the Fascist Federazione--of Terni.

Q. What was your rank?
A. Sergeant in the Republican Guard.

Q. Do you know the accused in this case, Tito Romaglia?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out?
A. There (indicating).

Prosecution: Let the record show that the witness has pointed out the accused, Tito Romaglia.

Q. Was the accused a member of your organization in January 1944?
A. In January 1944 the accused was a soldier in the Republican Guard, and was detached with his officers for my command.

Q. Was Italy allied with Germany at that time?
A. In that period I belonged to the Republican Government of Salon, which said that Italy was allied to Germany.

Q. Your organization, then, was serving as an ally of Germany at that time, is that correct?
A. It is correct if we ourself we consider that we were an ally of Germany in a war, but we did not depend from Germany as it, because of the impression I had.

Q. Was there any unusual happening on or about January 24, 1944?
A. If you refer to the death of an American soldier and the reason for which we are here, yes; otherwise, I know of no other event.

Q. Where were you stationed at that time?
A. I was at Parma.
Q. Did you go to Poline on 24 January 1944?
A. Yes.
Q. How many men went with you?
A. I cannot know the exact number of the men. I cannot know, because they depended from companies of the Guard, Republican Guard, and I don't know how many soldiers there were, and the same for those of the police--I don't know how many there were. But I do not believe the number could be more than 80 or 90.

Q. What time did your force arrive at Poline?
A. I never looked at my watch that day. I believe, however, that it may have been about nine, half-past nine, or ten o'clock.

Q. In the morning?
A. In the morning.

Q. What did you do after you arrived at Poline?
A. The first thing I did when I went to Poline was to visit the family of the dead Fascists.

Q. Where did you then go?
A. Then I went to the square of the town, where we had the order to assemble all the men over 16.

Q. Who gave that order?
A. That order was concerted upon the night before between the military and administrative authorities. But I must add there was the German liaison officer present. He was an Italian in liaison with the German command who had brought from the German command an order for reprisal, but the Italian officers, Prefect Faustini, Lieutenant Colonel Romanni, and at that time myself, the Federale, we obtained that reprisals be not taken, but that only the military position of the men eligible for the Army be examined. Therefore, in the morning that order was repeated by the officers to the men, and it may be that to somebody who may have asked me I confirmed that order.

Q. Did you see the body of an American soldier brought to the square in the city of Poline?
A. I received the news that a man had been killed and that this man was an American. I went to see him, and I met a few men who were carrying him wrapped up in blankets and carried on a ladder that is used to go up on trees. The body was placed on the ground. I did not uncover the body, so that it would not get wet. I believe he was wounded on the left side; he probably had some blood in his mouth. I saluted the body, I recited for them a Catholic prayer, and I ordered that he be brought with the dead Fascists.

Q. Did you see the accused Vito Romaglia at the point where you saw the man carrying the American soldier on a ladder?
A. I did not see him at that point, but I saw him a step or so after, at the entrance to the town. I had the impression that he was dismounted [illegible]
Q. Did you at that time speak to Romaglia or did he make a report to you?
A. Romaglia was not in a condition to make a complete report, or else I did not think--I did not believe--to have him make it, because of the impression I had.
Q. Did the accused Romaglia say anything to you at that time?
A. As far as I know, at that time he repeated the words, "I killed him. I killed him."

Q. Do you know whether or not Romaglia was referring to the dead American when he said, "I killed him"?
A. Probably he was referring to the dead American, but I have not the absolute certainty that he was calm and that he was sure of what he was saying.
Q. At that time was Romaglia following the men who were carrying the body of the dead American by the square?
A. When I spoke to Romaglia, the American, the dead American, was no longer there. He had already been put down [illegible]
Q. There?
A. He was placed on a low wall to wait for the jeep to be found in order to place him with the rest. I don't know if Romaglia then followed the body.
Q. Was the American the only man killed by your forces in Paliano on the morning of January 30th?
A. Certainly.
Q. Did you later talk to Romaglia about this incident?
A. Later, yes.

Q. Did he at that time confirm the statement that he had made at Paliano to you regarding the killing of the American?
A. Yes.

Prosecution: You may take the witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. Were you present in the house of Matteucci at the moment in which the American soldier had been shot?
A. No.

Q. When Romaglia was sitting--just after the killing of the American soldier, when you saw him for the first time--when he stated, "I killed him, I killed him," what were the emotional conditions of Romaglia at that time?
A. A man who underwent a nervous shock.

Q. Do you know well the character of Romaglia?
A. Certainly.

Q. What type of soldier was he?
A. A soldier who bragged very much but very much afraid.

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): I have compared the English translation with the Italian text signed by the witness. Notwithstanding the fact that it is not a very literal translation, I may accept it, because the meaning is corresponding.

President: It will be admitted in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 9.

(Prosecution's Exhibit No. 9 was then read by the Judge Advocate.)

Questions by prosecution:

Q. All you know about what happened at the house of Matteucci where the American was killed is what you have heard, is that correct?
A. Certainly.

Prosecution: No further questions.

RE CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. You said that you remembered seeing two weapons on the body of Romaglia, the pistol and the Mitra, but you said that you don't remember if he was dressed in civilian or military clothes, just like somebody that says, "I remember the frame of the picture, but I don't remember the picture."

Q. Did anyone else in the presence of the accused make such a statement to you?
A. I have never had occasion.

Q. Did anyone report to you that prior to the death of the Americans they learned that there was an American hiding in one of the houses of the city?
A. It is certain that no one before the time that I knew that there was a dead man—no one had told me that there was an American at Paline.

Q. Did the party that returned from Mahmoud's home tell you that they had learned that there was an American there before they went to the home?
A. The crowd that was in Mahmoud's house did not come to me, but a soldier came in the town hall to tell me that a man had been killed.

Q. I hand you a paper dated 8 May 1945 and ask you whether or not that is your signature.
A. Yes.

Prosecution: I now offer in evidence, subject to objection by the defense, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8 for identification, a statement made by the witness on the stand in Italian, together with the English translation thereto.

Defense (Mr. Lamar): I would like to verify the translation in English is properly made.

President: The examination will take a five-minute recess.

The Commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter, and the interpreter resumed their seats. The witness who was on the stand at the time the recess was taken resumed his seat and was admonished through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding.

Q. Can you tell the commission something that you know that has happened before this episode in Folino that will show to the commission the type of soldier that Ronsaglia was?
A. I can remember an episode before and an episode afterwards. The first one--a few of his companions commanded with him to escort a truck convinced him that there were partisans around. They made him lay on the roof of the truck with his automatic rifle ready. One of the soldiers from behind shot a round from a pistol on the barrel of the automatic rifle and Ronsaglia discharged all of the rounds from the rifle and later declared that he had seen partisans in front of him escape and hide under a small bridge.

Q. Excuse me, was that correct, that the partisans were there and escaped under the small bridge?
A. There were no partisans in the area. Another episode personally occurring between myself and Ronsaglia: After the occupation of Rome, I was then on a military mission. Ronsaglia, speaking of myself, had said that I was afraid. So I said to an officer that at the first occasion when I would be coming back I would show the contrary. So to the officer I said that I would provoke a duel between myself and Ronsaglia, that I would not have shot and that I would have myself shot upon from 20 meters away by Ronsaglia. Ronsaglia was approached by me in the yard of a tavern at Tormini on the Lake of Garda, and he was challenged to a duel without anybody else hearing it. I told him to go get his pistol and to come, without having anyone see him, on the field. He understood, said to a friend of his and mine that he did not know whether I would shoot or not, that he had been challenged by me. This friend then wanted the duel to cease, just as Ronsaglia wished. But the officer was notified by me and scared Ronsaglia to accept the duel, and Ronsaglia did not want to come. So with a hand he touched him very lightly--I did not see well, whether it was a hand or the tip of a foot. One thing is certain, Ronsaglia threw himself to the ground, accusing violent pains, and a friend of ours, a doctor, was called to visit him and found no trace whatsoever of blows on his breast, but Ronsaglia was sick for three days.

Q. In your opinion Ronsaglia is a man that is able to shoot somebody?
A. I do not think that Ronsaglia is able to shoot a man if this man is in front of him.

Q. Did you ever hear that the American soldier that was killed in Folino had in his hands a stiletto?
A. Yes. Everybody, from the very first day, said that he had a dagger; Ronsaglia as well as all the others that were witnesses said that this dagger existed. I, in the Town Hall of the town, saw a dagger being brought on the table, a wallet, an identification tag, a dagger. This dagger was certainly not one in use in the Italian Army forces.

Q. When I asked you before had he a dagger, you mean the American soldier--you understand that I meant the American soldier?
A. I was of the opinion that you were referring to the American soldier.

Q. When you answered me, then, he had a dagger?
A. That is what was told me and that is what I must believe.

Q. And do you mean the American soldier in the house?
A. That is what I was told.

Q. Do you mean that the American soldier who was killed in the house of Folino on January 24, 1944, had a dagger?
A. That is what I was told by the officers who were present. This was stated to me by Ronsaglia, who declared that this American was throwing himself, with the dagger raised, against the soldiers.

Q. As far as you know, there is nobody who gave the particular order to arrest an American soldier in the house?
A. No one gave that specific order.

Q. Or is it possible that when themilitiamen appeared in the house they didn't know that an American was there?
A. It is possible, because all of us that day, before the death took place, did not know that there was an American at Poline.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Looms:

Q. Did you see the American's wounds--just answer yes or no.
A. No, not well.

Q. Did you see them at all?
A. I just barely saw them, because it was raining, the soldier was covered, and I did not want to uncover him completely.

Q. How was the accused dressed that day?
A. I do not remember that day how the accused was dressed, because the accused had the privilege of dressing for his duties--of dressing either in civilian clothes or in uniform.

Q. You saw the accused--did you see the accused in the village square?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now think hard. See if you can remember how he was dressed.
A. I do not know the exact impression of how the soldier was dressed in that moment, because I had a general--my general spiritual state was I was preoccupied.

Q. Were you in charge of the expedition?
A. I did not have the military command of the expedition.

Q. Did you have the political command?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your mission?
A. To retrieve the bodies of the two dead Fascists.

Q. Was anything said about the capture of an American soldier?
A. Never did I know before the death of this man that there was an American soldier in the area.

Major Looms: That's all the questions I have.

Questions by president:

Q. The day you saw the accused, when he told you, "I killed him, I killed him," was anybody else killed on that day there besides the American?
A. No.

Q. What did he mean when he said, "I killed him, I killed him"?
A. I said that I believe that in that moment Romagnia referred to the dead man.

Q. Who was the dead man?
A. The dead man was he who was said to be an American soldier.

Questions by Major Imbrey:

Q. What name was registered on the identification tag which you accepted in the public office?
A. I saw the identification card, or tags I could not read them—I did not read the written matter, or could not read it. But certainly I would not remember [illegible]

Q. Where is that tag now?
A. Present was the chief of the province, the German liaison officer—a German officer—and an Italian officer, liaison officer with the Germans.

Q. Never mind.
A. I do not know. Into the custody of each of these three persons it was given.

Questions by president:

Q. Did you state to this commission here that the duties of the accused were of such nature that he could be dressed either in civilian or military clothing?
A. Yes.

Q. You don't remember whether he was dressed in civilian or military clothes the day the American aviator was killed?
A. I absolutely do not remember.

Q. It could have been either of the two?
A. It could have been one or the other.

Questions by Major Imbrey:

Q. Did you say that your mission that day was to retrieve the bodies of two dead Fascists?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you say that your mission was to register the men of military age in that area?
A. That was not my special mission, because that is a military mission. [illegible]

Q. That was a part of the mission of the military commandant [illegible]
A. Of the military commander of all the police [illegible]

Q. Was that the only reason that the men were assembled in the public square?
A. Most surely. [illegible]

Q. You had no advance information that there was an American in Tolmin?
A. Absolutely not. [illegible]

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution: [illegible]

Q. How was the accused armed when he said, "I have killed him, I have killed him"?
A. The accused had an automatic rifle and a pistol [illegible]

Q. Did the accused inform you that while they were searching the village they were informed that an American was hiding in one of the houses?
A. The accused never made a specific report to me, because the relations between myself and the accused were those [illegible] directly to me, or in my presence directed to others, he always declared only this part of the version, that a soldier armed with a dagger launched himself toward him.

CONFIDENTIAL

A. One thing is certain, however, that I knew, and I always knew, that--correctly that--Capt[illegible] Ronnaglia carried, therefore when I said I saw, for me it is just like saying I know.

Q. Then you refer to the past tense, that you were saying about Ronnaglia in the actual moment in which you observed Ronnaglia after the killing of the American soldier?
A. That day I was too preoccupied with other things to fix my eyes on the individual forthimself, so much so that when I saw Ronnaglia again--that is, a battle was initiated with the German officer to defend the population, which had immediately to be executed.

Q. Therefore you could not swear by God that at that moment Ronnaglia was with two weapons on his body?
A. I cannot seriously swear that in that moment he had two weapons on him, but I always believe that he had two, because I know that he had personally distributed to him an automatic rifle and a pistol.

Q. Then it is a supposition of yours?
A. Certainly. I would like to point this out--it isn't a precise photograph made with my eyes.

Q. Can you tell the commission what happened in Poline the day before the killing of the American soldier on January 23rd, 1944?

Prosecution: Objection to that question. What happened in Poline on the day before has no bearing, is irrelevant and immaterial on the killing of this--

President: Objection overruled.

Questions by defense (Mr. Lamre):

Q. Describe the facts as you heard them from the son of Lawyer Orsini on the 24th of January 1944.
A. I have already described them in a newspaper article which bears my signature under a pseudonym. The name of the paper is Prima Linea, which means Front Line. It was narrated to me that partisans surprised Lawyer Orsini while he was at home immediately after having had his dinner, and with his son, who was very young, a few years old.--Would the court excuse me, because Lawyer Orsini was my friend.--and with the child--they were enjoying the birth of a rabbit, small rabbit, that the child was raising in the kitchen, for fear of the rat. Lawyer Orsini was made to go on the second floor of the house, his house was looted of all it contained, and then with his hands tied he was brought to the square of the town. The eldest daughter followed the father, and when the father was killed, or, rather, when the father fell after the first burst, the little girl threw herself down on the father. A partisan brushed her away and finished off the man with a burst in the head. This is all.

Q. Were these things the things that often were made by the partisans in the region of Terni?
A. In the area of Terni, following this incident, since Orsini was the first man to be killed, three other persons were killed whom I knew and remember in worse conditions, under worse circumstances, because they were completely undressed and killed, rather than by firearm shots, with feet and with stones. But we knew by reports which were obtained that in the area near to us a little while before many incidents of this nature had come about, and if I remember correctly, a whole garrison, surprised while at supper in a mountainous zone, was killed, pulled apart, and taken the genital parts and placed in the mouths of the dead. However, in the area of Berni, truly, only those four cases of fury, and one or two others killed by execution. Some of those partisans that were killed were not Fascists.

President: The commission will adjourn until 9:45 tomorrow morning.

Q. Did the German officer direct that all male persons over 16 years of age had to assemble in the public square of Police and that those who had been found
A. In the houses after such an order the given had to be killed on the spot?
A. I do not know if to the military commands something similar was ever said. I think that I have never ordered or confirmed any similar thing regarding the military personnel. However, to the people I said this, that anyone who remained in the house would be, could be, subject to execution.

Defense (Mr. Lamers): At this present time the defense counsel has no other questions for the witness, but he reserves to question him again.

A. Why should I defend myself?
Q. [illegible] do you know
Q. Do you know if this order was given to the soldiers to act in self-defense if they were molested by anybody?

A. (cont.) We went there with weapons to defend ourselves.

Q. You have said that not all orders of a military character were known to you. Do you infer that the military did report some orders to you?
A. I don't know if other military orders were given that day, but I know of these orders that were commented upon together in my office.

Q. Were you in a position that you could issue orders through the military?
A. I had the duty of counsel to the military authorities and I could request them to act in this or that other sense when I thought it opportune, but if I had ever ordered anything that was in contrast with superior military orders, it was certain that I would not have been obeyed. I could advise, give advice, to the military commander, but the military command acted as it thought best. I could report to my superiors in such a way that the military commander could be reproached, but the commander could in any hour of the day or the night arrest me.

Defense (Mr. Laure): For the moment, the defense counsel has no questions.

Prosecution: No further questions.

President: The witness will be excused.

Q. Where did you find the dagger?

President: (To witness) Was it tarnished?

Witness: It was neither tarnished nor shiny.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Did you in your official capacity as a captain make any inquiry as to what had happened?
A. I asked how they had killed this American.

Q. What were you told?
A. It resulted that the American was said to have hidden behind the engineers and that he launched himself, he sprung, toward the soldiers, and that the soldiers naturally to defend themselves shot, fired, because the distance that separated the soldiers from the American was very short.
Q. Who reported these facts to you?
A. The soldiers who were present.
Q. Who were these soldiers?
A. Private Lonzio, Ronsaglia, and Bolei.
Q. Did Private Ronsaglia tell you that he had fired at the American?
A. Anyhow, the soldiers told me that it should have been--it was Ronsaglia who was to have fired and Ronsaglia, perhaps hoping to gain a promotion, did not deny this.

Q. Did Ronsaglia tell you that he had fired at the American?
A. Later he also stated that.
Q. When? Was it when you returned or went down to that house where the American was?
A. When we were in the town.
Q. In the town of Foline?

Q. How much later?
A. About 5 or 6 minutes afterwards, something like that.
Q. Where? In what part of the town, in the square?
A. In the town, along the street--I don't remember exactly where.
Q. Who was present at that time?

Q. Who was your commander?
A. My commander was Lieutenant Colonel Romanni, but in that moment he was not in the town and that moment I was under the orders of the Prefect, Fenstini.
Q. Was the fact that an American soldier was hidden in the town known to you or to your men prior to the shooting?
A. No, before we went up there we did not know that there was an American there. A few women told it to the soldiers. A few women of the town told it to the soldiers, and the soldiers went out to look for him.

President (to witness): You mean a few women of the town told what to the soldiers?

Witness: That in a certain house there was an American.
Questions by prosecution:
Q. Do you know what orders were issued to those soldiers?
A. No specific order. I did not give any specific order, but there was a very general order that said that all the men were to be assembled in the square of the town. As a matter of fact, there was the order not to fire unless there was an aggression.

Q. Where were the women when they reported an American soldier hidden in the town?
A. They were there in the town, and they just told them like that without even stopping.
Questions by president:

Q. Was that in the square, in the city square, after you arrived in Foligno?

A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what uniform, or what organization that uniform which Romaglia was wearing represented?
A. It represented the uniform, but Romaglia— the other soldiers.

A. No.
President (to interpreter): Finish his answer.

Questions by president:

Q. Where was the accused wounded, what part of the body was he shot in--I mean the deceased?
A. I did not make this exact observation, but in the moment I tried to see if there was anything to do that aided him and because all the clothing was bloody it was not easy to ascertain exactly where the wounds were.

Q. Therefore you cannot testify before this commission that the deceased was shot in front or in the rear or on the side?
A. Since the [illegible] saw the blood on the front--I must conclude that he was wounded on the front.

A. I could not--I did not observe that, because I concerned myself with seeing if I could do something for the wounded man.

Q. Was the cabinet directly across the room from the door? [illegible]
A. No. Here is the door, and there is the cupboard, and here is the fireplace (indicating). [illegible] I don't know if there were any [illegible] present, dealing with the present, because the prefect came later.

A. We were in the barracks at night. Lieutenant Antonucci came, and he said that we were to depart, but we did not know where we were to go to at the time.

Q. What did you do?
A. But instead of leaving that night we left the day after. He returned at about five o'clock or half-past five.

Q. In the morning or afternoon?
A. In the morning.

Q. What day?
A. I don't remember whether it was Saturday morning or Sunday morning. It was Saturday or Sunday, but I believe it was Sunday.

Q. January 24th, 1944?

Defense (Mr. Laure): The witness--what did he say, Sunday or Saturday? I understood in Italian Sunday or Monday.

Witness: I don't remember exactly whether it is Saturday or Sunday.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Was that January 24th 1944 when you left?
A. Yes, in the morning.

Q. Where did you go?
A. We went toward Poline.

Q. When did you arrive at Poline?
A. It may have been eight o'clock or half past eight--I do not know exactly.

Q. In the morning?
A. In the morning.

Q. Who was in command?
A. I was commanded by Captain Moscani, but then there were others that were commanded by the Federation. They were considered--they were in the Federation, and we were in the barracks.

A. I wore gray-green clothes.

Q. Were you armed?

A. We went into the town.

Q. Did you hear any shots fired?
A. When we were about 30 or 40 meters approximately from a house.

A. The old man wasn't there--there was a certain Lancia, a certain Ronsaglia, and there was also another one called Pattarozzi, but he was dressed in civilian clothes--I don't know if he was there; he usually dressed in civilian clothes, I don't know if he was there. But I found only Ronsaglia and Lancia there, and that's all.

Major Loomis: Will you have that last answer read back, please?

(The question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Major Loomis: Sir, will you straighten that out?

Questions by prosecution:

Q. How many and who were in the room when you entered?
A. I saw only two.

Q. Who were they?
A. As far as I am concerned, I saw Lansia and I saw him I believed to be Ronsaglia, but I only saw him 3 or 4 times in all, and I probably would not recognize him if I saw him.

Q. Will you look around the courtroom and see if you recognize the accused Ronsaglia now?
A. I cannot recognize him, because it is four years that I haven't seen him, because I saw him only 3 or 4 times in all. If he was dressed in uniform, maybe, like he was, maybe I would have recognized him, but then he had a permit to dress in civilian clothes and in uniform.

Q. How did you know Ronsaglia was in the room when you entered if you did not see him personally?
A. I saw him 3 or 4 times in all. He wasn't with me; he stayed--I was at the Orphan Asylum, and those of the police who were detached from us had Palazzo Matsangalli.

Q. My question was, how do you know that Ronsaglia was in the room when you entered if you do not know him?
A. Because I heard Lansia say that it was Ronsaglia. When I went into the room I saw one there and one other.

Q. You saw Ronsaglia and Lansia dressed at that time--were they in uniform or civilian clothes?
A. I saw Lansia dressed in uniform and I saw Lansia in uniform, and I believe that Ronsaglia was also in uniform, but I cannot say exactly because it is four years, and I cannot remember well.

Q. Were both of them armed?
A. Yes.

Q. What weapons did they have?
A. Ronsaglia had an automatic rifle and Lansia carried a pistol and also an automatic rifle.

Q. Where was the wounded man at that time?
A. When I went in? I also made a drawing. Here is the breast chest (indicating); The civilian was in the middle of the house--

Q. What civilian?
A. This man that had the white shirt. I heard the civilian say that it was an American--I cannot say that it was an American--and when I went in I found him lying down on this side, this side, on the ground.

Q. Witness indicates left side.
A. This arm was under him and this arm was above him. He fell like that (indicating).

Q. Did you observe any wound on the body?
A. I saw the wounds on this side (indicating).

Q. Indicating left side, towards the front of the body.
A. --and as soon as I saw this man lying on the ground and behind me was Captain Moscani, so I told Captain Moscani we must aid this man who is wounded. Captain Moscani then said, "Go and get four civilians to take him away." I went out of the house and went to the square, got the four civilians, and I returned with a ladder and I went up to get this man, who is called an American but that I don't know is an American, because I never knew him.

Q. Did you get him?
A. I took this American--I took him by the head and some civilians took him by the legs and others by the waist. We took a quilt and blanket and spread them on the ladder. When he was on the ladder, the civilians took the feet and I took the head and--because he went down this way (indicating), descending.

Q. Where did you take the wounded man?
A. When I was leaving the house and taking him down to the vehicle on which he was to be taken away, about 10 or 15 meters before getting to the square he gave a heavy sigh. I told the civilians he died, and I continued to carry him down to the square, and when he breathed that heavy sigh I felt badly, because he was on my side--I was on the side of the head.

Q. Did he die?
A. Yes, he was dead. He died right in front of my eyes.

Q. Was he dead before you reached the square?
A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with the body?
A. I took him and I brought it to the square.

Q. Where was the body then taken?

Q. Who was the driver of that vehicle?
A. A certain Rigoletti. So we put the civilian on the vehicle and then we went to get Lawyer Orsini, and after having gotten Lawyer Orsini, we departed. And besides I made a statement about this.

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Lanoia and the man he called Roncaglia?
A. You mean he called the dead man? I want to know the man, because--I want to know the man, because if it was the proprietor of the house, I don't know --he wasn't there. Inside the house there was no civilian.

President: Tell him to answer the question. Put that question again, and have him answer the question he is asked.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): May I object to the translation, that the proper translation in Italian would be, "Avete sentito nessuna conversazione tra Lancia ed il uomo che voy"--you, the witness, called Roncaglia.

Interpreter: No, that isn't the question. I know it isn't.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): Because he had said that he called him Roncaglia.

Prosecution: No, the witness said that Lancia called the other man Roncaglia.

Interpreter: May I repeat the name Lancia again, if that would make it clearer?

Prosecution: Repeat the name Lancia--the man that Lancia called Romaglia.

(The question as amended was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): When I went up with the ladder, I met Romaglia and Lancia.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Precede.
A. And Lancia told him, "Why did you shoot at him, why did you kill him? He could have taken him very well wounded." And that's all I heard, no other words.

Q. Was there any reply to that question?
A. By me?

Q. By Romaglia.
A. From Romaglia I heard nothing else, and I continued to walk.

Q. Were you personally acquainted with Lancia?
A. Yes, by sight, because he was with us and he was serving with us.

Prosecution: You may have the witness.

Defense (Capt. Robiseon): May it please the commission, the associate counsel--special counsel--desires to know what statement has been read into evidence here, and it appears the defense has no record of the statement referred to by the judge advocate with reference to--

President: The only statement read here was this one (indicating), that was admitted into evidence yesterday.

Defense (Mr. Laure): This is Coppo.

President: That is the only statement that has been read.

Defense (Mr. Laure): I was meaning that among the papers that have been offered to the defense for examination before the trial I don't remember any deposition of this man.

President: If it is used, you will get a copy.

Defense (Mr. Laure): Thank you.

Interpreter: The Italian is really a bit stronger than this translation in [illegible]

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the defense objects to the admission of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 on the basis that there will not be an opportunity for cross-examination of the witness killing of the American in the town of Feline by the Gendarmerie. Therefore, in the stringent interrogation

President: Objection overruled. It will be admitted to the commission and considered as Prosecution's Exhibit no. 10 and marked as such.

Defense (Mr. Lowry): I would like to submit that the word "stringent" has Prosecution: May I refer to the commission [illegible] we do with the kind of [illegible]. It is why I used the adjective, "stringent"; but the word is not [illegible] (Prosecution's Exhibit 10 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

[illegible] don't think I have any other thing to say.

President: Would the defense like to have the original read in court in Italian for the benefit of the accused?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the accused was [illegible] with the Italian as stated. However, the special counsel has pointed out several errors, and prior to the time the defense counsel so-called cross-examines Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10, we will ask about two minutes for the Italian co-counsel to point out the alleged errors. We will save the time of the commission of reading the Italian translation, here two questions.

President: All right. Request granted. I note that the special counsel, in saying that is the only objection, would the only language objection. May it [illegible] the commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, also the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats. [illegible] A statement of [illegible] was taken down the town of Feline [illegible]

President: The commission will come to order, again. With the translation [illegible] Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, [illegible] should continue the portion of the trial, but due to cross-language difficulties, the defense is asking that the Italian counsels be permitted to discuss with the commission the portion of our objection as pertains to language difficulties and permit the American defense counsel to present the objections and the cross-examination following the clarification of the language difficulties. [illegible]

Prosecution: May it please the commission, I suggest that the original Italian communication be submitted to the court's interpreter for the purpose of making any interpretation required.

Defense (Capt. Sybicon): That is agreeable to me, but I am suggesting, if it please the commission, that that stipulation be permitted by the Italian interpreter and not destroy the defense counsel's opportunity of cross-examination.

President: The request is granted.

Defense (Mr. Lamb): I suggest that the interpreter be given the Italian copy of the depositions of Mr. Fitotti. Reading here, page 6, fifth from last line, page. "Successivamente a richiesta dell'interprete da parte dell'investigatore Daniel Amili fu fornita a dover necessario la verità dei fatti relativi all' uccisione dell'americano nel paese di Folina da parte di Tito Menaglia." The official translation which the evidence reads, "Under a cross-examination I did by counsel was full truth as to the killing of the American at Folina, carried out by Tito Menaglia." The proper translation, according to the defense, would be, "subsequent to diligent questioning by Investigator Daniel Amili, I was compelled to disclose, et cetera.

Interpreter: The Italian is really a very simple sentence in English English. As I translate this, literally, it reads this way: "Subsequent to diligent interrogation by the investigator, Daniel Amili, I was brought to have to confess the truth in the facts relative to the killing of the American in the town of Folina by Tito Menaglia." Therefore, "In the stipulated interrogation by the investigator, Amili, I was brought to have to confess."

Defense (Mr. Lamb): I would like to submit that the word "successivamente" has more to do with sequential material, "sequent" just something to do with the idea of a person. That is why I used the adjective, "sequent"; but the word-in the dictionary I have found that both words are synonyms. You may show the dictionary the dictionary. I don't think I have any other thing to say.

President: Is that the only—

Defense (Mr. Lamb): The only objection to the translation, that I have given you.

Defense (Capt. Sybicon): That is, only language.

Defense (Mr. Lamb): The defense counsel will have some questions.

Defense (Capt. Sybicon): May the record show that the special counsel, in saying that is the only objection, meant the only language objection. May it please the commission, in the absence of being able to cross-examine a silent witness, defense counsel asks the court to consider very carefully Prosecution's Exhibit No. 30, now in evidence, the sworn being under duty of 4 September 1946, in connection with another statement which will submit shows the truth of Fitotti Giovanni, certified before Daniel Amili, special agent, with the translation certified to by Vera Konya on 18 June 1946 at Rome, Italy. Were the witness present in court and sworn as a witness, the defense counsel then could address this communication to him and ask him, "Did you, Giovanni Fitotti, on the date mentioned, 18 June, 1946, make this statement which I now hold in my hand?" And the only presumption we could have is that the witness did make that statement. Then we would have a right to read this statement to him—"Is it true that in that statement you said, 'In that following day, as I remember, that a brigadier called Tito Menaglia was often asked by the federations workers who had killed the American. Romeoglio answered that he did it himself, but while he said so I noticed that the colleagues twinkled at each other so as to have the contrary understood thus giving the impression that Tito Romeoglio attributed this deed to himself to show off before his companions. I heard from others that the first to shoot had been Pateresni, Gaetano, who was then on the directing staff of the Federazione of Terni."—

President: Are you offering that?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): I am reading it into the record, sir, as a cross-examination before the silent witness, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 in evidence. The statement further would be read, "Later, part of the Federazione of Terni transferred to the north. So on 5 June 1944 we moved to Candiana (Padua). In August 1944 we moved again to Sale'. At Sale', in February 1945, I received a visit of Gaetano Pateresni and his wife, on their way from Parma to Novigo. They stayed for dinner at my place, and in the course of the conversation, we came to the well known topic regarding the killing of the American at Feltre, a killing carried out by Tito Romeoglio. But at this point, in presence of Pateresni's wife, Lina, of my wife and my two daughters Luciana and Mirella, Pateresni declared: 'You know I was the first one to shoot, Romeoglio fired after I did, when there was no need for it any more.'" And gentlemen, note the quiet declaration of Pattaresni, "You know I was the first one to shoot, Romeoglio fired after I did, when there was no need for it any more." Now, gentlemen, if the alive and living witness were on this witness stand the defense counsel could point a finger at him and draw from his lips the statement which he has in this document, that the American was dead at the shots of Pateresni.

May it please the commission, the defense feels that this entire statement should be introduced before this commission in evidence so the commission may have all of these facts in front of the commission and be able to arrive--and I am going to use the Anglo-Saxon word and say arrive at who is lying about who. And, in that connection, I will dismiss with almost one sweep of the arm the entire Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 placed before this court by a man under oath, submitting to you—

President: This is no time to argue the case. If you want to argue the case, wait for your argument. You are arguing the case now.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, I am stating the questions which would be asked of this witness, and if the court would rather have it, I will ask them as questions of this witness, but it is in cross-examination of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10.

President: Still I say that you are arguing the case. You wait for that; if you want to offer this statement as evidence, go ahead and offer it, but do not argue the case.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May I have one minute?—May it please the commission, since the prosecution is still carrying on its case the defense feels that it should not now break into the prosecution part of the case by making an exhibit entry, so the defense will hold this exhibit until the proper time to enter it, but the defense does have one or two other questions to ask of the silent witness, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10.

Prosecution: To which the prosecution objects under Circular No. 166, Paragraph 18a and c: "If any witness is dead or is unable to attend or to give evidence or is, in the opinion of the president of the commission, unable to attend without undue delay, the commission may receive secondary evidence of statements made by or attributed to such witness. Any diary, letter or other document may be received in evidence as to the facts therein stated." Prosecution's Exhibit 10 is admissible in evidence and has been admitted by this commission. It is not subject to cross-examination.

Defense (Capt. Robiseau): May the defense ask if the witness himself were here would he be subject to cross-examination?

President: Yes.

Defense (Capt. Robiseau): May the defense suggest that Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 is the paper document, the silent document, of the witness himself?

President: Go ahead and ask your questions.

Defense (Capt. Robiseau): The question is taken from Page 2 of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10. The question would be asked of that witness, "Is it your intention to produce the idea that the party"--meaning the Fascist party--"tried to show that Romagnia was not given the credit for the taking of the Amerian by whatever methods used?" and with that we rest this portion of the cross-examination, but ask the commission especially to take notice of the question asked of the witness.

President: It is a question you would have asked if the witness were present?

Defense (Capt. Robiseau): Yes, sir. May it please the commission, there would be about 20 questions if the witness were present. We ask the commission to scrutinize extremely carefully both of these documents, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 and the first statement made by the same witness, which the defense will introduce as a defense exhibit. Thank you, sir.

President: For the benefit of the accused, the commission will carefully consider the contents of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10.

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution now offers in evidence Prosecution's Exhibit No. 11 for identification, being a report of reburial.

Defense: No objection.

President: It will be admitted and marked as Exhibit No. 11.

Prosecution: Request that I be permitted to read the pertinent parts.

(Prosecution's Exhibit 11 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

President: There is a discrepancy there; in the statement made by--he gave the grave number 120 and the plot number 11, instead of 10. Which is right?

Prosecution: I don't know, sir; I'll check it.

Defense (Capt. Ephlesen): May it please the commission, that may be one of the reasons why we have no objections we may offer the opportunity for the prosecution to show which one is right.

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution offers in evidence Prosecution's Exhibit No. 12 for identification, Air Force Casualty Officers Investigation (Overseas) report.

President: It will be admitted in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 12.

(Prosecution's Exhibit 12 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Defense (Capt. Ephlesen): May it please the commission, the defense counsel would like to call attention to a condition that is stated in the last exhibit. The person investigating the affair at that time could not report the conclusion as to whether the person killed was entitled to lose his life in battle [illegible] Exhibit No. 12 for identification.

A. [illegible]

Prosecution: May it please the commission, that is an official report that has been submitted.

Defense (Capt. Ephlesen): May it please the commission, the defense, by its failure to object to this last exhibit, does not admit the terminology of [illegible] I think it important. As I have already said, here is the door of [illegible]

President: Exhibit No. 12 has been admitted in evidence by the commission.

Prosecution: At this time this prosecution requests permission of the Japanese guard of Domei Photocast for the purpose of identifying a diagram of the room in which the American was killed.

Colonel Brandon, Miller, a witness for the prosecution, was duly sworn by the prosecution, and having been identified through the interpreter and the [illegible] previously taken by him was still binding, resumed the witness stand and testified further as follows:

Interpreter: Hai, hai.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

[illegible] questions by prosecution which we will place on the diagram.

Q. I have here Prosecution's Exhibit No. 13 for identification and ask you whether or not you assisted in the drawing of this diagram.
A. Yes, I did, when you drew it.

Q. Is that diagram a diagram of the room in which the American soldier was killed in your home on the 26th day of June, 1944?
A. Yes, it is. [illegible] I don't see, because

Q. Are the dimensions of that room as shown approximately correct?
A. Shown as you have drawn them, the fireplace, is you drew it, here, the window as you drew it, the cupboard, the table, and all that is here as you drew it is all right.

[illegible] a line showing the [illegible]
Q. Is that correct?
A. Correct as it is.

CONFIDENTIAL

Q. Does that drawing represent the furniture in the room as placed on the 26th of January 1944?
A. You mean the cupboard and the table?

Q. The cupboard and table and stool or chair which was in front of the fire.
A. The cupboard on the left and the table on the right.

Prosecution: Subject to objection by the defense, the prosecution now offers in evidence the diagram marked Prosecution's Exhibit 18 for Identification.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The defense desires to examine the witness on the diagram to ascertain whether or not there may be an objection.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

A.

Q. Without your glasses or spectacles, can you see this diagram?--and let the record show that the defense counsel handed to the witness Prosecution's Exhibit No. 18 for identification.
A. These are the steps, and here near the table--I did not indicate it before--because I forgot it--there was a small set of shelves, there is a small set of shelves.

Q. There?
A. Near the table, right there (indicating). I forgot to mention it, because I didn't think it important. As I have already said, here is the door of the house (indicating). It is a double door. On the right, opposite, is the door of the room where we sleep. This, on the right, is the fireplace. This is the place on the right where the cupboard leans against the wall of the bedroom. Here is where the table was--here is the window of the house (indicating).

Defense (Capt. Robinson): If the commission please, the record will not possibly show all of these "heres". I ask that the interpreter have--when you said, "Here is" a certain item, interpret where that item is, pointe--where did he point when he said, "Here is"?

Interpreter: Well, he said a lot of "heres."

Prosecution: The items as pointed out are marked on the diagram, with the exception of the shelving, which we will place on the diagram.

Col. Sears: Can he see without the glasses?

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. Can you read this diagram without the glasses?
A. Yes. I couldn't read, because I can't read, and then I can't see, because I read very little.

Q. I ask you now to point out on Prosecution's Exhibit No. 18 for Identification, the paper which you hold in your hand, where the street runs by the door.
A. It is right in front of it.

Q. I ask you to draw a line showing the street.
A. This is the street that comes from the town and goes into my house (complying).

Q. I ask you to letter that line A-B, placing the A near the door and B at the other end of the line.
A. Which side of the line?

Q. On the line.
A. (The witness complied.)

Defense (Capt. Robieson): The witness has indicated A and B in the position asked for.

Q. If that street continued on toward the letter A, would it go right into the door of your house?
A. Near the steps of my house there is a pathway that takes to the edge of the town.

Q. Is there any other street running by your house?
A. No, sir.

Q. What is the name of the street that you have indicated on that chart?
A. Via del Capecroce.

Q. What direction does that street run?
A. It originates in the square of the town and it winds in through the town and goes to Capecroce, near the church.

Q. Please tell me the direction that street runs as it passes your house.
A. It finishes right at the door of my house.

Q. Please tell me whether it runs from north to south or east or west, or which direction.

Prosecution: Objection.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): If it please the commission, will you not give the defense an opportunity to show why this--

President: Make it brief.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): I will be glad to, sir.

President: Go ahead.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): The defense contends that this diagram is improperly drawn, it is damaging to our client, the accused, and by the showing here of the direction of the street--and when the proper diagram is shown, the defense will have a proper diagram and not an improper diagram.

President: Your objection is overruled. You can do that later on, introduce your own diagram.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, I will submit that we will have to go through this whole testimony again if we do.

President: Well, we will go through the whole testimony again; objection sustained.

Defense: (Capt. Robieson) I still object to the diagram on the grounds that the diagram is incorrect.

President: Objection is overruled.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May I ask him this question with this diagram, then? (To witness:) I show you another paper and ask you--we will number that later--

Prosecution: Number or identify the paper.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): I will identify it if it goes into evidence.

Prosecution: Sir, a lot of talk--

President: Wait a minute, wait a minute. We are dealing now with things--we are talking now--we are offering one in evidence; now you are introducing another one.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): I am trying to show that is incorrect, sir.

President: Don't introduce another diagram for that now. We are trying to introduce this diagram here, No. 18.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): If it is shown to you to be incorrect, will you still accept it?

President: It will be admitted into evidence. Then you can introduce yours later on, and we can weigh both of them.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): I submit the objection to the commission.

President: All right. Objection overruled. Now, you can submit yours later on.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. You have mentioned in your testimony some shelving. Where was the shelving located?
A. At this point, right here (indicating).

Interpreter: He is pointing at the table.

Q. At the corner of the table nearest the fireplace? How many shelves were there?
A. They formed two sections.

Q. Was the shelving above the top of the table, or did the shelving rest on the floor?
A. The shelving was fixed in the wall. The plank of the shelving was made of wood.

President (to interpreter): Will you tell the witness to show you where the shelf was and you put it down there in that diagram.

(The interpreter explained to the witness.)

Witness: The shelving extends from the table--boards along the wall, with two shelves.

Prosecution: Mark the word "shelving" along the wall at the point the witness indicates shelves were placed.

Witness: Here, near the table. From here to here (indicating).

(The diagram was marked by the interpreter.)

Witness: There were bottles there and glasses.

Prosecution: You may have the witness.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense has required that a diagram be made by members of the soldiery or military who saw the home of the gentleman who is now on the witness chair. We ask the indulgence of the commission for a few moments and our chart will be brought in to be submitted and will save time on cross-examination of this particular chart, which the defense contends is incorrect. May it please the commission, may the defense have five minutes before cross-examining this witness?

President: Who is making this diagram? How long was he in the house?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): We will put him back on the stand.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, that is a matter for defense and the defense will have ample opportunity after the prosecution presents its case.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission--

President: It is a matter for the defense, and the defense will take it up when it comes to it.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, how can we properly cross-examine at this time--

President: You can cross-examine from that diagram; then you can produce your own.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): It is possible that this diagram is not correct.

President: Well, it is his own house; he made his own diagram, where he lives, and your man was there five minutes, and you want to use your own.--Your diagram will be introduced when the proper time comes.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May we withhold our cross-examination?

President: You may cross-examine on that all you want to.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): I am sorry, but may it please the commission, if we could have just a few moments before beginning this cross-examination.

President: All right, you can have a few minutes. We will take a five-minute recess.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats. The witness who was on the stand at the time the recess was taken resumed his seat having been admonished through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding.

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, there is no further cross-examination at this time.--I intended to say, no further cross-examination of this witness at this time.

Prosecution: Any questions by any members of the commission?

President: No questions; the witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Prosecution: The prosecution rests.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, at this time the defense moves the commission that a verdict of acquittal be pronounced at this time for the reason that the prosecution has not made a prima facie case. At no time during the course of this trial has it been pointed out definitely who killed the American soldier. There is some confusion concerning the dress of the accused Ronzoglia; there is, without question, the fact that the prosecution's principal witness could not even identify the accused. The commission has heard the progress of this trial. The commission knows that the war was yet on. The commission knows that an American soldier had fallen from an airplane behind enemy lines. The prosecution has established that that American soldier abandoned his uniform and placed upon himself civilian clothing, that that American soldier wandered about behind enemy lines for a long period of time, that that American soldier took up residence in at least two different houses; and the prosecution has produced the witnesses to prove that portion of the case. The prosecution has failed to prove the bloody title in the proof of the corpus delicti; the prosecution has not shown beyond a reasonable doubt the exact cause--or, the exact and particular corpus delicti. You have, gentlemen, heard before this court a witness of the prosecution, perhaps their primary witness, testify that a man in civilian clothes fired the fatal shots. You have heard much said about different people firing the shots, and the bragging, perhaps for heroic purposes, of who did fire the shots. Gentlemen, this case is in a state of almost hopeless confusion. According to American law and jurisprudence, a capital case, or any criminal case, must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Gentlemen of this commission, the defense submits to you that certainly at this stage of this game there is much reasonable doubt.

Now, true, there had been trouble between partisans and Fascisti. There had been killings in that little community. There was the fervor among the citizenry; there was fear. There was testified by the woman who first housed the American that she got rid of him. She went to her friend and said, "I'm afraid. I'm afraid that I will be killed if I keep him. You keep him, I'll feed him, but you keep him." Yes, she turned him over to her friend, and her good friend took him. He went into that house. And then you heard the testimony of this old gentleman, this kindly old gentleman, who went down and turned him in. But in the search of that community--and mind you, gentlemen, the Fascisti at that time were the organized government. The soldiers in uniform represented that government, they were armed by that government, and we, as Americans, are not concerned with our likes or dislikes of partisans or our likes and dislikes of Fascisti, if there be any on either side; we are concerned here with a matter which is a matter of American jurisprudence. being a commission of war crimes, we are nevertheless concerned with American jurisprudence.

We are holding ourselves to the proof beyond a reasonable doubt before a life penality, or any penalty, for crime be levied upon anybody. Gentlemen, as you know, in an American court of procedure there has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of this man, who by the principal witness was not even identified. Instead, gentlemen, you have in front of you exhibits, particularly Exhibit 10 and that portion of another statement read into this record by the defense counsel, showing the interlocking stories between even the Fascisti themselves as to whom they would place the blame upon. First, if there was to be honor from Headquarters Fascisti, some wanted to say, "I want the honor." There was argument among the Fascisti. It was shown to you in that one document, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 in evidence, that a letter was written that the accused was not to be taken seriously, that he was vainglorious, or words to that effect, that he was boasting, not to take him seriously, and the individual himself telling who fired the shots. Gentlemen, you heard that said.

After the war was over and the statement was taken, oh, no, no, "I didn't have anything to do with it; let that man have his brag now, he is the one." Gentlemen, I want this commission to weigh that in all fairness and in all honor, and I know you will.

The next thing, this old gentleman, this honest old fellow that sat on this witness stand, apparently so confused that he couldn't remember facts of his own home--he told a pretty straightforward story. He told about the civilian firing. He told about the soldier who rushed out and said, "We mustn't injure this man, he is wounded now," and the man in civilian clothing said, "No," and shot him dead. The evidence has not been produced here to show that this accused Ramaglia was in civilian clothes. One of the Fascisti who wandered within the whole picture revamped part of his statements and says something about civilian clothes, but, gentlemen, weigh it carefully.

The proof in American law is not there. We submit to this commission that the whole prosecution fabric in this case has fallen for a lack of a complete connection of corpus delicti, proper corpus delicti and proper positions at the time the crime was committed and who fired the fatal shots. Conspiracy is not charged. Upon the individual who killed the American soldier may rest a fault, but if a fault then the question arises after that, was that fault a war crime? Under all the conditions of fever in that little community, under all the conditions of what was happening and the pogroms coming and a soldier out of uniform, a belligerent out of uniform--was there war crime?

And now let us speak about Position Number 3. There has been plenty of testimony by the prosecution's own witnesses that a stiletto, or dagger, or a knife, was in evidence, and by the same type and kind of testimony as is before this commission, it was shown that the American did have possession of that knife, dagger, or stiletto, or weapon, whatever it may have been, that it was shown by two witnesses, one of them saying some 30 or 40 centimeters from the body of the fallen American, and the other stating not more than a meter and one half, meter--say 60 inches or less--from the body, and that particular witness stated that that weapon was in such a juxtaposition as would indicate that the American was making the attack.

Gentlemen, there has been some talk of this cupboard. You gentlemen, perhaps, have been in Italy long enough, and those that have not have formed the proper opinion, that this particular piece of furniture known as a cupboard was a large heavy cabinet, and that large heavy cabinet could form a place for somebody to step at the end for partial hiding of himself. It was testified to here by one witness specifically that the American had the knife. It was shown by two witnesses that the knife was in certain places. It was shown by other witnesses that the knife was brought from the house to the square. It was testified to in Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10 that the American was armed and made an attack upon the Fascist soldiers who entered the room.

Weigh, now, gentlemen, your different pictures in that room. First, a civilian and a soldier, another time all soldiers, and another time you didn't know what; a state of confusion.

Gentlemen, we submit upon this motion that the prosecution definitely has not established, first, a crime, let alone a war crime, and we submit that this accused should be afforded a verdict of not guilty, and we thank you.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, the prosecution has shown beyond a doubt that an American airplane was shot down on December 19th, 1943. I do not believe there is any question in the minds of this commission but that Dale E. King bailed out from that airplane and made his way to Poline, that at that point he was taken by Fascists to the home of Orsini Gallerarman and later transferred to the home of Matteucci. The evidence is also clear that when the Fascists arrived in the city of Poline, if they did not already know it they soon learned that there was an American hidden in that home. The statements of Coppe Alberto prove that fact. The statements of Captain Massani, who was on this witness stand, show that fact. The statements of Salvati, who was questioned and threatened on the public square to know where Matteucci's home was, all bear out the old man's statement that these Fascists accosted him, threatened him with death unless he told them where the American was hidden.

Gentlemen, those men knew who was in that home. They knew there was an American soldier hidden in that home, and they went there for the sole and express purpose of killing him, and they killed him. I don't believe any one could doubt the statements of Matteucci. The American was sitting before the fire when these men entered his home. We have a statement of the captain, Massani, and Dolci. Massani told this commission that he was five or six meters from this home when he heard the shots, from this room where the American was killed. He went there immediately. And who did he find when he entered that room? He found Lancia and this man here, Ranaglia, and a man on the floor, and Dolci, who had just preceded him into that house.

These were the men that were there; these were the men that had killed Dale King, and there is no dispute about that. Whether they were in uniform or civilian clothes makes no difference; the evidence is clear that they were armed, they had a machine gun--an automatic rifle--and pistol. The evidence is clear on that point, and they were there, and they went there, for the sole and only purpose of killing that American. There can't be any question about that.

This accused has been identified from the witness stand. We are sorry that Lancia is not here, but he escaped from the British in September of last year. But the two of them killed that American, and he was killed--the evidence shows that his body was taken from that home, taken to the public square, and was there transported to Terni, where the body was buried.

The defense talks a great deal about a dagger. The evidence in this case shows that there was no window in the room in which this man was killed on the side next to the street. The American was sitting before the fire, the old gentleman has told you that. He was sitting before the fire; he had no means of knowing that anyone was coming to that house until they burst in through the door. And do you think, gentlemen--he had surrendered once and was taken to this home--would he, then, with an old rusty dagger have attacked two armed men, two men who were armed with automatic rifles and pistols? Do you think it is possible? Do you think he would be so foolish as to jump up and lunge at these two men? And from whom do we get that statement? It all comes from the statement of Romaglia, who was one of the soldiers in that room when his captain went into the room. Now, whether or not he told the captain or Lentia that Romaglia killed the American soldier, I don't know--the captain didn't say so. He said they reported to me," and that was immediately after the shots were fired--that is the time that they would tell the truth, if they ever told the truth. And they would have you believe that this man is a coward, this man who later became a lieutenant in the Black Brigade? Did he fool the entire Italian army and get a promotion? It is just not possible things like that could happen--a coward such as the defense has attempted to picture in this case would be promoted and made a lieutenant in the Black Brigade.

Gentlemen, I submit to you that the prosecution has made a definite case. All the prerequisites have been established before this commission.

President: Subject to objection by members of the-- Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, usually there is rebuttal.

President: All right, go ahead.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, due to the fact that there is special counsel, Italian counsel for this Italian accused, I ask that the Italian counsel be able to say a few words in rebuttal.

President: Go ahead. Now, confine your argument, please, to the legal points.

Defense (Mr. Laura): First of all, I wish to say how myself and I think all good Italian people are sorry that a happening of this kind took place in Foligno on January 24th 1944, but examining closely the situation of this soldier of the Italian army, I think it is my duty to submit to the commission the legal points that put this soldier within certain rights, and also to establish that if the Italian soldiers killed somebody under the circumstances that have been explained at the trial by some witnesses, they acted completely in compliance with military law. It is a fact that the day before the killing of the American something happened in Foligno that could be considered an act of war. Partisans and Fascists were actually two opposite armies. The partisans invaded the town, killed somebody, dragging him from his house, bringing him in the public square, killing him in front of his daughter. Certainly that would have brought a reaction of any opposing army, either, I think, the Italian army or the opposing army.

The Italian authorities in charge took some steps--the Germans wanted to set fire to all the village and destroy it--the Italian authorities intervened and said, "That is too much," and so they decided to appease the Germans and at the same time to fool them. They went to Foligno for the intent of showing to the Germans their good intention, but not to harm the population. So it only was decided to make a raid of the houses to see if somebody was in there that should be suspected of connivance with the partisans. This bunch, with the military law to give orders, was the authority in power, was entitled to do that, to give that particular order, and it is a fact that the particular order was given, because a witness, that Italian student of engineering, that the American soldier spoke in English with him, stated in the most definite way that the Italian authorities communicated to the people that if a man over 16 years of age were not assembled in the public square but found in their houses, he would have been shot.

Now, in one of the houses there was a man in civilian clothes with no insignia, with nothing showing that he was belonging to an army, a man that had the physical appearance of an Italian. It is also to be supposed that that man had been killed in the application of this order. There is no evidence at all that Ranzaglia is the man that killed him; there is no evidence at all that Ranzaglia was dressed in a civilian suit, and everybody that has been a witness present to the facts has stated, principally the owner of the house, Matteucci, that the man who killed was a man dressed in a civilian suit. Therefore, I don't see how it is possible under international law to treat this case as a crime of war case and sentence upon that. I don't see how it is possible to sentence an Italian for a thing which has not been proved that he has committed. I thank you, gentlemen.

The counsel indicates to me something which I pointed out to him. I wrote, "From Livorno to Pisa," which is going to the training camp to visit this man--you certainly have seen what I am going to tell you--"next to the American depot, now, not in time of war"--the war has ceased since many months ago --"there are signs along the depot where there are only foodstuffs, implements of war, where there are no pistols to be taken, which reads in Italian, in German, and in English--who comes near this fence will be shot dead." Now, if that order is legal now, I think that under international law would that be legal, the order to kill everybody that did not obey an order given during the combat. I rest, gentlemen.

President: Subject to objection by any member of the commission, the motion of the defense for a finding of not guilty is denied. The court will adjourn--

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Please. Before you close the commission, I have one request to make. It will be known that there was something said to the commission about a continuance, first, for a period of two weeks. That was not at all favorable to the American authorities. Out of deference to that request, the defense proceeded to trial without any motion for any continuance. Since this trial has started, part of the defense' witnesses have arrived. In order for the defense to even partially prepare itself--we are not asking for weeks, not asking for days, but we do ask that we have until two o'clock or 1400 hours tomorrow afternoon, giving the defense the morning to see their witnesses and to formulate their case for defense. We ask that this trial be continued until 1400 hours tomorrow afternoon.

President: Your request for continuance is granted until Thursday morning at 8:45. You have all day tomorrow.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Thursday morning. Thank you, sir.--May it please the commission, before anybody leaves--there is a medical doctor who contends that he has some 60 patients at Terni. He has only a brief statement to make. And there is a young man present who operates a business at Terni and is needed there. He can assure the commission that 30 minutes, and maybe 15 minutes--just as quickly as we can hear them. Will you hear a rapid testimony?

President: Very well.

TESTIMONY FOR THE DEFENSE

Vito Mazzuca, Terni, a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Vito Nanavan.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Torni.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Doctor.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Do you know this gentleman sitting here?
A. Yes.

Q. What is his name?
A. Romaglia.

Q. Can you say to this court something about the help that you have received sometimes from this gentleman?
A. I became acquainted with Romaglia in November, 1943, as a friend of the British and as the doctor of a partisan brigade. I was arrested by the Fascists. On that occasion Romaglia came to visit me in my cell often, and while all the other Fascists said to deliver me to the Germans, Romaglia instead occupied himself with my case and insisted that the Fascist commanders free me. Every time that he came to see me he was kind, he was never sectarian, and during the short tragic moments during bombardments, while all the Fascists went into the air raid shelter they used to lock me in my cell with a double turn of the key and Romaglia quarreled with the Fascist commanders that I be treated like a prisoner of war and brought into the air raid shelter. Then at Christmas I was transferred to another jail and since then I saw him no longer. In these contacts I was aware that I was before an individual who talked very much but was not a bad man. I have nothing else to add.

Q. Do you mean to say that in your opinion Romaglia is not a man able to kill another man?
A. To me it seemed that he was not a man that could kill another person like that. He was very talkative, but not capable of committing a crime.

Q. Do you have any objection if I pose on you some question about belonging to some particular political party?
A. I have no objection.

Q. Do you belong or did you belong to the Fascist party?
A. No, I belonged to the Communist party.

Q. Is this man here at the table the man to whom you have been testifying?
A. Yes, I recognize him.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by president:

Q. To what party did you belong in 1944?
A. I was a doctor in the Garibaldi Brigade, in a Communist brigade.

Q. Communist brigade!
A. Communist brigade.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Just one question. Is Romoglia a coward?
A. In my conversations with him I have had the impression of standing before a man who holds an awful lot, but not a man of great actions.

Prosecution: Questions by any member of the commission?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, may this witness be excused permanently in order to return to his profession at Zanzi?

President: Yes.

Interpreter: He wants to thank the commission very much, because he has an epidemic of typhus to deal with.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Valentino Pietro, Zanzi, a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by [illegible] advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Valentino Pietro.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Zanzi.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. I have a restaurant business.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Do you know the man sitting at this table?
A. Yes.

Q. What is his name?
A. Romaglia Tito.

Q. Point him out.
A. (The witness indicated.)

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Let the record show that the witness has indicated the accused, Romaglia Tito.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Where did you meet Tito Romaglia?
A. During the period of the German occupation.

Q. Where?
A. In my restaurant.

Q. Did you ever notice what kind of clothes Romeoglia usually had on him?
A. At first when he used to come there he was dressed in civilian clothes, but I remember him being very little in civilian clothes. The other times I saw him he was in military uniform with a black cap. He had stripes indicating rank, but I don't know what rank it was.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Let the record show the witness has indicated something like the left sleeve, perhaps purporting to be chevrons.

Questions by defense (Mr. Amore):

Q. Did Romeoglia come often to eat in your restaurant?
A. Often, but not every day.

Q. Do you remember if Romeoglia, in the period about January 25-26-27, 1944, was dressed in uniform or not?
A. I cannot be certain of this, but it is certain that those soldiers of the division of that period were almost always dressed in uniform. The men who were dressed in civilian clothes at that time were in a policing office which was different from the Intervigilanza.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. When did you first become acquainted with the accused Romeoglia?
A. I cannot remember well, but I can specify that it was about--roughly, about two months before January, two or three months, but I cannot specify the exact day.

Q. In what business were you engaged at that time?
A. I was working at the restaurant.

Q. Where?
A. At my restaurant in Terni.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Col. Amore:

Q. Being what in the restaurant?
A. I did everything there was to be done, because in that period, with all the bombing going on, civilians were reluctant to work in the city, and we were obliged to hold the restaurant open, doing our best. Then later my brother and myself were taken by the Germans and obliged to work at the station.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Where did Romeoglia live at that time?
A. I cannot say, because I don't remember. I never asked him.

Q. Did you see him in civilian clothes and also in the military uniform--is that correct?
A. Yes.

CONFIDENTIAL

CONFIDENTIAL

Leghorn, Italy
7 August 1947

The commission met, pursuant to adjournment, at 0930 o'clock A.M., all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution, and the defense who were present at the close of the previous session in this case being present. The accused, the reporter and the interpreter were also present.

President: The commission will come to order.

Pedro Giovanni Rosati, Rome, a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Giovanni Rosati. In religion Padre Basilio.

Q. Where do you live?
A. At Rome.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Provincial Father of the Institute. I am an inspector, a coordinating inspector.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laura):

Q. Do you know Tito Romoaglia?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you see Tito Romoaglia in this room?
A. Yes, he is present.
Defense: Please let the record show that he has pointed to the accused.
Q. When did you meet for the first time Tito Romoaglia?
A. I met him the first time in Rome, I think, 1946.
Q. Where?
A. At Rome.
President: [illegible]
Q. Under what circumstances did you meet Tito Romoaglia?
A. He came to me to ask for an employment.

Q. Did you employ him?
A. Yes, I sent him to a convent in the province of Vetralla.
Q. For what?
A. As handyman.

Q. How long did he stay at the convent at Vetralla?
A. About 15 or 20 months—I could not say the exact number.

Q. Then what happened?
A. One day he came back to Rome because the rector there said that he was not very useful, so he came back to me at Rome and there I also employed him as a handyman.

Q. Where did Tito Romaglia live at the time that he was employed with you--did he live in your convents or other places?
A. Within the convent.

Q. Did he ever exit from the convent?
A. He continually went in and out at all times of the day, because I used to send him to the post office and stores.

Q. Was he hiding himself?
A. No, he was not hiding. He had come to me for a job because he couldn't live, he didn't have any job to do.

Q. During the time that he was in your convent, did he ever tell you that anybody had contacted him in relation with the killing of an American soldier in Padua?
A. Yes, he told me this.

Q. What did he say to you at that time?

Prosecution: May it please the commission, statements made by Romaglia to the father at that time are inadmissible in evidence.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): We can't hear the judge advocate. Please, will you speak up?

Prosecution: Statements--the self-serving declarations made by the accused at that time to the father are inadmissible in evidence.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the defense will show that this conversation which is to be produced will bear upon the conclusions at the time the United States Government was standing as agent to locate Romaglia. It appears that the rules of evidence have been relaxed considerably in regard to the admission of hearsay. This is more than hearsay; this is a direct statement between a sworn witness on this stand and the accused, and the defense feels that the foundation that is now being laid is very proper to be brought before this commission.

President: Objection overruled.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Defense (Mr. Moore): Pardon me; I think that something has been missing to my question. I was taken so to jump away--my question was, "What did he say to you about being innocent or not?"

Prosecution: That was not a part of your question.

President: Word the question the way you want to.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. What did he say to you at that time about being innocent or not?
A. Zito Rossaglia always told me that he was not the killer of this American soldier.

Q. Did he show to you ever his interest in bringing his innocence, in one way or the other,--

Prosecution: If the court please, we object to this line of testimony. The accused is here; he can testify.

President: Objection overruled.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): He said his interest in this case, knowing that he was being looked for again by the American police, he wanted to report to clarify his position. I convinced him to wait a little while until we could make contact with someone of the American Army, so that in the meantime he would not be taken to some concentration camp. When he was captured, I was in those days trying to make contacts with one of our fathers of the United States who was here--he was the military chaplain--to see if he could accompany him and maybe present him, but I was not in time, because other things happened.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. You have said when he was captured, but are you sure that he was captured or that an American, or an agent of the War Crimes Commission, came to your convent looking for him?
A. Yes, an American military man came to look for him at the convent.

Q. And that American military man, did he speak with you?
A. Yes. First of all he called me, he was very kind--and he said that he knew that he should not even come into this--he realized that he could not enter into the convent, because it enjoyed the pontifical exemption, that is, extra-territoriality.

Q. And what did he say that the American man in military uniform, to you, about Rossaglia--did he have to go with him, or did he leave him in your place?
A. No, he just had him called. He wanted to make contact with him. I called Rossaglia immediately and he came to make a contact with this officer, and then he left there for 3 or 4 days and said, "I will come to get him."

Q. So he did not arrest him or capture him?
A. No, he left him as he was. He only asked Rossaglia's word of honor as an officer to remain.

Q. During the time which elapsed between the moment that this officer came to your convent the first time to the moment that he appeared the second time and requested Rossaglia if he was willing to go with them, did Rossaglia stay always inside your convent or had he chance to go out?
A. Yes, he continued to carry on the life he had always carried on. He went out many times. We, of course, limited this a bit, because it was supposed that maybe the police would have sentries or somebody to stand guard.

Q. If Romeaglia had the intention to avoid to go with that American soldier, when he would have come back, could he, Romeaglia, have had the opportunity of escaping during these days that he was in your convent?

Prosecution: Objection--calls for a conclusion of the witness.

President: Objection overruled.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): Yes, as a matter of fact, I told the officer who came to see if he was there that--I told him that I did not have sentries on my door.

Questions by defense (Mr. Lamb):

Q. Did the American soldier ask you to keep Romeaglia in the convent and be sure that he doesn't leave?
A. He asked me to give my word, and I gave my word as a clergyman, and Romeaglia gave his word as an officer, but of course I don't know what is in Romeaglia's mind.

Q. But is it true that you told the American agent that you could not consider him as a prisoner and you were not responsible if he was going to escape?
A. Yes, I declared that.

Q. Did Renaglia say to you why he was so sure of himself, remaining?
A. Why did Renaglia--?

Q. Did Renaglia say to you why he was so sure of himself?
A. He declared this to me quite a few times. He said he was very peaceful, because he was peaceful at mind, because he knew that he had not committed the crime.

Q. And when the American agent came back to the convent, did Renaglia go voluntarily with him?
A. Yes, they stopped to talk for about a half an hour or three-quarters of an hour; then they went on in an automobile.

Q. Then Renaglia surrendered himself voluntarily to that agent from your convent?
A. They came to the convent to get him with an automobile, but he said he was going to go very soon--he would like the day to come very soon, when he could be placed into contact with the proper authorities and explain.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, the prosecution at this time moves to strike from the record all testimony given by this witness as having no bearing on this case and not being admissible under Circular 114.

President: The motion of the prosecution to strike the testimony of this witness from the record is denied.

Prosecution: No cross-examination. Any questions by any members of the commission?

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Zucker:

Q. Just where was this convent where Rosaglia was interviewed?
A. At the Holy Stairs in Piazza San Giovanni in Laterano, Rome.

Questions by Major Lacour:

Q. You spoke that Rosaglia came to you and mentioned an incident of killing an American. When did he first mention this incident?
A. After a few days that he was with me.

Q. Was that before the American agent arrived?
A. Yes, before.

Q. Did he appear to be in a worried state of mind?
A. More than being worried about his condition of being, because he was more worried about how he was to live. I used to reprimand him. I had occasion to reprimand him because I had occasion to observe that a part of the food that was given to him sometimes during the day was set aside for his family.

Major Lacour: These are all the questions I have.

Questions by Colonel Scarr:

Q. Had the accused ever worked for the Church at any time before he was given this position?
A. I cannot answer this question directly, because I did not know him before he came to me, and I do not know what his previous activity was, and so far as what he told me, I do not think so.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lamm):

Q. You have mentioned extra-territoriality of the convent. Does that mean that if Rosaglia stepped in the convent no foreign power could send an agent there to arrest him?
A. No, just as they can't go in the Vatican. It has the privilege of the same rights.

Q. May your convent has the same rights of extra-territoriality that the Vatican City has--is that privilege given to that convent too by an international treaty or not?
A. Yes, by the Lateran Pacts.

Q. What are, then, the Lateran Pacts?
A. The treaty between the Holy See and the Italian government to eliminate forever the Roman question.

Defense (Capt. Rubicam): One moment. May it please the commission, I know it is not well for two men to examine one witness, but I ask the indulgence of this commission for the clarifying of one question. Associate counsel asked the question, which I am quite sure the father, here, did not understand, and he gave the answer, "No," when I am quite certain the father meant yes, the question being, "Was the convent extra-territorial?" but it was asked in such a way--and I ask that the record be read back at that point and that question clarified.

President: Read the record back.

(Question and answer in question were read by the reporter.)

Defense (Capt. Robideau): Well, that explains itself; I'm sorry, sir.

Prosecution: The prosecution has no questions. Any further questions by members of the commission?

President: Apparently none.

Prosecution: May the witness be excused?

President: The witness will be excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Private Shelton W. Duvall, Disciplinary Training Center, Pisa, a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom, was sworn, and testified as follows:

Q. Near Pisa, Italy?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the accused in this case?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out?
A. (The witness indicated.)

Prosecution: May the record show that the witness has indicated the accused.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robideau):

Q. Duvall, have you seen the accused Romaglia incarcerated or imprisoned in the DTC? Do you understand my meaning--have you seen--do you know this accused out in the DTC?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen him out there behind the wire?
A. No, sir.

Q. Was he in what you call in jail when you saw him?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever seen him try to escape?
A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever seen an incident wherein this accused Romaglia may have had an opportunity to escape?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want you to tell this court in your own words exactly what you saw, speak so loudly and carefully.
A. Well, sir, then I dodged myself I asked this scouser if he wanted to escape with me and he said he would like to wait, because he maybe would be free, and he didn't want to escape because if he escaped and he was brought before a court-martial, that would prove him guilty of the charges they have got him for, and I asked him 5 or 6 times before I escaped, sir, and he said no, he did not want to escape.

Q. Were there any physical arrangements whereby Romaglia had an opportunity to help himself to escape that you saw?
A. Well, sir, there was some wire cutters in there and he could escape himself any time, if he wanted to.

Q. Did he accept the wire cutters?
A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether Romaglia had anything to do with reporting a pair of wire cutters in to the authorities?
A. Yes, sir, he reported one pair of wire cutters over in Cage 2.

Q. And did the authorities act upon that report?
A. Yes, sir, they went over there and got the wire cutters--they were in Cage 2, over in the cell block, sir.

Q. Then Romaglia could have had these for his own use?
A. They were

Q. Instead, he reported them and the authorities came to Cage 2 and obtained the wire cutters?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did this occur, approximately?
A. Sir, it was the 14th of July I escaped, sir.

Q. And did this occur prior to your escape?
A. Just before I escaped, sir--that's when they got the wire cutters from Cage 2.

Q. And prior to 14 July 1945, did you offer the opportunity to Romaglia to go with you?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1945?

President: Has this man been tried yet?

Witness: Yes, sir, I am serving time.

Capt. Young: For the escape the 14th of July?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): You have been punished for your escape out of the DTC?

Witness: Yes, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): I understood as before putting him on. May it please the commission, the defense explained to this witness, and I also do now, that, Ismail, do you recall the defense counsel telling you that you did not have to incriminate yourself on this witness stand with regards to this incident--you were not forced to come here and testify?

Witness: No, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Your testimony here is voluntary?

Witness: Yes, sir.

President: Are you serving sentence now?

Witness: Yes, sir.

President: You have already been tried.

Witness: Yes, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): There are no further questions. The date is on the record, I believe--prior to 14 July 1947.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. When did you escape?
A. The 11th of July, sir.

Q. When were you tried?
A. May the 6th, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Claims to have been punished for the escape.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Were you tried for escaping from the DTC?
A. I was punished, sir.

Q. How long were you gone?
A. Well, sir, I escaped on Monday morning and they brought me back on Wednesday at noon, sir.

Q. How were you punished?
A. I was put in a cell, sir. Before I escaped, sir, I was in a cage where I could run around and get plenty of exercise, and after I escaped they brought me back and put me in a cell, and the only time I get out is when I am brought for chow, sir. I am locked up at all times.

Major Lawton: Are you in now what is known as solitary?

Witness: Well, sir, I reckon you would call it solitary, because when you bring my chow to me and everything I don't get out at all, sir.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Do you know whether or not charges have been preferred against you for escaping?
A. They said they wouldn't prefer charges, sir. They punish me in this cell.

Prosecution: No further questions. Any questions by members of the commission?

President: Apparently none.
Prosecution: May the witness be excused?

President: Witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

President: The commission will take a five-minute recess.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Luschini Bruno, Sale', a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Luschini Bruno.

Q. Where do you live?
A. At Sale'.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. Assistant contractor.

Questions by defense (Mr. Lumro):

Q. In April 1945 where were you?
A. On the evening of the 26th of April I got off the train with my men--I was the commander of the 137th Garibaldi Brigade.
Q. The Garibaldi Brigade was a Fascist unit or a partisan unit?
A. Partisan.

Q. Did you ever meet the accused Romaglia Tito while you were in Sale' at that time?
A. Yes, sir. On the 26th of April at about ten o'clock in the morning.
Q. So you were able to recognize him?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see him in this room?
A. Yes, sir, I have already seen him.

Q. Do you want to point to him here, if you know?
A. (The witness indicated.)

Defense: Let the record show that the witness indicated the accused Tito Romaglia.

Q. Romaglia Tito as far as you knew was a militiaman of the Fascist militia?
A. I knew on the 26th of April that he was a member of the militia, but when I arrested him he was in civilian clothes.

Q. Did you say that you arrested him?
A. Yes.

Q. Did Romaglia help you in any way in fighting the Germans?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did he stay with you fighting the Germans?
A. Two days.

Q. What was his behavior in combat?
A. He showed himself to be really a valiant soldier, brave soldier.

Q. And there is a big bridge near Salo' that if blown up may have damaged the advance of the Allies?
A. Yes, there was a big bridge at Salo'.

Q. Is that the bridge of the Cartecana?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long about is that bridge?
A. About one hundred meters.

Q. And is it very high from the bottom level of the river or the street that is under it?
A. About 60 or 70 meters.

Q. In height?
A. In height, yes. No water passes underneath it; it is a valley.

Q. But you have been instrumental in avoiding the blowing up of that bridge?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell the commission what you did in that connection, to avoid the blowing up of the bridge?
A. It would be a little long to tell, but I can say it from the beginning to the end.

Q. But can you summarize?
A. Yes. On the 27th of April it was--

Q. I would like to know the year.
A. 1945. There was a German emplacement--

President: Now, the commission is not interested in this unless he can prove that the accused had something to do with it.

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. Did Ronsaglia help you in conducting the operations to avoid the blowing of the bridge?
A. The Germans had given the alarm after they had placed the charge to have the bridge explode. I ran there and Ronsaglia offered voluntarily to go with me. There was about this much of fuse to burn yet, and--

President: How much--about a foot, ten inches, eight inches?

Witness: The whole fuse was about one meter long, but only about 20 centimeters had yet to burn. And I pulled the fuse out of the charge, and Ronsaglia was right there with me.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. In your opinion and judgment, Ronsaglia was a brave man, is that correct?
A. When I arrested him he said-he asked me for a weapon. He said, "I will go against the Germans. I will go ahead, and if I don't go ahead, you can stay behind me and shoot."
Q. Did Ronsaglia do any bragging to you?
A. No, never.

Prosecution: No further questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by president:

Q. How far away were you from the line when the fuse was 20 centimeters long?
A. When it was 20 centimeters long, I was there.
Q. Right there?
A. Right on it, yes.

Prosecution: May the witness be excused?

Defense (Mr. Lauro): I would like to question.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. For this act of bravery in combat, did you receive any appraisal from the Italian government?
A. No, the committee made the proposal and I have not heard anything else.

President: The witness will be excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Prosecution: Your witness.

A. 24 January 1945.

Q. Are you sure that was 1945 or another date?
A. It was 1945.

Q. And at the beginning of this questioning you said 1944--why are you changing now? Please be calm and think over in your mind before speaking to the commission. Try to recollect other circumstances that may help you to establish the exact year. Are you ready to say the year?
A. 1944.

Q. Now, in 1945 where were you?
A. At Sale'.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Laura):

Q. Why do you remember the 24th of January 1944?

A. Yes, they said they had to go out.

Q. Go out. What for?
A. Because they were to make an inspection.

Q. Before or after you got up?
A. We got up together.

Prosecution: No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. The fact that your husband belonged to the Federazione did exempt him from military operations, in case of military operations?
A. I don't understand.

Q. Can I put the question another way? The fact that your husband was working at the Federazione did exonerate him from going with the soldiers when the soldiers were going out for military operations?
A. No, he had to go.

Prosecution: Questions by any members of the commission?

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by president:

Q. How was your husband dressed on the 23rd of January 1944?
A. In uniform as well.

Q. How do you remember that and you don't remember how he was dressed on the 15th?
A. I helped him dress, too, because they had to go out.

Q. Now remember I mean the 23rd, not the 24th, of January.
A. He was also in uniform that day.

Q. And you remember because you helped him dress, eh?
A. Yes, I remember in particular.

Q. Did you used to help him dress every day?
A. No.

Q. Only on a special occasion.
A. No, I used to help him other times.

Q. But you don't remember how he was dressed on the 15th?
A. I don't remember, but I remember how he was dressed the day before.

Questions by Capt. Youngs:

Q. Mrs. Roncaglia, you said that your husband, on the 23rd and 24th, was on detached service with the Federazione of Terni, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, where is the Federazione of Terni located?
A. At the center of Terni.

Q. Do they have barracks there where the members sometimes sleep?
A. Yes.

Q. And these members who sometimes sleep there keep clothes there, do they not?
A. I don't know.

Q. Now, who was it called your husband the morning of the 24th?
A. Donati.

Q. Now, Donati is connected with what organization?
A. At the Federazione.

Q. Where was your husband told to report when he was called that morning?
A. To go to the Federazione, because they had to go to Poline.

Q. Did your husband tell you he was going to the Federazione?
A. I heard this, that they were supposed to go to the Federazione, but I did not hear my husband say he was going to go to the Federazione.

Q. Now, you say you remember the 24th of January 1944 because things happened. What happened?
A. On the 23rd lawyer Orsini and another guard were killed.

Q. Did you finish?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, when your husband returned to you that day, or the next day, after going to Poline, did he tell you what had happened in Poline?
A. Yes.

Q. What did he tell you had happened?
A. He said that there had been a man found who was hiding in a house.

Q. What did he say happened to that man?
A. He said he was killed.

Q. Who did he say killed that man?
A. I don't know.

Q. Did he tell you whether the Fascists or the partisans had killed him?
A. The Fascists.

Q. Members of your husband's organization?
A. No, he did not tell me this.

Q. Well, you knew, did you not, Mrs. Renzaglia, that at that time there were no Fascist troops stationed in Poline?
A. I do not know this.

Q. Isn't it true, Mrs. Renzaglia, that your husband told you that he had shot and killed this American soldier?
A. No.

Q. Do you know a Giovanni Pitotti?
A. Yes.

Q. Where did you know him?
A. At Terni.

Q. How long have you known him?
A. I became acquainted with him in 1944.

Q. Before the time that your husband told you this American had been killed?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, I think there has been a misstatement made to the witness, and the defense would like to hear the exact question of Captain Young. He would like to have that question read back.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the witness has testified on two or three--during the course here, that that statement has not been made, and we feel that in these cross-statements--

President: All right; the objection is sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): And in these cross-statements--

President: All right; objection is sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): --the witness has the right to have that interpreted.

President: The objection is sustained.

Prosecution: Well, I believe the witness did testify her husband reported an American had been killed.

Capt. Young: It was my recollection of the testimony. I am going to ask the question again.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. When your husband returned home after going to Polino on this morning, the 24th of January 1944, did he tell you than an American soldier had been found hiding in a house and had been killed?
A. He said that someone had been killed, but he did not tell me whether he was American, Italian, or what.

Q. Now, do you know Giovanni Pitotti?
A. Yes.

Q. And you know him for some time previous to the 24th of January 1944?
A. Very little time before.

Q. To what organization did he belong?
A. He also belonged to the Federation.

Q. All right. Now, do you know also a Gaetano Patteressi?
A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him?
A. I know him later, afterwards.

Q. To what organization did he belong?
A. He did not belong to the Federazione; he was in a little town near Terni, Amelia.

Q. Now, in June of 1946 did you meet Giovanni Pitotti?
A. Yes, I did meet him.

Q. And that was during the time that this case was being investigated, is that true?
A. Yes.

Q. And at that time you believed Gaetano Futterossi either to be dead or to be in Switzerland, did you not?
A. I do not believe him neither in Switzerland or dead.

Q. Where did you believe him to be?
A. In his house; I don't know.

Q. Well, at that time didn't Giovanni Pitotti tell you that Gaetano Futterossi had been shot by the partisans or had escaped to Switzerland?
A. No.

Q. And at that time didn't you and Giovanni Pitotti agree upon a plan to name Gaetano Futterossi as the man who shot the American rather than your husband, Tito Rosnaglia?
A. No.

Q. And at that time didn't Giovanni Pitotti suggest to you to find a way of contacting your husband in order to inform him of this plan and to give your husband a chance of acting accordingly?
A. No.

Q. Well, if Giovanni Pitotti took the witness stand and swore under oath that that was true, would you say he was not telling the truth?
A. I am telling the truth.

Q. You have testified you saw this man, Giovanni Pitotti, in June of 1946. Where did you see him?
A. At Rome.

Q. Where in Rome?
A. I met him.

Q. Did you talk with him?
A. Yes, Pitotti was a friend.

Q. What did you talk about?
A. We talked, but not of this thing. I don't know what it is all about.

Q. This man, Giovanni Pitotti, was a friend of your husband's?
A. Yes, he was a friend, an acquaintance.

Q. How long did you talk with this Giovanni Pitotti at that time?
A. Very little.

Q. At that time was your husband in confinement?
A. Yes.

Q. Was your husband discussed at any time during that conversation?
A. Yes.

Q. What was said during that conversation between you and Pitotti?
A. He said--we said that he was there in prison, at Regina Coeli, and that he wasn't very well off, and that--that's all.

Q. Who told you that?
A. Pitotti.

Q. What else did he say about your husband?
A. I used to always meet Pitotti; I don't know right now what he said.

Q. Did you also visit your husband in this jail?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever tell your husband in jail that you had seen Giovanni Pitotti?
A. I always used to see Pitotti. I can't say now whether I told my husband that I had seen him, that I had spoken to him--I don't know.

Capt. Young: No further questions.

Prosecution: No further questions.

President: Witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Defense (Capt. Rubieson): May it please the commission, at this time the defense asks the court to explain in open court the rights of the accused with reference to making his testimony. Defense counsel has explained these rights, but we desire that it be done in open court.

President: Will the interpreter read the accused in Italian the rights of the accused, as shown in Appendix 1 of Training Manual 27-255, page 188.

(The interpreter complied.)

Defense (Capt. Rubieson): May it please the commission, there are two matters that co-counsel, the Italian counsel, is called upon to present before this commission. Defense is asking for one of these things, that the Italian counsel will be sworn as to the extra-territoriality of the Vatican and its counterparts in Rome, and the other will be brought up later. I ask that Mario Lauro be sworn as a witness.

Mario Lauro, Livorno, a witness for the defense, was then sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Mario Lauro.

Q. Where do you live?
A. In Livorno, Italy.

Q. Are you in position to explain to this commission the legal status as regards extra-territoriality of the Vatican and its immediate counterparts?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you so state?
A. Yes. In 1870, when the Italians occupied Rome, that was the state of the Pope. They seized all territories in the city, all buildings in the city, as well as all the territory surrounding the city that was the territory of the state of the Pope. States of the Church, more correct. At that time the Pope confined himself in the Vatican and never came out any more, as a sign of protestation for the act done by the King of Italy in depriving him of his territory. Count Cavour at that time was the Premier of Italy, and had a law enacted giving to the Pope and to the Church certain privileges. Nobody forbade the Pope to come out; nobody forbade the Church to do as she pleased as far as religious matters were concerned, but the Pope never accepted this law enacted by the Kingdom of Italy, that was known as the Law of Warranties to the Church. Finally, at the time of the Fascist Government, Mussolini was very instrumental in obtaining an appreachment between the government of Italy and the Church. This appreachment was instrumental in bringing about the signing of treaties between the Church and the Government of Italy, which treaties have been signed in February 1929.

In these treaties have been established the rights of the Church, the rights of the state. The Italian government has recognized in this treaty the territorial sovereignty of the Church on the Free Territory of Italy--certain parts, rather, correctly, on certain parts of the Free Territory of Italy. The Pope, before these treaties, was considered the use of the

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Lawyer.

Q. Are you the special counsel for the accused?
A. Yes, sir.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. Avvocato Lauro, are you licensed as an avvocato in Italy?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you practiced law?
A. Since 1921.

Q. Have you practiced law in any other country other than Italy?
A. Yes, United States of America.

Q. In what cities?
A. In Chicago and New York, and sometimes in Washington, D. C.

Q. And when you say Chicago, do you mean Chicago, State of Illinois?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you say New York, do you mean the City of New York, State of New York?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Both aforesaid cities being in the United States of America?
A. Yes, sir.

Apostolic palaces, but that was Italian territory. After the treaties have been signed, the place where the pope used to live, the Church of Saint Peter, became the property of the new state that was built, the state of the City of Vatican. And since the State of Vatican, in relation to his religious obligations, had the necessity to use other certain places inside the city of Rome, it was deemed proper to recognize to these places the same status of the City of the Vatican. So we have, for instance, the church of Santa Maria Majore, which is just near the convent where Ronsaglia was working and which is recognized territory belonging to the City of the Vatican.

Now, as far as the international law is concerned, these territories, ground where these territories are, are actually considered like a foreign state, like they would be a piece of the United States of America in Italy. Neither the Italian police can enter these places without proper authorization by the Vatican. The Vatican, as you know, has its own police. So I assume that Ronsaglia, the accused in this trial, as far as he was on that ground, was an untouchable person by the Americans, by the British, by the Italians. If he had choosed to remain there, nobody could have touched him, unless they went through the regular extradition proceedings, and I am afraid that no extradition would have been granted by the Vatican, being the matter of political reasons attending to the supposed crime of which he had been accused.

Q. I hand to you Defense Exhibit A for identification only and ask you what that document is.
A. This is all correct.

Q. Just tell me who made it and what it represents, but don't read what is on it.
A. I made this copy, copying with a pencil on another sheet of paper, then recopying this on the typewriter. I copied the words which are on this sheet of paper from a sign which is posted along Highway No. 1 in the portion of that highway that goes from the city of Leghorn to the city of Pisa.

Q. Near Quartermaster Depot 61?
A. Yes, exactly that, in a place where there is a fenced portion of the ground just along the highway.

Q. And you represent this Exhibit A for Identification to be an exact copy of the English, the Italian and the German writing upon the sign that you saw?
A. Yes, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robiscom): Any objection on this?

Prosecution: No objection.

Defense (Capt. Robiscom): At this time the defense offers in evidence Defense Exhibit A for Identification, subject to objection by the prosecution.

Prosecution: No objection.

President: It will be admitted in evidence and marked Defense Exhibit A in evidence.

Defense (Capt. Robiscom) (to witness): .. I ask you to read this.

Witness: In the English language there are written these words: "Anyone trespassing will be shot dead." Then--

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. I ask you now, is the same meaning conveyed in the Italian language?
A. Yes, in the line under it.

Q. Then below that line is there another writing?
A. Yes.

Q. And what meaning is conveyed there?
A. The meaning of the English text.

Q. The same text?
A. Of the line which is above.

Q. In what language?
A. The language above is in English.

Q. What language is the bottom line?
A. German, I believe, because I don't know the German language, but I have an impression that it is German.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, Defense Exhibit A, then, purports to be an exact copy of a sign on the 61st Quartermaster grounds saying, "Anyone trespassing will be shot dead," and that that sign is written in three different languages, English, Italian, and German.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. I ask you now, did you see more than one of these signs?
A. Oh, plenty of them.

Q. At approximately what distance along the quartermaster grounds highway would you say these signs were erected?
A. Some 50, 60 yards from one to the other.

Q. And numerous of these signs?
A. Yes.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, we object to this line of testimony. I don't see where it is relevant or material in any way.

President: Objection overruled.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, I'd like to state in there that it is relevant.

President: Well, the objection is overruled. You don't have to, the objection is overruled.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Would the defense be precluded from making an argument in order that the record will show our purpose?

President: You don't have to show your purposes, because the objection has been overruled.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): That is true, please the commission, but if the defense desires to have the record show why this last--

President: Well, then, go ahead, go ahead.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The reason for this statement being placed in evidence at this reference to show that here in Italy, where the United States government is in occupation and presumably the war over, and further, we are in the territory of a co-belligerent, we have, presumably on authority of our government, erected such signs thereby individuals are warned that they will be shot summarily for even trespassing, then we are quoting that as an analogy to the case in hand, which the court will know, of where it is alleged that an American soldier in civilian uniform without any markings whatsoever on that uniform was shot by belligerent soldiers in uniform, and so--

Prosecution: Now--

President: It will be more proper to bring that up in your final argument.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Yes, sir, but it is also proper to be shown in the motion, or in the argument on the motion of the objection, because, if it please the commission, the final argument is not recorded in the record, whereas motions are recorded.

President: The motion was not sustained; I don't see why you have an argument.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): We have the record show the facts.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. Witness Longo, do you have anything further to testify to concerning Defense Exhibit A in evidence?
A. Yes, that I have seen at daytime and at night time sentries with rifles posted along the place where these signs were posted.

Q. Are posted.
A. Then I have read in the papers and I report to the commission there are chronicles in the newspapers that at least I have read in the papers at least four times or five times, I read in the papers that persons have been actually shot and some of them died along the line where these signs are posted in the city of Livorno.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): There are no further questions.

President: Wait a minute--are you trying to contend that the deceased was trespassing on somebody's property and that is the reason he was shot?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): The defense is merely saying that in the war conditions of the case at hand there was certainly more justification for an immediate shooting than there would be justification for a shooting in the condition shown with regards to Defense Exhibit A. It is an analogy for the consideration of either the commission or the record, or both.

Capt. Young: Is it your contention that the deceased, Staff Sergeant Dale King, at the time he was shot was engaged in pilfering this Italian's home where--

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Now, may it please the commission, just a moment. Don't answer that--may it please the commission, there is an objection to that question.

President: On what grounds?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): On the grounds that this was merely the admission showing these signs. The advocate has not opened himself to a sworn testimony with regard to the issues of the case, but the defense counsel merely stated his contention concerning why the defense counsel introduced Exhibit A, and it is the contention of the defense that by the mere introduction of this exhibit and for that purpose only--this advocate is not on the stand under oath to testify to the general issue of this case, and we object.

Prosecution: The special counsel took the stand.

President: Objection sustained. Go ahead.

Prosecution: The special counsel took the stand openly; there were no restrictions on his testimony at the time.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): There are no further questions.

President: No further questions.

Prosecution: I have one question.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Question by prosecution:

Q. Would the Church protect on its property a criminal from due prosecution of justice?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Objection is made to that question on the grounds that it would call for a conclusion from the witness--

President: Objection--

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Just a minute; may I finish? The witness has stated only the law and he has not stated his opinion as to what the Pope may or may not do under a given set of circumstances.

President: Objection overruled; the question will be answered.

Witness (answering): I won't say that the Pope would protect the criminal, but I would say that the Pope would abide to international law as it is set forth in extraditing all persons accused of having committed crimes.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Question by Major Tschirn:

Q. Was the place where the accused, Ramoglia, was arrested, one of those places considered under the Lateran pacts?
A. Yes, sir, they are actually listed in the Lateran pact by their name and location.

Defense (Capt. Rabiesen): May it please the commission, at this time defense counsel wishes to read into the record that the accused was not arrested, but that the accused surrendered himself, and testimony shows that after the agent talked with the accused, then some three days later the accused came out--

Prosecution: We object to the defense counsel testifying for the record.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Rabiesen): Will my objection be noted, that the conclusion of arrested--

President: Everything is noted, everything is in the record.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and resumed his seat.)

Defense (Capt. Rabiesen): May it please the commission, our next witness is to be a professor from the University of Pisa whom we could not obtain this morning, but hope to obtain in the afternoon for that session. It is now approximately a quarter to twelve, and we do not wish to start a long witness and run over into the noon hour.

President: The commission will recess until 1:45.

The commission then took a recess until 2:40 P.M., at which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): This witness has been already a witness for the prosecution.

Nazzani Anastasio, Via dei Cassero No. 1, Terni, a witness for the prosecution, was then recalled by the defense, and having been admonished that the oath previously taken by him was still binding, through the interpreter, took the stand and through the interpreter testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. At the time that in Foline was killed an American soldier, a person in civilian clothes that was discovered to be an American, were you connected with the National Republican Guard?
A. I was a member of the National Republican Guard, only I was in an office.

Q. With what rank?
A. With the rank of captain.

Q. If I will remember, when you have been on the stand before you have said that while being in a street near a certain house you heard shots and you went in the house; is that true?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went in at that house who did you see in that house?
A. When I entered that house I saw a man who was wounded and three soldiers.

Q. Who were these three soldiers?
A. Lamia, Romaglia, and Dolci.

Q. Did you see any weapon in the room beside the weapons that the soldiers had on themselves?
A. I saw a dagger near the wounded man and I sequestered it and brought it to the prefect.

Q. How were they dressed, the three soldiers that you saw in that house?
A. They were dressed in the uniform of the National Republican Guard.

Q. And Romaglia, too, was he dressed in that uniform?
A. Yes.

Q. Can you believe, according to the military orders that you had knowledge of, that Romaglia could have been dressed in civilian suit?
A. I did not see him in civilian clothes.

Q. Do you know if there were orders that all the soldiers when participating to a military action had to be in uniform?
A. A general order was that anybody going on military operations should be in uniform.

Q. Was Romaglia a soldier at that time?
A. Yes, a soldier who depended from the GNR, but detached at the Federazione.

Q. What was it said to you when you entered in the room about the man lying on the floor?
A. I was told that Romaglia shot the man in the sense that when the man lunged toward Romaglia Romaglia shot him.

Q. Did Romaglia himself say that to you or the other soldiers?
A. In that moment the other soldiers told me, that Lamia and Dolci.

Q. Did Lamia tell you if he shot or not?
A. No, Lamia did not tell me.

Q. Have you been informed at that time that an attack by the American soldier had been made against the Italian soldiers and that you reported that fact to your superiors?
A. I was informed that this soldier who was hidden at a corner of the broad bar, broad chest, leaped, lunged toward Romaglia, and even though the soldiers were not under my orders, I, as an officer, collected the information and just made a report, written, which I gave to Lieutenant Colonel Romanni.

Q. Did you make a complete inquiry about these facts?
A. Just a momentary inquiry, because then I had this wounded man taken away to see if we could give him some aid by a doctor.

Q. So you did not question very powerfully, completely, all the soldiers about this fact?
A. For me the statements that the soldiers gave me already were sufficient, that is, that this man lunged toward the soldiers and he was shot.

Q. Was the soldier Deloi in uniform?
A. Yes, he was in uniform.

Q. Were the members of the Federazione of Zorzi required to be in uniform?
A. The soldiers detached at the Federazione had to dress the uniform in military operations, but they dressed in civilian clothes for special missions.

Q. Will you describe Lanzia, as to whether he was dark or light?
A. Lanzia had a rosy complexion and light brown hair.

Q. Which was the taller of the two soldiers, Lanzia or Romaglia?
A. Romaglia was the taller, but the difference was very little.

Q. When was the first time after you entered the room that you talked to Romaglia concerning this incident?
A. I didn't speak to him of this incident when I met him, I only heard that he was bragging of this incident. But I knew he wanted to be promoted, well, to get a commission as an officer, and he may have done this, I believe that he may have done this, just to attribute to himself a merit.

Q. You did not see any part of the action in the room yourself, is that correct?
A. No. When I entered the American soldier was already on the floor and the shots had already been fired.

Q. Did you hear the accused Romaglia say, "I killed the American"?
A. Yes.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Did the soldier Dalai precede you into the house?
A. I found him in the house.

Q. Was he alone just previous to entering the house?
A. I don't know; I found him in the house. I don't know if he was around there. I don't know if he was near us, or where.

Q. Were you personally acquainted with Lamaia and Romeaglia?
A. Yes.

Q. What organization did Lamaia belong to?
A. Lamaia and Dalai belonged to the unit of Captain Branca and Lieutenant Antonucci.

Q. Was that unit a part of the National Republican Guard?
A. Yes.

Q. Were the members on active duty with the National Republican Guard required to be in uniform at all times?
A. The National Republican Guard had always to be in uniform, but I don't know if anybody dressed in civilian clothes of their own initiative. This has nothing to do with the orders.

Q. Did you observe whether or not the soldier Lamaia was in uniform?
A. Yes, he was in uniform.

Q. Where?
A. Right there in the town a little while after the incident.

Q. Do you recall making a statement to a War Crimes investigator?
A. No, I made a statement to a vice-brigadier of carabinieri.

Q. Is that your signature (indicating)?
A. Yes.

Q. This statement was made on the 18th of October, 1946, is that correct?
A. I don't remember the exact date, but they called me in the barracks.

Q. Is your mind clear now or was it clearer then in regard to the facts of this case?
A. For me my mind is just as clear now as it was then, because I had to report just what I was informed of.

Q. Did you not at that time make the statement, "I do not recall whether he wore military or civilian clothes"?

Defense (Mr. Laure): Pardon me--may I object? I would like that the prosecutor would clarify if that reference to the dying man or to some of the soldiers. I have the impression that from the statement it appears that he refers to the dying American soldier, that he does not remember if he was wearing civilian or military clothes. It does not refer to the-- President: Objection overruled; if I recall well, the witness who was here before the commission made a statement yesterday that he wasn't sure whether the accused was in civilian clothes or not. He made that statement to the commission yesterday here. You can read back the cross-examination from the commission. He wasn't sure whether the accused was in civilian clothes or in military uniform.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, since at least two of the three on the defense feel that there must be a mixup on the part of the witness on the stand, we will ask, then, for a reference to the notes of yesterday concerning the statement of the witness now on the stand, and the defense asks that the testimony of this witness yesterday be read back.

President: The request of the defense is denied.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, if the answer is different it will make a difference upon this testimony. At the time--

President: Your request is denied. You ask him a direct question; later on we can go back in the record.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): I was asked a question concerning the American wounded man and I was asked if I recognized him perfectly. So they put down I don't remember whether he was in civilian clothes or in military uniform, but that regards the American.

President (to reporter): All right. Now you look back into the cross-examination of the court in which the witness was asked in what uniform the accused was dressed and he answered that he wasn't sure.

Prosecution: I object; we should have the entire testimony of that witness read back, because I am sure yesterday he made the statement he was not positive.

President: All right; read the entire testimony from beginning to end.

(Testimony of Mapeani Anastasio on 5 August 1947 was read as requested.)

President: I understand that the statement about the civilian clothes, the accused was in civilian clothes, was made by the witness Vincenzo Bolsi and not by the present witness, Anastasio Mapeani.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. In your statement, did you say that the soldier who killed the American had no superior orders to carry out but acted according to their own initiative?
A. Yes.

Q. And did you further state, "For that reason, I think the whole responsibility is on the executors of that crime"?
A. Certainly.

Defense (Mr. Lamers): I ask the court--I would like to see a copy of that document, that was handed to that witness.

President: You will get a copy. Will you show him a copy, Colonel Wollen?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): We want to see it now; there may be some cross-examination on the document.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, the defense was furnished copies of all statements of the witnesses on July the 15th.

Defense (Mr. Lamers): No, the only reason is this, that in the copies that are being furnished to us that document does not appear--I have noticed that, looking at the document, so I would like to know what it is all about. That is the only point.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): To the knowledge of the defense counsel, the packet that was handed to him on the 15th July of 1947 has not been untastened.

(The statement was handed to the defense.)

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Lamers:

Q. You arrived at the scene of this incident shortly after the incident occurred, is that correct?
A. It had already happened, but as soon as I heard the shots I went right away, so it was right after.

Q. Did you investigate this incident?
A. Yes, I asked why they had killed him.

Q. What report did you turn in to your superiors as to the responsibility connected with the incident?
A. As soon as I went--I reported that as soon as I heard the shots I went into the house and I found these three soldiers, Lanzia, Renneglia and Dolci, but that this American hid himself behind the bread box and threw himself toward the soldiers and this soldier just fired.

Q. Which soldier fired?
A. Renneglia. That is, it resulted from the statements made to me that Renneglia fired.

Q. Did Renneglia execute a coup de grace, that is, the killing shot, the final shot that you put in the head of a person?

Defense (Capt. Robiseon): May it please the commission, an objection to that question, calling for a conclusion of this witness. The witness has testified that he was not there, that the shooting was all done, and that there was only a statement made by the soldiers.

Major Leeuws: I will withdraw that question.

Questions by Major Leeuws:

Q. Did you assert in your investigation that a coup de grace was fired?
A. What do you mean by coup de grace?

Q. A final killing shot.

Defense (Capt. Robiseon): May it please the commission, objection here, may it please the commission. That question of the member of the commission still calls for a conclusion on the grounds of the fact that this witness has repeatedly testified that the witness was not present.

Prosecution: May it please the-- Defense (Capt. Robiseon): Now, wait--we are not finished. May it please the commission, may I finish now?

President: Go ahead.

Defense (Capt. Robiseon): There is no testimony here of anything being said about such a final shot being fired, that there was only a report that two other soldiers said a shot was fired and later down on the square some 5 or 6 minutes the accused bragged that a shot was fired. Now, may it please the commission, the question just propounded is unfair.

President: He is asking for what was said in the report of investigation, so if he reported that in that report it is a fair question to be asked. Therefore, your objection is overruled.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): They told me that this American leaped toward the soldiers and that he thought Renneglia shot, and this man fell on the floor.

Questions by Major Tucker:

Q. Did you take written statements from these soldiers or just report what you had heard by word of mouth?
A. Only oral statements. I made only a summary report, so that the Lieutenant Colonel Benzoni could make a more ample investigation.

Questions by Col. Moore:

Q. Did you see the soldier Dolci enter the room?
A. I found him in the room when I entered.

Q. You testified in the reading yesterday that this man was alone and he preceded you into the house.
A. He said that he was with me, but I was on a small road looking in another direction and checking up on some soldiers and when I ran and went into the house Dolci was already there. It may very well be that he had gone in there one moment before I did.

Questions by Col. Sears:

Q. Did the wounded man speak or attempt to speak in any way?
A. No, he could not.

Q. Was there a fire burning in the fireplace?
A. If the fire was burning? I did not see this burning fire. There was, but the fire was dead, and I don't know if there was any flame or not. I didn't see any flame.

Questions by Col. Moore:

Q. Where is Lanoia, if you know?
A. I don't know.

Q. How many shots did they report to you that Ronsaglia fired?
A. They told me one shot.

Q. How many shots did you hear?
A. Two or three.

Q. Who fired the others?
A. I do not know.

Questions by Major Tucker:

Q. Is the uniform of the Republican Guard the same as the uniform of the Federazione?
A. No.

Q. Was Ronsaglia wearing the uniform of the Republican Guard or of the Federation?
A. Many times I saw Ronsaglia in the uniform of the National Republican Guard, but other times I saw him also in civilian clothes.

Q. Was he wearing the uniform of the civilian guard on the morning of the 24th of January 1944?
A. I saw him there in military uniform.

Q. Is the uniform he wore of such a color and cut that it could be mistaken for a civilian suit by an elderly civilian?
A. No, it could not be confused. The uniform is grey-green.

Questions by Major Loewus:

Q. When you entered the room, did you see any weapons in Ronsaglia's hands?
A. Yes.

Q. What weapon did he have in his hands?
A. Well, anyhow, he had an automatic rifle and a pistol.

Q. Did he have both of them in his hands or was one slung over his shoulder?
A. It seems to me that he had his automatic rifle in his hands and that his pistol was in its holster.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. Did the accused ever tell you that American soldier was hidden behind the cupboard when the accused went into that house?
A. Later, but not then.

Q. How much later?
A. 3 or 4 or 5 days.

Q. And you talked with the accused between the time of this incident and the time he told you that the deceased was hidden behind the cupboard?
A. I had no reason for seeing the accused; I was in an office and he was detached at the Federation.

Q. Did you see him at the square shortly after this incident when the American's body was brought to the square?
A. I don't remember if it was on the square; I saw him on the street.

Q. Shortly after, then, a matter of a few hours, after this incident?
A. 4 or 5 minutes after.

Q. 4 or 5 minutes--and that was the time he told you that he had shot the American, is that true?
A. Yes.

Q. And it wasn't until 4 or 5 days after that that he first told you that the American at the time was hidden behind the cupboard, isn't that true?
A. I don't know how much time passed, but anyhow it is a thing that I learned from the soldiers that were there, Salsi and Lamedia.

Q. I am speaking about your conversation with the accused that you testified that you had 4 or 5 days after this incident. That was the first time that you learned from the accused that the deceased was behind the cupboard at the time of the incident, isn't that true?
A. I do not remember exactly, but I know this thing anyhow, because the others had told me this.

Q. I am asking you when did the accused first tell you that the deceased was behind the cupboard at the time?
A. He told me that when I met him, that the soldier was behind the bread box and when he jumped out toward him he wounded him.

Q. When is that?
A. I don't remember the time, but it was a day or so afterwards.

Q. Yes. Now, you testified a moment ago that you heard either 2 or 3 shots fired. Do you remember your testimony in that regard?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, were those shots fired in rapid succession or was there an appreciable length of time, a matter of seconds, between the shots?
A. There may have been an interval of a half or a whole second.

Q. All right. Now, will you demonstrate to this commission by the clapping of your hands the rapidity with which these shots were fired?
A. (The witness complied.)

Q. Only two?
A. I don't remember if there were 2 or 3, because there was much shooting going on also on the outside.

Q. All right. Now, if there were three, was there about the same period of time between the first and second as between the second and third?
A. I heard the first shots together, and then I don't--and the other shots afterwards at a distance.

Q. And you say there was a lot of shooting going on outside--who was doing the shooting outside?
A. When we arrived at the time Goppo put a squad of soldiers facing the mountains to prevent eventual partisan Jugoslav attack. At a certain moment we heard lots of shooting.

Questions by president:

Q. I now hand you Prosecution's Exhibit No. 15, purported to be a floor plan of the house where the American was killed. I want you to draw here a line about half an inch long showing the place where the body of the American soldier was when you entered the house, and another line showing the place where the knife was lying on the floor.
A. (The witness complied.)

President: For the purpose of the record mark where the body was as X-1 and the little line that illustrates where the dagger was lying as X-2.

(The diagram was so marked by the judge advocate.)

Questions by president:

Q. Make two small circles indicating where the soldiers were standing.
A. Here Lancia (indicating), here Romagnia, here Dalai (indicating).

Q. All right, mark these circles 1, 2, and 3.
A. (The witness complied.)

Q. Number 1 is who?
A. Lancia.

Q. Number 2?
A. Romagnia.

Q. And number 3?
A. Dalai.

Q. Does that house have one or two floors?
A. There were 2 or 3 steps going into the house, three steps going into the house, then a small corridor, and then you come into the kitchen.

Q. Only one floor, then?
A. I don't know if on the other side there was a cellar or something, but on the side we entered there were only 3 steps, so the distance from the level of the ground to the level of the floor could have been about 50 or 60 centimeters.

President: Any other questions by any members of the court?

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. If I am not mistaken, you have said that you have seen the pistol in the holster on the body of Roncaglia?
A. Yes, when I entered.

Q. Now, is it always possible to see a pistol in a holster or not?
A. Yes.

Q. How many types of holsters are there for pistols?
A. There are many types, because the soldiers even made their own, and anyhow there are some that are completely covering the weapon and others that are made in stripes, so that you can see the whole of it.

Q. Have you ever been an officer of the Regular Army?
A. I am a captain in the Italian Army.

Q. Have you been under the colors in time of peace?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know that there is a rule about the uniform of the officers that when they go out free from any duties while taking their time visiting in town, under their uniform they must wear the pistol at any time?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know that many officers, to avoid disturbance with their superiors, used to go out in the street of the city with an empty holster?

Prosecution: Objection, if the commission please. This calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness and the accused was not an officer at the time the crime was committed.

Defense (Mr. Laure): I asked the witness if he has been an officer of the Regular Army in time of peace, and I referred to time of peace there too.

President: Objection overruled.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Do you know that the purpose was only to avoid the weight of the pistol when going walking in the street for pleasure?
A. Sometimes they stuffed paper into their holsters.

Q. And was it possible for officers on duty in the streets to find out that they had not a pistol there, only outside?

Prosecution: I don't understand the question.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. It was possible that the officers patrolling the street to see if other officers were in proper uniform were able to obtain the fact that they had not the pistol only looking at the holster?
A. Yes, it could be seen right away.

Q. Also with the type of holsters which were all covered?
A. Yes, you could see just the same.

Q. You mean that it could be seen by the eyes or that it could be felt by touching it?
A. You could see it even 4 or 5 paces away, but it has only happened in cities, in garrisons.

Defense (Mr. Laure): I would like to take the witness stand to state that I could not tell it.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. So you say that you may be mathematically sure that when a holster is empty you may detect that it is such. Remember that you are under oath, and also if you are mistaken you are letting a great responsibility--

Prosecution: The prosecution objects to comments by counsel, and objects to counsel cross-examining his own witness. He has called this witness, now, as a witness for the defense.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Mr. Laure): I rest for the moment.

Defense (Capt. Robiesen): No further questions. The counsel means--we are not ready to rest; no further questions.

President: The witness is excused and the commission will take ten minutes' recess.

The commission then took a recess for ten minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter, and the interpreter, resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Ideale del Carpio, Pisa, a witness for the defense, was then brought into the courtroom and through the interpreter was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Ideale del Carpio.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Pisa.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Professor of legal medicine at the University.

Prosecution: Your witness.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Professor, have you ever met a man by the name of Tito Romaglia?
A. I have seen him, because I was asked to by the lawyer a few days ago.

President: Is he a doctor?

Defense (Capt. Rubicson): May it please the commission, yes, in our courts we are obliged to qualify him.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. You are a professor of legal medicine in the University of Pisa?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any academic degree beside the title of Professor?
A. Doctor of Medicine and a free teacher in my subject.

Q. When did you graduate as a doctor of medicine?
A. In 1926.

Q. Then in what university did you graduate?
A. Florence.

Q. Is the university of Florence a duly recognized university in Italy by the Italian government and cultured institutions?
A. It is a government university. There is no other kind of university in Italy.

Q. With the degree of Doctor of Medicine can you practice medicine in Italy?
A. Yes, because I already took the government examination for free professor.

Q. When did you start to teach in universities?
A. Practically, from 1926, with an effective title from 1936.

Q. In what university did you teach first?
A. Catania, Cagliari and Pisa.

Q. Beside being a teacher in universities, have you any particular occupation with the Italian courts?
A. I am in general called by penal--in civil tribunals of Livorno, Pisa, Lucca, as a medical legal expert.

President: We will consider him qualified.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Did you ever meet a man by the name of Tito Romaglia?
A. I saw him two days ago for the first time.

Q. Can you recognize that man now in this room?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you mind to point him out?
A. There he is (indicating).

Defense (Mr. Laure): Let the record show that he has indicated the man Tito Romaglia.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Have you had the opportunity of physically examining and mentally examining Vito Renaglia?
A. I have been able to make an examination which was extremely summary, due to the short period of time I had.

Q. What can you say to the commission about your findings?
A. From a physical point of view, bronchial catarrh, very diffuse, a lowering of the left pulmonary apex. From a neurological point of view, an accentuation of tendonal reflexes and a not very marked Romberg.

Q. Can you explain to the court in plain terms what are the conclusions of all these medical terms?
A. Those tendonal reflexes are symptoms of a hyper-sensitiveness of the nervous system. Romberg indicates an alteration of the vestibule apparatus in the middle ear.

Q. What consequences would that bear on the character of Renaglia?
A. I have carried out some psychological inquiry into the character of Renaglia. Although the time was very short, a Lurie test was made for tension, and it consists in erasing a certain number of similar marks on a piece of paper, a printed piece of paper, and I carried out this inquiry with the characterological test of Rorschach. The test of Rorschach consists in a series of photographs made with ink spots pressed between 2 or 3 sheets of paper. As a general interpretation, it serves to know the capacity of imagination that the individual has, and of fantasy. On the basis of the answers to the questions and on the interpretation of the answers that the individual gives it can be established if the individual is capable of logical reasoning. If he follows with accurateness the test which is presented to him, if he looks at superficial things or general things rather than particular ones, and other small particulars which it would be long to speak of without having also the test at your disposal to show.

Q. You have found that Renaglia has a capacity of attention, to be attentive?
A. From the observation of the test, it should be said that Renaglia has a capacity to be attentive which is very low.

Q. You have noticed through your test that Renaglia has that defect which is called in Italian pletorico dell'io? Explain to the court what that means.
A. When we say that an individual is pletheric from a physical point of view, we mean an individual that has an exuberance of the masses. From a psychic point of view, an individual is pletheric of the ego.

Q. That is a correct translation, but in what regard is a pletheric of himself?
A. An individual who believes himself to be the motive center of everything, believes himself to be in the central and important position and no one else can do anything but him.

Q. What you have found about his impermotion, and explain what means that term.
A. He is an individual who reacts very exuberantly to anything, to verbal stimulants.

Q. To any stimulation?
A. Verbal stimulation.

Q. Did you find that he is easy to imagine things and imagine fantasies?
A. From the Rorschach test he demonstrates a certain amplitude of imagination.

Q. Now, not talking of Renzaglia but in general, do you think that it is possible for a human being receiving a nervous shock to formulate in his mind the idea to have done something, particularly in relation to the physical facts that have produced the nervous shock?
A. This is even a common observation of any police office, when a fact of a certain important case comes about, it is not rare that there be individuals with a nervous system that is weak, that can present themselves declaring they have committed certain facts, certain things, and that way deviating the investigational activity.

Q. Now, then, do you know, always speaking in general, that it is possible that a person telling a lie, and that he says that lie again and again and finally believes that it is the truth and defends what he is saying as it were the truth?
A. We know that in the infant age there is a period which is called the period of mittomania, myth mania, the mania of myths, and in this period children tell lies just for the enjoyment of telling lies, and they are so convinced of what they say that they defend it notwithstanding corporal punishment. Now, facts of this nature can be found in adults sometimes when adult individuals remain infants in their minds and remain in the period of myth mania.

President: Before you go ahead, will you please explain to the commission what you are trying to prove with this line of questioning?

Defense (Mr. Laure): To find out if Renzaglia, from the examination made by this competent professor, can be a person subjected to mittomania.

President: Would the summary examination made two days ago prove that?

Defense (Mr. Laure): I understand yes, or at least can give the chance for a further, more complete, examination.

Prosecution: You are suggesting that the accused is incompetent mentally to defend himself?

Defense (Mr. Laure): No, I am not saying that he is incompetent to defend himself, but he is not completely in accord with the Latin term, compos sui, which is completely unto himself, but this fact is only one side of the question. The true side, that I am trying to bring out now, is that Renzaglia is a man afflicted with mittomania, that is, with the habit, which is not coming out from his soul but only from his natural bent to say lies and to insist on lies and particularly to bring out that he is a man that he is always thinking of himself as the motive center of everything and especially when the lie is said in relation to his personality, making his personality greater, at least in his eyes, he insists on that lie.

President: Go ahead.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Now, after you have said these things in general, what comments in particular about Renzaglia?
A. The time I have had to examine him from a psychological point of view is very short. However, the results of the conversation with Renzaglia--I have found that he is an individual who has a certain tendency to exaggerate. For instance, regarding what his capacities are, he told me he was an important employee of a very large firm, and instead what the lawyer and the wife told me, he was a very modest employee, nothing exceptional. This shows a tendency to tell things which are not true and to be persuaded of what he is saying.

Defense (Mr. Laure): Your witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. You say the accused has a certain tendency to exaggerate. What test disclosed that tendency?
A. The tendency to exaggerate is found in a man that talks an awful lot and says much more than what is really in reality.

Q. What test did you make to determine that?
A. I have only been able to carry out the Rohrschach test, which does not give a response to this particular query, but my experience in criminal psychology induces me to believe that there is in Romanglia this tendency to exaggerate. The medical diagnosis and sometimes the psychological diagnosis does not all derive from exact data or objective data, but from the general impression that the examiner observes from the case.

Q. How much time did you spend in your examination?
A. Six hours.

Q. Is the accused mentally competent?
A. The accused is mentally sound, he has a capacity of will and understanding according to our, the requisites of our, in relation to our penal code.

Q. Does he have the mental capacity to assist his defense counsel in his own defense?
A. I believe so, yes.

Prosecution: No further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Lauro):

Q. But do you think that he is able sometimes also to mislead the defense counsel?

Prosecution: The prosecution objects to that question.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): Nothing else.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Major Lacsuna:

Q. Let's take a hypothetical case. If a man killed somebody and three years afterwards he requested a job of a priest, then two days or three days after obtaining this job he informed this priest of that former act, what would you say of that man?
A. From what point of view?

Q. Would you say that that man had that on his mind--that is, from a psychological point of view?
A. If he doesn't suffer from amnesia, he may have--it could be possible that he could have that fact on his mind.

Defense (Mr. Laure): (To witness:) If he had the amnesia he may remember that?

Interpreter: Well, he said have in his mind.

Questions by Col. Sears:

Q. Any indication of the use of narcotics?
A. I have seen him only these last few days, and I have found no sign of him being addicted to drugs.

President: No further questions by the commission. Witness excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Defense (Mr. Laure): Sir, I move at this moment if it is possible to excuse that professor. He has to return to his profession.

President: Very well.

Defense (Mr. Laure): If you don't mind, I will absent myself for a moment. I will be back soon.

President: The commission will take a five-minute recess.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense is calling one of the witnesses the prosecution have listed. He is the witness Bonanni Ezio; I am making him a defense witness.

Q. It is your knowledge that to Polino, beside the militiamen in uniform went some men belonging to the militia in civilian suits, civilian clothes?
A. There were men of the police.

Q. But did they belong to your military unit?
A. No.

Q. Where did they belong?
A. To the police.

Q. To the civilian police, you mean? There is a military police, there is a civil police.
A. I mean civilian police, because we did not have military police.

Q. Did you go to Polino yourself?
A. No.

Q. Did Captain Mascani go to Polino?
A. Yes.

Q. Did Captain Mascani, after coming back from Polino, report to you something about the killing of an American soldier?
A. Yes, at first vocal, and then written.

Q. Do you remember what Captain Mascani said and wrote to you?
A. Yes. There is a statement of mine concerning this.

Q. What did you say?
A. I expressed displeasure at the incident and I placed Remoaglia under inquiry informing my direct superiors.

Q. Why did you put Roncaglia under an inquiry?
A. To be able to establish what the responsibilities were and how the facts had come about.

Q. But why you picked out Roncaglia just to inquire?
A. Because in the report forwarded to me by Captain Mascani it was said that Roncaglia had killed him.

President: Had killed who?

Witness: The American.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Did ever Captain Mascani, at that time or any time after, tell you that he had seen actually with his own eyes Roncaglia killing the soldier?
A. No.

Q. Then what happened about your inquiry--did you find anything about Roncaglia?
A. As soon as I had started my inquiry I was informed that the head of the province, the head of all of the province, went to Poline himself to initiate an inquiry, and not to get tangled up with his work--

Defense (Mr. Laure): Now, wait a minute--different translation. "To avoid to disturb with my mission the mission of the prefect that was my superior."

Prosecution: May it please the commission, we have an official interpreter here--

Interpreter: That is not avoiding anything. Not to-- Defense (Mr. Laure): Disturb.

Interpreter: It is not disturb; it is to--

President: Interfere.

Interpreter: Not to interfere with the work of my superior.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Was it usual that when a case of that type happened an inferior set himself aside to leave the superior do what he pleased to do?
A. Always.

Q. Was that a duty?
A. Always, unless you had a direct mission.

Defense (Mr. Laure): "A specific--"

Interpreter: A direct mission.

Defense (Mr. Laure): Did he say a specific order?

Interpreter: I'm sorry, but the witness said "direct" and I am translating "direct".

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Do you know when the men that went to Folino returned to Terni?
A. About 1360 hours.

Q. Do you remember that you have seen Romoaglia Tito at that time in some place in Terni?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember if he was dressed in civilian clothes or with a uniform of the National Federal Republican Guard?
A. In the uniform of the National Republican Guard.

Q. Did he wear any arm?
A. An automatic rifle.

Q. Did you see if Romoaglia had a pistol at that time?
A. I did not see it.

Q. Now, I show you two holsters for pistols used generally in the Italian Army. Are these—

Prosecution: The prosecution objects to the exhibit offered unless they are shown to have been the type used in 1944 by the Army.

Defense (Mr. Laure): We may ask the—

President: Objection overruled; go ahead.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Can you tell us if these types of holsters, are they the same as were used also in January 1944?
A. There were these and other forms.

Q. And also 1918?
A. No.

Q. What type there was in 1918?
A. (The witness indicated.)

Q. The covered type. Now, if a man wears, like I am wearing this moment, and if I have here a revolver, can you say when it is closed if you may see if the revolver is in there or not?
A. If the holster is made for that particular pistol, yes, but if the pistol is of a similar caliber it goes in.

Q. Was it the use of the Italian officers to go outside when free from the duty with an empty holster?
A. Yes.

Q. Was it possible to obtain the fact that the holster was empty?
A. No.

Q. The material is hard or soft? Please let the record show that he put something which is not a revolver inside the holster.

President: What are you trying to prove with that?

Defense (Mr. Laura): That a revolver can be in but also that a revolver cannot be in.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Question by president:

Q. Would an officer going on a military mission carry an empty holster?
A. No.

Question by Major Lawson:

Q. Does the butt of the Berretta 7.65 or the Berretta 9 millimeter protrude slightly from the holster?
A. Caliber 9, yes.

Q. Does not the caliber 7.65 also protrude slightly?
A. No, the butt does not in the holster belonging to caliber 9.

Q. Is there not a holster of a similar type for the Berretta caliber 7.65?
A. Yes.

Major Lawson: That's all.

President: The commission should not have interrupted you before you finished your direct.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, with the possible thought of shortening the rest of this case, the defense counsel asks for a five-minute recess. I think there are a lot of questions we can avoid and save a lot of time.

President: All right; request granted.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Prosecution: Let the record show that the witness who was on the stand at the time the recess was taken is still on the stand, and may I remind you that you are still under oath.

(The admonition was translated by the interpreter.)

Defense (Mr. Laura): No further questions.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Who ordered the expedition to Paline?
A. At Paline--that was not an expedition.

Q. Who ordered the movement of troops and personnel from Terni to Foligno on the 24th day of January 1944?
A. The German command.

Q. Who commanded the men composing that party?
A. Which group?

Q. The group going to Foligno from Terni on the 24th day of January 1944.
A. A German officer.

Q. I believe you said the meeting prior to the trip to Foligno was held in the office of the Federazione, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. There has been evidence before this commission that Coppo Alberto commanded the men going from Terni to Foligno. Is that correct?
A. No. The Federale Coppo only communicated to me at my arrival the request for military personnel to render honors to the bodies of the dead.

Q. Who called you to Terni?
A. By telephone.

Q. Who?
A. My duty officer.

Q. Which one--or, what unit of your command made the trip to Foligno on the 24th day of January?
A. A mixed unit. We did not have a constituted unit; we had services.

Q. At that time the accused was on detached service with the Federazione, is that correct?
A. He was also on detached duty at the Federazione; the Federation had a guard.

Q. You had approximately 20 or 25 men on the trip, is that correct?
A. Yes, about.

Q. The other members of the party were composed of policemen and members of the Federazione, is that correct?
A. That were going with the Federale.

Q. In what capacity did Captain Manzoni go to Foligno on the 24th of January 1944?
A. As my trustworthy officer, because I had given him the mission of organizing the unit.

Q. Who was in command of the unit?
A. Captain Branca.

Q. Do you know what time the unit departed from Terni for Foligno?
A. I do not know the exact hour, but certainly before eight o'clock.

Q. What time did you arrive in Terni?
A. At eight o'clock. That is why I can establish it was before eight o'clock.

Q. The expedition had already cleared the town, at that time, is that right?

Defense (Mr. Lauro): Pardon me, sir, there is a mistake in the translation. Previous, when something was questioned, the prosecution has asked to the witness if that was an expedition. The witness has answered no. Now the prosecuter has asked if the expedition had cleared from the town by eight o'clock. The interpreter has translated the word "expedition" with the word "gruppo", which is not expedition.

Interpreter: Well, I'm sorry. I had "group" in mind.

Witness (answering): At what time?

Questions by prosecution:

Q. At eight o'clock?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what time they left?
A. Exactly, no.

Q. Approximately.
A. I was not present.

Q. Did Captain Branca make any report to you?
A. No, because only Captain Mascani was to make a report.

Q. Was not Captain Branca in command of your unit that went to Folina?
A. Yes.

Q. Was the accused Ranzaglia with your unit or with the Federazione?
A. I don't know.

Q. Where did Captain Mascani report to you?
A. At Terni.

Q. When?
A. At the command.

Q. When?
A. In the afternoon of Monday, after having arrived at Terni, at first vocal and later in writing.

Q. Did Captain Mascani report to you immediately upon his return to Terni?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what time he reported to you?
A. From 1400 hours to 1500 hours.

Q. What time did you first see the accused Ranzaglia?
A. About 1500.

Q. Did the accused report to you before Captain Mascani reported?
A. No.

Q. Where did you see the accused?
A. In the street.

Q. Was he with your unit at that time?
A. No, because there were--there was more than one barracks.

Q. Being on detached service with the Federazione, did the accused live in a barracks?
A. He could also be authorized to sleep at home.

Q. Did the men keep clothing in the barracks, those that lived at home?
A. I don't understand.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): Which clothes?

Questions by prosecution:

Q. The ordinary clothing that a soldier or a civilian might have.
A. You mean civilian clothes?

Q. I mean their extra clothing that they were not wearing at that time.
A. No, they were issued only one uniform.

Q. Did the men living at home keep civilian clothing in the barracks?
A. No.

Q. How many men did you see returning from Poline on the afternoon of January 24th?
A. I was not present at the return of the mission.

Q. Then you didn't see any of them returning from Poline?
A. At the return, no. I only met a few groups that were returning to the barracks.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you don't know anything that happened on the 24th day of January except that Captain Manzani reported to you, is that correct?
A. Nothing else.

Prosecution: No further questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. Did Romaglia say anything to you when you saw him in the street about 1500 hours on the 24th?
A. Nothing. He only saluted, as an inferior salutes a superior.

President: Any further questions? Apparently not.

Defense: No further questions.

Defense (Mr. Laura): Only one question, sir.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Did you ever have any British prisoners of war in your barracks?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember their names?
A. Mack, Scottish, and George, English, and I knew that Mack was a grocer in Scotland.

President: When you say English you mean British and not American?

Witness: British.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Under what circumstances did these prisoners happen to be in your barracks?

Prosecution: May it please the commission, I don't see the relevancy of this.

President: Go ahead.

Witness (answering): They were found by some of my men on patrol.

Questions by defense (Mr. Laure):

Q. Did Romaglia have anything to do with these British soldiers in your barracks?
A. No.

Q. But do you know that he was in contact with them sometimes?
A. Oh, yes, he was also waited upon at mess by them together with other NCO's, non-commissioned officers.

Q. Do you know that Romaglia offered a civilian suit to one of these prisoners for a particular reason that you may explain to the court?
A. Yes.

Q. In what circumstances?
A. I took Mack to my house and only Mack, because George was ill with malaria.

Q. And why you had that prisoner dressed in civilian clothes?
A. To hide him from the Germans; otherwise, the Germans would have taken him from me.

Q. Did Romaglia know that?
A. Yes.

Q. Did he act voluntarily in giving you his civilian clothes?
A. As soon as they were requested by me he gave them to me immediately.

Prosecution: No further questions.

President: Witness excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the defense feels that it can finish this case very briefly in the morning, but due to the fact that on our four days of preparation we are truly tired out, we would like to have the evening to recapitulate, to size up our case, be ready for arguments in the morning, and possibly only one or two brief statements from a few witnesses in the morning. We feel that the case can be completed very early tomorrow, including argument.

Defense (Mr. Lamar): If it is convenient, I will be here in the morning, but if it would be possible and not distract the commission, I would prefer to have time in the morning. You have said—perhaps I misunderstood you—told the commission what you want? Now I am asking this. If the Commission wants that for tomorrow morning, I have no objection, but if there is the possibility to open the commission in the afternoon instead of the morning and finish in the afternoon.

President: We have other cases to take after this tomorrow.

Defense (Mr. Lamar): Then it will be as the commission is pleased.

President: We will start at 8:30 tomorrow morning. We will adjourn until 8:30 in the morning.

The commission then at 4:55 P.M., 7 August 1947, adjourned to meet at 8:30 A.M., 8 August 1947.

CLYDE W. WELLER
LT COL, INF
Judge Advocate

Leghorn, Italy
8 August 1947

The commission met, pursuant to adjournment, at 9:50 A.M., all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, who were present at the close of the previous session in this case, being present. The accused, the reporter and the interpreter were also present.

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): I want to address the commission in Italian.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the special counsel is about to tell the commission in Italian, in order that it may be passed through the interpreter, the accused will hear the Italian spoken words. The interpreter will then proceed to be placed before the commission the same as any other witness, and at this time the defense is taking the opportunity to inform the commission of the fact that on all of these arguments, when we discussed motions and so forth, they were not translated from the interpreter back to the accused, who speaks Italian, and we feel that that has been almost an error in this commission. This Italian accused has a right to know every word that goes into this record.

President: He has an Italian defense counsel, and--

Defense (Capt. Robinson): But the Italian lawyer is defending him, but when some of his own conversation is going on, on arguments and motions, the accused did not have the benefit of knowing those questions.

President: That is the reason we have an Italian counsel here, to take care of that.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): At this time we request the Italian counsel be allowed to make his talk at this time in Italian through the interpreter in English to the commission, in order that the interpretation may go on to the record in English and in order that the accused may have benefit of every word spoken.

President: Go ahead.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): From the talks I have had in this last week with the accused, and from what privately Professore del Carpio referred to me, and Professore del Carpio himself confirmed under oath in front of the commission, I have formed the honest conviction that Tito Renzaglia, although not being mentally disabled, although being able to understand in part the procedure which is being carried on against him; however, he is in an infusion psychological state, which it is opportune at this moment that instead of having him answer questions which in this moment may not be understood by him, it is better that I instead should tell the commission what is my conviction which I have arrived at after my conversations with Renzaglia.

Tito Renzaglia, in any circumstances, from the very first moment I have known him, has insisted with me in the strongest manner that he is completely innocent of the crime of which he is accused. I have formed the conviction, as certainly the commission also formed it, that the documents and the deposition presented to the commission are so confused and sometimes tend to deviate from the truth--

Prosecution: May it please the commission, the prosecution objects to this argument. If there is a motion--

President: Is this a statement or an argument?

Defense (Mr. Laura): A statement.

President: Well, a statement has to be very short. You are going too long for a statement.

Defense (Mr. Laura): The accused told me as his attorney that he is innocent, that the day of January 24th, 1944, he was at six o'clock or about that time, between 6 or 6:30 or 7, which he doesn't recollect just, in his house at Terni with his wife in the bed, when somebody knocked at the door--

President: You are making a statement and not an argument. Now, this sounds like an argument to me, the final argument in the case.

Defense (Mr. Laura): I am sorry, because I did not understand what were my allowances this morning.--May I ask permission to stand or to sit?

President: Do you want to take the witness stand?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, the defense counsel thought he had this thing clarified and the defense counsel stated on numerous occasions and here in open court, as written on this pad to his co-counsel, "Your unsworn testimony must be what the accused told you as his attorney," and then verbally the defense counsel explained to the Italian co-counsel, "Your private opinions and deductions are not to be a part of this unsworn testimony." As a matter of fact, it has been explained to the counsel that he is virtually the accused on the stand not sworn.

Prosecution: Then counsel is making an unsworn statement for the accused?

President: Make it a matter of record that everything that has gone on so far was part of that unsworn statement by the counsel on behalf of the accused.

Defense (Mr. Laura): He has stated to me that he is innocent, that the happenings from the morning of January 23rd--pardon me, may I continue in Italian? (Continuing through the interpreter:) Tito Romaglia told me he was innocent on all occasions on which I have spoken with him of this trial. He gave me this version of the facts. The morning of 24 January 1944, Tito Romaglia was at his home in Terni, sleeping in his bed with his wife. A person who is called Donati and who was the vice-secretary of the Federazione of Terni came and rang the bell of his house. He awoke the wife and Romaglia, and said to Tito Romaglia, "Hurry up, put on your military uniform and come with me, because we must go to Foligno following the incidents which happened yesterday." Then Tito Romaglia dressed himself up, very much in a hurry, with his military uniform of the National Republican Guard, which he kept in his home, because he did not sleep in the barracks or at the Federazione, since he was authorized, since he was married, to live with his own family, out of military quarters. He told me that his wife helped him to dress, his military uniform. He told me that after he had dressed in military uniform he took his automatic rifle and not the pistol, which he left at home, because it is true that he had a pistol but this pistol he used when he dressed in civilian clothes.

Dressing in military uniform, since he was just a simple corporal, he had no right to carry a pistol, the pistol was not part of his military uniform. He took the automatic rifle and went away from the house. He kept his weapons in his house because not having his quarters in military quarters he had to have at his prompt disposition his weapons for all the times that they would call him urgently. As he left the house he went toward the Fascist Federation, where he found other soldiers already armed and found civilians armed. With the others he got on a truck and went to Polino. When he arrived at Polino he was sent on a patrol in the town. At a certain moment he found himself in front of the house where shots were fired, that he heard from the outside, while he was in the street, and then he believed that it was his duty as a soldier to go into that house and see what had happened.

In fact, after all the shots had been fired, he entered the house. He saw that there were two other soldiers. He saw also that on the ground lay the body of a person dressed in civilian clothes. He approached to see better, and was taken by a great horror. He felt badly in seeing that that civilian who was lying on the floor was dying. He also saw that near the body of this man, between his body and the wall, where there was a table, not the wall where there was a bread box, there was a dagger on the floor.

His head started to spin. At that moment Captain Nascani entered, so, seeing that a person who was superior in rank to him had entered the room, and since he felt bad and needed to breathe some fresh air, very much disturbed, he left the house, always thinking of the tragic scene he had seen.

He does not remember to have accused himself in that moment to have killed the American, and he could not have been able to do this, because he was not present when the shots were fired.

Afterwards he does not remember many things. He remembers only having returned to Terni with the other soldiers, always preoccupied and disturbed of the scene that he had seen, and that he arrived at Terni at about 1300 hours. He remembers that on the way he met on the other sidewalk his Colonel Bonanni, and that he saluted him.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): If the commission please, I would like to add just one more thing. From the conversations which I have had with Tito Roncaglia, I was also informed by him that he did not have, in the military establishments of Terni, or at the Fascist Federation, or in any other place that was not his home, any clothes of any kind, either military or civilian.

President: The commission will take five minutes' recess.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter, resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Prosecution: At this time, for the purpose of the record, since a question of interpretation is brought up, I would like to state that the accused is represented by the regularly appointed defense counsel, an old, experienced, well-qualified lawyer. He also has a military assistant. The accused is also represented by a special counsel, an Italian lawyer of long experience. The prosecution has furnished the defense everything that they have asked for that was within our power. They have not asked us for an interpreter, and I am sure, had they felt that an interpreter was needed, that is, a special interpreter for the accused, that they would have asked us.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, at this time is the commission open?

President: The commission will come to order.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): That is what I am asking--is the commission open?

President: Yes.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): At this time the accused Tito Romaglia will express to the commission his desire as to whether he will remain silent or take the witness chair not under oath or take the witness chair under oath. I ask the accused to do that for himself, and the interpreter tell the accused to make his decision of what he desires.

Interpreter (complying): I asked him if he has made his decision as to what he desires to do.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): What is that decision?

President: Wait a minute. The question by the commission to the accused--Have you decided what you are going to do--do you want to remain silent, make a sworn statement under oath, or a statement not under oath?

Accused: A statement under oath.

Tito Romaglia, the accused, was then through the interpreter sworn as a witness in his own behalf and took the stand and through the interpreter testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by judge advocate:

Q. What is your name?
A. Tito Romaglia.

Q. Where do you live?
A. In this moment my wife lives in Rome. I have no residence.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Clerk.

Q. Are you the accused in this case?
A. Yes, in this case.

President: Make it a matter of record that the accused was explained his rights yesterday.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Romaglia, do you wish to make a statement before this court in your own words or do you ask your defense counsel to ask questions of you?
A. As you wish.

Q. I ask you where you were on 25 January 1944.
A. At Terni.

Q. You have heard the testimony that some Fascist members were killed in an adjoining town of Poline, is that correct?
A. I heard it only the morning of the 24th of January.

Q. On the morning of 24 January 1944 where were you sleeping?
A. In my own home in Terni, Via Montegrappa 64.

Q. About what time did you arise that morning?
A. I do not know the hour, because I did not look at my watch. It could have been 7, half-past seven.

Q. Do you recall why you arose that morning?
A. Yes.

Q. State to the commission what happened.
A. I was sleeping when I heard the door rapidly being knocked at. I got up to see who it was, and I saw that it was Luigi Donati, Vice-Federale at the Terni Federazione, who very excitedly told me to dress immediately because at Poline two Fascists had been killed, Orsini and a corporal of the National Republican Guard. I told him to wait for me with the car, because he had a vehicle downstairs, but he could not do so because he had to go and invite others. I dressed up very hurriedly, dressing in uniform of the National Republican Guard that I always wore and especially when I had to go out of my residence. I took the automatic rifle, that I always kept at my home, because I was authorized to sleep at home because I was married, and I left.

In about ten minutes I reached the Federazione, Fascist Federazione. There I saw there was a movement of men that were getting ready to leave for Poline. We were waiting with all the men assembled together, that is, the men that were to leave, because some men had been requested to go from nearby towns, and also the police from Amelia came, and we left for Poline.

We arrived at Poline--I don't know what time, because I didn't have a watch to look at; it may have been at half-past eight. We stayed a bit outside the town, and in the meantime the order had been given that all men from 16 years of age and above were to assemble in the square. When the established time had expired, but I don't know at what time the expiration had been set, not being an authority, and I had not been there with those who had decided. I know that at a certain moment they gave us the order to patrol.

As I arrived on the square, I saw a group that was going toward a street, the name of which I do not know, because it was the first time I went to that town. At a certain moment I saw a civilian with the Commissariat of Public Security, Patteroni Gaetano, who was speaking with this man, but I don't know what they said. He turned around and said watch out, that there is someone hiding in a house. As we arrived at this door, the door was opened, either by the owner of the house or by the other, I don't know well, because I was under the tension of danger in that moment, because it could be thought that in that home there could have been ten persons and that it was an ambush.

As the two went into the house, that is, the two which I have mentioned, I heard two shots, and I remember it perfectly. At hearing the shots, as it was my duty, I went immediately into the house followed by another soldier or by other soldiers--I don't know how many they were--and I saw a man in civilian clothes who was still moving. At the same time, Captain Nascemi, entered, and in that moment I was taken by a certain impression in seeing that poor man in those conditions, so I went out of the house, and they gave me the order to accompany the proprietor of the house to the square.

All that happened in there later I do not know. I know that later in the square I heard that the body of the killed man was that of an American. This is all I can say for the sake of truth and of the facts as they were.

Q. Did you at any time in the town of Palino see the body of Lawyer Orsini?
A. Yes.

Q. What was the condition of that body?
A. Horribly mangled. The brain matter was scattered around.

Q. Describe a little further what you say.
A. We entered into a small enclosed place near the fountain on the square where these two bodies of these two Fascists had been sort of composed.

Q. Now, when you say two bodies, will you name the second?
A. Orsini and Genti.

Q. What was the condition of the body of Gentil?
A. I did not examine it well, because when I saw that of Orsini I did not have the strength to look at the other.

Q. You testified you left your personal home the morning of 24 January 1944 dressed in the uniform of the National Republican Guard. Did you wear that same uniform throughout the day the 24th of January 1944?
A. Yes, always, until the night, when I went to bed.

Q. What hour did you return from Palino to your town of Terni?
A. One or half-past one. I know that the noon hour had passed.

Q. Did you keep any wearing apparel, either military or civilian, at the barracks in Terni?
A. I was never in the barracks. I kept all my stuff in my home. I had nothing.

Q. Will you state whether or not you were on detached service on 24 January 1944?
A. I was always detached. At the Federation we used to mount guard to avoid any attacks.

Q. Did you keep or maintain any weapons of any kind at the barracks?
A. No, the weapons I had I kept at home.

Q. You testified that you departed your home the morning of 24 January 1944 armed with a mitra?
A. Yes.

Q. At any time during that same day did you augment or add to your armament any other military weapon, property of the Italian government or otherwise?
A. No. Where could I get them? I left with my mitra and I returned with my mitra.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Will the reporter read back the last answer, please?

(The answer was read by the reporter.)

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Your witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Were you issued a pistol?
A. I only had a pistol issued to me in the month of April, but I had a personal pistol.

Q. On the 24th day of January 1944 did you wear your belt and holster?
A. No.

Q. Is that part of the normal equipment?
A. What?

Q. Belt and pistol holster, together with a pistol.
A. For the soldiers it was arbitrary.

Interpreter: That "arbitrary" means optional. They could or they couldn't, whatever they wanted.

Q. By soldiers do you mean members of the National Republican Guard?
A. Yes, of course.

Q. What were the members of the Federations classed as, soldiers or civilians?
A. Soldiers. The command of the 106th Guard used to post.

Q. As a member of the Federations, were you entitled to wear civilian clothes if you so desired?
A. I had to be authorized.

Q. Were you not so authorized?
A. Sometimes, according to the services I had to carry out, they also authorized me to dress in civilian clothes.

Q. Then at times you did not dress in civilian clothes, is that correct?
A. Of course, sometimes, yes.

Q. You heard Captain Masseni testify on this witness-stand?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear him say that a few minutes after the American was shot in the Matteucci home that you made the statement, "I killed him"?
A. I never said this.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the report was made while you were in the room at the Matteucci home that you killed the American?
A. I was never interrogated by anyone.

Q. Will you read the question?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): I never heard anything.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, counsel wants to point out a question--

Defense (Mr. Laurel): The prosecutor, if I am not mistaken, has said, "Is that true that—" Now he has omitted the word "that", so that the—

President: Read the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Interpreter: Now, to translate this—I don't understand if the report was made while he was there or what. Would you clear that point, please, sir? I don't know how to translate it.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Isn't it true that while you were in the room, in the Matteucci home, where the American soldier was shot, that either you or a member of the party with you made the report to Captain Mancani that, "Ranaglia killed the American"?
A. I don't know who made the report. I was never interrogated, and I already said that I immediately came out, because I was impressed by the way I saw that poor man in those conditions.

Q. Did you hear such a report made?
A. No.

Q. Isn't it a fact that after you returned to the square in Falina on the 24th day of January 1944 that you stated openly and publicly, "I killed the American"?
A. I don't remember having said this.

Q. Were you under the influence of liquor on the 24th day of January 1944?
A. No, because I had not drunk. I was never drunk.

Q. Were you under the influence of drugs on the 24th day of January 1944?
A. I never took drugs.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you made a report to Coppo Alberto that you killed the American?
A. I do not remember to have ever said this to Coppo.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you told your friend Giovanni Pitotti that you had killed the American?
A. No, because Pitotti wasn't even there that day.

Q. I am referring to a later time.
A. What?

Q. Did you ever make such a statement to Giovanni Pitotti?
A. No.

Q. Did you ever make such a statement to anyone?
A. No.

Q. Who accompanied you into the house of Matteucci where the American airman had been killed?
A. No one accompanied me. When I heard the shooting I went in.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you and Lanzia entered that house together with Matteucci?
A. Lanzia did just go in with me. I don't know if he went in with Matteucci. I saw him enter, because he was a driver and he was always around the Federation.

Q. After this incident you were promoted to the rank of a lieutenant in the Black Brigade, is that correct?
A. No. I was promoted to lieutenant in the Black Brigade, but only on February 25, 1945. A rank in the north was not given to assistants, but the Black Brigades did not have a recognized rank, but for simulation, that is, ranks were given according to the duties that one carried out.

Q. Isn't it a fact that after the wounded American was lying on the floor Lanzia said to you, "Don't shoot him again"?
A. I did not say anything, because I wasn't in there.

Defense (Mr. Laure): Please--we feel the witness did not understand and would like to have that again, read back.

(The question and answer were read by the reporter.)

President: Read back the question.

(The question was read by the reporter and translated by the interpreter.)

Witness (answering): How could he have told me that if I went into the room after the shots were fired?

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Did he make such a statement to you?
A. To whom should I have said it if no one questioned me?

Q. Answer the question.

President: Read the question.

(The question was read by the reporter and translated by the interpreter.)

Witness (answering): Who, he?

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Lanzia.
A. No, because after that day I never saw anybody because first I went to the Abruzzi region to get my family and then I had to go on duty to the north to escort refugee families.

Q. I am referring to the time when you and Lanzia were in the room and the American airman was lying on the floor wounded. Did he not say to you, "Don't shoot the man"?
A. He could not have said this to me, because when I went in Lanzia was already there, and he did not say anything to me.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you shot the wounded American a third time after he was lying on the floor already wounded?
A. I never shot. I went in and I saw that poor man in those conditions and then I went out and--why should I shoot a dead man?

Q. You are positive that you did not state to anyone on the square at Poline on the 24th day of January 1944 that you had killed the American?
A. I do not remember having said this to anyone.

Q. And is that statement as true as the statements you make about shooting the American in the Matteucci home?
A. Which statement do you mean?

Q. Did you shoot the American?
A. No.

Q. And that statement is as true as the statement you make that you did not tell anyone on the square that you killed the American, is that correct?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): Please, just a moment. Co-counsel did not understand the entire question. Will it be read again?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, we don't understand that question ourselves over here; it is a misleading question, comparing the situations, almost a double question. We object to that type of question.

President: Objection sustained.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Were you on the square in the city of Poline on the 24th day of January 1944?
A. Yes, because we had to leave through the square.

Q. What statements did you make while you were on the square?
A. No statement to note. I don't remember having made any statement.

Q. Do you remember having made a statement to Captain Nagoani?
A. I only saw Nagoani when he entered in the house immediately after me. Then I went out, and I never spoke to him and he never interrogated me.

Q. Do you remember telling witness Dolci that, "I killed the American"?
A. I do not know Dolci at all.

Q. As a matter of fact, you are telling this commission that you told no one that you killed the American soldier in the Matteucci home on the 24th of January 1944, is that right?
A. I don't remember having said this to anyone.

Prosecution: No further questions.

President: Any questions by members of the commission?

Defense (Capt. Robinson): One moment, we may have a question.--There are no questions at this time.

President: Apparently no questions by the commission; the witness will be excused.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Calling your attention to a question by the judge advocate with reference to soldiers wearing a pistol. There was some misunderstanding on the interpretation of Italian and I want you to state again whether the soldiers were required to wear the pistol or whether the soldier could use his own option and either wear the pistol or not wear the pistol.
A. They could not wear it, but if they wore it in an inside pocket, nobody could certainly go and see if they were it.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, it will save a lot of time--I would like to have the record read back at the point of where it was interpreted--a certain word was used which gave one answer and then the explanation gave another answer, and I'd like to have it read back.

President: All right, read it back.

(The question referred to, the answer, and the explanation by the interpreter were read by the reporter.)

Interpreter: That is my mistake.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Now, I want that question read and you interpret it to this witness and then I will ask him a question, if that is correct.

President: Aren't you satisfied with the answer?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): He has given two different answers now.

President: He just gave--the last answer is they couldn't wear it. It is up to the officer not to wear it or to wear it, but the enlisted man could not carry it.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Is it your statement that an enlisted man was not allowed to wear a pistol?
A. No, he could not carry a pistol.

Q. Is it your statement that an officer can carry a pistol if he desires?
A. The officer, yes.

Q. Were you in proper uniform on 24 January 1946?
A. Yes, according to the law, according to regulations.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): No further questions.

Prosecution: No further questions.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May the witness resume his seat?

President: Any questions by members of the commission? Apparently not; the witness will resume his seat.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and resumed his seat.)

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the accused asks that he be allowed to make one further statement to the commission on his own initiative.

Prosecution: Is this statement under oath or not under oath?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Well, under oath; he is still under oath.

Prosecution (to accused): May I remind you that you are still under oath?

Accused: Yes, sir.

The accused, Tito Rosaglia, then resumed the witness stand as a witness in his own behalf and through the interpreter testified further as follows:

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Is there anything else you wish to say to the commission before resting your case, or cause?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Make that statement to the commission.
A. Officers of the court, I am certain, convinced, and sure that I am the victim of a Machiavellian plot to have an innocent be condemned, perhaps to cover up the responsibility of others who have not had not even the courage to report to this honorable court, because they would have been very dangerous changes of scenes. It is not up to me, therefore, to judge the facts.
I declare that I am not an assassin. I never killed anybody. My heart and soul have taken me through the ways of good, because if I were guilty I would have remembered a saying that a nation, when it is really strong, as America is strong, is clement toward the vanquished. But I am not asking for clemency, because I am innocent. And I will also cite the American proverb that says it is better to have a guilty man outside than an innocent man inside.
Therefore, I have the conviction that the officers of this court, representatives of an army that has fought and won a war for the liberty and justice of peoples, will remember this and will do justice upon me. And in the meantime I have the honor of saluting the American flag and its officers.
--You will excuse this act of weakness; my tears are for emotion.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense rests.

(The witness resumed his seat.)

President: Has the prosecution anything further?

Prosecution: The prosecution desires to call one witness.

TESTIMONY FOR THE PROSECUTION IN REBUTTAL

Master Sergeant A. W. Brown, 716Srd Disciplinary Training Company (Overhead), a witness for the prosecution, was then brought into the courtroom, was sworn, and testified as follows:

A. 716Srd DT Company, Overhead, sir.

Q. Where is your company located?
A. Approximately four miles north of Pisa, sir.

Q. What are your duties, Sergeant?
A. Guard command, sir.

Q. Do you know the witness Duvall?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, may we ask what the purport of this is?

President: This is a witness for the prosecution. He is appearing for the prosecution in rebuttal.

Questions by prosecution:

Q. Who testified in this case?
A. I do.

Q. As part of your duties did you bring him to this court to testify?
A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Duvall as you brought him into court on Thursday of this week?
A. I had one when he was getting off the truck here, sir.

Q. What if anything did Duvall say to you in regard to the accused in this case?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Now, may it please the commission--well, I have to withdraw, because hearsay goes.

Witness (answering): Well, on the last question, when he got on the truck I wondered what he had to do with the case. When he got down here I had a chance to ask him, and I asked him, and he told me he came down here , as far as he knew, to testify for the prosecution, and that Ronsaglia had asked to go with him in an escape that he made in the DTC, sir.

Prosecution: No further questions.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Sergeant, is it your custom to question the witnesses or prisoners that are brought here before this court?
A. What do you mean, sir?

Q. I mean just exactly that.
A. I didn't get what you meant, sir.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): I like to know what they are coming for, sir.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Is that part of your duty?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it an ordered duty?
A. What do you mean, an ordered duty, sir? I don't know--

Q. Yes, an ordered duty. Are you ordered to do that?
A. That's right, sir.

Q. Written orders?
A. That's right, sir.

Q. Can you produce those written orders that you are to question and find out what the prisoners you bring here before this court are to do?
A. That is in your general orders, sir.

Q. Oh, not in a special order, then. Will you state that general order?
A. Well, to take charge of all the government property in view is one of them, sir, and if I have got the man I like to know what he is going for and where he is going, sir.

Q. Will you state those general orders, Sergeant?

Prosecution: I object--

President: I object to that question.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the witness has testified here that he is under written orders to do certain things, and the defense--

President: The question doesn't have anything to do with the case.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): We are asking the question--

President: It is not a proper question.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Where were you when Duvall made that statement to you, Sergeant?
A. Right outside the building here, sir.

Q. Who were present besides you and Duvall?
A. The accused, sir.

Q. The accused was there and heard that statement?
A. That's right, sir. He was standing in one of the vans, sir, the prisoner [illegible]

Q. Did the accused hear the statement?
A. He was standing there; I imagine he did, sir.

Q. And will you state again, loudly, so we can hear it, just what you asked the accused?
A. I asked him what he had to do with the case and what was he doing down here.

Q. Give the words that you said.
A. Well, I don't remember exactly what words were--I asked him what he was doing down here.

Q. Kindly give the question you asked the accused.

Prosecution: If the commission please, the sergeant has answered--

Defense (Capt. Rebiesen): He has answered in narrative and we have a right --this is like an order, and the court-martial book will show--

President: All right, he answered the question.

Questions by defense (Capt. Rebiesen):

Q. I ask what the words were that Duvall said.
A. He replied, sir, that inasmuch as he knew he came down for the prosecution in regard to Ronoaglia asking him to go with him on the escape, sir.

Q. And you can't give the exact words, then, that the accused uttered?
A. I gave them to the best of my knowledge, sir.

Q. A. narrative?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sergeant, isn't it true that you are familiar with the conditions of a pair of pliers turned in from Cage No. 2?
A. What occasion? There have been several occasions when pliers have been turned in, from Cage No. 2.

Q. Which way did you understand that to mean, that Ronoaglia actually was asking for an opportunity to escape?
A. What, in this--Duvall, out there--

Defense (Capt. Rebiesen): Would you read the question back?

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): That is what Duvall told me, sir, that that is what he was called down here for, as far as he knew.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. Sergeant, you used to be a captain in the Army, didn't you?
A. I did, sir.

Q. You should understand these questions. What day and date did this incident occur?
A. Which incident, sir, the escape?

Q. Of which you are now testifying.
A. The escape, sir?

Q. The incident that you have testified to, when Duvall told you these things.
A. Yesterday, sir, yesterday morning, when I brought him to trial.

Q. What did you do following that conversation with Duvall--did you report the incident immediately?
A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. When did you report that incident?
A. What do you mean, report it, sir? To who?

Major Loewus: I object to this line of testimony, sir.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): May it please the commission, I am trying to find why they wait until this late hour to bring such a thing before the commission if it occurred yesterday, and I think it is possible to know whom the report was made.

Prosecution: May it please the commission, this is rebuttal testimony. It is the first opportunity we have had to bring the witness in.

Defense (Capt. Robinson): I am not arguing about the rebuttal testimony. Sergeant, I am asking you when you first divulged the information concerning your conversation with Duvall to any American military authority.

Witness: Yesterday, sir.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robinson):

Q. What time?
A. I don't remember the time, sir.

Q. About what time?
A. It could have been in the morning or the afternoon; I don't remember, sir.

Q. And what time was the conversation, in the morning?
A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Soon after you arrived at this place, the court?
A. When they were getting off the truck, sir; I'd say 30 minutes.

Q. And you don't even know when you reported it to a military officer?
A. No, sir, I don't. Yesterday.

Q. To whom did you finally report?
A. To the captain, I believe it was, sir.

Q. Which captain?
A. Over here, sir (indicating).

Q. Point him out if he is in the room.
A. That one (indicating).

Q. Do you know his name?
A. No, sir, I don't.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Let the record show the witness is indicating Captain Ashcraft, the assistant trial judge advocate in this case.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. What report did you make to Captain Ashcraft?
A. I didn't give a report, sir.

Q. What did you say to Captain Ashcraft?
A. I asked him what--why Duvall was down here, and he didn't know. Duvall hadn't testified at the time--I think that is the way it is. And then I finally found out Duvall was down here and had testified in here.

Q. Yes?
A. That's right, sir.

Q. And then what did you do?
A. Not anything, sir.

Q. What did you say to Captain Ashcraft when you did report it?
A. I just asked him what Duvall was doing here.

Q. Did you then tell Captain Ashcraft anything about this conversation out here?
A. I think I did, sir; I am not sure.

Q. What did you report to Captain Ashcraft?
A. The conversation that I had with Duvall, sir.

Q. And you did that some time yesterday, is that correct?
A. Sometime yesterday, yes, sir.

Q. Sergeant, did you approach Captain Ashcraft with this report or did Captain Ashcraft approach you?
A. I did, sir.

Q. Where were you at the time?
A. I don't remember exactly where it was, sir. It was in the building here.

Q. Was it in the building?
A. It was, sir.

Q. Was it on the side to your left or the side to your right?
A. I don't remember, sir.

Q. And you don't remember the hour?
A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. You don't even remember whether it was morning or afternoon?
A. No, sir, I don't.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, this is a most unusual thing, and the defense is calling for the witness Duvall in order to rebut this rebuttal testimony.

President: Your request is denied. Go ahead.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Well, this is most unusual.

President: All right. Your request is denied.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): No further questions.

Prosecution: Any questions by any member of the commission?

President: Apparently none.

Prosecution: May the witness be excused?

President: The witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Defense (Capt. Robieson): At this time the defense wishes to read into the record that it feels that its defense has been prejudiced—the interests of this accused have been prejudiced when rebuttal testimony of this kind, and as weak as it appears to be, without details, is offered, and the defense is denied the privilege of recalling the witness who under oath can swear to the conditions—

Defense (Mr. Lauro): Please, sir, may I have some—

President: Make it a matter of record that the commission doesn't think it is necessary to recall the witness.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): Please, sir, I am sorry, sir, on behalf of the Italian people, to which this man belong, I would like that every opportunity be given to him.

President: Every opportunity has been given to the accused.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May we have just a moment here—a recess, rather?

President: All right, the commission is admonished not to consider the testimony given by Sergeant Brown. It will be stricken from the record.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense would like to let it stay in the record that the court decided not to—

President: The commission has decided; you cannot tell the commission what to do. All right. The president of the commission admonished the commission not to consider the testimony of the sergeant.

Defense (Mr. Lauro): I thank you very much.

President: Any more witnesses for the prosecution?

Prosecution: May the prosecution have five minutes, please, to--

President: All right, the commission will take a five-minute recess.

The commission then took a recess for five minutes, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Prosecution: The prosecution rests.

President: The commission would like to call Amastasio Macsani.

TESTIMONY FOR THE COMMISSION

Macsani Amastasio, Sergt, a witness for the prosecution, was then recalled by the court, and having been admonished through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding, resumed the stand and testified through the interpreter further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the president:

Q. Captain Macsani, you testified before this commission that on the day the American was killed you saw the accused with a machine gun and a pistol on his person, is that right?
A. Yes.

Q. You also testified that you were outside of the house when the shots were fired.
A. Yes, at 5 or 6 meters' distance.

Q. You also testified that as the shots were fired you went into the house?
A. Yes.

Q. And that you found there the accused and two other soldiers.
A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the accused enter the house?
A. No.

Q. You also testified that you heard the accused make the remark, "I killed the American," is that right?
A. Yes.

President: All right, that's all. Any questions by members of the commission?

Questions by Major Tucker:

Q. You saw the body of an American lying on the floor?
A. Yes.

Q. Was his head pointing toward the door or away from the door?
A. It was toward the door, toward the fireplace.

Q. This diagram here shows a door--referring to Prosecution's Exhibit No. 15--this is the fireplace; is this the approximate position of the body?
A. It was a bit slanted this way, more slanted that way (indicating).

Q. In this direction?
A. Yes.

Major Tucker: The witness is testifying that the head was pointed diagonally toward the front but not toward the corner in which the door appears.

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. Is the body in approximately the place on the floor in this diagram as you remember it?
A. Yes, approximately.

President: No more questions by the commission.

Prosecution: No questions by the prosecution.

CROSS EXAMINATION BY DEFENSE

Questions by defense (Capt. Rebiscon):

Q. Captain Nasconi, were you in command of the accused Roncaglia's unit that day?
A. No, I had no unit under me.

Q. Were you in any way, directly or indirectly, responsible for what may have occurred in Poling on that day?
A. No, I was responsible only just in the same measure the others were in the sense that I was there.

Q. You said you were about 5 meters away from the house when you heard the shots fired, is that correct?
A. Yes, 5 or 6 meters.

Q. And I believe you told this court, this commission, that these shots were fired at intervals of about a half a second, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall now how many shots you heard fired?
A. I don't remember exactly, but I believe two or three, not more.

Q. Then you are not swearing that there were three?
A. I have also said that there were shots fired in other directions; therefore I couldn't hear distinctly whether they were two or three.

Q. How could you discriminate between the shots on the inside and the shots on the outside of the house?

Prosecution: May it please the commission, this has gone--this has been gone into and it is not proper cross-examination.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): It is cross-examination, if the commission please, and—

President: Objection overruled.

Witness (answering): Those of the house were nearer and those other shots were far away.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. When you entered the house and you testified that you saw the accused Ronegalia, what condition of mind did the accused appear to be in when you arrived at the house?
A. I did not notice any exceptional emotion. Certainly he was not completely tranquil.

Q. Captain, is there any doubt whatsoever in your mind concerning whether Ronegalia did or did not have a pistol on him at that time?
A. To me it seemed, it appeared, that he had a pistol on his belt.

Q. But it was—as you testified, it seemed or appeared to you. As you know, you are under oath; are you swearing certainly that you saw the pistol?

Prosecution: We object to the counsel arguing with the witness.

Defense(Capt. Robieson): That isn't argument. I asked a cross-examination question, is he certain. He said it seemed, it appeared.

Prosecution: This is the commission's witness. This is not the proper cross-examination, in the first place.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): A man's life is at stake here, and I think anything that comes before the commission is proper.

President: It is a proper question.

Witness (answering): Yes.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. When you entered the house did you see the old man, the owner of the house?
A. No.

Q. Masami, if you will refresh your memory, on your original testimony, when the judge advocate asked you a question, "But did Ronegalia say this to you?" with reference to the statement of who shot the American, your answer, I believe, was this: "Ronegalia did not say this, but he did not talk." Now, I think the record is going to bear us out on that, and I am asking you why you are making these statements here now.

Prosecution: We object to that.

President: Objection sustained; that is already in the record.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense wants the whole truth in this case, and we have labored all week trying to get it, and my co-counsel states to me here in writing, and I think from his notes, that the original question by the judge advocate was, "But Renzaglia, did he say this to you?" Answer--"Renzaglia did not say this, but he did not say anything."

President: The whole testimony of the witness was read yesterday; do you want it read over again?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): No, sir, what I'd like to ask him is why he is changing his testimony today.

Prosecution: He has not changed his testimony.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Captain, you spoke of Renzaglia making a statement in the square; did Renzaglia, when he said something about shooting an American, use the personal pronoun "I" or did he use the personal pronoun "we"? Do you recall specifically that statement?
A. "I".

Q. Can you further testify, as you did yesterday, that Tito Renzaglia appeared to be suffering from shock? Do you recall that?
A. When did I say this?

Q. In your former testimony. I ask you now, are you certain and positive that Renzaglia was composed at the time you saw him in the house?

Prosecution: The prosecution objects strongly. Any such statement made by this witness yesterday that Renzaglia was suffering from shock--

President: Let him answer the question. Go ahead and answer the question.

(The question was read by the reporter.)

Witness (answering): He was not completely composed, but of course that depended from the incident that had just taken place.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Then if he was not completely composed, what was his state?
A. To me it seemed as though it was a normal state, and there was only the emotion of the thing that had taken place. Not even I was completely composed because of the thing that had happened.

Q. Captain Nasemi, I ask you--are you apprehensive about this incident on your own account?

Prosecution: Objection.

President: Objection sustained.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): No further questions.

President: The witness is excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

President: The commission will recess until 1:45.

The commission then at 11:30 A.M. took a recess until 2:20 P.M., at which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter, and the interpreter, resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order. The commission would like to recall witness for the prosecution Alberto Coppo.

Coppo Alberto, Foligno, a witness for the prosecution, was then recalled by the commission, and having been admonished through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding, took the stand and testified further through the interpreter as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by president:

Q. Coppo, you testified before this commission the last time you were here that you heard the accused make the remark, "I killed him," referring to the American that was killed on January 24th, 1944. Is that so?
A. It is true that I made this statement.

Q. Speak louder, so they can hear you.
A. I would like to express to the court that this is my conviction, but the court already knows that I can sometimes not understand well words, because in January, 1941, I was affected by bilateral otitis, and I am still affected with this and there is a military medical certificate that has exonerated me from military service because of this incipient deafness, and even today I am afflicted with that illness, and I have still matter coming out from both ears.

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. Where was Romeaglia when you heard that remark made?
A. He was on the square.

Question by Major Looms:

Q. How long after the incident did you hear him make this remark?
A. Not very long after.

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. In what manner was Romeaglia carrying his pistol when you saw the pistol?
A. I do not remember, and I don't remember even to have seen--I always learned that he had it.

Question by president:

Q. What was that?
A. According to me, he had both the pistol and the automatic rifle, because they were his weapons, but I have already stated to the court that I could not swear to have seen them. I said he had them, because I know.

Question by Colonel Moore:

Q. You don't actually remember seeing the pistol in the possession of the accused at that particular time, is that it?
A. I have already stated that I have just a vague impression of the accused in that moment, and I cannot swear to have seen one or the other weapon, just as I do not remember whether he was in civilian clothes or in military uniform.

Prosecution: No questions.

Defense: There are no questions.

President: Witness excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

President: We would like to recall Vincenzo Dolci, a witness for the prosecution.--The commission is closed.

The commission was closed; the commission was reopened, at which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

Dolci Vincenzo, Cost, a witness for the prosecution, was then recalled by the commission and having been warned through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding, resumed the witness stand and through the interpreter testified further as follows:-

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by president:

Q. Dolci, you testified before this commission that you heard someone whose name you cannot remember ask the accused, "Why did you kill the American?" Is that true?
A. I heard these words, but I cannot remember -- I don't remember if Lancia asked it or Renoaglia asked it. There were signed statements, and I can't remember.

Q. Now you testified before this commission that you heard someone ask Renoaglia, "Why did you kill the American"? Now, remember what you said here before.
A. Yes.

Q. Is that true?
A. Yes.

Questions by Captain Young:

Q. You heard these shots, didn't you?
A. Yes.

Q. How far were you from this house when you heard the shots?
A. About 30 meters.

Q. Then you testified that you ran to the house, is that true?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you enter the house?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you see your captain in there when you entered the house?
A. No, the captain was coming right after me.

Q. However you dressed?
A. As a soldier.

Q. Did you see the captain at the time you heard the shots?
A. The captain came after me, was coming after me.

Q. You were between the house and the captain at the time you heard the shots?
A. Yes.

Q. How far was the captain from the house when the shots were fired?
A. He was 3 or 4 meters away from me.

Q. Who made that remark, "Why did you shoot him"?
A. There was Lansia there--

Q. Answer the question.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, at this time the defense objects to that question and is prepared to ask for the record to be read back because we contend that this witness doesn't understand, that the testimony here a few moments ago, the witness testified, "I heard somebody say, 'Why did you kill him?'" and the witness clearly stated, "I do not know which one said it."

President: Objection overruled. Go ahead.

(The question was read by the reporter and interpreted by the interpreter.)

Witness (answering): Lansia said this.

Questions by president:

Q. How was the accused dressed on this day, do you remember?
A. I believe very well that he was dressed as a soldier. I don't remember well --when we left Termi, at least my unit were all dressed in military uniform.

Q. Were dressed in what uniform?
A. In military uniform.

Q. Didn't you testify yesterday that you saw the accused in that house in civilian clothes?
A. I do not remember. It is four years, and I can't remember, and besides, there are the statements.

Q. Then you don't remember one way or the other?
A. I don't remember. I don't know how I could remember in four years.

Q. You cannot say whether he was in civilian clothes or in military uniform?
A. I can't say this, because I don't remember.

Question by Capt. Young:

Q. Do you know the old man that was the proprietor of that house?
A. No, I have never seen him.

Capt. Young (to prosecution): Do you have him here?

Prosecution: Yes.

Capt. Young: Bring him in.

Witness: Because when I entered the old man was not in the house.

Question by Major Leeman:

Q. How did you know that the proprietor of that house was an old man?
A. Because he told me this on the way coming up here just now.

Capt. Young: Let the record show that Domenico Matteucci has been brought in.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, see if he recognizes him first.

Question by Capt. Young:

Q. Will you look around and see if you recognize this man who just came into the courtroom?
A. I only saw this man before our trip from Terni to here.

Q. For this trial?--Have you got an objection?

Defense (Mr. Leary): No. About the translation--he has asked, "Have you ever seen this man before?" and the witness has said, "No, I have never even seen him before I have seen him in the trip from Terni to here." I am under the impression that he has missed the liaison between the first part of the sentence and the second one so it is not made clear.

President: That he never saw him before until he came here.

Prosecution: Let the record show that Domenico Matteucci was brought into the courtroom and has now left.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Further let the record show that the trip was made from Terni to Leghorn on what day?

Capt. Young: Within the last 10 days.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Within the last 8 days.

CROSS EXAMINATION BY PROSECUTION

Questions by prosecution:

Q. I ask you if you saw a short stout civilian with a big moustache before the shooting occurred in the house?
A. No, I did not see him.

Q. I hand you a paper and ask you whether or not that is your signature.
A. Yes, that is my signature.

Q. Did you read that statement before you signed it?
A. I cannot read very well. I did not know how to read it, because I cannot read it very well.

Q. Was the statement read to you?
A. The man who interrogated me did read it, but now I cannot remember what was written.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Objection, please.

President: On what grounds?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): This is a witness for the commission and the prosecution is resuming now with new papers.

President: Your objection is overruled. Go ahead.

Prosecution: The prosecution now offers in evidence, subject to objection by the defense, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 14, being the statement of Dalei Vincenzo, the original, the Italian, and the English.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense objects to this statement being admitted at this time because the prosecution has rested and closed its case.

President: Objection overruled. Don't you know that the prosecution is supposed to examine all witnesses for the commission?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, at this time the defense objects to the admission of Prosecution's Exhibit 14 which is marked 14(1) on the first sheet, and Prosecution's Exhibit 14 (2) on the second sheet for the reason that the statement is merely marked as a signed statement but does not show to whom the statement was made or any of the circumstances concerning the making thereof, and the statement further is not dated.

President: Objection overruled. It will be admitted in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 14.

(Prosecution's Exhibit No. 14 was then read to the commission by the judge advocate.)

President: Would the defense like to have the original statement read in Italian for the benefit of the accused?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): We will accept the reading.

President: You don't want it read in Italian?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): Not at this time. May I see it?--May I examine the witness?

Prosecution: I'd like to inquire whether or not the statement has been read to the accused by counsel or whether or not the accused is familiar with that statement.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): The counsel feels that the accused is familiar, but the accused stated, as he has heard stated on the witness chair, that he could not read well, and that the thing happened many years ago, and that the conditions of taking the statement, and the accused has repeatedly stated that he does not know--the witness stated that he did not know whether Renenglia was wearing civilian clothes or--

Prosecution: May it please the commission, I think the statement in Italian should be read to the accused if it has not been read to him by counsel.

President: You didn't answer his question. He asked you if the statement has been read to the accused or if he is familiar with it.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the accused has read the statement, Prosecution's Exhibit 14, in Italian.

Prosecution: No further examination.

Defense: No questions.

President: Witness excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

President: The commission would like to recall Mattaucci.

Mattaucci Domenico, Polino, a witness for the prosecution, was then recalled by the commission, and having been warned through the interpreter that the oath previously taken by him was still binding, resumed the witness stand and through the interpreter testified further as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. Mr. Mattaucci, you testified that this American flier came to live at your home on the 19th of January 1944. Do you recall that?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he was shot and killed in your home on the 24th day of January of 1944?
A. Yes.

Q. And you further testified that you had a bread knife in your home which had fallen behind the cupboard?

Defense (Capt. Robieson): May it please the commission, the defense--

Capt. Young: Just a minute.

Witness (answering): It was not a bread knife, it was a little dagger.

Questions by Capt. Young:

Q. You testified that your wife had dropped that behind the cupboard, or someone in your household had dropped that behind the cupboard. Do you recall that, behind the bread box?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that before or after the American flier came to live at your home?
A. This was on the 1st of January.

Q. The 1st of January of 1944?
A. Yes.

Q. Was that little dagger still behind the bread box at the time the American soldier was killed?
A. From the time it fell behind there we did not see it, we did not take it.

Q. You never saw it again?
A. I never saw it again, because it was a thing which I did not need.

Q. Did you at any time ever see this American flier in your home armed with any kind of a weapon?
A. I never saw a weapon in the hand of the American, nor did I see them on his body. I never saw weapons.

Q. Did you have any other daggers in your house besides the one that fell behind the bread box?
A. Only that one.

Q. Since the American flier was shot to death in your house have you ever seen that little dagger that had fallen behind the bread box?
A. If it was the dagger, I saw it after that when the man dressed in civilian clothes that had shot the American came down to the square and said, "This is what the American had." It is a French type dagger.

Q. Now, will you describe that dagger?
A. I can't describe it; you can draw it and I will tell you if it is right.

Q. Did the blade have two edges on it or three edges?
A. No, two.

Q. And was the two-edged blade sharp on both sides?
A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get that dagger originally?
A. When my father died I found it in the house among his belongings.

Q. Now, Mr. Matteucci, what time did you leave your home the day the American flier was shot?--Strike that question. How long before the American was shot was it that you left your home?
A. When I went that 50 or 60 meters away from my house.

Q. And where were you going?
A. I was going to the square.

Q. For what purpose?
A. In the morning, especially when I have nothing special to do, I always go out and I go to the square.

Q. You got 50 or 60 meters away from your house--what happened?
A. I found this group of Fascists, Republicans.

Q. And what happened?
A. They stopped me and they asked me, "Are you Matteucci, called Sambelli?" and I said, "Yes," and then they again asked me, "Where is the American?" "I don't know." And they repeated again, "Where is the American?" "I don't know." And the third time, they pointed the rifle at my breast and said, "Where is the American?" and I said, "He is at home."

Q. When you say they, you mean the Fascists?
A. The Fascists, the man that was dressed in civilian clothes.

Q. Did they have a rifle or a pistol?
A. He had a pistol with the other rifle--I don't know what you call it.

Question by president:

Q. Was that a mitra?
A. Mitra, yes.

Question by Capt. Young:

Q. You then returned to your home, did you not?
A. Yes.

Q. And did you go alone?
A. No, I was in front and they were right behind me.

Q. How many Fascists were right behind you?
A. The whole group was behind me, and only there were two that were on my sides, one on the right and one on the left.

Q. Did you enter your home?
A. When I arrived at the house I opened the door.

Q. And did you go in?
A. I opened the door and they were on either side of me, and when I opened the house they went in before me.

Q. Did you go in?
A. I went in, but they were right in front of me.

Q. How many of them?
A. Two.

Q. All right. Now, as you went in the door of your home did you see the American flier?
A. Yes.

Q. Where was he?
A. Sitting down on the chair.

Q. And was the chair in front of the fireplace?
A. The American was sitting before the fireplace.

Q. On the chair?
A. Yes.

Q. And then what happened?
A. "Halt"--boom--they shot at him--and "Halt"--boom.

Q. Was the American seated at the fireplace at the time he was shot?
A. Yes, on the chair.

Q. Did you see any weapon of any kind in the hands of the American?
A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see the American rise from his chair and lunge at his assailants?
A. No, sir, the American got up from the chair when he fell on the floor.

Q. How long did you remain in this house after the shooting?
A. After the third shot I came out of the house immediately.

Q. Where did you go?
A. They took me to the square.

Q. Who took you to the square?
A. The soldiers that were just outside the door of the house.

Q. They were not the soldiers who had done the shooting?
A. No.

Question by Major Lacoma:

Q. Did you see anybody come running towards your house as you left the house?
A. No.

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. How were the two men dressed that went in the house and did the shooting?
A. One dressed as a soldier and another as a civilian.

Prosecution: No questions by the prosecution.

CROSS EXAMINATION BY DEFENSE

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. You testified that two or three shots were fired?
A. Three.

Q. Did you see the third shot fired?
A. Yes.

Q. You testified that the civilian fired the shots?
A. I said when they shot, when they said "Halt"--boom--I only heard them say "Halt"--boom--"Halt"--boom. Then the soldier on my right side advanced toward the American that was in the middle of the house and said, "Don't shoot, he is wounded. We must take him away as he is." The one in civilian clothes advanced and said, "No, we must kill him," and shot the third shot.

Q. You testified here before that that civilian, or the man in civilian clothes, was about 1½ meters in height, is that correct?
A. I said one meter 60, or one meter 65.

Q. You further testified that that civilian was of light complexion, or light skin, in the face, is that correct?

Prosecution: Objection; I don't believe the witness testified—

Defense (Capt. Robieson): The record will show—well, I will turn it around.

Questions by defense (Capt. Robieson):

Q. Can you testify as to what color skin the civilian had, the man dressed in civilian clothes?
A. I don't remember.

Q. But you did testify that you judged him to be 26 or 27 years of age?
A. 27, 28, or 24, thereabouts.

Defense (Capt. Robieson): There are no further questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Question by Col. Moore:

Q. Was the third shot fired by the civilian from a pistol?
A. Yes, sir.

Question by Major Lacsus:

Q. Did the civilian have any other weapon besides a pistol?
A. He had the rifle—I never remember how it is called—the mitra.

President: No further questions by the commission.

Prosecution: No further questions by the prosecution.

President: The witness will be excused.

(There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.)

Prosecution: Does the commission desire any further witnesses called or recalled?

(Captain Robinson then made an argument for the defense.)

Prosecution: Does the commission desire a recess before we go on?

President: All right, we will recess.

The commission then took a ten-minute recess, at the end of which time all the personnel of the commission, the prosecution and the defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreter, resumed their seats.

President: The commission will come to order.

(Lt. Col. Wallen then made a closing argument for the prosecution.)

President: The commission will be closed.

REPORT OF LT. WALDEN R. STEWART'S PLANE, WHICH IS MISSING FROM RAID ON 20 DECEMBER 1943

[redacted] tail gunner in #3 plane of #2 flight. Lt. Stewart's plane was in [redacted] position of same flight, about 1325 hours, shortly after flying over [redacted] Holstein, many bursts of heavy flak started coming up at our formation. At this time I was looking over in the direction of Lt. Stewart's plane and saw a burst of flame shoot up out of his left engine. I then informed the rest of the crew of the incident. With the burning engine, Lt. Stewart stayed in formation for about 30 seconds. He pulled out of the formation, climbing in a right bank, and was about a thousand feet above the formation before he leveled off. While in the climb I saw one man parachute out of the waist window. Another man parachuted out of the waist window as the plane leveled off at about 10,000 feet. The plane then made about a 180 deg turn heading back in a Northwest direction. The plane was then a good distance from me and I then noticed a 3rd man bail out with the chute open while the plane appeared to be in a glide at about 8000'. The plane then disappeared in the haze below.

I, the undersigned COPPO Alberto, son of Cesare and of late Firestauri Maria, born at Terni on 1 January 1909, residing at Terni, 161, Via Roma, state as follows:

On the evening of 23 January 1944 I was in company of the Prefect Pietro Faustini, the Commander of the Republican Guard, Consul Bonanni, the liaison officer of the German Command stationed at San Gemini, Capt. Schweigher, and I think also the Questura Chief of Terni.

Received a telephone message about the killing of two fascists, a lawyer Carlo Orsini and a Vice Caposquadra Conti occurred in the locality Polino, we decided to proceed to the recovery of the bodies and the transfer of their families in order to avoid further danger. At about 8 hrs of the following morning a truck, carrying a Company of the Republican Guard commanded by Capt. Branca and by Lt. Antonucci (of about 25 men) and a bus, carrying other member of the Republican Guard, as well as Federazione and police agents in civilian cloth were ordered to Polino. Among these people I remember very well a certain Luigi Donati and Tito Roncaglia.

I left in a car of the German Command together with Capt. Schweigher and a German officer, who represented the Commander. I was armed with a mashingun and a pistol, while the men carried Field Infantry weapons. On our way to Polino we stopped for a short time at Arrone, and proceeded all together to Polino. One group formed a barrier at the village entrance in order to prevent access from the mountains. The others entered the village to carry out a searching operation, while I went to pay a visit to the families of the two victims. Capt. Schweigher and the German Officer in company, I think, of Lt. Antonucci, went to the town-hall in order to enquire about the facts.

After having seen the families I also went to the town hall where I found the above mentioned officers in conversation with mayor, Fiorelli Fiorello. While still at the town hall, I was notified that an American has been killed in the village. Immediately I went out to ascertain what had happened and on my way to the place of the accident I saw a group of militi and civilians gathered around a ladder on which I noticed the body of a man, shot apparently in his chest.

I ordered that the body be taken where the other two bodies were lying, and went to the main square where, among other militi, I saw Roncaglia, who said: "I have killed him. I have killed [illegible]. He had a mashingun or a pistol in his hands, I do not recall which, but I sure it was a weapon. I joined th[illegible] asked what [illegible] told that while they were searching [illegible] village [illegible] that an American was hiding in one of [illegible] houses. [illegible] that, arrived to the place and opened the door, i[illegible] of th[illegible] he saw a man throwing himself against him [illegible] that seeing this he, Roncaglia, had fired [illegible] the [illegible] the m[illegible] did not say anything to Roncaglia, but la[illegible] I blame[illegible] beca[illegible] opinion he had fired out of an impulse of fear.

While I was still in the square, the man [illegible] hou[illegible] American had been found, was brought to me, and I [illegible] to take away. In the meantime the Prefect, Pietro [illegible]stini, arrived with [illegible] and I took him to Avv. Orsini's family.

The German officer wanted that a certain number [illegible] appli[illegible] shot for reprisal, and I, together with the Prefect succeeded [illegible] pr[illegible] both the execution and the handing over of the hostages to the German authorities. The hostages were taken to Terni and handed over to the Republican Guard.

Then I returned to Terni by bus - the same bus on which Avv. Orsini's family - and reported at the Federazione. I made a verbal report on the facts to Consul Bonanni, after which I had no further connection with the matter.

I had occasion to see Roncaglia several times subs[illegible]ly and each time he declared and confirmed that he had killed the A[illegible]. He also always mentioned the particular of the knife. The last [illegible] Roncaglia was in March 1945 at Salo', lake Garda, where he l[illegible] his wife. At that time he held the rank of Lieutenant of the [illegible] ade.

I believe that while I was at Polino, at the town h[illegible] shown a knife, a military identification tag and a billfold [illegible] I think, 100 lire. I presume that these items have been han[illegible]r the German Officerwho was present. The agreement was to bur[illegible] thre[illegible] bodies at the same place, but I was not informed where the b[illegible] the American was actually buried.

STATEMENT

Rome, 4 September 1946.

Before the Special Investigator WCC, Daniele Ansil and in presence of Prof. Domenico Uras, lawyer, and Gaetano Pattarozzi, journalist, I, the undersigned, PITOTTI Giovanni, son of Michele and of Zenoni Quintilia, born at Terni, 30 May 1901, residing in Rome, 96 Via Ippocrate, apartment # 32, declare as follows:

On 8 November 1943 I joined the Federazione Fascista of Terni, in charge of the transfer to the North of fascist families, which duties I performed until 5 June 1944. During that period, more exactly on 24 January 1944, I was at my home in the locality Marmore (Prov. of Terni), when at about 10 hrs a.m. I was called to the phone by the Federazione of Terni and received the order to report immediately to that office.

On my arrival there I found only a few drivers, who, on my enquiry of what had happened informed me that all members of the Federazione were gone to POLINO, about 15 kms from Terni, to recover the bodies of Fascists, killed by partisans. One of the drivers present accompanied me then to Polino.

During the ride, at about 3 km from Polino, I met the first vehicles returning from that locality. On a small truck I noticed they carried some bodies. I asked what had happened and was told that during a mopping-up operation in the village, in searching all houses by Republican troops, an American partisan had been killed and that also two fascists, Avv. Orsini and Milite Conti had been murdered by the partisans.

After having obtained this information I joined the group who returned to Terni, where, at the Federazione office I learned that the murderer of the American partisan was VVSN Brigadiere Tito RONCAGLIA.

I saw the bodies of the two fascists taken to the "Sacrario dei Caduti", (the shrine containing the bodies of casualties belonging to this Federazione), and the body of the American to the cemetery of Terni.

After these events I resumed my work at the Federazione. During the following days the accident of Polino, regarding the killing of the American was amply discussed among the members of the Federazione. From Brigadiere Roncaglia himself I heard that during the searching operations at Polino, on entering a house of this village he found a man in civilian clothing, who, as soon as he caught sight of the brigadiere assulted him with a knife, on which the brigadiere fired and killed him.

These facts I heard repeated later by the same Roncaglia Tito as well as by other colleguas with whom we discussed the matter. Subsequently, on 5 June, together with the Federale Alberto Coppo, Commander of the Federazione of Terni and other members of this office

These facts I heard repeated later by the same Roncaglia Tito as well as by other collegues with whom we discussed the matter. Subsequently, on 5 June, together with the Federale Alberto Coppo, Commander of the Federazione of Terni and other members of this office

I was transferred to CERVIA (Ravenna) and assigned to a separation center of refugees coming from Terni. On 7 June the brigadiere Tito Roncaglia with his wife together with other members of the Federazione with their families were transferred to Cervia as well. Roncaglia, who had the same assignment as I had, stayed with me until the beginning of July 1944.

After completion of our duties both Roncaglia and I went to join our families at Candiana (Padova) where we stayed until 10 August 1944. During this sojourn at Candiana I was in contact with the Federale, Coppo Alberto, the once fascist commissary of Amelia, Gaetano Pattarozzi and other members of the Federazione who also spent these summer months at Candiana.

As with some of these people we were on not very satisfactory terms, Roncaglia, myself and Dr. Forbiconi moved, on our own initiative to Salo' taking our families with us, There we ere employed at the Party Direction headquarters.

I remember very well that on many occasions in company of our new friends of that place Roncaglia, among other facts, told us about the killing of the American at Polino, emphasising with exaggerated description of details his being the author of the murder.

Among other things, I remember that one day in September Roncaglia told me about a letter, which had arrived at the Party Direction office, written, as he suspected, by Mariottini Sestilio, Garzuglia Alvaro and other fascists with whom he was not on good terms. According to Roncaglia, the letter referred to his part in the killing, that is to say, the Direction was advised not to give any importance or pay attention to Roncaglia's statements on the matter. He said: "You see how they try to put me in a bad light before the Party headquarters, making them doubt my action as regards the killing of the American at Polino. But you know very well, and have known it for a long time that I was the one who did it."

During my stay at Salo' I met several members of the Federazione of Terni who came to the Party headquarters on official business. Among these I recall the Federale Alberto Coppo, Lt. Rolando Palmieri, Gaetano Pattarozzi and others.

In April 1945, in consequence of a partisan insurrection I was arrested together with other members of the Dalmate Brigade, among whom I remember Tito Roncaglia, who in the meantime had been promoted to the rank of lieutenant. I was, at first, taken to a concentration camp at Piacenza, then to another one at Coltano, under Allied control. At this camp I was held until 10 June 1945, the day I was released owing to regulations in power at that time. Roncaglia and others, I learned, were still held as prisoners in the camp.

A few days later I proceeded to Rome, where I joined my family. On 7 September 1945 I was newly arrested and incarcerated at the Regina Coeli jail, where I was kept until 13 January 1946.

In this jail, with the other political prisoners detained at that time, I used to talk during the ricreation out-doors, and so I learned that Capt. Gaetano Pattarozzi has been sentenced to death and probably already executed (shot) by the partisans. On 13 January 1946 I was transferred to the prison at Padova where I stayed until 26 Jan., 1946. During this period, among other news I heard the confirmation of the execution of Gaetano Pattarozzi.

On the 26th of that month I was released from the prison on account that no charges against me had arisen. I joined my family at Rome. Some time after my liberation, talking with friends in a family circle somebody said that Patarozzi had been sentenced to death and is presumed of having been shot by the partisans, but that there was a possibility however, of his having succeeded to escape to Switzerland.

In early April 1946 I was at home and still unemployed when I received the visit of the ex-lieutenant Tito Roncaglia and his wife. As I was in very friendly relations with him, his visit was most welcome to me and we talked about our personal, and chiefly about our financial problems. He asked me whether I able to find him a position. I had to explain him, of course, in what difficult situation I was in myself, and made him clear that there was no possibility of my helping him. After which we said goodbye to each other and he left, saying that he was going to find an apartement somewhere.

On 28 May 1946, returning from a work I had to do in Bologna, I found a man waiting for me at my front door, who was identified himself as Daniel Anzil, special investigator of the American War Crimes Branch. The above named investigator interrogated me then, on all facts I knew in connection with the killing of an American airman at Polino (Terni). As we came to the point of the whereabouts of Tito Roncaglia, accused as responsible for the killing of the American, I confessed that I have seen him in Rome. In another part of the interrogation I also confessed that I had heard Roncaglia himself state that he had killed the American in a house of the village Polino. I tried to defend Roncaglia's position as I did not think he was a bad man, and said that not everything he had boasted about should be given credit.

After the interrogation was finished I was released as it was evident that I was in no way involved in the killing of the American.

On 15 June 1946 I was again interrogated by the investigator Daniel Anzil, in which interview I confirmed my previous statements. On that occasion I learned that Tito Roncaglia had been apprehended, and the following day, 16 June 1946, I was taken to the Regina Coeli prison for a confrontation with Roncaglia, whom I identified. As I was brought to Roncaglia's presence I felt a great affection for him, as I always had considered him my friend, and in my emotion, forgetting the place we were at, we embraced each other in tears. After this I was taken away and left in liberty.

On the next day, 17 June 1946, I met Roncaglia's wife, who was in a pitiful state of moral depression, and, determined to save somehow my friend Roncaglia I informed his wife about my planes and purpose. His wife enquired about the state of mind and moral of her husband and I told her about the touching scene occurred between us when I was there to identify him. Then I said to her: "As in the group who took part in the action at Polino, there was, at that time, also the commissary Gaetano Pattarozzi, of whom it was almost stated for sure that he had been shot or that he escaped to Switzerland, I could perhaps help her husband in making a statement that Gaetano Pattarozzi was the responsible of the killing of the American" Thus I thought to be able to help my friend Tito Roncaglia, and that perhaps and amnesty or similar possibilities in his favour might help him to his way to regain his freedom.

In that moment, as I studied my plan together with Roncaglia's wife, I was of course far from any idea of doing any harm to Gaetano Pattarozzi, first, because I supposed he was dead, second because he also was a good friend of mine, though not quite so closely as Roncaglia. Nor did I think that this would lead to a disguidance in solving the case for the Allies.

With this in mind I suggested Mrs. Roncaglia to find the way of contacting her husband in order to inform him of our project and to give him the chance of acting accordingly. After which I left Mrs. Roncaglia and went on my way, and resumed my own activities.

The following day, Mr. Anzil, the investigator returned to my place bringing my former written statement for my signature with him. This statement contained all details of my previous interrogation.

By chance I met again Roncaglia's wife, and on my inquiry about her husband she told me he was still incarcerated, but she hoped that he would soon be tried, without mentioning, however, his reaction as to my advice.

On 3 September 1946 at 18:30 hrs I was arrested by the investigator Daniele Anzil, the same one to whom I had made my statements previously. He invited me to follow him to the Hotel Plaza, Rome, without informing me of his purposes, except telling me he wanted some information from me.

At the Hotel Plaza, we went up to room No. 232, from where Mr. Anzil gave orders by phone, to bring up some people immediately. In fact, a few minutes later it was knocked at the door and a person entered accompanying another man, whom I immediately recognized to be Capt. Gaetano Pattarozzi, This surprised me so much that I was almost paralyzed by the shock. Mr. Anzil asked me whether I knew these two people. I answered that I knew only one of them, and indicated Capt. Gaetano Pattarozzi. The other person was introduced to me as Prof. Avv. Domenico Uras, an official acting as deputy to the investigator Daniel Anzil.

Under a cross examination I had to confess the full truth as to the killing of the American at Rolino, carried out by Tito Roncaglia. During this interrogation Mr. Anzil made it clear to me that in spite my wish to help my friend I could not avoid making the present full statement, and I, compelled by this cross examination and by the presence of Capt. Pattarozzi, who, in contradiction to all information given previously on his execution was there, alive, before me, withdrew my previous deposition. I confirm, in fact, my present statement, in which I exclude definitely Gaetano Pattarozzi from any responsibility in the killing of the American airman.

I have read the present statement, compiled in my presence and before the special investigator Daniel Anzil, Prof. Avv. Domenico Uras, and the journalist Gaetano Pattarozzi, and declare that all facts stated therein are true and correct.

3 - Come liberazione ritorni

Il fatto dell'uccisione dell'americano avvenuta in una casa del paese di Palino, come ebbi modo con altri esponenti, che l'autore dell'uccisione era stato lui, Rico lo disse che si trattava del mese di settembre fu quando i suoi [illegible] Ronchetti lui mi raccontò che alla direzione del partito era arrivata una lettera e che lui [illegible] fosse stato merito [illegible] Scalotti Castillo, Bernaglia Alberto ed altri i quali erano dei fascisti e in base ai rapporti con lui, [illegible] la lettera contenesse che alla Direzione del partito non [illegible] dare importanza ai racconti riguardanti l'uccisione dell'americano nel paese di Palino. Io scelsi di dire: "Mai come ora è di estrema attività luce presso la Direzione del Partito mettendo in dubbio la mia azione sull'uccisione dell'americano nel paese di Palino mentre tu hai sempre sostenuto che sono stato io a ucciderlo". Durante la mia permanenza alla federazione di Terni [illegible] per reggere la Direzione del Partito. Ci [illegible] ricordo il Federale Alberto Bocco, il Ten. Rolando Mannori, Bertano Pietrozzi ed altri. Nel corso dell'insurrezione popolare, nel mese di Aprile 1945, io venni arrestato assieme ad altri compagni di partito dalanta e fra questi ricordo il Tito Ronchetti che era stato precedentemente promosso Tenente, ed altri ufficiali della stessa brigata. Venni portato prima al campo di concentramento di Piacenza poi a quello di Coltano, sotto il controllo degli alleati. Rimasi in tale campo fino al 10 giugno 1945 giorno in cui venni liberato in seguito alle disposizioni allora vigenti. Io seppi che il Ronchetti ed altri rimasero ancora prigionieri nel campo. Alcuni giorni dopo mi trasferii a Roma ove raggiunsi la mia famiglia. Rimasi in Roma fino al 2 Sett. 1945, data in cui venne emesso un ordine di fermo in base al quale venni tradotto alle Carceri di Regina Coeli ove rimasi fino al 13 gennaio 1946. Nel Carcere di Regina Coeli, trovandomi assieme ai altri detenuti politici, fra le notizie che ci scambiavamo durante l'ora di riposo all'aria, mi ven= riferito che il Capitano Gaetano Pattarozzi era stato condannato a morte e si presumeva fucilato da parte dei partigiani.Il 13 Gennaio del 1946 venni trasferito alla Casa di pena di Padova ove rimasi fino al 26 gennaio 1946.Durante questo periodo,fra le altre notizie appresi,seppi che Gaetano Pattarozzi era stato fucilato dai partigiani.Il 26 dello stesso mese venni rimesso in libertà non essendo emersi a mio carico elementi di accusa.Raggiunsi la mia famiglia a Roma.Qualche tempo dopo la mia liberazione,parlando con amici e con miei familiari,~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ preciso in famiglia,venni a sapere fra le tante cose che il Capitano Gaetano Pattarozzi era stato condannato a morte e che si diceva fosse stato fucilato ma che era possibile che fosse scappato in Svizzera.Verso i primi di aprile del 1946 mi trovavo a casa mia e ancora privo di lavoro quando in uno di quei giorni mi venne a trovare l'ex Tenente Tito Roncaglia assieme a sua moglie. Essendo io legato da forte amicizia con il Roncaglia Tito le ricevetti amichevolmente e con lui parlai della nostra posizione economica. Lui mi chiese se avevo la possibilità di trovargli un'occupazione.Naturalmente io gli spiegai la mia situazione e gli feci capire l'impossibilità di aiutarlo;dopo di che ci salutammo e lui andò via dicendomi che avrebbe trovato alloggio in qualche parte.Il 28 maggio 1946 ~~xxxxxxx~~ ritornando da un lavoro effettuato a Bologna trovai ad attendermi all'ingresso di casa mia un agente della polizia americana che si fece riconoscere per lo speciale investigatore Daniele Anzil della War Crimes Branch.Il sunnominato agente mi sottopose ad un interrogatorio relativo al fatto dell'uccisione di un americano avvenuta nel paese di Polino(Terni).Giunti al punto di sapere dove si potesse trovare il Tito Roncaglia,accusato come colpevole dell'uccisione dell'americano io confessai di aver visto il Tito Roncaglia in Roma.In un'altra parte dell'interrogatorio io confessai di aver sentito da Roncaglia stesso che lui aveva ucciso l'americano in una casa del paese di Polino.Io cercai di difendere la posizione di Tito Roncaglia poichè pensavo che il Roncaglia non era di animo cattivo e che non bisognava credere a tutto quello che lui raccontava.Terminato l'interrogatorio io venni rilasciato in libertà poichè non era risultato implicato nell'uccisio-ne dell'americano. Il 15 Giugno 1946 venni nuovamente interrogato dall'Investigatore Daniele Anzil al quale confermai il precedente interrogatorio. In quell'occasione mi venne comunicato l'avvenuto arresto di Tito Roncaglia e il giorno dopo 16 giugno 1946 venni portato alle Carceri di Regina Coeli e portato alla presenza di Tito Roncaglia confermai il suo riconoscimento. Nel momento in cui fui portato alla presenza di Tito Roncaglia mi sentii molto commosso perchè ero legato a lui da sentimenti amichevoli e non pensando al luogo ove mi trovavo ci abbracciammo piangendo. Dopo tale gesto io venni allontanato dal Roncaglia e venni rilasciato in libertà. L'indomani giorno 17 incontrai la moglie di Tito Roncaglia da quale si trovava in uno stato di pietosa condizione morale. In quell'attimo pensai di salvare in qualche modo il mio amico Tito Roncaglia e parlando con la moglie la misi al corrente del mio piano e delle mie intenzioni. La moglie mi domandò in che stato avevo trovato suo marito e le raccontai la scena commovente che avevo vissuto in quell'attimo confermai il suo riconoscimento. Fu così che dissi alla moglie: come [illegible] che prese parte all'azione di Polino vi era l'allora Commissario [illegible] Pattarozzi e avendo avuto delle notizie di sicura fonte dell'avvenuta uccisione o fuga in Svizzera del Pattarozzi stesso, [illegible] suo marito Tito Roncaglia facendo una dichiarazione [illegible] nominato come autore dell'uccisione dell'americano [illegible] Pattarozzi Gaetano pensando così di poter aiutare il mio amico Roncaglia [illegible] una amnistia o qualche provvedimento in suo favore avrebbe potuto trovare la possibilità di fare una strada per ritornare libero. Naturalmente in quel momento in cui insieme alla moglie studiavo questo piano non ho avuto precisamente il pensiero di recare del danno al Pattarozzi Gaetano stesso, sia perchè lo ritenevo morto sia perchè anche lui in parte minore era mio amico. E nemmeno pensai di portare dei dirigenti sullo svolgimento per la risoluzione del fatto da parte degli alleati. E con questo ragionamento consigliai la moglie di trovare il mezzo di comunicare col marito al fine di metterlo a conoscenza della volontà del nostro aiuto affinchè anche lui si [illegible] come meglio [illegible] portune.Dopo di ciò salutai la moglie e ripresi le mie attività.

L'indomani ritornato da me l'investigatore Daniele Anzil mi presentò da firmare la dichiarazione nella quale erano raccolti tutti i particolari dell'interrogatorio che mi fu fatto alcuni giorni prima.Questi particolari sono leggibili nella mia prima dichiarazione.Incontrai ancora per caso la moglie del Roncaglia Tito alla quale chiesi come stava suo marito:essa mi disse che si trovava sempre in carcere e sperava che presto si sarebbe svolto il processo senza però parlare dell'effetto che poteva aver fatto il mio consiglio.
Il giorno 3 Settembre 1946 alle ore 18/30 venni arrestato dall'investigatore che riconobbi subito nella figura del Signor Daniele Anzil al quale precedentemente avevo rilasciato una mia dichiarazione.Dallo medesimo venni invitato a seguirlo in un'auto sino all'Albergo Plaza di Roma.Seguii l'investigatore il quale non mi mise al corrente di che cosa si trattasse dicendomi solamente che aveva bisogno di chiedermi delle informazioni.Giunto al Plaza venni fatto salire nella stanza N°232 ove mi trovai solo con l'investigatore Daniele Anzil.Vidi l'investigatore Daniele Anzil avvicinarsi all'apparecchio telefonico e sentii che dava degli ordini per far venire colà medesima alcune persone.Alcuni minuti dopo diffatti fu bussato alla porta e vidi entrare una persona che non conoscevo che accompagnava un'altra persona che riconobbi subito nel Colonnello Pattazzi mi fece rimanere come paralizzato sulla sedia ove ero seduto.L'investigatore Daniele Anzil mi chiese se riconoscevo le persone:io risposi di conoscere una delle due e precisamente il Capitano Gaetano Pattazzi.L'altra persona mi fu comunicato che era il Prof.Avv.Domenico Uras, designato come segretario dell'investigatore Daniele Anzil.Sottoposto a stringente interrogatorio da parte dell'investigatore Daniele Anzil fui portato a dover confessare la verità dei fatti relativi all'uccisione dell'americano nel paese di Poline da parte di Tito Roncaglia.Durante l'interrogatorio l'investigatore mi fece profondamente comprendere e mi convinse con ogni part colari che malgrado io avessi avuto il desiderio di portare aiuto ad un caro amico non ero nelle condizioni di evitare la presente dichiarazione,Nonostante la mia profonda e sincera amicizia per il Moncaglia,e spinto dal convincente interrogatorio dell'investigatore,e dalla presenza del Capitano Gaetano Pattarozzi che vedevo vivo in mia presenza,contrariamente alle informazioni precedentemente avute,sulla sua uccisione,per scrupolo di coscienza ritrattai la mia precedente deposizione,confermando la presente ma in base alla quale escludo la responsabilità del Pattarozzi Gaetano.

La presente dichiarazione fatta in mia presenza e presenti lo Special investigatore Daniele Anzil,il Prof.Avvocato Domenico Uras e il giornalista Gaetano Pattarozzi,prima di pervi la firma è stata da me riletta in perfetto stato d'anime e trovata rispondente a verità in ogni suo punto.

S T A T E M E N T

I, the undersigned, DOLCI Vincenzo, called Gennaro, son of Vittorio and of Pier[illegible] Terziana, born at Cesi on 2 December 1920, residing at Cesi (Terni) No 5 Via della Rocca, state as follows:

In January 1944 I was a private in the G.N.R. (Republican Guard). At about midnight towards the end of January, which day I do not remember, I was called out of bed by Lt. Antonucci, who came with the news that Avv. Orsini had been killed and that we had to go immediately to Polino. I got up and saw a car waiting before my front door, but then the trip was put off until the next morning. The following morning infact, we left on a bus together with other vehicles and militi for Polino.

As we reached Arrone we halted and I noticed some Germans in the square of that village. The Federale Coppo, who lead the expedition asked the Germans to come to Polino, but they only sent a German commander with us. Then we proceeded to Polino. Arrived there I got off the bus and according to orders received by the commanding officers I stayed in the main square, while the others were scattered around in the village.

While I was in the square I saw two militi, one of them called Francesco [illegible] the other's name I do not remember, in company of a short and stout civilian with big moustache, who said: "Don't kill me, I'll tell you where an American is hidden". At this point I saw a certain Tito Roncaglia, in civilian cloth and armed with mashingun and pistol, and a certain Edoardo Lancia, also armed with pistol but in uniform and helmets. Then the two took the civilian and went off with him. Shortly after I heard a shot and immediately another one, and I thought there was some fighting going on with the partisans. I saw, instead, Roncaglia and Lancia coming back to the square and announcing: "Listen boys, we have just killed an American, you must go and get him"

So I ran, together with the others to the house and as I entered it I saw a body on the floor still breathing. We took a blanket and a ladder, on which we laid the body to carry him out of the room. I remember among the people present in the room Tito Roncaglia, Odoardo Lancia, Capt. Anastasio Nascani and two in civilian cloth. Nascani said: "We must take him down at once, to the hospital" As I carried the ladder, the head of the victim turned towards me, and at about 10-15 meters from the square I heard the wounded man take a deep breath, I said: He is dead. Blood was pouring out of his mouth and also his chest was bleeding. When we arrived with the body to the square Roncaglia said: "After all, we have killed an American" and Lancia added: " We fired at him one round each". Then the body was put on a vehicle and we all left for Terni. Arrived at Terni I reported at the barracks and went then home.

I remember the American as rather tall, in civilian cloth; he wore a knife (dagger), it was said, and on searching him a billfold was found, the content of which is not known to me.

No further details have come to my knowledge.

DICHIARAZIONE

Io sottoscritto Dolci Vincenzo detto Gennaro di Vittorio e di Pierant[illegible] ti Terziana nato a Cesi il 2-12-1920 residente a Cesi(Terni)via della Rocc[illegible] N.(5).Dichiaro quanto segue:

Nel mese di gennaio del 1944 prestavo servizio presso la G.N.R.in [illegible] qualita di semplice soldato.Nei ultimi giorni del mese di gennaio 1944 verso l[illegible] la mezzanotte di uno di tali giorni che io non ricordo con precisione;mi trov[illegible] vavo a letto,quando venne il Tenente Antonucci il quale ci sveglio e di[illegible] hanno ammazzato l'Avvocato Orsini,ci disse che bisognava andare al pa[illegible] Polino.Io mi alzai e andai alla porta ove si trovava una macchina,pa[illegible] vece tutto fu rimandato alla mattina dopo.La mattina dopo a bordo d[illegible] tobus assieme ad altre macchine e ad altri militi partimmo verso Polino. Giunti ad Arrone ci fermammo,e mi accorsi che vi erano dei Tedeschi sulla piazza dello stesso paese.Il Federale Coppo che comandava la spedizione [illegible] disse hai Tedeschi che dovevano andare loro,invece i tedeschi non vennero con noi venne solo un Comandante Tedesco.Poi si parti.Giunti a Polino [illegible] scesi dalla macchina a seguito di un ordine dato dal Comandante.Rimasi [illegible] piazza,e mentre mi trovavo nella piazza mi accorsi che gli altri militi [illegible] erano sparsi nel interno del paese.[illegible]Mentre mi trovavo sulla piazza vidi due militi uno [illegible] chiamava Franceschini e l'altri non mi ricordo i quali avevano con loro un borghese di statura piccola e grossa portava i baffi grandi,il quale urlava che diceva:NON MAMMAZZATE CHE VI DICO D'OVE UN AMERICANO.A questo punto vi un certo Roncaglia Tito il quale era in abito civile armato di pistola e [illegible] mitra e un certo Lancia Edoardo anche armato di pistola pero portava [illegible] sa e degli stivaloni.Loro presero questo borghese ed assieme andarono con lui.Poco dopo udii un colpo di arma da fuoco,e subito dopo un altro [illegible] to pensai che fosse avvenuto qualche attacco da prte dei partigiani.Dopo vece vidi arrivare sulla piazza Roncaglia Tito e Lancia Odoardo i quali pena vennero giu ci dissero:RAGAZZI ABBIAMO AMMAZZATO UN AMERICANO BISOGNA ANDARE A PRENDERLO.Allora io assieme ad altri sono corso verso la casa ed appena entrato vidi un corpo disteso a terra il quale ancora respirava,ap[illegible] na noi ci siamo accorti che respirava ancora,abbiamo preso una coperta ed una scala abbiamo adagiato il corpo sulla scala e lo abbiamo sollevato per portarlo via.Ricordo che nell'interno della stanza si trovavano assieme a me Tito Roncaglia,Lancia Odoardo,il Capitano Nascani Ana[illegible] in abito civile;il Capitano Nascani disse:BISOGNA [illegible] SI PORTAVA ALL'OSPEDALE.Io portai il corpo a [illegible] la testa del Americano era rivolta verso il [illegible] 15 metri dalla piazza uddi che il ferito fece un profondo respiro,io dissi E' MORTO.Il ferito perdeva sangue dalla bocca ed aveva del sangue anche nel petto,quando noi abbiamo portato il corpo nella piazza,Roncaglia [illegible]

...oli ...e segue dichiarazione Doloi Vincenzo:

Tunto abbiamo ammazzato un americano, poi Ianoia disse: LE abbiamo sparato un colpo per ciascuno. Dopo il corpo venne messo sopra una macchina, e poco dopo si partì per Terni. Arrivato a Terni io ritornai alla Caserma, e in seguito raggiunsi casa mia. Ricordo che l'Amuricano era abbastanza alto, vestiva con abiti civili, portava, mi dissero un pugnale, addosso le venne trovato portafoglio che però non seppi cosa contenesse. Non sono a conoscenza di altri particolari, perciò mi firmo in fede:

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution: The Prosecution's case was based on extra judicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case (U.S. vs Weiss et al 000-50-2, March 1946; E 7). Exhibits P-2 to P-9, inclusive, consist of extra judicial testimony of each of the accused.

Accused SCHOLZ was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from December 1944 to the liberation of the camp with the rank of corporal (R 20). He performed tower and escort guard duty at the main camp (R 22). He later served as tower guard at the Praezifix Factory at Camp Dachau which made aircraft parts. He was a guard on the prisoner march from Camp Dachau to Wolfratshausen. The Praezifix column in the march was made up of 116 Russians and Germans (P-9). He was on the Praezifix detail at the time a hanging took place (R 42).

Accused KALPE was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from February 1941 to the capitulation. He was promoted to sergeant in May 1944. He served as a guard on the Praezifix detail from March 1943 until July 1944, assisting the detail leader and taking his place when he was away (R 30). He worked in various other offices prior to his service on the Praezifix detail. He was familiar with all workings of the camp (P-7).

Accused ADAMI was drafted into the Waffen SS in August 1943 and sent to the SS clothing factory at Camp Dachau four days later. He worked every second week with prisoners on the night shift until he became sick in March 1944. From that time to the liberation of the camp he worked on the day shifts. Workers in the clothing factory were supervised by civilian technicians while ADAMI and one other SS trooper acted as guards (P-2).

Accused BOENSCH was drafted into the Waffen SS February 1941. He served in a field unit until September 1944 when he was made a guard at Camp Dachau and served in this capacity until the capitulation. He had charge of various small details around the camp, including the gardener's detail, which was made up of clergymen (P-5).

Accused DEPNER was drafted into the SS in August 1943 and transferred to Camp Dachau to the rabbit farm where there were 82 prisoners working under him (P-6). He held the rank of T/Sgt (R 64) until the capitulation in April 1945 (R 65).

Accused BALTES was a tower guard and a work-detail guard in the SS at Allach, an out-camp, from early in September to the middle of November 1944. Then with the same duties he served at Camp Dachau until 4 March 1945 and finally at the Augsburg sub-camp until the evacuation in April 1945. He stated that the food was bad in all three camps and the prisoners were undernourished. The prisoners at Allack working under JAROLIN (U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2) were compelled to work 12 hours a day. He saw the Allach deputy camp leader beat a prisoner. A typhoid fever epidemic broke out at Dachau in the winter of 1944 and many prisoners died. He saw many corpses go to the crematory. BALTES stated that Augsburg was a very bad camp and prisoners were in such poor health that many were too weak to walk from their work and had to be carried. They were kept at work by blows from capos. BALTES was a guard on the prisoner march from Augsburg out-camp southward on 23 April 1945 and was captured by the advancing Americans three days later (P-3).

Accused BAYER entered the Waffen SS in October 1944 and was immediately assigned guard duty at out-camp Kaufering No. VII. There were about 2000 male and female inmates of various nationalities in this camp. They were badly fed and clothed and lived under very unsanitary conditions. Johannes EICHELSDORFER was commandant of this camp where beatings were not only permitted but EICHELSDORFER beat the prisoners himself (U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, R 1764). BAYER performed the same duties at out-camp Kaufering No. XI where three to four thousand male and female prisoners were incarcerated under conditions similar to those at out-camp Kaufering No. VII. BAYER saw prisoners beaten at both camps by capos/ Accused was a guard on one prisoner march from cut-camp Kaufering No. XI, which departed toward Wolfratshausen at the end of April 1945 (P-4).

Accused SCHELMAUL entered the Waffen SS in September 1944 and was transferred to out-camp Kempton where he served as both a tower guard and on escort guard until the capitulation. There were about 400 prisoners at this camp working for the Bavarian Motor Works (P-8).

For the Defense. Accused SCHOLZ testified that when he arrived at Camp Dachau he knew nothing of concentration camps (R 21). He never had trouble with prisoners and never reported any of them for punishment (R 22). He claimed that he was transferred to Camp Dachau and to the SS without his consent. His assignment was made arbitrarily by his superiors (R 23, 24). He was recalled to the stand by the Defense and stated that he knew nothing about the hangings in 1944 referred to in the testimony of the defense witnesses Henrik FUESER (R 42), Franz KAPSBERGER (R 48), and Ferdinand KAPPER (R 49), and that he, SCHOLZ, was in the hospital at the time. He identified the accused KARPE, whom he relieved on the Praezifix detail (R 25). He testified that KARPE was kind to the prisoners and treated them humanely (R 25). He also testified that KARPE'S duties were restricted because of extremely bad vision (R 25). On the prisoner march from Camp Dachau to Wolfratshausen, SCHOLZ was a guard and had two wagons with food for the prisoners. No losses occurred in his column (P-9).

Accused KARPE was drafted into the Waffen SS in January 1940 and was discharged in October 1940 because of faulty vision. After reinduction in February 1941 he tried to get a discharge but was unsuccessful. He denied knowing anything about the organization or responsibility for the care of inmates at Camp Dachau (R 30). He never had any trouble with prisoners nor did he have occasion to report them for infractions of the rules (R 30). He knew accused SCHOLZ in the camp and testified that SCHOLZ always treated the prisoners kindly and humanely (R 32). He saw prisoners beaten only once in the camp and never say anyone shot or hanged at Camp Dachau (R 34).

The defense witness, Henrik FUESER, was interned in Camp Dachau by the Gestapo in 1942 and remained until the liberation (R 36, 37). He knew accused KARPE in the camp, described KARPE'S duties at the Praezifix and testified that KARPE acted in a very humane manner toward the inmates (R 38). In 1944 FUESER witnessed one hanging in the Praezifix. KARPE, however, had been transferred from Praezifix before the hanging (R 42). On cross-examination, FUESER stated that KARPE had given him cigarettes and bread (R 41).

Another defense witness, Franz KAPSBERGER, a German national and former inmate at Camp Dachau from 1940 to 1945, testified that he was on the Praezifix detail from 1941 to 1945 (R 43). While on this detail, he became acquainted with accused KARPE who acted very humanely toward the prisoners (R 45) and had relaxed the discipline of the camp as much as he could (R 45, 46). This witness also knew SCHOLZ on the Praezifix detail and described him as a kind and humane guard (R 47).

The defense witness, Ferdinand KAPPER, a German national and resident of Dachau, was an inmate in the camp from 1938 to 1944 (R 50). He knew the accused KARPE in the camp and described him as being extremely humane and kindly (R 51). The witness was acquainted with accused SCHOLZ whom he described as being very strict but never guilty of harshness or mistreatment (R 53).

Accused ADAMI testified and denied any knowledge of concentration camp organization (R 57). At Camp Dachau he was detailed to the tailor shop and worked at a machine with the inmates from August 1943 to March 1944. He was hospitalized for tuberculosis from that time until October 1944 when he returned to work in the same shop with civilian labor(R 58). He got along very well with the inmates working under his supervision. On cross-examination, he stated that his records were taken away from him, making it impossible for him to prove any of his statements relative to his army service (R 60,61). He never saw prisoners mistreated and did not mistreat any himself (P-2).

Defense witness, Franz MRAAS, testified that he was interned at Camp Dachau in May 1943 because of political activity (R 91), that he is now detained in the War Crimes Enclosure and that he was denounced by former inmates (R 92). He was a capo in a clothing factory after August 1943. He knew and worked with the accused ADAMI in the factory and states that for three or four months ADAMI worked on the night shift instructing the inmates in the operation of the machines (R 92). During this time ADAMI did not perform any guard duty. The witness described the popularity of ADAMI with the inmates and observed that ADAMI treated those under him humanely and correctly (R 94).

Another defense witness, Simon HONHEISER, a former inmate of Camp Dachau for two years and now a tailor employed in the village of Dachau (R 95, 96), described in detail an act of kindness accused ADAMI had once done him when he fell ill at his machine in the clothing shop (R 97,98).

Defense witness, Rudolf DREIER, a German national and former inmate of Camp Dachau from 1941 to 1945, was incarcerated there upon conviction for forgery in 1938 (R 105). While an inmate, he became acquainted with accused DEPNER and ADAMI. He testified as to DEPNER'S friendly and cooperative attitude toward the prisoners and cited examples (R 106). He also described ADAMI'S reputation among the inmates as being good (R 107). He saw beatings in camp but never by DEPNER or ADAMI, or in their presence (R 108).

Accused DEPNER testified to the effect that he never had any trouble with inmates while at Camp Dachau (R 65) and that he was able to provide them with food above their regular ration (R 66). On cross-examination, he stated that he exercised no command functions over the members of the rabbit farm detail but that he acted in a technical supervisory capacity (R 66). No guards were needed or used as the farm was a fenced-in enclosure located inside the regular camp and the detail was marched over each morning directly from their quarters (R 67). He never saw any inmates shot, hanged, or beaten (R 68).

Defense witness, Doctor Paul HUSAREK, now a resident of Dachau and an investigator employed by Military Government, was an inmate at Camp Dachau from 1941 to 1945. He knew DEPNER in the concentration camp and often visited a close friend who worked on the rabbit farm, contrary to camp regulations and with DEPNER'S consent. He described DEPNER'S easy discipline and how DEPNER had supplemented the meager rations of members of the rabbit farm detail (R 71). He described in detail how DEPNER had been pointed out as a war criminal and claimed it was a gross mistake (R 72). HUSAREK was also acquainted with the accused ADAMI and stated he had the reputation of treating prisoners humanely (R 73).

Accused BAYER testified to the effect that he was drafted into the SS and sent to Camp Dachau for guard duty without his consent (R 89). He had no trouble with prisoners during his tour of duty at out-camps Kaufering Nos. VII and XI, and never struck a prisoner or reported one for punishment (R 90). He once saw OT men mistreating a prisoner but he stopped it immediately (P-4, par. 3). Capos who beat prisoners at out-camps Kaufering Nos VII and XI were not under his command (P-4, par. 5).

Accused SCHERMAUL denied knowing anything about operation of concentration camps, how the inmates were selected or who was responsible for their welfare after their incarceration (R 101). While at Kempton out-camp he never had any trouble with the prisoners and never abused them (R 102).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any errors or omissions which resulted in injustice to the accused. All of the accused were, by their own admissions, SS guards at Camp Dachau or its out-camps for considerable periods of time between the dates alleged (P-2 to P-9, inclusive).

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case, including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). With the exception of the accused SCHERMAUL, all accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted, by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentence imposed. Concerning accused SCHERMAUL, it was shown that he participated and the nature of his duties was also satisfactorily proved. However, a search of the record in the parent case and the record in this subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at the Kempton out-camp. It is true that it was shown that 400 slave laborers were worked there but, if they were not otherwise mistreated and tortured, it is believed that SCHERMAUL'S participation in this mass atrocity was too remote to form a proper basis of sentencing by the Court. By virtue of the absence of evidence as to what occurred at the Kempton out-camp, he is not shown to have participated to a substantial degree and there is inadequate evidence as to the nature and extent of his participation to permit of arriving at an appropriate sentence. It could be contended with considerable merit that the Court, with propriety, could have inferred that the inmates of the Kempton out-camp were subjected to cruelties and torture substantially like those clearly proven to have been inflicted at the parent camp and the other out-camps. If that view were adopted, at least theoretically, injustices could result and those too remotely connected with this or other mass atrocities might be severely punished without a proper gauge to measure the magnitude of their crimes.

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. Consideration was given to letter from accused Josef BOENSCH dated 3 January 1947. No clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that all the sentences, except the one as to accused SCHERMAUL, be approved.

b. It is recommended that the sentence as to accused SCHERMAUL be disapproved.

c. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentences be approved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The Prosecution's case was based on sworn extrajudicial/testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case (R 7; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). Exhibits P-2 to P-9, inclusive, consist of extrajudicial sworn testimony of each of the accused. It was shown that during the period 1 January 1942 to 29 April 1945 each of the accused was an SS guard at Dachau Concentration Camp and/or subsidiary camps thereto as hereinafter indicated. At out-camp Allach where JAROLIN, who was convicted in parent Dachau case, was camp leader (U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946, R 1211); Rothschweige, a sub-camp of Allach, where 500 Hungarian Jews were incarcerated under 20 capos (P-3, R 9); and out-camp Kaufering XI.

Accused BARZEN was a guard under JAROLIN at out-camp Allach from September 1944 to the capitulation (P-9, R 15; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946, R 1211).

Accused BAUER was a guard at out-camp Rothschweige, a sub-camp of Allach. He witnessed the public beating of a prisoner and knew of deaths in the camp from disease (P-3, R 9).

Accused BIBER was a sergeant who posted and controlled the guards at out-camp Allach (P-4, R 21).

Accused BIELZ was a guard at Camp Dachau and out-camp Allach He participated in the prisoner march with 1300 prisoners from Allach on 26 April 1945. Prisoners fell out from exhaustion on this march (P-5, R 10).

Accused HERBERT worked for over a year (1943-1944) in the troop kitchen at Camp Dachau under FILLEBROCK, convicted in the parent Dachau case (P-6; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946, R 291, 422, 485, 486, 487, P-107). He was then a guard at out-camp Allach for a few days (P-6, R 11).

Accused LAUTER was a guard at Camp Dachau assigned to the "railroad station" detail from 12 March to 27 April 1945. He was a guard on the prisoner march from Dachau to Wolfratshausen on which there were several thousand inmates, 27 April 1945 (P-7. R 11).

Accused MECHNER was an SS Corporal-of-the-Guard at out-camp Allach, September 1944 to capitulation(P-2, R 8).

Accused SEHMISCH was a guard at out-camps Allach and Kaufering XI, September 1944 to capitulation. He was also a guard on the three-day prisoner march Kaufering XI to Wolfratshausen, 26 April 1945 (P-8, R 14).

For the Defense. Accused BARZEN never saw prisoners beaten nor did he beat or report any for punishment (P-9, R 15).

Accused BAUER never beat prisoners with a stick either at Rothschweige or Allach out-camps, or reported any for punishment (P-3, R 9). He took care of the mail and drove the courier and laundry. He had nothing to do with the prisoners (R 25). He was drafted into the Waffen SS and was not a Party member (D-1, R 27).

Accused BIBER did not participate in any beatings or report anyone for punishment at out-camp Allach (P-4, R 21). His duty was outside the concentration camp and he was not allowed inside (R 24).

Accused BIELZ had guard duty exclusively. He never beat or reported prisoners for punishment. When prisoners fell out from exhaustion on the prisoner march from out-camp Allach he left them by the side of the road (P-5, R 10). He was never on the inside of the camp and knew nothing of what went on therein (R 20).

Accused HERBERT never saw inmates beaten or beat them himself, nor report them for punishment while at Camp Dachau or out-camp Allach (P-6, R 11).

Accused LAUTER never beat or reported prisoners for punishment at Camp Dachau or out-camp Allach. When prisoners fell out on the prisoner march from out-camp Allach he left them to their fate by the side of the road. He knew of no one being shot on this march. (P-7, R 11).

Accused RECHNER was drafted into the SS in September 1944. He served as a guard for 8 months at out-camp Allach with duty at the Bavarian Motor Works, a factory nearby (P-2, R 8).

Accused SEHMISCH was an escort guard at out-camp Allach for 2 months beginning September 1944. He was hospitalized from November 1944 to March 1945. He was transferred to Landsberg as an escort guard and assigned to out-camp Kaufering XI. During his guard duty he claims nothing happened (P-8, R 14).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case, including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). With the exception of the accused RECHNER all accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau Case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed.

While it was shown that accused RECHNER was a Corporal-of-the-Guard at out-camp Allach for 8 months, a search of the record in the parent case and the record inthis subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at the Bavarian Motor Works, his "duty place", and his acquittal by the Court was therefore warranted.

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. A Petition for Clemency on behalf of Anton BIBER dated 23 September 1946 and signed by Frau Wally BIBER, his wife, contains no new evidence which would justify a reduction of his sentence, and no clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that the sentences be approved.

b. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentence be approved except as to accused BURGHARD, and that the finding and sentence as to accused BURGHARD be disapproved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. Prosecution's case was based on extra-judicial sworn testimony as hereinafter shown. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case (R 7; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). Exhibits P-2 to P-13, inclusive, are extrajudicial sworn testimony of the accused.

Accused BRUECKER received his SS guard training at Oranienburg July to October 1943. He was then transferred to Gendorf, an out-camp of Camp Dachau, where he served until February 1945. There were 250 prisoners of various nationalities at Gendorf working in a chemical factory and on excavating details. He knew of beatings and mistreatment there (P-2, R 8).

Accused BURGHARD came to Camp Dachau as a guard in August 1944 and transferred to out-camp Utting on Ammersee. At Utting there were about 400 prisoners under 13 guards constructing a factory nearby. The prisoners worked 12 hours a day (P-3, R 9).

Accused DIETLMAYER was an SS clerk at Gendorf-Muhldorf, an out-camp, for 8 months. His duties included making up duty rosters of the guards (P-5, R 10). He was a member of the Nazi Party, 1933 to 1943 (P-6, R 10).

Accused HELLER served as a tower and work-detail guard, first at Allach out-camp, 2-1/2 months; Camp Dachau, on the Praezifix factory detail, 5 months. He knew one American Officer at Allach (P-7, p 3; R 12). He was a guard on the prisoner transport Muhldorf to Tutzing, 29 April 1945, on which there were 3600 inmates loaded into 60 to 70 box cars. Many died of exhaustion (P-7, pp 5 to 7, inclusive; R 12).

Accused HOLLNAICHER was a plantation and clothing factory work-detail guard at Camp Dachau and work detail guard at out-camp Gendorf-Muhldorf. The plantation detail consisted of approximately 300 prisoners and the clothing detail of about 30 men. The Gendorf Chemical Works detail was made up of 3000 prisoners (P-8, P-9, R 15, 16).

Accused JEISEL was a SS work-detail guard, first at Dachau-then at out-camp Allach and Muhldorf. He was a guard on the prisoner transport of 4000 inmates to Tutzing 27 April 1945, where he was captured (P-10, R 17).

Accused JUNG was a work-detail guard at Gendorf-Muhldorf, an an out-camp, for 17 months. He was also a guard on the prisoner transport to Tutzing just prior to capitulation (P-12, R 18). There were more than 3000 prisoners in the transport, and in an air attack on this transport at a station, some were injured and some were killed (P-12, R 46).

Accused MORLOCK served as an SS tower guard at Camp Dachau for 3 months, Landsberg Camp #7 (Kaufering #7, 2000 inmates, labor and recuperation camp for Jews, U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, R 832, P. Ex. 118); 4 months at Muhldorf as messenger; and participated as a guard in the prisoner transport of 3000 prisoners from Muhldorf to Tutzing on 29 April 1945. Prisoners were crowded into box cars and had very little food. In an air attack on this transport on 29 April 1945 many prisoners, as well as guards, were killed (P-13, R 19).

For the Defense. Each of the accused took the stand in his own defense.

Accused BRUECKER's duties were on the outside of the camp only, and he never beat any prisoners himself (P-2, R 8, 22).

Accused BURGHARD had no duties inside the camp at Utting (R 27).

Accused DIETLMAYER's duties at out-camp Gendorf-Muhldorf were clerical and he claimed the rations at Gendorf were good (P-5, R 10)

Accused HELLER know of mistreatments at out-camp Allach but never saw any himself, nor did he participate in any mistreatment of inmates either at Allach or Camp Dachau (P-7, p 13; R 12).

Accused HOLLNAICHER was a guard on a work detail outside the camp and knew nothing of what went on inside Camp Dachau. Prisoners at out-camp Gendorf-Muhldorf looked well (R 42). He never shot or beat a prisoner himself (P-8, R 15).

Accused JEISEL was drafted into the SS and held the rank of Pfc (R 43). He made an effort to get more food for prisoners on the prisoner transport but was unsuccessful (P-10, R 17).

Accused JUNG's guard duties were outside the camp. He was also quartered outside the camp. He did not see prisoners shot or mistreated on the prisoner transport (R 45, 48).

Accused MORLOCK never served on an outside guard detail. For one month at out-camp Landsberg #7 he guarded seven Jewish women cooks in the guard kitchen. He had messenger duty only at out-camp Muhldorf, for 4 months (P-13, R 19). He saw no guards mistreat prisoners on the prisoner transport to Tutzing (R 52).

4. JURISDICTION: The court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or ommission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

The court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case, including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity oporation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U. S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946).

With the exception of the accused BURGHARD, all accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the court was warranted, by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau Case or in this subsequent preceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed. It was shown that accused BURGHARD participated and the nature of his duties was also established. However, a search of the record in the parent case and the record in this subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at the Utting out-camp. While it was shown that there were approximately 400 prisoners working under 13 guards constructing a factory nearby, if they were not otherwise mistreated, tortured or starved, it is believed that BURGHARD'S participation in this mass atrocity was too remote to form a proper basis for sentencing by the Court. By virtue of the absence of evidence as to the operation of out-camp Utting and what occurred there, accused BURGHARD is not shown to have participated to a substantial degree and there is inadequate evidence as to the nature and the extent of his participation to permit of arriving at a proper sentence. It could be contended with considerable merit that the Court, with propriety, could have inferred that the inmates of out-camp Utting were subjected to cruelties and torture substantially like those proven to have been inflicted at Camp Dachau and other out-camps. However, if that view were adopted, at least theoretically, injustices could result and those too remotely connected with this or other mass atrocities might be severely punished without a proper gauge to measure the magnitude of their crimes

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. Consideration was given to a Petition for Clemency on behalf of accused Michael DIETLMAYER, undated, signed by Midi DIETLMAYER, his wife. No clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that the sentences, except the one as to accused BURGHARD, be approved.

b. It is recommended that the sentence as to accused BURGHARD be disapproved.

c. Legal Forms No. 13 and No. 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

I. TRIAL DATA: The accused were tried jointly at Dachau, Germany, 12 December 1946, before an Intermediate Military Government Court.

II. CHARGES AND PARTICULARS:

FIRST CHARGE: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War.

Particulars: In that Wilhelm VELTEN, Josef VELTUM, Karl WALTER, Friedrich W.K. WARZINEK, Max WEINERT, Adolf WEITZEL, Johann Otto WIGIANEK, Nikolaus WOLF, Johann WRIA, Michael WUENSCHEL acting in pursuance of a common design to commit the acts hereinafter alleged, and as individuals aiding the operation of the Dachau Concentration Camp and camps subsidiary thereto, did, at, or in the vicinity of DACHAU and LANDSBERG, Germany, between about 1 January 1942 and about 29 April 1945, wilfully, deliberately and wrongfully participate in the subjection of civilian nationals of nations then at war with the then German Reich to cruelties and mistreatment, the exact names and numbers of such civilian nationals being unknown but aggregating many thousands who were then and there in the custody of the then German Reich in exercise of belligerent control.

SECOND CHARGE: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War,

Particulars: In that Wilhelm VELTEN, Josef VELTUM, Karl WALTER, Friedrich W.K. WARZINEK, Max WEINERT, Adolf WITZEL, Johann Otto WIGIANEK, Nikolaus WOLF, Johann WRIA, Michael WUENSCHEL acting in pursuance of a common design to commit the acts hereinafter alleged, and as individuals aiding in the operation of the Dachau Concentration Camp, did, at or in the vicinity of DACHAU, Germany, between about 1 January 1942 and about 29 April 1945, wilfully, deliberately and wrongfully participate in the subjection of members of the armed forces of nations then at war with the then German Reich, who were then and there surrendered and unarmed prisoners of war in the custody of the then German Reich, to cruelties and mistreatment, the exact names and numbers of such prisoners of war being unknown but aggregating many hundreds.

III. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE:

For Prosecution: Each of the convicted accused were SS guards and participated in the Dachau Concentration Camp mass atrocity. Prosecution's Exhibit P-Ex 1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the Parent Dachau Case (U.S. vs WEISS, et al., 000-50-2, March 1946, hereinafter referred to as the "Parent Case", R 8, see Section V, post).

IV. EVIDENCE AND RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. WILHELM VELTEN

Nationality:	German
Age:	39
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Corporal
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG , Second charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	21 months confinement from 3 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from 1 September 1944 to 27 April 1945. He participated as a guard in three prison transports; 28 - 29 October 1944 from Allach to Ueberlingen. There were 350 prisoners and 30 guards; 5 17 November 1944 from Camp Dachau to Buchwald. There were 15 prisoners and 4 guards; 10 - 11 February 1945 from Trasberg to Allach. There were 200 prisoners and 20 guards. He also participated as a guard in a prisoner march 27 - 29 April 1945 from Camp Dachau to a point 60 KLM distant. There were 5000 prisoners and 1000 guards on the march (R 9; P-Ex 2).

Evidence for Defense: The defense relied solely upon his extra-judicial sworn questionnaire (R 9; P-Ex 2).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau, for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He participated in three prisoner transports and a prisoner march. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and surrendered and unarmed prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

2. JOSEF VELTUM

Nationality:	German
Age:	58
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Technical Sergeant
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	21 months confinement from 28 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from February 1942 to December 1942 (R 9; P-Ex 3).

Evidence for Defense: Accused relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire (R 9; P-Ex 3).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and surrendered and unarmed prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

3. KARL WALTER

This accused was acquitted (R 31).

4. FRIEDRICH W.K. WARZINEK

This accused was acquitted (R 31).

5. MAX WEINERT

Nationality:	German
Age:	48
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Corporal
Plea:	NG, First Charge, NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	21 months confinement from 3 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from 10 September 1944 to 10 October 1944; 10 October 1944 to 8 November 1944 outcamp Rotschweige; 8 November 1944 to 3 May 1945 outcamp Karlsfeld (R 12; P-Ex 6).

Evidence for Defense: Accused relied solely on his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire (R 12; P-Ex 6).

Sufficiency of Evidence: While it is true WEINERT was shown to have participated in the mass atrocity at Camp Dachau, his active duty there was only for a period of time between 10 September 1944 and 10 October 1944 which period of participation was so short his connection with the operation of Camp Dachau is too remote. It was shown that accused participated in the Dachau Concentration Camp system and the nature of his duties was also satisfactorily proven. However, a search of the record in the parent case and the record in this subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at outcamps Rotschweige and Karlsfeld. It is believed that HEINERT's participation in this mass atrocity was too remote to form a proper basis of sentencing by the Court. By virtue of the absence of evidence as to what occurred at outcamps Rotschweige and Karlsfeld he is not shown to have participated to a substantial degree and there is inadequate evidence as to the nature and extent of his participation to permit of arriving at an appropriate sentance. It could be contended with considerable merit that the Court, with propriety, could have inferred that the inmates of outcamps Rotschweige and Karlsfeld were subjected to cruelties and tortures substantially like those clearly proven to have been inflicted at the parent camp and other outcamps. If that view were adopted, at least theoretically, injustices could result and those too remotely connected with this or other mass atrocities might be severely punished without a proper gauge to measure the magnitude of their crimes.

The findings of guilty are not warranted by the evidence.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be disapproved.

6. ADOLF WEITZEL

Nationality:	German
Age:	59
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Corporal
Plea:	NG, First Charge, NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge, G, Second Charge
Sentence:	18 months confinement from 6 August 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from December 1941 to July 1943 (R 13; P-Ex 7).

Evidence for Defense: The accused did not take the stand and testify in his own defense. Defense witness Schaefer testified to the effect accused helped prisoners on the detail he was guarding. The prisoners talked to the accused as a comrade and as a human being (R 20).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and unarmed and surrendered prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

7. JOHANN OTTO WIGIANEK

Nationality:	German
Age:	49
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Sergeant
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	Two years confinement from 3 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from 26 February 1942 to 28 April 1945 (R 13; P-Ex 8).

Evidence for Defense: The accused relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire (R 13; P-Ex 8).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and unarmed surrendered prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

8. NIKOLAUS WOLF

Nationality:	Hungarian
Age:	37
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Pfc
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	21 months confinement from 5 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from 9 November 1943 to 25 August 1944 (R 14; P-Ex 9).

Evidence for Defense: The defense relied solely upon his extra-judicial sworn questionnaire (R 14; P-Ex 9).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and unarmed surrendered prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment. Hungary was a co-belligerent of Germany.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

9. JOHANN HRLA

Nationality:	Czechoslovakian
Age:	36
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Corporal
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	21 months confinement from 1 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from 25 January 1943 to July 1944; July 1944 to April 1945 outcamp Sachsenhausen (R 15; P-Ex 10).

Evidence for Defense: Accused did not take the stand and testify in his own defense. Defense witness Kulpsch testified to the effect accused behaved comparatively decent towards prisoners and once allowed the witness to secure potatoes for himself when he was hungry. He did not do anything bad to the prisoners (R 24-25).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau and outcamp Sachsenhausen for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and unarmed and surrendered prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

10. MICHAEL WEISCHEL

Nationality:	Roumanian
Age:	35
Civilian Status:	Unknown
Party Status:	Unknown
Military Status:	SS Private
Plea:	NG, First Charge; NG, Second Charge
Findings:	G, First Charge; G, Second Charge
Sentence:	Two years confinement from 4 May 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau from July 1943 to 24 April 1945 (R 16; P-Ex 11).

Evidence for Defense: The defense relied solely upon his extra-judicial sworn questionnaire (R 16; P-Ex 11).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Accused was an SS guard at Camp Dachau for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. He is therefore presumed, in the absence of appropriate rebuttal evidence, to be guilty of participating in the common design to subject civilian nationals and unarmed and surrendered prisoners of war to killings, cruelties and mistreatment. Roumania was a co-belligerent of Germany.

The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: No Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency were filed.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

IV. QUESTIONS OF LAW:

Jurisdiction: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the subject matter.

Parent Case: The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the Parent Dachau Concentration Camp case including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, File AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases", 14 October 1946, and the Parent Case). With the exception of HEINERT, all of the convicted accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced either in the Parent Case or in this subsequent proceeding in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed.

Presumption of Law: In the trials of additional participants in a mass atrocity, the Court will presume, subject to being rebutted by appropriate evidence, that those shown by competent evidence to have participated in the mass atrocity knew of the criminal nature thereof (Paragraph 12, Letter, File AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, Supra). Presumption of law is a deduction which the law expressly directs to be made from particular facts. These are of two kinds, conclusive and disputable. The presumption applicable here is the disputable presumption which is an inference of law which holds good until it is invalidated by proof or a stronger presumption (Black's Law Dictionary, page 1409 - 10).

Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

VI. CONCLUSIONS:

1. It is recommended that the findings and the sentences be approved except that the findings and sentence imposed in the case of Max HEINERT be disapproved.

2. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

DEPUTY THEATER JUDGE ADVOCATE'S OFFICE
7708 WAR CRIMED GROUP
UNITED STATES FORCES, EUROPEAN THEATER

17 September, 1946.

Case No. 12-2018

U N I T E D S T A T E S) vs)
Hans TOELLE and Herbert LANGNER, German Nationals)

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE DEPUTY THEATER JUDGE ADVOCATE FOR WAR CRIMES

1. TRIAL: The accused were tried at Dachau, Germany, on the 12th July 1946, before a General Military Government Court appointed by paragraph 20, Special Orders No. 184, Headquarters United States Forces, European Theater, dated 3 July, 1946.

2. FINDINGS: The offense involved was:

	Pleas: as to Charge and Particulars	Findings:
CHARGE: Violation of the Laws of War:
Particulars: In that Hans TOELLE and Herbert LANGNER, German nationals, did, at or near THANHAM, Germany, on or about 16 April 1945, wilfully, deliberately and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in the killing of Donald E. HOWIE, a member of the United States Army who was then unarmed and in the act of surrendering himself as a prisoner of the then German Reich.
As to Hans TOELLE	NG	G
As to Herbert LANGNER	NG	NG

3. SENTENCE:

The Court by at least two thirds vote of the members present at the time the vote was taken concurring sentenced the accused Hans TOELLE to be imprisoned for a term of six years commencing the 29th day of May 1945, at such place as may be designated by competent military authority.

The Court by at least two thirds vote of the members present at the time the vote was taken concurring, found the accused Herbert LANGNER not guilty and acquitted him of the charge and particulars. The record of trial has been forwarded to the Commanding General, United States Forces, European Theater, for final action (paragraph 8d, Letter Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, File AG 000.5 JAG AGO, Subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," dated 14 October 1946).

4. DATA AS TO ACCUSED:

The accused Hans TOELLE is a German national, 39 years of age, and is unmarried. He stated that his parents were probably driven out of the Russian Zone of Occupation and he would have them to support. At the time of the offense for which he was found guilty he was a Corporal stationed at "Position Unit Pfau" and he had served at this position for a number of years prior to the 16th April 1945.

The accused Herbert LANGNER was acquitted of the charge and particulars. The record discloses that there was no evidence against the accused. Therefore the court was justified in its finding of not guilty and in acquitting the accused Herbert LANGNER of the offense charged. Therefore the remaining part of the review will deal with and refer only to Hans TOELLE.

5. RECOMMENDATION:

That the sentence as to the accused Hans TOELLE be approved and ordered executed.

6. EVIDENCE:

a. For the Prosecution: Briefly summarized, the evidence for the prosecution is as follows: On the 16th of April 1945 Second Lieutenant Donald E. HOWIE, an officer of the Air Corps of the United States Army, parachuted to earth near THANHAM, Germany (R 6). The flyer after landing walked across a field and into the woods (R 7). The weather was clear, and the hour was about three thirty in the afternoon (R 8.. 15). A guard from the prison camp at THANHAM had gone out to capture the flyer, had been within 500 meters from him and had shouted three times to the flyer to stop (R 15, 16). The flyer went into a small hole or depression in the ground. The witness KREILEDER testified that he was within eight meters from the flyer and that the flyer had a pistol in his hand; that the witness rode on and met a soldier to whom he spoke (R 8). The soldier fired a warning shot to induce the flyer to come out and surrender (R 8). A group of three soldiers then came up, comprised of TOELLE, the accused, and MADL and ZOEHRER (R 9). MADL shouted to the flyer, "Hands up". The flyer then came out of the hole with his hands up over his head (R 9). TOELLE also shouted to the flyer, "Hands up", and immediately fired off four shots at the flyer from a machine pistol (R 9). The flyer had both hands raised over his head when the accused fired the shots, the accused shouting and firing about the same time (R 10). The flyer did not have anything in his hands when the shots were fired by the accused. He fell to the ground on his face in front of the hole (R 11). The flyer's pistol was found in the hole (R 7-12). The witness KREILEDER was four to five meters from the flyer and no effort on the victim's part to harm the witness was made (R 18).

Summarized in greater detail, the evidence of the prosecution is as follows: The first witness called by the prosecution was Georg KREILEDER who lived at KOESSLARN, THANHAM. By occupation a farmer, 32 years of age, he lived near the scene of the murder. On the 16th of April 1945 he observed twelve planes in the air, and one of them "tail-smoked" (R 6). From his home he saw the pilot walking across the field. Later he saw the same man at a distance of approximately a hundred meters. Witness shouted to him in German but the flyer did not reply or come to him. The witness then returned to his home and learned from his mother that a guard from the prison was out looking for the flyer (R 7). He joined the guard, whose name was Franz BINDER, and who at the time fired a shot into the air at a distance of about fifty meters. The flyer fell to the ground and rose and went into the forest (R 8). Later TOELLE, the accused, with two other soldiers whose names were MADL and ZOEHRER, came upon the scene, MADL saw the flyer and shouted at him "Hands up", at which time the flyer came out of the hole (R 9-22). At about the same time the accused TOELLE shouted "Hands up", pressed the trigger of his machine gun pistol, and fired about four shots at the flyer, whose hands were raised at the time the shots were fired (R 9, 10, 22). On cross examination the witness did not vary or change his testimony (R 15, 17, 20, 22, 23).

The next witness called by the prosecution was Frau Annelies FINKE, whose occupation was a housewife. She was 30 years of age, and lived at DRIBURG. At the time of the murder she was working at the air force signal post as an operator. She testified that accused Lieutenant LANGNER was her superior in the work in the office (R 35), and that LANGNER, after receiving a report of the plane crash ordered the guard to hunt for the plane (R 35). Nowhere in the record does this witness testify that LANGNER ever gave any orders to shoot the flyer, and upon cross examination she admitted that LANGNER ordered the guard to hunt for the plane and not the flyer (R 37). LANGNER was talking to her and the other women present but at no time did he order anyone to hunt the flyer or shoot him down (R 37 and 39). There is no evidence anywhere in the record which connects the accused LANGNER with the murder or with giving an order to anyone to shoot the flyer.

Jakob KIENER, the next witness called by the prosecution, was 35 years of age, amd lived at HOTTHALLMUENSTE... His present occupation is to install stoves and lay tiles. He testified that he was a former Lieutenant in the German Army, and that at the time of the offense alleged he was at home on leave. During the air raid he went out to look for his father-in-law, heard the shots, and went directly to the scene (R 51). He heard someone call "Hands up" (R 52), but did not see the actual shooting. He saw the body of the flyer later, and removed his personal effects and wrapped them in a white cloth which he took from around the deceased's neck (R 55). He talked with the witness KREIDLER, who explained to him how the deceased was shot by TOELLE, the accused. TOELLE left the scene shortly after the shooting (R 57, 58).

The prosecution, with the consent of the defense, introduced Exhibit 3, which was a certificate of the investigating officer disclosing a document and a list of the personal belongings of the deceased flyer. It had been made by Captain FRIEDRICHS, who at the time of the murder was Company Commander of the German radio station (R 60). The prosecution and defense agreed that certain parts of the report of the medical officer of KOESSLARN who examined the dead body on 20th September 1945, should be admitted. The report is found on pages 61 and 62 of the record. The report identified the deceased flyer as Donald E. HOWIE, the victim named in the Particulars (R 61, 62).

b. For the Defense:

The defense called as its first witness Franz BINDER, who was a philosophy student, aged 26, and who lived in SALZBURG, Austria. This witness identified the two accused (R 69) and explained the duties of himself and the accused TOELLE (R 71). Lieutenant LANGNER ordered the witness to go look for the flyer (R 74). The order was go look for the flyer; but no order was given by the accused LANGNER to shoot the flyer (R 75). This witness talked with TOELLE a day or so after the shooting; TOELLE told him that he saw the flyer and that "if he had not fired the first shot he would have gotten away with his life" (R 76).

Walter BOEHM, the next witness called by the Defense, is 26 years of age, and a laborer living at GLISSRIENG (R 89, 90). This witness testified as to his duties at the radio station. He talked with Sergeant ZIDEK, who told him that a soldier was shot the day before (R 91). The witness also talked with MADL, who was the third member of the party. MADL told the witness that the flyer had thrown his pistol away, and that his hands were raised over his head (R 91), and that the accused TOELLE had been very excited when he fired at the deceased (R 92). This witness also testified as to the aircraft which had been flying low over that area (R 93). Most of the unit was composed of limited service men, and TOELLE was not a soldier, but a business man, and was nervous and excitable (R 95).

The defense's next witness was Julius GABRIEL, 34 years of age, a business man, living at SCHWANENSTADT in Upper Austria (R 99). The testimony was hearsay evidence which other people had given him. He personally was not present, but was in the hospital at the time of the incident (R 100). He further testified as to the character and reputation of the accused TOELLE (R 101). The accused also had a bad heart (R 102).

Heinrich LEIMBERGER, 46 years of age, by occupation a construction engineer, lived at KOESSLARN. He had worked at the radio station and was acquainted with the accused LANGNER; they had worked together on the "No Resistance Movement" and discussed what they should do when the Americans came; they had agreed upon the positions that were not to be defended. Accused LANGNER told him about the death of the flyer, which was regretted by LANGNER. This witness personally had no information or knowledge concerning the shooting (R 104 and 105).

Otto HOFBAUER, by occupation a Chaplain, 34 years of age, living at KOESSLARN, was the next witness called by the defense. He stated that he was at the time stationed at the Air Force Signal Unit (R 108); that he had learned from the population that an American flyer had been shot down (R 109); and that he made a personal investigation of the matter and obtained permission to give the flyer a partial military burial and his blessings (R 140, 141).

Eugene ZIDEK (R 114) made an affidavit concerning the death of the pilot, which was admitted in evidence for the defense upon agreement of the prosecution and the defense. In this affidavit he stated he had heard MADL shout, "Hands up", and saw the flyer stand up with one hand raised. About the same time he heard the shots and saw TOELLE stare at the flyer from above the machine pistol which TOELLE had discharged. TOELLE still had his finger on the trigger, and from the muzzle powder smoke could still be seen rising (R 115).

Wilhelm RITZAU was the next witness called by the defense. He was a merchant by occupation and was 33 years of age. He lived at LAEGARN, near KOESSLARN, and had been stationed with the German Army at the Army Area Unit called Position Pfau. Here he had been first sergeant and responsible for general company duties. He had returned to KOESSLARN the last part of April 1945, and talked with soldiers concerning the shooting of an American flyer. He discussed this with MADL and TOELLE, the accused. MADL told him that TOELLE had shot the American flyer, that MADL had called "Hands up", and that TOELLE also called "Hands up" and immediately thereafter had shot the pilot, and that in his opinion TOELLE had fired because he was scared (R 141-142). Accused TOELLE did general company duties and was used for special jobs. During witness' tour of duty as first sergeant at this station the accused TOELLE had nothing to do with weapons, and had no training with machine pistols (R 122-123). TOELLE had the reputation of being a business man, not a soldier. He was excitable, and had physical disabilities consisting of a heart ailment, asthma, and a bad foot, due to a bone fracture. His eyesight was bad and he was forced to wear glasses. Accused TOELLE graduated from high school and had several semesters at the university. This witnesses's testimony was all from information he had received from other people, since he personally was not acquainted with the facts concerning the shooting of the flyer.

Lt. Jakob RIENER was called as a witness for the defense (R 128) and testified that he had six years of experience in combat and had an opportunity to observe reactions of Germans when they first encountered armed enemies (R 128). In his opinion a solder untrained in the use of weapons, when first encountering armed enemies, might fire from pure excitement, and would be unable at the moment to concentrate. He knew the accused TOELLE only by sight (R 131).

Gerhard SCHLEIDER, 26 years of age, who lived at KOESSLAIN was the next witness called by the defense (R 135). He identified the accused TOELLE, having been acquainted with him since the summer of 1944. TOELLE had been a guest in his home. TOELLE had considered the war as lost and they had tuned in on an English broadcasting station (R 136). TOELLE was not a Nazi, nor was this witness. TOELLE had said he wished the war was over so he could start life all over. Witness had discussed the shooting of the American soldier with TOELLE and with other people. The version of the shooting in the community was that the people were sorry about it, and were of the opinion that the deed was committed in excitement due to a first experience with the enemy (R 137). TOELLE had made the statement to other people that he was confronted with the decision either to shoot or to be shot at. The accused TOELLE was unhappy, and was regretful about it (R 138). On cross-examination the witness testified that the people thought that the American was not threatening TOELLE, and that therefore it had to be a deed committed in excitement (R 139).

Franz RUEDL was recalled by the Defense, and testified that an additional flyer to the one shot by TOELLE had landed in the vicinity of KOESSLAIN; that this flyer was wounded; and that he was given medical attention and quarters (R 141).

Herbert LANGNER, one of the accused, took the stand and testified in his own behalf (R 143). He said he was 26 years of age, and that his profession was in a business firm. He lived at KOESSLAIN and he had reported to the prison camp on 1 June, after proclamation of Military Government that all Germans who did not have discharge papers should report.

He went to the Position Unit Pfau in September 1944 and remained there until May 1945. He was at the time the technical officer at the Unit (R 144). During air raids and heavy attacks he was also in the message center and on the morning of the 16th April 1945, he remained in the message center until the attack had subsided. He then went to the listening post where he remained during the afternoon (R 145). When he returned to the observation post he was told by the helpers that an airplane had crashed near THANHAM. The hour was about three thirty to four o'clock in the afternoon. He went to Captain FRIEDRICHS to advise him concerning this. FRIEDRICHS told accused LANGNER that he had already sent soldiers to search the plane. He requested that LANGNER also send soldiers to look so LANGNER sent Sergeants RUEDL and ZIDEK (R 151). He did not send TOELLE out to look for anyone, but he met TOELLE on his way to the administrative barracks. TOELLE advised that Captain FRIEDRICHS had ordered him to take part in the search and to go to the officers' barracks and get the machine pistol. Accused did not order TOELLE to get the machine pistol, but returned to the observation post and did not bother about TOELLE any more (R 152). The women working in the message center asked him about the crash and what would happen if the pilot would not give up. He said that "if the man resists it is a matter of course that our soldiers may make use of their weapons if necessary, he has got to be laid low". His remark was solely a statement of his opinion. He said it only to the girls who were there; soldiers were not present and it was not an order (R 153). He further testified that he at no time had given an order to the effect that enemy flyers would be "laid down" (R 160-161).

Accused LANGNER also testified on behalf of TOELLE and stated that TOELLE was not a soldier at all, but a civilian in uniform, who did not have the reputation of being blood thirsty (R 166). LANGNER was very much surprised when he heard that the American flyer had been shot. He felt sorry for the pilot because he was young and felt sorry for TOELLE because it had to happen to him and that this "had to happen almost at the end of the war". Neither on the 16th April nor before were orders given to shoot prisoners or to lay prisoners low or shoot pilots (R 167).

Accused LANGNER, upon being cross-examined, testified that he heard about the plane crash. He went to Captain FRIEDRICHS and advised him about the message. The Captain told him he knew already about the case, and that he had already sent out soldiers to search. He repeated his testimony as to meeting the accused TOELLE and denied having given any orders to him (R 110), or that he did not give TOELLE the machine pistol (R 141). When he first saw TOELLE the latter was on his way to get the machine pistol. LANGNER did not know what orders had been given to TOELLE, but he personally gave no orders (R 173).

Hans TOELLE took the witness stand and testified in his own behalf (R 180). He was 39 years of age, by occupation a merchant, and lived at ROHTENHL, MUENSTER. On 16 April 1946 he was a member of the Air Force stationed at Position Pfau. His rank between that of a corporal and private first class (R 180). His work was to keep records and operate the canteen, and particularly to keep the records on weapons. There was only one machine gun pistol and it was taken to the officers' quarters. He had never received any instructions in the use of this weapon (R 181). He finished high school and a few semesters in college, studying economics at KÖLN and at KÖNIGSBERG. He never had any training as a soldier (R 182). He was a limited service soldier and was not capable of combat duty (R 183). He was troubled with heart ailment and had a fracture of the foot; excitement bothered his heart and he would have headaches; he wore glasses and is unable to see without them (R 183). His only experience in air raids was the one in question. He learned of the plane's having crash-landed at about 1600 hours, through a civilian who came to the station (R 186). During the conversation with the civilian who reported the plane crash, his telephone rang and he received from Captain FRIEDRICHS an order to go out and hunt the pilot. The captain advised him that the pilot had a pistol and did not want to surrender, and in case of resistance a weapon had to be used (R 187). Captain FRIEDRICHS ordered the accused to go to the barracks and obtain a machine gun pistol (R 191). He met KREILEDER and Sergeant ZIDEK at the edge of the forest. They said that a guard from THANHAM had fired in the air, but that the flyer did not surrender. The flyer then ran into the forest. He was armed with a big pistol (R 191). The accused testified that he was excited because it was his first encounter with the enemy. The three of them spread out to look for the flyer (R 192). Accused saw the American flyer at about from fifty to a hundred meters, but did not see the other two soldiers who were with him (R 193). The flyer had a pistol in his hand and was sitting in a hole holding the pistol out towards the accused (R 195). Accused shouted "Hands up", and at the same time the pistol in his hand went off before he could fire a shot into the air as a warning (R 196, 219). When he shouted "Hands up" the pistol went off (R 197-219). Things happened so quickly that he could not see the pistol in the flyer's hands because he was surprised (R 198). After he had shot the flyer he ran to him and saw he was unconscious. Accused then ran to get a medical officer. He was very sorry, and he only had one thing in his mind, and that was to get medical aid to the flyer (R 198). He did not think it over, but just shouted "Hands up", and with the call the pistol went off (R 200, 221). He had no intentions to shoot the flyer (R 202-221). The others came up and talked, but he did not remember what was said, due to his excitement (R 204). On his way he met Captain FRIEDRICHS and told him he had shot the flyer, and was on his way for medical help. The Captain told him to go and make his report later. He returned with the medical man (R 205, 219).

Throughout the cross-examination by the prosecution and members of the court, the accused testified that he shot the flyer, that it was not his intention to do so, but that it was, on account of his excitement, accidental. The shooting was not as a result of orders from a superior officer (R 221).

7. JURISDICTION:

The charge and particulars alleged a violation of the laws of war committed on the 16th April 1945, by an enemy national against a member of the United States Army Forces, at a time when a state of war existed between Germany and the United States of America. Accordingly the court which was appointed to hear the case had jurisdiction of the persons and subject matter in accordance with previous decisions of this office in similar cases. See United States vs Richard DRAUZ (1946) and United States vs Clemens WIEGAND (1945).

8. SUFFICIENCY:

There is sufficient evidence to sustain the finding of guilty as to Hans TOELLE. Not only does the evidence presented by the prosecution establish the guilt of the accused but also the testimony of the accused Hans TOELLE himself establishes beyond any reasonable doubt, that he was guilty of the shooting of Donald E. HOWIE who was at the time in the act of surrendering himself. The evidence fully discloses that eye-witnesses did observe the victim rise from the small depression in the ground with his hands raised in the air over his head. The court did not, by its sentence apparently believe that the accused deliberately, with pre-meditation and malice aforethought shot the deceased, and must be concluded to have entered its findings based upon an act of manslaughter or second degree murder. There is sufficient evidence in the record of trial as to the identity of the alleged deceased, and to show that he was a member of the United States Army at the time he was killed.

In the record of trial it is stated (R 1) that the General Military Government Court which tried the case was appointed by Paragraph 2, Special Orders No. 4, (Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater) dated 3 July 1946. This is clearly erroneous, since there are no such numbered Special Orders of that headquarters appointing courts for the trial of war crimes cases.

The case was actually tried by a General Military Government Court appointed by paragraph 20, Special Orders No. 184, this headquarters, and the error appears to have occurred as a result of a failure of the duplicating machine to print on all copies of the orders all the digits in the paragraph and order numbers. It is clear that no substantial right of either accused was prejudiced by the failure of the record correctly to recite the authority for the trial.

There are no errors or irregularities which affect any of the substantial rights of the accused. The trial was held without partiality, and adequate opportunity was given to the accused to present any matters in his defense that he might have desired. There have been no questions raised in the record that were not decided by the court upon hearing of the evidence presented. Two-thirds of the members of the court present at the time of the findings and sentence concurred in the same.

At the end of the Prosecution's case the Defense moved for a finding of not guilty as to the accused Herbert LANGNER (R 62, 63, 64). The court overruled the request and denied the motion for a finding of not guilty. Since the record discloses that the court found the accused LANGNER not guilty it becomes unnecessary to discuss the point raised by this motion and the exception taken thereto by the defense. The matter has become moot.

9. SENTENCE:

A general Military Court may impose any lawful sentence including death or imprisonment for life in proper cases. The maximum punishment for all war crimes is death, although the court in this case sentenced the accused to a lesser punishment. The court was presented with facts which might have been found to constitute murder. In the instant case the court, by its sentence evidently had some doubt as to elements of murder being present, and chose to consider the crime more in the light of manslaughter. The action of the court under the circumstances does not appear to be unwarranted, and the sentence imposed appears to be adequate.

10. CLEMENCY: Attached to the record of trial is a letter from accused TOELLE to his counsel, dated 28 August 1946, in which he professes his innocence. Other than that it adds nothing, which has not already been brought out in evidence and discussed in the foregoing Review and Recommendations.

11. RECOMMENDATIONS:

It is therefore recommended that the findings and sentence as to the accused Hans TOELLE be approved by the Theater Judge Advocate under the provisions of paragraph 8d, Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces European Theater, AG 000.5, JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," dated 14 October 1946. A form of action designed to carry the foregoing recommendation into effect should it meet with approval is submitted herewith.

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE DEPUTY THEATER JUDGE ADVOCATE FOR WAR CRIMES

1. TRIAL: The accused were tried at Dachau, Germany, on 24 October 1946, before an Intermediate Military Court appointed by Special Orders No. 250, paragraph 2, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, APO 757, dated 7 September 1946.

2. FINDINGS: The offense involved was:

CHARGE: Violation of the laws of war.

Particulars: In that Anton DOERR, Aloys NEIS, August STURM and Karl MAI, German nationals, did, at WEHRDEN, Germany, on or about August 1944, wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in an assault upon an unknown member of the Armed Forces of the United States who was then an unarmed, surrendered prisoner of war in the custody of the then German Reich by hitting him with their fists, with a stick, and with a rifle butt, and by kicking him.

	Pleas to the Charge and Particulars	FINDINGS
DOERR, Anton	NG	G
NEIS, Aloys	NG	G
STURM, August	NG	NG
MAI, Karl	NG	G

3. SENTENCE: The court, by at least a two-thirds vote of the members present at the time the vote was taken concurring, imposed the following sentences:

DOERR, Anton	17 Months	Commencing 13 June 1945
NEIS, Aloys	16 Months	Commencing 2 July 1945
STURM, August	Acquittal
MAI, Karl	14 Months	Commencing 10 October 1945

The record of trial has been forwarded to the Commanding General, United States Forces, European Theater, for approval (paragraph 8d, Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO subject, "Trial of War Crimes Cases", dated 14 October 1946).

4. DATA AS TO ACCUSED:

a. Accused DOERR is a German national, 39½ years of age (R 3). He was a master electrician and a former member of the German Labor Front (R 52). He is married and has five children dependent on him for support (R 63).

b. Accused NEIS is a German national 34 years of age, (R 4), married with one child and was employed as a master mechanic (R 44 and P. Ex. 1, R 9).

c. Accused STURM is a German national, 50 years of age (R 3), married, has eight children and was employed as a coal mine foreman (R 37).

d. Accused MAI is a German national (R 4), 52 years of age, was employed as a mine worker (P.Ex. 2, R 9), is married and has five children (R 64).

5. RECOMMENDATION: That the findings and the sentence of the Military Government Court as to each accused be approved by the Theater Judge Advocate under the provisions of paragraph 8d of the letter referred to in paragraph 3, supra.

6. EVIDENCE:

a. For the Prosecution: The case for the Prosecution is based on the testimony of five witnesses, including, as against the accused MAI, that of the accused DOERR, together with three exhibits consisting of sworn testimony of the accused, NEIS, STURM and DOERR received in evidence (R 45, 53).

The accused NEIS and DOERR admitted striking the flyer. In addition, the unimpeached testimony of the witnesses Anna WEBER and Heinrich KARRENBAUER, who testified that they saw DOERR strike the flyer (R 11, 18), would be conclusive, if necessary.

The testimony of the witness Anna WEBER was to the effect that she saw the accused MAI strike the flyer (R 11). This testimony was also supported by the accused DOERR (R. 56).

Three sworn statements by the accused DOERR (P.Ex. 3, R 22), NEIS (P.Ex. 1, R 9) and STURM (P.EX. 2, R 9) were introduced by the prosecution and received in evidence by the Court.

DOERR, in his statement, admitted being at the scene because of having a desire for retaliation at having lost his wife in an air-raid and testified he saw MAI strike the flyer. He also states that he saw the Sturm Abteilung man, STURM, "ram the flyer in the back with the butt of his rifle." (P.Ex. 3, R 22).

NEIS, in his statement, admits being at the scene of the incident and striking the flyer (P.EX. 1, R 9).

STURM, in his statment, admits taking his rifle from his house and running to the place where the parachuting flyer landed (P.Ex. 2, R 9).

b. For the Defense: On behalf of and in mitigation of his act, the accused DOERR testified that he had no intention of molesting the flyer when he went to the scene but that when he arrived there he suddenly thought of his deceased wife who had been killed in an air raid and was overcome with excitement and he hit the flyer on the shoulder (R 53, 54).

On behalf of and in mitigation of his act, the accused NEIS claimed that he only slapped the flyer with the back of his hand in the face and this only because his boy, who was with him, complained that he had been kicked. He later learned that this was an accident and that the flyer had stepped on the child (R 45).

The accused MAI, although admitting having been present, testified that he never struck the flyer at any time and denied participating in any of the beating (R 49). In explanation of the testimony of the witness for the prosecution, Anna WEBER, he stated that he worked for a local firm as gateman detailed to factory security. His duties included searching all of the workers twice every week. Anna WEBER's husband was among the people searched (R 50).

On behalf of the accused STURM, the testimony of the witness Peter SCHUH was to the effect that STURM was dressed in work clothes and not only did not strike the flyer but that he protected the flyer by pushing the crowd away and helping the flyer when he sank to his knees. Furthermore there was a uniformed Sturm Abteilung man who beat the flyer with his rifle, but that he, the accused, did not (R 26, 27).

The testimony of Ludwig KARRENBAUER on behalf of the accused STURM was to the effect that STURM wore no uniform but that he was in his work clothes and that he did not beat the flyer (R 33).

The accused STURM, testifying on his own behalf stating that he had put on his work clothes and when he saw the parachute about to land he got his rifle by reason of a standing order to all Sturm Abteilung men to take into custody any jumping parachutist and deliver him to the nearest army installation. When he arrived at the scene, however, the pilot had landed and was being escorted by two soldiers to a flak position. He made a passage through the crowd with the aid of his rifle and helped the flyer by telling the crowd "further mistreatment must be stopped" (R 38, 39). He further testified that he did not strike the flyer or mistreat him in any way (R 40).

Two sworn statements were introduced by the defense and received in evidence by the Court consisting of that portion (D.Ex. 1, R 36) of the statement of August STURM specifically excluded from the prosecution's exhibit (P.Ex. 2, R 22) and the statement of the witness Jacob THEISEN (D.Ex. 2, R 44).

The portion of the statement of the accused Anton DOERR introduced by the defense (D.Ex. 1, R 36) was to the effect that the accused STURM had to make way with his rifle butt through the crowd to get to the prisoner. Subsequently while the anti-aircraft soldiers led the flyer away he followed them and kept the crowd away with his rifle butt. During this entire time he did not strike the flyer. The statement of the witness Jacob THEISEN made no mention whatsoever of any of the four accused but instead named two entirely different people.

7. JURISDICTION:

The particulars allege a violation of the laws and usages of war which were committed before 9 May 1945 by enemy nationals against a member of the United States Armed Forces at a time when a state of war existed between Germany and the United States of America. Accordingly, the court which was specially appointed to hear the case had jurisdiction of the persons and subject matter in accordance with previous decisions of this office in similar cases (See UNITED STATES v. CLEMENS WIEGAND, November 1945; UNITED STATES v. RICHARD DRAUZ, April 1946).

8. SUFFICIENCY:

The evidence and exhibits before the Court clearly establish the guilt of the two accused DOERR and NEIS. The accused MAI denied having struck or molested the flyer in any way (R 49), and hence there is a direct conflict in the testimony of the witness on the one hand and the accused MAI on the other. However, the accused MAI admits being on the scene (R 49) and it is apparent from the record that there was ample evidence in the testimony before the Court upon which to base the finding of guilty.

The only testimony that was introduced against the accused STUHM was contained in a sworn statement dated 3 October 1945 made by the accused DOERR. In this statement DOERR stated STUHM rammed the flyer in the back with the butt of his rifle but the testimony of the accused DOERR who made the statement (P.Ex. 3, R 22) introduced in evidence is barren of any reference whatsoever as to any hostile act of STUHM against the flyer. However, according to the statement, he did see a Sturm Abteilung man with a rifle walk behind the flyer and strike him. He did not recognize STUHM but was later told it was this accused. This testimony was stricken. There was direct testimony on the part of the witnesses Peter SCHUH and Ludwig KAHLENBAUER that not only did the accused STUHM not beat the flyer but that he attempted to help and protect him. STUHM's testimony, which was to the same effect, remained unimpeached upon examination by the Court. Consequently, there was no evidence in the testimony produced before the Court to connect the accused STUHM with the beating so that it would seem that a finding of guilty with respect to this accused could not have been supported and the Court was fully justified in acquitting him and, in fact, was in duty bound to do so.

The case for the Prosecution is based on the confessions of the two accused DOERR and NEIS with additional statements and testimony sufficient to establish that an American or Allied flyer was beaten and that the three accused who were found guilty participated in the beating. The denial on the part of the accused MAI was natural and in view of the direct testimony of the two witnesses, the Court could determine both the value of the positive eye-witness testimony and of the accused MAI's denials.

9. SENTENCES:

An Intermediate Military Court may impose a prison sentence not exceeding ten years. The Court was presented with facts sufficient to warrant the sentences imposed. In imposing sentence upon the three accused the Court obviously took into consideration the length of the detention of each and the sentences imposed are not considered excessive.

10. RECOMMENDATIONS:

a. It is recommended that the findings and sentences be approved as to the accused Anton DOERR, Aloys NEIS and Karl MAI.

b. Forms of action designed to carry the foregoing recommendation into effect, should it meet with approval, are submitted herewith.

v.) Case No. 12-2114
Peter SCHERF.)

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS

I. TRIAL DATA: The accused was tried at Dachau, Germany, on 14 April 1947, before an Intermediate Military Government Court.

II. CHARGE AND PARTICULARS:

CHARGE: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War.

PARTICULARS: In that Peter SCHERF, a German national, did, at or near WALDRACH, Germany, on or about 9 August 1944, wilfully, deliberately and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in committing assaults upon a member of the Armed Forces of a nation then at war with the then German Reich, who was then and there a surrendered and unarmed prisoner of war in the custody of the then German Reich.

III. EVIDENCE AND RECOMMENDATIONS:

PETER SCHERF

Nationality:	German
Age:	56
Civilian Status:	Mayor of town of Waldrach from 1931 until end of war
Military Status:	None
Plea:	NG
Findings:	G
Sentence:	Imprisonment at hard labor for five years, commencing 1 June 1945

Evidence for Prosecution: On or about 9 August 1944 an American pilot parachuted to safety in the vicinity of Waldrach, Germany (P-Ex 1a, 2a, 11a). He surrendered to a German civilian and was taken into custody by some soldiers of a guard detachment who searched him (P-Ex 1a, 3a). The flyer, who had suffered an injury to one leg in landing, was mistreated by the soldiers and members of a crowd that gathered (P-Ex 1a-3a, 5a, 7a, 9a, 10a). The accused SCHEIF arrived and jabbed or beat the flyer several times with a hunting rifle (P-Ex 1a-4a, 6a, 8a, 11a). The flyer was forced to limp 200 to 300 meters, followed by the crowd, to a camp where he was hospitalized and given medical treatment for a fractured leg and a bruised eye (P-Ex 5a, 10a, 11a). There is some evidence that the flyer was severely mistreated and that the accused participated in this mistreatment by kicking the flyer and by beating him with his rifle butt while he was lying on the ground (P-Ex 2a, 5a, 7a-9a).

Evidence for Defense: The accused SCHEIF elected to testify in his own behalf in substance as follows: The accused was Mayor of the village of Waldrach at the time of the incident and in that capacity took charge of the flyer when he arrived at the scene (R 14, 20). He directed that the flyer be taken to a camp where French prisoners of war were interned, a distance of approximately 200 meters. He attempted to disperse the crowd and touched the flyer on the side with the muzzle of his rifle in an effort to get him to move faster and get off the street (R 15, 16, 21). He did not kick or beat the flyer, but a non-commissioned officer kicked him once in the buttocks, knocking him to the ground (R 17, 19-21, 24). The accused could not have prevented this mistreatment because he saw it only after it happened (R 21).

Sufficiency of Evidence: The findings of guilty are warranted by the evidence. The sentence is not excessive.

Petitions: There are no Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency.

Recommendation: That the findings and sentence be approved.

IV. QUESTIONS OF LAW:

The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses. Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

The Court overruled an objection by defense counsel to the admission of Exhibit P-1, on the ground that the statement was taken in Waldrach in the French Zone that witnesses from the French Zone were readily available. It is clear that this testimony was admissible. The Deputy Theater Judge Advocate for War Crimes in a letter AG 000.5, subject: "Admissibility of Reports of Investigation in the Trial of Suspected War Criminals," dated 6 October 1945, stated "numerous factors make it impracticable in many cases to secure the personal presence of witnesses, and, in such cases, the trial should not be needlessly delayed nor should admissible evidence be excluded by reason of their absence."

At the time the prosecution rested, defense counsel moved for a finding of not guilty on the ground that no evidence was presented to the Court to establish the identity of the accused. When questioned by the Court at the beginning of the trial the accused identified himself as Peter SCHEEF, Mayor of the town of Waldrach at the time of the incident which resulted in the trial of the accused. Evidence was presented in Exhibits P-1 and P-1a that one Peter SCHEEF, Oberbuergermeister of Waldrach, participated in this incident.

V. CONCLUSIONS:

1. It is recommended that the findings and the sentence be approved.

2. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentences be approved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The Prosecution's case was based on extrajudicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case (U.S. vs Weiss et al 000-50-2, March 1946, R 9). Exhibits P-2 to P-8, inclusive, consist of extrajudicial sworn testimony of each of the accused (R 9 to R 13).

Accused BECKER was a tower and work-detail guard at out-camp Kaufering II for five months, where approximately 2500 male and female Lithuanian and Hungarian Jews were incarcerated. He knew that large numbers of inmates died at Kaufering II from neglect and disease. On numerous occasions he saw dead bodies carried out of Mattenheim out-camp (P-2, R 9).

Accused FRANZEN'S guard duty was at out-camp Landsberg I (Kaufering I) for nine months, where around 2000 Lithuanian male and female Jews were imprisoned. He knew of the bad condition at this camp, the hard work at Moll Construction Company, and that prisoners died of sickness and age. He was ordered to Chiemsee to a rifle marksmanship course on 15 April 1945 (P-3, R 10).

Accused HOEHNE had a long career in the NSDAP, SA, Allgemein SS and Waffen SS. He was a dentist at various concentration camps before going to out-camp Landsberg I in February 1945. On one occasion gold teeth were removed from bodies of prisoners by dentists under his supervision. He once saw his camp commander and the roll-call leader beating prisoners with sticks (P-4, R 11). Thirty to forty bodies per day were brought into the morgue and one AKABAS, a prisoner under HOEHNE, removed gold teeth therefrom (R 37). Defense witness AKABAS testified from the stand that HOEHNE was not liked by and was unsympathetic to the prisoners under him (R 30). Everyone was afraid of HOEHNE (R 36).

Accused LANG was a work-detail guard. He trained 5 weeks at Camp Dachau and was then sent to Landsberg out-camp. His detail contained approximately 500 Jewish prisoners on a construction job. He joined the NSDAP in 1941 (P-5, R 12).

Accused LANZL was a Nazi propaganda leader from May 1937 to September 1944, when he joined the Waffen SS. He was a tower and plantation work-detail guard and for a while was a guard on the inside of Camp Dachau. He was a block leader for 5 or 6 weeks at Out-Camp #4. He saw prisoners beaten with sticks four or five times. He was a guard on the prisoner march from out-camp Kaufering to Camp Dachau just before the capitulation (P-6, R 12).

Accused PFLAUM, an SS man since 1944, was a guard at Landsberg out-camp from 25 February 1945 to 28 April 1945. He was a guard on the prisoner march from Landsberg to Dachau 28 April 1945 (P-7, R 12).

Accused ZEHBES joined the Waffen SS in November 1943. He was a dentist at out-camp Landsberg from September 1944 to the capitulation. Five dental technicians, two assistants and two women worked for him. He had control of the dental station. His men removed gold teeth from the bodies of prisoners, cleaned the gold and forwarded it to Camp Dachau. This was done from November 1944 to the capitulation, and bodies were buried at Landsberg since corpses were no longer sent to Camp Dachau (P-8, R 13).

For the Defense. Accused BECKER never saw prisoners beaten, never beat any himself, or reported any for punishment during his tour at Kaufering II or at out-camp Mattenheim (P-2, R 9).

Accused FRANZEN denied he ever saw prisoners beaten or that he beat any himself, or reported them for punishment (P-3, R 10). Defense witness Johann KASTLER, company commander over FRANZEN, now a prisoner at Dachau, testified that he ordered FRANZEN to the rifle course on 15 April 1945 and that he promoted FRANZEN to Staff Sergeant on his return therefrom because of his long service (R 15).

Accused HOEHNE. The Defense witness AKABAS testified that while HOEHNE was not liked by people working with him he never reported AKABAS for punishment nor did he ever see HOEHNE mistreat prisoners (R 31).

Accused LANG was drafted into the Waffen SS, was trained at Camp Dachau for guard duty, and transferred to an out-camp at Landsberg in November 1944. He never saw prisoners mistreated (P-5, R 12). Theresentia HUFF of Krumback, Germany, averred in a sworn statement that she knew LANG since Autumn 1944. She once gave him food for the prisoners. She knew of his reluctance to be a member of the SS (D-5, R 25). Maris KAPOU said and Ahhanel ESCEBARET, former prisoners at Landsberg, in a sworn statement stated LANG treated them well (D-4, 24).

Accused LANZL never did guard duty inside the prison at Camp Dachau. He was a block leader at Landsberg out-camp #4. He never saw any prisoners killed nor could he remember seeing any prisoners beaten on the prisoner transport (P-6, R 12).

Accused PFLAUM. There is nothing in the sworn statement of this accused which might be considered in his favor (P-7, R 12a).

Accused ZELBES stated the orders came from Berlin in November 1944 to extract gold from teeth of deceased prisoners at Landsberg, and that he received his orders directly from his chief, Willy ROST, who was in charge of the dental station (P-8. R 13). Defense witness AKABAS testified that ZELBES, his immediate superior, was good to him as well as to the other prisoners, and cited examples (R 34).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

It was shown that all of the accused were, at some time during the period 1 January 1942 to 29 April 1945, by their own admissions, SS guards and supervisors over prisoners at Dachau Concentration Camp and/or subsidiary camps thereto with varying ranks and duties (P-2 to P8, inclusive; R 9 to R 13, inclusive).

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case, including the findings of the Court therein, that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2 March 1946). All of the accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the parent case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentence imposed.

The name of Valentin REHHORN, an accused, was deleted from the charge sheet due to his confinement in hospital (R 3).

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. Consideration was given to Petitions for Clemency on behalf of Alois LANG, signed by Marie LANG, his wife, dated 21 January 1947 and 1 November 1946 with attached letters, and Rudolf Max HOEHNE, signed by Kirt KOHNKE, a German lawyer, dated 18 February 1947, attaching six testimonials. No clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that the sentences be approved.

b. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with your approval.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentences be approved except that the sentence imposed in the case of Rudolf DIPPE be reduced to confinement for a period of 3 years.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The prosecution's case was based on the testimony of two witnesses, WORCHOLSKI (R 10) and KALUGA (R 13), former inmates of Camp Dachau, and extrajudicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp case (U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946; R 9). Exhibits P-2 thru 8 are extrajudicial sworn testimony of each of the accused with the exception of Josef HOELL, whose name was stricken from the charges and particulars (R 3).

All of the accused were, by their own admissions, members of the SS at Camp Dachau and/or its out-camps, with varying ranks and duties, for considerable periods of time between the dates alleged (P-Ex 2 thru 8).

For the Defense. The defense's case was based on oral testimony on behalf of some of the accused and sworn extrajudicial testimony of the accused. Accused DIPPE took the stand in his own defense. All of the accused deniedhaving mistreated prisoners and some claimed to have no knowledge of the operation of the concentration campp.

Accused DIPPE. A porcelain factory employee since 1939, was made manager of the procelain manufacturing plant at Allach in May 1944, where 100 prisoners worked. He joined the SS in 1940 (P-Ex 2, R 21); was promoted to 1st Lieutenant in the SS in April 1943, and wore the SS uniform from May 1943 (R 71). The use of inmates in the Allach porcelain factory began in 1941. Polish, Czech, Dutch,

Belgian, Russian and Austrian political prisoners were assigned to work there (R 72). He heard of beatings and executions inside Camp Dachau. He knew of Dr. SCHILLING'S malaria experiments and the transports to and from Camp Dachau (R 74). He was a member of the NSDAP since 1935 (R 85). Georg KOEDELSPERGER, a defense witness and a former inmate, testified from the stand that DIPPE chose the SS in order to avoid going to the front lines with the armed forces (R 63).

In defense, DIPPE stated that prisoners in the porcelain factory at out-camp Allach were never beaten, mistreated or reported for punishment by him (P-Ex 3, R 21). Defense witness Karl SCHWENDEMANN, a former inmate, testified that he worked at the porcelain factory under DIPPE and that DIPPE'S treatment of his workers was excellent; that he procured extra rations for them and interceded for them when reported by others for punishment (R 39, 40). Defense witness Georg KOEDELSPERGER, a former inmate, testified he worked for a while in the porcelain factory under DIPPE and that he got better treatment at the porcelain factory than on other details. Prisoners were treated as human beings and were protected (R 48).

Accused Goetz was manager of the shoe shop at Camp Dachau where 60 to 170 prisoners made shoes for the Waffen SS. Reports of offenses by prisoners came to GOETZ from a civilian foreman and he passed them on to the manager of the clothing factory. Prisoners were then punished (P-Ex 4, R 22). Josef SANDECK, a former inmate, testified that it was the duty of GOETZ as manager of the shoe shop to report prisoners for punishment (R 96).

In defense, it was shown that GOETZ was manager of the shoemaker's shop at Camp Dachau. He claims no prisoners were beaten by the capos, SS men, or by him (P-Ex 4, R 22). Defense witness Georg STEINBECKER, a former inmate on the shoe shop detail, testified GOETZ never beat anyone or reported anyone for punishment; that he was liked by the majority of prisoners (R 100). Josef SANDECK, a defense witness, testified GOETZ treated prisoners well. SANDECK talked with other prisoners on the detail about mistreatment and no one denounced GOETZ (R 93). Peter BOGDAMSKI, a defense witness, testified he never saw GOETZ mistreat anyone nor did GOETZ mistreat him (R 140). Defense witness, Jan UFEL, a former inmate, testified GOETZ supervised the entire factory (R 147).

Accused HOLLER was taken into the SS in October 1942 and was assigned to the shoemaker's shop, Camp Dachau, where there were 68 to 72 prisoners of German, Italian, Yugoslavian, Polish, Ukranian and French nationalities (P-Ex 6, R 24). Prosecution witness Josef KALU- testified he saw HOLLER at the hanging of two Russians near the clothing shop and HOLLER, as well as other guards, were laughing. HOLLER was a capo in the shoe shop (R 15). All guards and prisoners, 400 in all, were present at this hanging (R 19).

In defense, HOLLER stated that he was a cutter and stitcher in the shoe factory, and that he never saw prisoners beaten or mistreated. He had no connection with the concentration camp itself (P-Ex 6, R 24). Defense witness STEINBECHER testified he knew HOLLER well, worked under him, and was never mistreated by him, nor did he ever hear of HOLLER mistreating prisoners (R 153). Peter BOGDAMSKI, a defense witness, testified he never saw HOLLER mistreat anyone, nor did HOLLER mistreat him (R 140). Jan UFEL, a former inmate, testified HOLLER not only treated prisoners well but helped them. He did not hear of HOLLER making reports of misconduct of prisoners (R 146,147).

Accused LENZ was sent to Camp Dachau in July 1941 to become a work detail guard at the tailor and shoemaker's shop. There were about 200 prisoners of various nationalities in the two shops with 3 to 10 guards over them. LENZ was a guard on the prisoner march from Dachau to Bad Toelz, 28 - 29 April 1945 (P-Ex8, R 25). Defense witness Franz MRAZ testified that LENZ was a guard in the tailor and shoe shops where beatings and mistreatment occurred (R 165).

In defense, LENZ stated he never saw prisoners beaten or mistreated by guards. He claimed to know nothing about the operation of the concentration camp itself and made no inquiries to learn

(P-Ex 8, R 25). Defense witness Stefert ADAMUS, a former inmate, testified he never saw or heard of LENZ mistreating prisoners during LENZ'S tour as a work detail guard (R 157). Franz MAAZ, a witness for the defense and now a prisoner, was a capo in the tailor shop. He testified LENZ never beat any prisoners and that none of the prisoners were afraid of LENZ (R 163). LENZ did not denounce or file a report against the two Russians who were hanged (R 164).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case, including the findings of the Court therein, that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, torture, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases", 24 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U.S. vs Weiss et al., [illegible]-50-2, March 1946). All the accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed.

After weighing the evidence the Court acquitted accused DRECHSEL, GROSSMAN and LEIMINGER.

Concerning accused DIPPE, it is true he was shown to have been manager of the Allach porcelain factory; that he joined the SS in order to retain his position in his chosen profession, the manufacture of porcelain ware; however, it was shown by competent testimony that his conduct with respect to the prisoners working in his factory was such as to cause many inmates working on other details to want to be assigned to work there, because of the fact that DIPPE did not allow mistreatment in the procelain factory. It is therefore believed that the sentence imposed by the Court as to DIPPE is excessive.

6. CLEMENCY: A Petition for Review, inclosing 11 testimonials, was filed on 11 February 1947 on behalf of accused Rudolf DIPPE, Georg GOETZ, Ernst HOLLER and Robert LENZ by Dr. Max RAU. Consideration has been given to a Petition for Clemency, dated 14 April 1947 on behalf of accused Georg GOETZ, signed by his brother Adam GOETZ. No clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that the sentences be approved except as to Rudolf DIPPE.

b. It is recommended that the sentence imposed in the case of Rudolf DIPPE be reduced to confinement for a period of three years.

d. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentences be approved except as to accused SCHAEFFLER, and that the finding and sentence as to accused SCHAEFFLER be disapproved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The Prosecution's case was based on extrajudicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case (R-7; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). Exhibits P-2 to P-9, inclusive, are extrajudicial sworn testimony of each of the accused.

It was shown that during the period 1 January 1942 to 29 April 1945 each of the accused was an SS guard at Dachau Concentration Camp and/or subsidiary camps thereto, namely, Augsburg-Haunstetten, where there were 1500 to 2000 prisoners working at a Messerschmitt Factory (P-3, R-8; P-4, R-9); Augsburg-Pfersee, where 1200 to 1400 inmates were incarcerated (P-5, R-10; P-6, R-11; P-7, R-13); Kempten, which had over 400 prisoners (P-8, R-13); and the Friedrichshafen group which included Radrach, Saulgau and Ueberlingen, where work-camps were maintained for the Zeppelin Works and the manufacture of V-weapons (P-9, R-14).

For the Defense, The defense elected to make no opening statement nor call any witnesses (R-15) and relied upon the extrajudicial testimony of the accused (P-2 to P-9, inclusive). The accused were informed of their rights and elected not to testify.

Accused EBERT was transferred from the Air Corps to the Waffen SS on 1 September 1944 and sent to out-camp Augsburg as a guard. He performed this duty until 12 March 1945, when he was transferred to a front-line unit. Out-camp Augsburg consisted of 1500 to 2000 prisoners of various nationalities working at the Messerschmitt Factory (P-3, R-8; U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946, R-531, 873).

In defense, EBERT claims he never saw prisoners beaten, nor did he beat prisoners, or report them for punishment (P-3, R-8).

Accused ERDLE was a guard at Dachau Concentration Camp from 23 August 1944 to 10 January 1945, when he was transferred to out-camp Augsburg-Haunstetten, where he remained as guard until the capitulation in April 1945. He was also a guard on the prisoner march from Augsburg to Klonach just prior to the capitulation (P-4, R-9).

In defense, ERDLE denied any prisoners were beaten on any of his details at either Dachau Concentration Camp or out-camp Augsburg-Haunstetten. He also claimed no prisoners were beaten or shot on the prisoner march upon the evacuation of out-camp Augsburg. Whether the prisoners dies of illness he did not know (P-4, R-9).

Accused LANGSTEIN was sergeant-of-the-guard at out-camp Augsburg-Pfersee where there were 1200 to 1400 prisoners. His duties from the middle of August 1944 until the capitulation consisted of guarding approximately 200 prisoners in transit back and forth from the Augsburg-Pfersee work-camp to the Messerschmitt works, a distance of approximately 10 kilometers.

In defense, accused LANGSTEIN claims the prisoners were delivered to civilians at the Messerschmitt Factory and that the transit or escort guards had nothing to do with the work of the prisoners. In performing these duties he never saw prisoners beaten by guards or civilian workers, nor did he beat or report any prisoners for punishment himself (P-7, R-13).

Accused SCHAEFFLER was a work-detail and tower guard at out-camp Kempten where there were 400 to 440 prisoners. He participated in the prisoner march, consisting of 400 prisoners, from Kempten to Fuessen on 27 April 1945 (P-8, R-13).

In defense, SCHAEFFLER claims food and sanitation conditions at out-camp Kempten were good. He assisted two prisoners who fell out on the prisoner march from Kempten in April 1945. He was never personally in Dachau nor inside the out-camp at Kempten (P-8, R-13).

Accused VITZTHUM was ordered to Dachau Concentration Camp on 5 July 1944 where he remained almost a week. After receiving instructions he was ordered to out-camp Friederichshafen, which was 45 minutes to one hour's distance from Radrach where the prisoners were quartered. After the railroad was destroyed it was necessary for the prisoners to walk this distance wearing wooden shoes. The noon meal was brought in buckets by trucks. Upon deactivation of the prison camp at Radrach in September 1944, half of the prisoners were sent to out-camp Ueberlingen and the other half to out-camp Saulgau. In Saulgau the same conditions prevailed as at out-camp Friederichshafen with the exception that the factory where the prisoners worked was adjacent to the camp. The food was the same as at Friederichshafen. He was a guard on the prisoner march evacuating out-camp Saulgau, which started toward Friederichshafen at 4:00 AM on 22 April 1945. This march was forced to return to Saulgau after a few hours. A tank alarm caused the camp to be evacuated. Accused VITZTHUM left his unit and went to Munich, arriving there on 25 April 1945 (P-9, R-14).

In defense, VITZTHUM states that he frequently gave food and bread to the prisoners as he knew they were hungry. He did not see any "mistreatment or rudeness, except some boxes in the ear because of thefts or some other offense like that" (P-9, R-14).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any errors or omissions which resulted in injustice to the accused.

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case, including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, letters superseded thereby, and U.S. vs Weiss et al, 000-50-2, March 1946). With the exception of the accused SCHALLMEIER, all accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but that the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed. Concerning the accused SCHAFFLER, it was shown that he participated and the nature of his duties was also satisfactorily proved. However, a search of the record in the parent case and the record in this subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at the Kompten out-camp. It is true that it was shown that 400 slave laborers were worked there but, if they were not otherwise mistreated and tortured, it is believed that SCHAEFFLER's participation in this mass atrocity was too remote to form a proper basis of sentencing by the Court. By virtue of the absence of evidence as to what occurred at the Kompten out-camp he is not shown to have participated to a substantial degree and there is inadequate evidence as to the nature and extent of his participation to permit of arriving at an appropriate sentence. It could be contended with considerable merit that the Court, with propriety, could have inferred that the inmates of the Kompten out-camp were subjected to cruelties and torture substantially like those clearly proven to have been inflicted at the parent camp and the other out-camps. If that view were adopted, at least theoretically, injustices could result and those too remotely connected with this or other mass atrocities might be severely punished without a proper gauge to measure the magnitude of their crimes.

Accused BEZAK was shown to have been an orderly and had no duties at the concentration camp. Accused GASTL, father of eight children, was inducted into the SS as punishment for having left his war job without permission. Accused KRAFFT, 22 years of age, a Roumanian national, was not shown to have participated sufficiently in the mass atrocity to warrant conviction. The Court, therefore, properly acquitted them.

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. The Defense, after verdict, offered to the Court for "what they were worth" two instruments on behalf of accused SCHAEFFLER, signed by the Burgomeister: one to the effect SCHAEFFLER had never been a member of the Nazi Party, and the other that he does not subscribe to Nazi principles. Both were received in evidence in mitigation of SCHAEFFLER's sentence.(D-1, D-2; R-16).

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that all the sentences except that as to accused SCHAEFFLER be approved.

b. It is recommended that the sentence as to accused SCHAEFFLER be disapproved.

c. Legal Forms 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

2. RECOMMENDATION: That the findings and sentences be approved except as to accused KORFF and UNTERPAINTNER be disapproved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The prosecution's case was based on extrajudicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings, and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case (U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946; R 10). Exhibits P-2 thru 8 consist of extrajudicial testimony of each of the accused (R11 thru 17).

It was shown that during the period 1 January 1942 to 29 April 1945 each of the accused was an SS guard for considerable periods of time in Dachau Concentration Camp and/or its out-camps (P-Ex 2 thru 8).

For the Defense. The defense called no witnesses, relying solely on extrajudicial sworn testimony of the accused introduced by the prosecution (P-Ex 2 thru 8; R11 thru 17), and a statement signed by seven former inmates on behalf of accused UNTERPAINTNER (D-Ex 1, R 18).

Accused BUEHLER was a guard for six months at out-camp Kaufering 111, which contained 1000 Hungarian and Lithuanian Jewish men and women. It appears the Fischen detail, working out of out-camp Kaufering 111, consisted of 220 prisoners of various nationalities working at an armament factory (P-Ex 2, R-10; reference Kaufering 111, see U. S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946, R 621, 741, 1339).

In defense, BUEHLER denies having seen prisoners beaten at either out-camp Kaufering III or on the Fischen detail, although he heard that "Organization Todt" men beat prisoners at Kaufering III. He claims never to have beaten prisoners nor reported them for punishment (P-Ex 2, R 10).

Accused GERHARDT was an SS tower and work detail guard at Camp Dachau and out-camps Kottern, Fischen, Kempten and Muhldorf-Mettenheim for a period of one year. He described the bad condition of prisoners at Muhldorf-Mettenheim where there were approximately 700 Hungarian Jewish prisoners, and each day some dies from lack of medical care due to a typhoid fever epidemic (P-Ex 3, R 12).

In defense, GERHARDT denied ever having beaten prisoners or reported them for punishment at any of the out-camps where he had guard duty (P-Ex 3, R 12).

Accused GREINER joined the SA and the Nazi Party in 1932 because he had no job. He joined the German Army in 1941. In August 1944 he was ordered to out-camp Lauingen on the Danube and to out-camp Augsburg, where he performed the duty of tower guard and guard on the road. He was taken into the SS on 1 November 1944 (P-Ex 4A, 4B, R 12).

In denfense, GREINER stated he knows nothing about mistreatments and beatings. From 27 September 1944 to 6 December 1944 he was hospitalized, after which he received a 16-day furlough. He was again hospitalized 1 January 1945 for 10 days. He left out-camp Lauingen on 18 April 1945; the transports left Lauingen on 10 April 1945 (P-Ex 4A, 4B, R 12).

Accused HAUSWIRTH came to Camp Dachau 13 July 1944. His duties were that of tower guard on the plantation detail for 8 days, after which he was hospitalized and furloughed. He returned to Camp Dachau in October 1944 and was assigned to out-camp Baumenheim. Upon the evacuation of this out-camp he was sent to Kaufering. He was a guard on the prisoner march Kaufering to Camp Dachau on 28 or 29 April 1945.(P-Ex 5, R 13).

In defense, HAUSWIRTH, disclaimed any knowledge of beating or mistreatment of prisoners at Camp Dachau and out-camp Baumenheim, or that prisoners suffered any mistreatment on the prisoner march on which he was guard (P-Ex 5, R 13).

Accused KIRSCHBAUM was a work detail guard in Camp Dachau on the Wuelfert canned meat factory detail, where 200 to 300 prisoners of various nationalities were worked and guarded by 15 to 20 guards (P-Ex 6, R 15).

In defense, KIRSCHBAUM stated that no prisoners dies at the canned meat factory. Prisoners ate and slept at the factory and did not go into the main camp at Dachau. His guard duty was on the outside of the factory. He did not know what went on inside. He denied knowing anything about atrocities inside Camp Dachau until he read about them in the newspapers after the capitulation (P-Ex 6, R 15).

Accused KORFF joined the Nazi Party in March 1944. He was an SS guard with the rank of corporal. He received his guard training at Camp Dachau and, after approximately 5 weeks, was sent to out-camp Fischon, a small out-camp where prisoners worked at a Messerschmitt factory which produced patterns and stencils. The work shifts consisted of 50 men in the daytime and 50 men at night.(P-Ex 7, R 16).

In defense, KORFF stated he was drafted into the Waffen SS in October 1944. No prisoners were mistreated or killed at out camp Fischon. Prisoners had a day off every 14 days when the night and day shifts changed. The food, so far as he could judge, was good and sufficient at this out-camp. On 12 March 1945 he was again sent to the front and remained there until the capitulation (P-Ex 7, R 16).

Accused UNTERPAINTNER was transferred into the Waffen SS from the German Army on 6 July 1944. On 12 July 1944 he was transferred from Camp Dachau to out-camp Seehausen, near Murnau, Germany. On 18 October 1944 he was made work detail leader. His detail varied from 27 to 49 prisoners who were employed in a small armament factory. He was in charge of from 12 to 15 guards and performed these duties until the dissolution of the camp on 30 April 1945, when the guard crews surrendered and were arrested (P-Ex 8, R 17).

In defense, UNTERPAINTNER stated that he never beat prisoners nor reported them to Camp Dachau for punishment. He also denied knowing of one of his guards beating a prisoner (P-Ex 8, R 17). In a statement purportedly signed by 7 former inmates in UNTERPAINTNER's detail, it is stated that no atrocities occurred under his command and that he definitely opposed any mistreatment of prisoners (D-Ex 1, R 18).

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to the accused.

All of the accused were, by their own admissions, SS guards at Camp Dachau and/or its out-camps for considerable periods of time between the dates alleged (P-Ex 2 thru 8).

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the parent Dachau Concentration Case, including the findings of the Court therein that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in the pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature there of (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces, European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, and U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946). With the exception of accused KORFF and UNTERPAINTNER all accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the parent Dachau

Case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed. Concerning accused KORFF and UNTERPAINTNER, it was shown that they participated and the nature of their duties was also satisfactorily proved. However, a search of the record in the parent case and the record in this subsequent proceeding reveals no evidence as to atrocities committed at out-camp Fischen or out-camp Seehausen. It is true that it was shown that approximately 100 slave laborers were at out-camp Fischen and approximately 50 at out-camp Seehausen, but if they were not otherwise mistreated or tortured it is believed that KORFF's and UNTERPAINTNER's participation in this mass atrocity was too remote to form a basis of sentencing by the Court. By virtue of the absence of evidence as to what occurred at the Fischen and Seehausen out-camps, they are not shown to have participated to a substantial degree and there is inadequate evidence as to the nature and extent of their participation to permit of arriving at an appropriate sentence. It could be contended with considerable merit that the Court, with propriety, could have inferred that the inmates of the Fischen and Seehausen out-camps were subjected to cruelties and tortures substantially like those clearly proven to have been inflicted at the parent camp and the other out-camps. If that view were adopted, at least theoretically, injustice could result and those too remotely connected with this or other mass atrocities might be severely punished without a proper gauge to measure the magnitude of their crimes.

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review nor Petitions for Clemency.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that all the findings and sentences except those as to accused KORFF and UNTERPAINTNER be approved.

b. It is recommended that the findings and sentences as to accused KORFF and UNTERPAINTNER be disapproved.

c. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

For the Prosecution. Prosecution's case was based on extrajudicial sworn testimony as hereinafter indicated. Prosecution's exhibit A is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau case (U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946; R 7). Prosecution's exhibits 2 thru 9 consist of extrajudicial testimony of each of the accused.

It was shown that for considerable periods of time between 1 January 1942 to 29 April 1945 each of the convicted accused was an SS guard at Dachau or one of the out-camps Friedrichshafen, Ueberlingen, Radrach, or Kaufbeuren (P-Ex 2 thru P-Ex 9, R 8, 10, thru 15). It was further shown that each of the accused participated in April 1945, in prisoner transports or marches (supra, P-Ex 2 thru P-Ex 9; R 8 thru 15

For the Defense. Each of the accused took the stand and testified in his own defense that no prisoners were beaten or mistreated by the accused (R 18, 20, 21, 23, 24, 26, and 33).

Accused GOMEKOTO was a tower and work detail guard at Camp Dachau January 1943 to July 1943 (P-Ex 2, R 8). Accused then served as guard at out-camps Friedrichshafen until April 1944 and Radrach until October 1944. Out-camps Friedrichshafen and Radrach had approximately 1000 prisoners of different nationalities that worked at the Zeppelin plant The Camp Commander for the first part of the accused's tour of duty at Friedrichshafen was Master Sergeant WELTER, who was convicted in the parent Dachau case (U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946). Accused, from October 1944 to April 1945, was a guard at out-camp Ueberlingen. Approximately 700 prisoners were held there that were used in constructing tunnels. On 20 April 1945 all prisoners were transferred to KARLSFELD by train. On 25 April 1945, the accused participated as a guard in a prisoner march from KARLSFELD to WOLFRATSHAUSEN. During the prisoner march prisoners fell out from the ranks and remained behind. Some of these were those who were too exhausted to march (P-Ex 2, R 8).

In defense, the accused testified on direct examination that as a guard he never beat or mistreated any prisoners (R 18); that he never saw any prisoners beaten or mistreated in any of the camps nor were any prisoners beaten or shot on the prisoner march of 25 April 1945 (P-Ex 2, R 8).

Accused WALTER was an SS guard at Dachau from December 1943 to July 1944 (P-Ex. 3, R 9). From July 1944 to September 1944 he was guard at out-camps Friedrichshafen and Radrach. From September 1944 - April 1945 he was guard at out-camp Ueberlingen (P-Ex. 3, R 9). Accus participated as a guard on prisoner transport from Ueberlingen to Karlsfeld. On prisoner march from Karlsfeld approximately 800 prisone started on the prisoner march (R 20).

Accused KATZIAN was an SS guard at out-camp Friedrichshafen from the summer of 1943 to April 1944; at out-camp Radrach until September 1944, out-camp Ueberlingen until 20 April 1945 (P-Ex. 5, R11). On 20 April 1945 all prisoners and guards went by prisoner transport to out-camp Allach. After 3 days at out-camp Allach they proceeded to Starnberg. The prisoners consisted of Russians, Poles and Germans (P-Ex. 5, R 11).

In defense, the accused testified on direct examination that as a guard he never beat or mistreated any prisoners (R 23). He was forced to join the Waffen SS or become a prisoner in a Slovakian punishment camp; having a family to support he joined the SS (R 24). He only guarded outside the out-camps as he was not allowed on the inside of any of the camps (P-Ex. 5, R 11).

Accused KOBEL joined the party in May 1937 holding the position of zellenleiter (Precinct Leader) (R 25). From July 1944 to December 1944 he was an SS guard at out-camp Friedrichshafen (P-Ex. 6, R 12). He was guard in the Zeppelin's wharf where prisoners of all nationalities worked. In December 1944 he participated in prisoner transpor from Friedrichshafen to Nordhausen as a guard and also participated in a prisoner transport of approximately 700 prisoners from Dachau to Ueberlingen as a guard. He was a guard at Ueberlingen from December 1944 to April 1945. During this time approximately 20 persons died at out-camp Ueberlingen due to the bad food. On 23 April 1945 he participated as a guard in the transfer of all prisoners from Ueberlingen to Karlsfeld by prisoner transport and from Karlsfeld to Wolfratshausen. Prisoners on the march fell out due to sickness (P-Ex. 6, R 12).

In defense, accused testified on direct examination that as a guard he never beat or mistreated any prisoners (R 24); he never saw any prisoners beaten or mistreated at Dachau or any of the out-camps or factories; and he never saw or heard of prisoners being beaten or shot on prisoner transports (P-Ex. 6, R 12).

Accused ZINGK was an SS sergeant of the guard and tower guard at out-camp Kaufbeuren from August 1944 to March 1945 (P-Ex. 8 and 9, R 14). During the month of October 1944, the accused was at Camp Dachau (P-Ex. 8, R 14); from March 1945 to April 1945 he was guard at out-camp Ueberlingen. In April 1945 accused participated in prisoner transport as a guard from Ueberlingen to Karlsfeld. The prisoner transport consisted of freight cars (P-Ex. 8, R 12) and lasted 2 days (R 24). Upon examination by the Court, defense witness WITTCHEN testified that prisoners were beaten at Kaufbeuren by the bad guards at work or on order of the Camp Commander (R 38, 39).

In defense, accused testified on direct examination that as a guard he never beat or mistreated any prisoners (R 33). During the prisoner transport prisoners were not locked in the cars and were permitted to get off at regular periods and no prisoners died. On the prisoner transport to Karlsfeld there was enough food, bread and canned meat (R 34). Defense witness WITTCHEN testified on direct examination that he was an inmate at out-camp Kaufbeuren from June 1944 to 9 April 1945 (R 35). 2. RECOMMENDATIONS: That the findings and sentences be approved.

3. EVIDENCE:

For the Prosecution. The prosecution's case was based on the sworn, oral testimony of 36 witnesses, including seven rebuttal witnesses, and the extrajudicial sworn testimony and extrajudicial sworn questionnaires as hereinafter indicated. Exhibit P-1 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case (U.S. vs Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 1946, hereinafter referred to as the "Parent Case";N 7). Exhibits P-2-6 are extrajudicial sworn questionnaires of the accused (R 7 - 10). Exhibits P-7, 6 and 11 are extrajudicial sworn testimony of three of the accused (R 325, 326, 330). Exhibits P-9 and 10 are extrajudicial sworn statements of a prosecution witness (R 327 - 329).

For the Defense. The defense's case was based on the sworn trial testimony of three witnesses in behalf of the accused SCHREYER (R 340 - 376); a deposition of one witness (D-Ex 2, R 378); the extrajudicial sworn testimony and extrajudicial sworn questionnaires of the accused introduced by the prosecution (P-Ex 2 - 8, 11, R 7 - 10, 325, 326, 330).

Accused FISCHER, a criminal prisoner, was transferred to Buchenwald Concentration Camp in 1943 and after seven months therein was transferred to the Lublin Concentration Camp, where he served as capo for about one year. In July 1944, he was transferred to Dachau Concentration Camp, and after three weeks he was made camp capo at outcamp Kaufering II and, except for a brief period as camp capo at outcamp Kaufering XI in the winter of 1944 - 1945, remained in that position until the evacuation in April 1945. In April 1945 he was given an SS uniform and rifle. He admitted beating prisoners at Kaufering II (P-Ex 2, 7, E 8, 325). Prosecution witness Jacob Lewin, testified to the effect that he was beaten with a stick by FISCHER at Kaufering II; that he saw FISCHER beat eight to eleven prisoners and that seven of these prisoners, whom he named, died, and that he later saw some of their bodies (R 22 - 24). Witness Scheliten testified that he saw FISCHER beat prisoners with a rubber hose until they fell to the ground (R 64). Witness Drider testified that FISCHER beat two persons, one a Russian, to death at Kaufering XX (M 122, 123). Witness Lewman testified that he saw FISCHER beat prisoners and that he saw three or four cartloads of dead bodies brought from the Mell work detail when FISCHER was capo; that FISCHER was wearing an SS uniform and carrying a machine pistol when taking 122 Russian prisoners on a prisoner march in April 1945; and that witness later heard that the Russians had been killed (R 132, 133). Witness Bregman gave testimony, corroborated by witness Jed, that FISCHER helped accused SCHREYER beat a Greek prisoner to death at Kaufering II (R 145, 146, 228, 229). Witnesses Mlynarski and Pawlovski testified to the general mistreatment of prisoners by FISCHER and to his beating to death of one prisoner at Kaufering XI (R 163 - 165, 194 - 198). Witness Idel Fried testified that he saw continual beatings of prisoners by FISCHER and that he later saw the corpses of some of these prisoners (R 203). Witnesses Salomon Fried and Techertok testified to beatings of prisoners by FISCHER (R 209, 214). Witness Ickowies testified that he saw FISCHER beat 30 to 40 prisoners to death at Kaufering XI (R 268). Witness Ludgin testified that he saw FISCHER beat Ludgin's father-in-law over the head with a club so badly that he died within two days. (R 261, 262). Witness Arapapzki testified that FISCHER beat an American sailor about the head (R 274). Witness Cukerman testified that FISCHER was a master of all the instruments of beating, including board, stick, stone and hose (R 305).

In defense, FISCHER relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire and his extrajudicial sworn testimony in which he stated that he knew nothing of what happened to the 112 Russian prisoners which he started with on a prisoner march in April 1945. He denied that he beat prisoners so badly that they died from the beatings (P-Ex 2, 7, R 8, 325).

Legal Sufficiency of Evidence. The evidence is sufficient to support the findings and sentence of the Court.

Accused FISCHER was shown, by the testimony of many witnesses, not only to have participated in the subjection to cruelties and killings of many prisoners who were nationals of countries then at war with the then German Reich, but to have, as an individual and without any regard for the generally accepted rules of humanity, committed such acts of cruelty and murder as are beyond comprehension. Originally a criminal prisoner himself, he demonstrated his ability to commit acts of cruelty and murder which were not surpassed by members of the SS under whom he served, and by the end of the war he was apparently accepted as an SS member and issued a uniform and weapon.

Accused JENTNER was transferred to Camp Dachau 29 August 1942 and to Kaufering II 8 September 1944. He transferred from the Wehrmacht to the Waffen SS on 1 September 1944. He took part in two prisoner transports in 1944 and 1945, and in a prisoner march from Kaufering to Wolfratshausen in April 1945. He beat prisoners with his hands and rifle butt, although this was against orders (P-Ex 5, 8, R 10, 326). Prosecution witness Mylnarski testified that JENTNER pushed weak prisoners with a rifle butt (R 171).

In defense, JENTNER relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire and his extrajudicial sworn testimony. JENTNER admitted slapping and hitting prisoners but denied that they were acts of any severity (P-Ex 5, 8, R 10, 326). Witness Mylnarski testified that JENTNER did not beat prisoners while they were at work but that accused would push and drive them along with his rifle butt and that witness never heard of any mistreatment of prisoners by JENTNER (R 166).

Legal Sufficiency of Evidence. The evidence is sufficient to support the findings and sentence of the Court.

Accused JENTNER was not shown to have committed any individual severe acts of cruelty or mistreatment other than beating prisoners with his hands and rifle butt and pushing and shoving prisoners with his rifle butt. However, the findings and sentence of the Court in his case were fully justified since he was an SS guard within the Dachau Concentration Camp organization for a period of nearly three years.

Accused JOREWITZ arrived at Kaufering VII as a guard on a prisoner transport 28 August 1944 and was transferred to Kaufering II on 17 November 1944, where he served as block leader. He transferred from the Wehrmacht to the Waffen SS on 1 October 1944. He took part as guard on a prisoner transport in August 1944 and as a guard on a prisoner march from Kaufering XI to Duchberg in April 1945. He beat prisoners with a stick, although such was forbidden (P-Ex 3, 11, R 8, 234). Prosecution witness Schalitan gave sworn testimony that he saw JOREWITZ beat prisoners at Kaufering XI and that three of these prisoners were dead when brought into the dispensary (R 66,67). Witness Kleiner named one prisoner who died within a few hours after being beaten over the head by JOREWITZ (R 101, 102). Witness Rosenberg named another prisoner from Kaufering XI who died as the result of a beating by JOREWITZ (R 114). Witness Legman testified that at Kaufering XI and that three of these prisoners were dead when brought into the dispensary (R 66, 67). Witness Kleiner named one prisoner who died within a few hours after being beaten over the head by JOREWITZ (R 101, 102). Witness Rosenberg named another prisoner from Kaufering XI who died as the result of a beating by JOREWITZ (R 114). Witness Lesman testified that at Kaufering XI he saw JOREWITZ beat prisoners and that two or three days later he saw the dead bodies of the same prisoners (R 133, 134). Witness Bregman testified that at Kaufering XI he saw JOREWITZ beat a Polish prisoner, whom he named, so badly that the prisoner died during the following night (R 151). Witnesses Mylnarski and Igdalski testified to beatings of prisoners by JOREWITZ at Kaufering XI (R 169). Witnesses Idel Fried and Saloman Fried testified that they and other prisoners had been beaten by JOREWITZ (R 203, 208, 209, 243). Witness Ickewicz testified that he saw JOREWITZ beat a prisoner to death with an axe handle for attempting to roast potatoes between the barracks at Kaufering XI (R 268-272). Witness Dr. Siegfried testified that JOREWITZ was one of the few people who constituted an integral part of the design which resulted in deaths of so many prisoners who died on account of bad living conditions, hard work, starvation and mistreatment they received at Kaufering XI (R 253).

In defense, JOREWITZ relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire and his extrajudicial sworn testimony. Although admitting beatings of prisoners, JOREWITZ testified he only did what was necessary to keep prisoners from getting out of control; that he did not beat prisoners about the face; and that no prisoners were beaten or killed on the prisoner march in which he took part (P-Ex 3, 11, R 8,334).

Legal Sufficiency of Evidence. The evidence is sufficient to support the findings and sentence of the Court.

Accused JOREWITZ was shown to have individually committed many acts of cruelty and murder. In addition, it was abundantly shown that he was one of the moving forces in the common design to commit the acts alleged in the particulars under each of the charges.

Accused SCHREYER joined the Waffen SS 20 May 1941 and transferred to Camp Dachau 20 January 1942 for guard duty. On 2 December 1943 he became a guard at outdetail Friedrichshafen, and on 29 July 1944 became roll call leader at Kaufering (Landsberg) XI. He served as roll call leader on a prisoner march from Kaufering to Wolfratshausen in April 1945 (P-Ex 4, R9). Accused Fischer gave extrajudicial sworn testimony that accused SCHREYER beat, or ordered beaten, many prisoners at Kaufering II; that a rubber hose was used; and that prisoners fell to the ground from the beatings (P-Ex 7, R325). Prosecution witness Jacob Lewin testified that he saw accused SCHREYER beat prisoners at Kaufering II and that five or six prisoners died as a result of such beatings; that SCHREYER made prisoners stand barefooted in the cold for 24 or more hours; that SCHREYER ordered a Russian prisoner hanged by the wrists at Kaufering XI; and that SCHREYER reported five prisoners of Kaufering II for making foot rags of blankets, and that these prisoners were hanged at Kaufering I on SCHREYER's orders (R 16 - 37; Vol. I, p 63, Vol. VI, p. 656, Parent Case). Witness Dr. Klibanski testified to the effect that SCHREYER was acting commander at Kaufering II; that SCHREYER selected prisoners who were to be exterminated and had them sent on invalid transports; that he later saw the corpses of many prisoners who had died as a result of beatings by SCHREYER; and that the food and shelter at Kaufering II were entirely inadequate, resulting in unnecessary deaths (R 41 - 45.) Witness Schalitan testified that at Kaufering II he saw SCHREYER kill a lawyer prisoner by striking him on the head with a rifle butt; that SCHREYER made Schalitan stand at attention for many hours in the bitter cold with very few clothes, and later caused him to be placed in a tank of ice cold water (R 53 -62). Witness Sandler testified that he saw SCHREYER beat two prisoners at Kaufering XI so badly that they both died; that one Russian prisoner died after SCHREYER had ordered him to stand in the cold; that he now accused SCHREYER cause one Polish prisoner to be hanged by the wrists (R 79 - 85). Witness Rosenberg testified that SCHREYER caused a prisoner to be hanged by the wrists and that two days later the victim died (R 111 - 113). Witness Brider testified that he saw his brother beaten to death by SCHREYER at Kaufering XI (R 118, 119). Witness Lesman testified that SCHREYER made prisoners stand for two or three hours in the cold at roll call formations with very little clothing, and that SCHREYER took gold and jewelry from prisoners (R 129, 131). Witness Dregman testified that SCHREYER and FISCHER beat a prisoner to death at roll call at Kaufering II and that at the same camp SCHREYER ordered prisoners to be placed in a pit without food or clothing for two or three days, and that some of them died as a result (R 145 - 148). Witness Andnarski testified to general mistreatment of prisoners by SCHREYER and that one Greek prisoner died after SCHREYER had ordered him to stand for long hours in the cold (R 159 - 162). Witness Kessel Lewin testified to the effect that SCHREYER ordered sick prisoners to be placed in an uncovered cellar for considerable periods of time without food and with very little clothing during severe weather, causing the death of a prisoner when Lewin knew, and that SCHREYER required gold teeth to be extracted from dead prisoners and turned over to the accused SCHREYER (R 178 - 180). Witness Saloman Fried testified that SCHREYER beat many prisoners and caused prisoners to be placed between the barbed wire of the camps (R 209, 210). Witness Tschartok testified that SCHREYER beat prisoners many times and named one prisoner who died as a result, and that SCHREYER used some of the rations of the prisoners to manufacture liquor for himself (R 214 - 217). Witness Jed testified that he and other prisoners were beaten many times by SCHREYER; that he saw a Greek prisoner beaten and kicked into the mud by SCHREYER until he died (R 224 - 229). Witness Karapatkin testified that he saw SCHREYER beat 10 or 15 prisoners, who died from such beatings (R 269, 290). Witness Cuckerman testified that shortly after SCHREYER became acting commander of Kaufering II a liquidation of the camp began and that prisoners died in great numbers from poisoning of food, tortures, overwork, beatings and lack of clothing in cold weather (R 308, 309). Defense witness Dr. Fay, in extrajudicial sworn testimony, testified that SCHREYER, in committing atrocities against prisoners, knew right from wrong but that SCHREYER, along with the rest of the 85, did not consider mistreatment and killing of Jews wrongful (D-Ex 2, R 378). Prosecution witness Dr. Siegfried testified that he saw SCHREYER beat one prisoner at Kaufering II so badly that the prisoner died, and that SCHREYER was one of the most important persons in the design to mistreat prisoners, resulting in many deaths caused by lack of food, clothing, shelter and sanitary conditions, aggravated by beatings (R 244 - 253).

In defense, SCHREYER relied solely upon his extrajudicial sworn questionnaire and the testimony of three witnesses in his behalf (P-Ex 4, R 9, 349 - 378). Defense witness Rottkapp testified that he knew SCHREYER at Camp Dachau from January 1941 until some time in 1943, and that SCHREYER never mistreated any prisoners (R 349 - 351). Witness Weber testified that she, at SCHREYER's request, gave food to prisoners when SCHREYER brought to the restaurant where she worked, and that at SCHREYER's request she took clothing and toilet articles to women prisoners at Kaufering XI (R 352 - 356). Witness Kutane testified that up until 1943 he had known SCHREYER as a guard at Camp Dachau; that SCHREYER had never mistreated any prisoners; and that the prosecution witnesses were attempting to get SCHREYER hanged (R 357 - 376). Witness Dr. Fey gave extrajudicial sworn testimony to the effect that SCHREYER had tried to improve the conditions of the camp, and that SCHREYER was once arrested for taking prisoners into a restaurant (D-Ex 2, R 376).

Legal Sufficiency of Evidence. The evidence is sufficient to support the findings and sentence of the Court.

Accused SCHREYER was not only shown to have committed many acts of cruelty and murder on his own, but was also shown to have been, by reason of his position as roll call leader and acting camp commander, one of the main moving forces in the mass atrocities committed at outcamps Kaufering II and XI. The testimony of many witnesses for the prosecution and one witness for the defense shows that SCHREYER did not merely ignore the cruelties and mistreatments which went on about him, but that he took a strongly aggressive part in instituting such inhuman treatment as brought on the deaths of hundreds, and possibly thousands, of prisoners who came under his control.

The Court, after weighing the evidence, acquitted accused LIPMANN.

4. JURISDICTION: The Court was legally constituted and had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the offenses.

5. COMMENTS: Examination of the entire record fails to disclose any error or omission which resulted in injustice to any of the accused.

All of the accused except FISCHER were, by their own admissions, members of the SS at Camp Dachau and/or its outcamps for considerable periods of time between the dates alleged. Accused FISCHER joined, or at least was considered a member of, the SS in April 1945 when he was issued a uniform and rifle.

The Court was required to take cognizance of the decision rendered in the Parent Case, including the findings of the Court therein, that the mass atrocity operation was criminal in nature and that the participants therein, acting in pursuance of a common design, subjected persons to killings, beatings, tortures, etc., and was warranted in inferring that those shown to have participated knew of the criminal nature thereof (Letter, Headquarters, United States Forces European Theater, file AG 000.5 JAG-AGO, subject: "Trial of War Crimes Cases," 14 October 1946, and the Parent-Case). All of the convicted accused were shown to have participated in the mass atrocity and the Court was warranted by the evidence adduced, either in the Parent Case or in this subsequent proceeding, in concluding as to them that they not only participated to a substantial degree but the nature and extent of their participation was such as to warrant the sentences imposed.

6. CLEMENCY: There are no Petitions for Review. Consideration has been given to Petition for Clemency dated 27 March 1947, signed by Katherina Schreyer, wife of accused SCHREYER. No clemency is recommended.

7. CONCLUSIONS:

a. It is recommended that the findings and the sentences be approved.

b. Legal Forms Nos. 13 and 16 to accomplish this result are attached hereto, should it meet with approval.

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. TRIAL DATA: The accused were tried at Dachau, Germany, during the period 24-25 July 1947 before a General Military Government Court.

11. CHARGES AND PARTICULARS:

FIRST CHARGE: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War.

Particulars: In that Christian Georg HELLER and Otto SCHMELZIE, acting in pursuance of a common design to commit the acts hereinafter alleged, and as individual (s) aiding in the operation of the Dachau Concentration Camp and camps subsidiary thereto, did, at or in the vicinity of DACHAU and LANDSBERG, Germany, between about 1 January 1942 and about 29 April 1945, willfully, deliberately, and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in the subjection of civilian nationals of nations then at war with the then German Reich to cruelties and mistreatment, including killings, beatings, tortures, starvation, abuses and indignities, the exact names and numbers of such civilian nationals being unknown but aggregating many thousands who were then and there in the custody of the German Reich in exercise of belligerent control.

SECOND CHARGES: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War.

Particulars: In that Christian Georg HELLER and Otto SCHMELZIE, acting in pursuance of a common design to commit the acts hereinafter alleged, and as individual (s) aiding in the operation of the Dachau Concentration Camp and camps subsidiary thereto, did at or in the vicinity of DACHAU and LANDSBERG, Germany, between about 1 January 1942 and about 29 April 1945, willfully, deliberately and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in the subjection of members of the armed forces of nations then at war with the then German Reich, who were then and there surrendered and unarmed prisoners of war in the custody of the then German Reich, to cruelties' and mistreatment, including killings, beatings, tortures, starvation, abuses and indignities, the exact names and numbers of such prisoners of war being unknown, but aggregating many hundreds.

III. DATA AS TO ACCUSED:

1. CHRISTIAN GEORG HELLER

This accused was acquitted (R 87).

2. OTTO SCHMELZIE:

This accused was acquitted (R 88).

IV. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE: Accused HELLER, a German national, was a capo at Hallein, an outcamp of Dachau Concentration Camp, for a considerable period of time between the dates alleged. As a capo over a small number of prisoners at the outcamp he had immediate disciplinary supervision over them (R 14). Outcamp Hallein kept an average of 50 prisoners (R 64). On several occasions the accused slapped prisoners for violations of the rules of the camp (R 14-18). On one occasion he struck a prisoner named Myrda across the face with a broom stick, causing some blood to flow (R 27, 31). It was shown, however, that Myrda did not hold this against accused HELLER since Myrda admitted it was his own fault (R 63). Accused SCHMELZIE, also a German national, was a detail leader at outdetail Schleisshcim, working out of Camp Dachau, and had 32 prisoners under his supervision (R35). On several occasions he slapped prisoners for violations of camp regulations (R 43, 44). Prosecution's P-Ex 3 is a certified copy of the charges, particulars, findings and sentences in the parent Dachau Concentration Camp Case (United States v. Weiss et al., 000-50-2, March 46; R 10). The Court apparently concluded that the evidence concerning the nature and extent of their participation in the mass atrocity operation was inadequate to form a proper basis for sentencing the accused.

V. JURISDICTION:

It is clear that the Court had jurisdiction of the persons of the accused and of the subject matter.

VI. CONCLUDIONS:

It is recommended that the record of trial be filed in the records of this office and that a copy of this Review and Recommendations be forwarded to the Judge Advocate, European Command, for his information.

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. TRIAL DATA: The accused was tried at Dachau, Germany, during the period 12 August - 17 October 1946, before a General Military Government Court.

11. CHARGE AND PARTICULARS:

CHARGE: Violation of the Laws of War.

PARTICULARS: In that Alois HACKERT, German soldier, did, at or near VALOGNES, France, on or about 12 June 1944, wilfully and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in the killing of two unknown members of the United States Army, who were then unarmed, surrendered prisoners of war in the custody of the then German Reich.

111. DATA AS TO ACCUSED:

1. ALOIS HACKERT

This accused was acquitted (R 184).

1V. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE: On or about 14 June 1944, near Valognes, France, the accused, leading a squad, of which he was in command, met three German soldiers, who were escorting three American prisoners of war, under orders to conduct them to Valognes (R 47, 49, 57, 107, 132; P-Ex 1, pp 8, 17; P-Ex 3, Bassa, p. 1; P-Ex 3, Engstle, pp. 1, 2; P-Ex 13, p. 4; P-Ex 15, p. 1). Two witnesses testified under oath, extrajudicially, that the accused told the members of the escorting group, the commander of which may have been of higher rank than himself, not to take the prisoners to Valognes but to kill them (P-Ex 3, Bassa, pp. 3, 9; P-Ex 3, Engstle, pp. 3, 9). The testimony of one Witness, who testified before the Court, and of one witness, who testified unde oath, extrajudicially, tended to support the testimony, above mentioned, that the accused told the members of the escorting group to kill the prisoners but neither of these two witnesses testified directly to that effect (R 50, 55, 65, 67; P-Ex 13, p. 6). Immediately after the meeting between the squad, led by the accused, and the group escorting the prisoners, and subsequent conversation between the accused and members of the escorting group on this occasion, members of the escorting group led the prisoners away and killed two of the prisoners a short distance from the place where the two groups had met. One of the prisoners escaped.(R 52, 53, 175; P-Ex 3, Bassa, pp 4, 5, 6; P-Ex 3, Engstle pp 3, 4, 5; P-Ex 13, pp 6, 7). The accused, in his unsworn testimony before the court, stated that he could not recall having told members of the party escorting the prisoners anything to the effect that they should kill the prisoners. He did not, in his unsworn testimony, unequivocally deny having made any such statement (R 132). In his sworn testimony, taken extrajudicially before his trial, the accused denied that he had told members of the escorting party to kill the prisoners (P-Ex 1, p. 15). The Court had jurisdiction of the person of the accused and of the subject matter.

V. CONCLUSIONS:

It is recommended that the record of trial be filed in the records of this office and that a copy of this Review and Recommendations be forwarded to the Judge Advocate, European Command, for his information.

REVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS

I. TRIAL DATA: The accused was tried at Dachau, Germany, during the period 4 - 5 June 1947, before a General Military Government Court.

II. CHARGE AND PARTICULARS:

CHARGE: Violation of the Laws and Usages of War.

PARTICULARS: In that Heinz Franz Herbert MINX, German national, did, at or near MUENSTEDT, Germany, on or about 24 August 1944, deliberately and wrongfully encourage, aid, abet and participate in the killing of two unidentified airmen, believed to be members of the United States Army, who were then and there surrendered and unarmed prisoners of war in the custody of the then German Reich.

III. DATA AS TO ACCUSED:

1. HEINZ FRANZ HERBERT MINX

This accused was acquitted (R 78).

IV. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE: On or about 24 August 1944, in the vicinity of Schmedenstedt, Germany, several American airmen parachuted to safety from their disabled bomber (R 10, 11, 37; R 8; P-Ex 7). The accused MINX, in company of three other SS men, proceeded to the village of Schmedenstedt by automobile where they received two of the American fliers who had parachuted to safety (R 12, 38). MINX, who was driving the car, and the other three SS men and the two captured American fliers, then proceeded towards Braunschweig, Germany (R 39). Upon reaching the vicinity of Muenstedt, Harms, the senior SS officer, ordered MINX to stop the car and let the SS men and the captured fliers out to wait while MINX went for another vehicle and returned for them (R 39). After the SS men and the fliers were out of the car MINX started the vehicle and drove away. After proceeding approximately one hundred meters, the car stopped and at that point MINX heard shots being fired behind him. MINX then returned to where Harms was standing and upon arriving was informed by Harms that the prisoners had attempted to escape and that he had shot them (R 32, 33, 39). MINX then returned to Schmedenstedt and reported the shooting to the Mayor and the police (R 40). The fliers were buried alongside of the road where they had been shot by Harms, by civilian persons under the orders of the police (R 26).

V. CONCLUSIONS:

It is recommended that the record of trial be filed in the records of this office and that a copy of this Review and Recommendations be forwarded to the Judge Advocate, European Command, for his information.

SUPREME COMMANDER FOR THE ALLIED POWERS

AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45)LS

APO 500
5 December 1945

SUBJECT: Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals.

TO : Commander-in-Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, APO 500.
Commanding General, Sixth Army, APO 442.
Commanding General, Eighth Army, APO 343.
Commanding General, XXIV Corps, APO 235.

The following rules and regulations will govern the trials of persons, units and organizations accused as war criminals:

1. ESTABLISHMENT OF MILITARY COMMISSIONS.

a. General. Persons, units and organizations accused as war criminals will be tried by military commissions to be convened by, or under the authority of, the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers.

b. Number and Types. The commissions will be established dependent upon the number, nature of the offenses involved and the offenders to be tried. Such commissions may include, among others, international military commissions consisting of representatives of several nations or of each nation concerned, appointed to try cases involving offenses against one (1) or more nations.

2. JURISDICTION.

a. Over Persons. The military commissions appointed hereunder shall have jurisdiction over all persons charged with war crimes who are in the custody of the convening authority at the time of the trial.

b. Over Offenses.

(1) Military commissions established hereunder shall have jurisdiction over all offenses including, but not limited to, the following:

(a) The planning, preparation, initiation or waging of a war of aggression or a war in violation of international treaties, agreements or assurances, or participation in a common plan or conspiracy for the accomplishment of any of the foregoing.

BASIC: Ltr, SCAP, file AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45)LS, dated 5 December 1945, subj: "Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals", to CinC, USAFPAC, CG 6th Army, CG 8th Army and CG XXIV Corps.

(b) Violations of the laws or customs of war. Such violations shall include, but not be limited to, murder, ill-treatment or deportation to slave labor or for any other purpose of civilian population of or in occupied territory; murder or ill-treatment of prisoners of war or internees or persons on the seas or elsewhere; improper treatment of hostages; plunder of public or private property; wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages; or devastation not justified by military necessity.

(c) Murder, extermination, enslavement, deportation and other inhuman acts committed against any civilian population before or during the war, or persecutions on political, racial or religious grounds in execution of, or in connection with, any crime defined herein, whether or not in violation of the domestic laws of the country where perpetrated.

(2) The offense need not have been committed after a particular date to render the responsible party or parties subject to arrest, but in general should have been committed since or in the period immediately preceding the Mukden incident of September 18, 1931.

3. MEMBERSHIP OF COMMISSION.

a. Appointment. The members of each military commission will be appointed by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, or under authority delegated by him. Alternates may be appointed by the convening authority. Such alternates shall attend all sessions of the commission, and in case of illness or other incapacity of any principal member, an alternate shall take the place of that member. Any vacancy among the members or alternates, occurring after a trial has begun, may be filled by the convening authority, but the substance of all proceedings had and evidence taken in that case shall be made known to that new member or alternate in open court before the trial proceeds.

b. Number of Members. Each commission shall consist of not less than three (3) members.

c. Qualifications. The convening authority shall appoint to the commission persons which he determines to be competent to perform the duties involved and not disqualified by personal interest or prejudice, provided that no person shall be appointed to hear a case which he personally investigated, nor if he is required as a witness in that case. A commission may consist of Army, Navy or other service personnel, or of both service personnel and civilians. One specially qualified member shall be designated as the law member whose ruling is final insofar as concerns the commission on an objection to the admissibility of evidence offered during the trial.

d. Voting. Except as to the admissibility of evidence, all rulings and findings of the commission shall be by majority vote, except that conviction and sentence shall be by the affirmative votes of not less than two-thirds (2/3) of the members present.

e. Presiding Member. In the event that the convening authority does not name one of the members as the presiding member, the senior officer among the members of the commission present shall preside, or such other member as the senior officer may designate.

4. PROSECUTORS.

a. Appointment. The convening authority shall designate one or more persons to conduct the prosecution before each commission. Where offenses involve nationals of more than one nation, each nation concerned, in the discretion of the convening authority, may be represented among the prosecutors.

b. Duties. The duties of the prosecutors are:

(1) To prepare and present charges and specifications for reference to a commission.

(2) To prepare cases for trial and to conduct the prosecution before the commission of all cases referred for trial.

5. POWERS AND PROCEDURE OF COMMISSIONS.

a. Conduct of the Trial. A commission shall:

(1) Confine each trial strictly to a fair, expeditious hearing on the issues raised by the charges, excluding irrelevant issues or evidence and preventing any unnecessary delay or interference.

(2) Deal summarily with any contumacy or contempt, imposing any appropriate punishment therefor.

(3) Hold public sessions except when otherwise decided by the commission.

BASIC: Ltr, SCAP, file AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45)LS, dated 5 December 1945, subj: "Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals", to CinC, USAFPAC, CG 6th Army, CG 8th Army and CG XXIV Corps.

(4) Hold each session at such time and place as it shall determine, or as may be directed by the convening authority.

b. Rights of the Accused. The accused shall be entitled:

(1) To have in advance of trial a copy of the charges and specifications clearly worded so as to apprise the accused of each offense charged.

(2) To be represented, prior to and during trial, by counsel appointed by the convening authority or counsel of his own choice, or to conduct his own defense.

(3) To testify in his own behalf and have his counsel present relevant evidence at the trial in support of his defense, and cross-examine each adverse witness who personally appears before the commission.

(4) To have the substance of the charges and specifications, the proceedings and any documentary evidence translated when he is unable otherwise to understand them.

c. Witnesses. The commission shall have power:

(1) To summon witnesses and require their attendance and testimony under penalty; to administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses and other persons and to question witnesses.

(2) To require the production of documents and other evidentiary material.

(3) To delegate to the Prosecutors appointed by the convening authority the powers and duties set forth in (1) and (2), above.

(4) To have evidence taken by a special commissioner appointed by the commission.

d. Evidence.

BASIC: Ltr, SCAP, file AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45)IS, dated 5 December 1945, subj: "Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals", to CinC, USAFPAC, CG 6th Army, CG 8th Army and CG XXIV Corps.

shall apply the rules of evidence and pleading set forth herein with the greatest liberality to achieve expeditious procedure. In particular, and without limiting in any way the scope of the foregoing general rules, the following evidence may be admitted:

(a) Any document irrespective of its classification which appears to the commission to have been signed or issued by any officer, department, agency or member of the armed forces of any government without proof of the signature or of the issuance of the document.

(b) Any report which appears to the commission to have been signed or issued by the International Red Cross or a member thereof, or by a doctor of medicine or any medical service personnel, or by an investigator or intelligence officer, or by any other person whom the commission considers as possessing knowledge of the matters contained in the report.

(c) Affidavits, depositions or other signed statements.

(d) Any diary, letter or other document, including sworn or unsworn statements, appearing to the commission to contain information relating to the charge.

(e) A copy of any document or other secondary evidence of its contents, if the original is not immediately available.

(2) The commission shall take judicial notice of facts of common knowledge, official government documents of any nation, and the proceedings, records and findings of military or other agencies of any of the United Nations.

(3) A commission may require the prosecution and the defense to make a preliminary offer of proof, whereupon the commission may rule in advance on the admissibility of such evidence.

(4) If the accused is charged with an offense involving concerted criminal action upon the part of a military or naval unit, or any group or organization, evidence which has been given previously at a trial resulting in the conviction of any other member of that unit, group or organization, relative to that concerted offense, may be received as prima-facie evidence that the accused likewise is guilty of that offense.

(5) The findings and judgment of a commission in any trial of a unit, group, or organization with respect to the criminal character, purpose or activities thereof shall be given full faith and credit in any subsequent trial, by that or any other commission, of an individual person charged with criminal responsibility through membership in that unit, group or organization. Upon proof of membership in that unit, group or organization convicted by a commission, the burden shall be on the accused to establish by proof any mitigating circumstances relating to his membership or participation therein.

(6) The official position of the accused shall not absolve him from responsibility, nor be considered in mitigation of punishment. Further, action pursuant to order of the accused's superior, or of his government, shall not constitute a defense, but may be considered in mitigation of punishment if the commission determines that justice so requires.

(7) All purported confessions or statements of the accused shall be admissible without prior proof that they were voluntarily given, it being for the commission to determine only the truth or falsity of such confessions or statements.

c. Trial Procedure. The proceedings at each trial will be conducted substantially as follows, unless modified by the commission to suit the particular circumstances:

(1) Each charge and specification will be read, or its substance stated, in open court.

(2) The presiding member shall ask each accused whether he pleads "Guilty" or "Not Guilty".

(3) The prosecution shall make its opening statement

(4) The presiding member may, at this or any other time, require the prosecutor to state what evidence he proposes to submit to the commission, and the commission thereupon may rule upon the admissibility of such evidence.

(5) The witnesses and other evidence for the prosecution shall be heard or presented. At the close of the case for the prosecution, the commission may, on motion of the defense for a finding of not guilty, consider and rule whether the evidence before the commission supports the charges against the accused. The commission may defer action on any such motion and permit or require the prosecution to reopen its case and produce any further available evidence.

(6) The defense may make an opening statement prior to presenting its case. The presiding member may, at this or any other time, require the defense to state what evidence they propose to submit to the commission, whereupon the commission may rule upon the admissibility of such evidence.

(7) The witnesses and other evidence for the defense shall be heard or presented. Thereafter, the prosecution and defense may introduce such evidence in rebuttal as the commission may rule admissible.

(8) The defense, and thereafter the prosecution, shall address the commission.

(9) The commission thereafter shall consider the case in closed session and unless otherwise directed by the convening authority, announce in open court its judgment and sentence, if any. The commission may state the reasons on which the judgment is based.

f. Record of Proceedings. Each commission shall make a separate record of its proceedings in the trial of each case brought before it. The record shall be prepared by the prosecutor under the direction of the commission and submitted to the defense counsel. The commission shall be responsible for its accuracy. Such record, certified by the presiding member of the commission or his successor, shall be delivered to the convening authority as soon as possible after the trial.

g. Sentence. The commission may sentence an accused, upon conviction, to death by hanging or shooting, imprisonment for life or for any less term, fine or such other punishment as the commission shall determine to be proper. The commission may also order confiscation of any property of a convicted accused, deprive that accused of any stolen property or order its delivery to the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers for disposition as he shall find to be proper, or may order restitution with appropriate penalty in cases of default.

h. Approval of Sentence. No sentence of a military commission shall be carried into effect until approved by the officer who convened the commission, or his successor. Such officer shall have authority to approve, mitigate, remit in whole or in part, commute, suspend, reduce or otherwise alter the sentence imposed, or (without prejudice to accused) remand the case for rehearing before a new military commission; but he shall not have authority to increase the severity of the sentence. No sentence of death shall be carried into execution until confirmed by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers. Except as herein provided, the judgment and sentence of a commission shall be final and not subject to review.

6. RULE MAKING POWER.

Supplementary Rules and Forms. Each commission shall adopt rules and forms to govern its procedure, not inconsistent with the provisions hereof, or such rules and forms as may be prescribed by the convening authority or by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers.

HEADQUARTERS EIGHTH ARMY
United States Army
Office of the Commanding General
APO 343

AG 000.5 (YO) 5 February 1946

SUBJECT: Rules of Procedure and Outline of Procedure for Trials of Accused War Criminals.

TO: Presidents of War Crimes Commissions.

SECTION I: RULES OF PROCEDURE

The following rules of procedure, in addition to and supplemental to regulations governing the trials of accused war criminals, as outlined in Letter, General Headquarters, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45)LS, Subject: "Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals," dated 5 December 1945, will govern the trial of persons, units and organizations accused as war criminals.

1. Affidavits, Statements, Documents, and Preliminary Motions.

a. Copies of all statements, affidavits and other documents which the prosecution proposes to introduce into evidence will be furnished to the defense at the time a case is referred for trial. At least 24 hours prior to arraignment, the defense will furnish to the prosecution copies of all statements, affidavits and other documents then in its possession which the defense proposes to introduce into evidence. Subsequent to this time, any other statements, affidavits and documents proposed to be introduced into evidence by the defense will be furnished opposing counsel as soon as possible.

b. Either side will indicate to opposing counsel the portions of any statement, affidavit or other document it proposes to offer as evidence in the trial. Such indication will be made at the time copies thereof are furnished or made available to opposing counsel.

c. If, either before or during the trial, but after copies of the documents have been furnished to opposing counsel, as set out above, either side receives or is apprised of additional documents which will be used in the trial, it will notify opposing counsel thereof as promptly as possible, and thereafter furnish copies as soon as practicable. Opposing counsel will then promptly take such action as may be necessary with the view of avoiding any delay in the trial of the case.

d. The rules set out in a, b, and c above will not be construed to include statements of the accused or any other witness who is available to appear in person before the Commission.

e. Prior to trial, both prosecution and defense will furnish opposing counsel copies of any preliminary motions to be made to the Commission.

2. Affidavits.

In offering affidavits or other written statements of testimony the prosecution will preface the offer with a statement as to whether or not to the best of the prosecution's knowledge or information the affiant or the author of the statement is at the time of trial present in either the Philippine Islands, the Ryukyus, Japan or Korea.

3. Rights of the Accused as Witness.

a. The accused may take the stand as a witness or he may remain silent. If he takes the stand he may make a sworn or unsworn statement but in either case he will be subject to cross-examination on statement made, cross-examination is nowise to be limited to matters brought out on direct examination.

b. If he remains silent, the Commission may draw such inference from his failure to testify as may seem fair and competent to a reasonable mind, after taking into consideration all the competent evidence in the case.

c. The prosecution may in argument comment to the Commission on an accused's failure to testify.

4. Identification of Accused.

The accused may be required to testify for the purpose of identification, respecting his name, age, rank, occupation, identifying marks or characteristics and his status and whereabouts during the period alleged in the charges and specifications, excepting therefrom all testimony relative to the issue of guilt or innocence.

5. In case in which the defense moves for a finding of not guilty after the conclusion of the prosecution's case, and upon the overruling of the motion rests its case without offering evidence in defense, and the court after submission of the case, finds the accused guilty, the court before imposing sentence may permit the defense to offer competent evidence in extenuation or mitigation of the offense alleged, subject to the right of the prosecution to rebut such evidence.

6. Interpreters and Interpretation.

a. No criticism of an interpreter, direct or implied, will be made in open court by counsel of either side until the following steps have been taken:

(1) The Chief Interpreter will be advised of a complaint during the next court recess.

(2) The Chief Interpreter will investigate the matter and:

(a) Convince the complaining party that no substantial error exists; or

(b) Caution and advise the interpreter if necessary; or

(c) Prepare a correction of the record to be entered as a stipulation upon reconvening of the Commission; or

(d) Prepare an opinion to be given to the Commission if required.

(3) If the Chief Interpreter cannot satisfy both the prosecution and the defense, the complaining party will send a message to the Commission requesting an off-record conference in the matter.

b. Counsel are reminded that:

(1) Interpreting between oriental and occidental language is not comparable to coding and decoding cypher messages, but requires a distressing amount of circumlocution and re-arrangement of thought.

(2) Counsel is advised, when working through an interpreter:

(a) To use short, simple questions as free from artifice as if examining a small child.

(b) Whenever it is necessary to refer to previous testimony, to lay a foundation to insure that both the interpreter and the witness understand the reference to previous testimony.

(3) The following types of questions are particularly to be avoided as leading to misunderstanding and futile descussions:

(a) Long questions. (Impossible for interpreter and witness to remember)

(b) Complicated questions. (Dependent clauses confuse both interpreter and witness)

(c) Conditional questions. (Usually beyond comprehension of an oriental witness)

(d) Sarcastic questions. (Usually depend on untranslatable emphasis or play on words; waste effort)

(e) Negative questions. ("You did not see them, did you?" Answer will be, "Yes, I did not see them" or "No — I saw them")

(f) Questions hinging on the precise meaning of a single word. (The interpreter picks from several choices that English word which he believes will most closely express his understanding of the witness. To question the witness about the English word is futile)

(4) The senior member of the staff of both prosecution and defense are charged with instructing their assistants in these rules and thereafter to apply prompt corrective action to stop at once any violation of the principles announced herein.

7. Authentication of Record of Trial.

a. The record of trial will be prepared under the supervision of the prosecution for the signature of the President of the Commission and the senior member of the prosecution staff.

b. The record will be submitted to the Defense Counsel for check by him before the record is authenticated by the prosecution and the President of the Commission. The Defense Counsel will note on the record the fact that the record has been submitted to him and checked by him prior to authentication.

c. In the event the record cannot be authenticated by the President of the Commission and the senior member of the prosecution staff, by reason of the death, disability, or absence of either or both of them, it shall be signed by a member of the Commission in lieu of the president and by another member of the prosecution staff, if there be one, in lieu of the senior member of the prosecution staff, otherwise by another member of the commission.

(Any changes in Special Orders will be noted by the Prosecutor. Defense Counsel will have been given an opportunity to examine these documents prior to their being offered.)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "There being no objections, the orders will be received and incorporated into the record of these proceedings. Does the Prosecution desire to challenge any Member of the Commission for cause?"

PROSECUTOR: "The prosecution has no Challenges" (or as the case may be).

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Commission will be sworn."

(All persons in the room will rise and stand until the swearing of the Commission and of the Prosecution is completed. Each Member of the Commission raises his hand as his name is called by the Prosecutor who administers the following oath:)

PROSECUTOR: "You Colonel _____, Colonel _____, etc., do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to the evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the person to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, without partiality, favor or affection, according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the Custom of War in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the findings or sentence of the Court until they shall be published by the proper authority or duly announced by the court, except to the Prosecutor and Assistant Prosecutor; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular Member of the Commission upon the findings or sentence, unless required to give evidence thereof as a witness by a court of justice in due course of law. So Help you God."

EACH MEMBER OF THE COMMISSION: "I do."

(Members of the Commission lower their hands but remain standing while the Presiding Officer administers the following oath to the Members of the Prosecution Staff.)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Prosecution will be sworn. You Major _____, Captain _____, do swear that you will faithfully and impartially perform the duties of Prosecutor in the case now brought before this Commission. So Help You God."

EACH MEMBER OF THE PROSECUTION: "I do."

(All now resume their seats except the Prosecutor.)

DEFENSE: "The Charge and Specifications were received by the Defense Counsel and the accused has been duly apprised of each offense charged. The accused has also been advised of his rights as provided in paragraph 5 b of Letter AG 000.5 (5 Dec 45) LS, General Headquarters, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, entitled 'Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals', heretofore introduced into the record of these proceedings."

PRESIDING OFFICER: "Whom does the accused desire to introduce as Defense Counsel?"

(If the accused desires the regularly appointed Defense Counsel, the proceedings will continue. If accused desires Counsel of his own selection to the exclusion of regularly appointed Defense Counsel, and the desired Counsel is present, then the regularly appointed Defense Counsel will be excused and the proceedings will continue. If accused desires Counsel of his own selection and requests that the proceedings be continued until such Counsel be made available to him, the Commission will consider the availability of desired Counsel and if the request of the accused is granted will continue the case until such time as Counsel can be secured. If the request of the accused is denied, he will be given an opportunity to make another selection but the arraignment will continue with the regularly appointed Defense Counsel. If accused elects to conduct his own defense and fails to designate Special Counsel, the regularly appointed Defense Counsel will be present with the accused and available in the event he desires its advice.)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Charge and Specifications will be read to the accused."

(Prosecutor will read the complete Charge and Specifications, together with affidavit of accuser and reference for trial.)

PROSECUTOR: "With permission of Commission, the Prosecution introduces the Charge and Specifications which have been read to the accused for incorporation into the record of these proceedings."

(Prior to offer, Defense Counsel will be given an opportunity to examine Charge and Specifications.)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "There being no objection, the Charge and Specifications are received and will be incorporated into the Record. Are there any special Pleas by the Defense?"

DEFENSE: "There are no special pleas (or as the case may be)."

PRESIDING OFFICER: "_____ (Naming accused) at this time the Commission will hear your plea to the Charge and Specifications which have been read to you. You may plead either 'Guilty' or 'Not Guilty'".

(Accused and Defense Counsel will rise and accused will plead "Guilty" or "Not Guilty" to each specification and to the charge. If accused has not determined his plea and if he so requests, Commission will set a time for receipt of plea and continue the proceedings until that time. If accused refused to plead, the Presiding Officer will then state:)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The accused having failed to plead to the Charge and Specifications, there will be entered in his behalf upon the record the plea of "Not Guilty".

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Prosecution will make its opening statement."

(Prosecution makes opening statement.)

PROSECUTOR: "The Prosecution calls as its first witness:_____."

(Witness presents himself in front of and faces the Presiding Officer, and if a member of the Military Services salutes the Presiding Officer. After which, the Prosecutor, standing, administers the following oath to the witness: NOTE: Witness will be sworn according to his particular belief)*

"You swear (or affirm) that the evidence you shall give in the case now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So Help you God."

*NOTE: Japanese Witnesses will be sworn by the following oath:

"In accordance with my conscience I swear that I will tell the truth, I will hide nothing and I will conceal nothing."

PROSECUTOR: "Do you understand that if you fail to tell the truth as you have just sworn to do, you are liable to be punished by this Commission, or any other American Court or Commission?"

(Prosecution proceeds with direct examination. This is followed by Cross-Examination by the Defense, and Examination by the Commission in the case of each witness called by the Prosecutor).

(Documentary Evidence will be introduced as follows:)

PROSECUTOR: "The Prosecution offers in evidence (the original) (a certified copy) (a photostatic copy) of an affidavit (or other document) to be attached to the record and marked Exhibit ____, (to be withdrawn at the conclusion of the trial and an authenticated copy substituted therefor).

(After the Prosecution presents its evidence, the Prosecutor announces:)

"The Prosecution rests."

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Defense will make its Opening Statement."

(The Defense makes its Opening Statement).

DEFENSE COUNSEL: "The Defense calls as its first witness_____."

(Defense presents its case in the same manner as outlined above for the prosecution. The Prosecutor administers the oath to the witnesses. Defense then proceeds with direct examination, followed by cross-examination by the Prosecution, re-direct examination by the Defense, and examination by the court, if desired. When the Defense has completed its case, the Defense Counsel announces:)

DEFENSE COUNSEL: "The Defense rests."

(The Prosecution now presents any rebuttal witnesses, followed by presentation of any rebuttal witnesses for the Defense.)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Commission will now hear the Arguments for the Prosecution and Defense." (Arguments to be conducted as directed by the Commission)

PRESIDING OFFICER: "The Commission will be closed."

(When the Commission arrives at its judgment and sentence, the Commission will be opened. In the presence of the Accused, his Counsel, and the personnel of the Prosecution (all of whom remain standing), the Presiding Officer announces the judgment and sentence.)

DEFENSE: The defense has no desire to challenge any member of the Commission for cause. However, the defense would like to address a few questions to the members of the Commission.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will reply in turn.

(Each member of the Commission replied in the negative)

DEFENSE: Are all members of the Commission familiar with the rule that the accused is presumed innocent until his guilt is proven beyond a reasonable doubt, and are all members of the Commission willing to apply that rule in determining the evidence as to the guilt or innocence of this accused at the close of this trial?

AFFIDAVIT

Before me personally appeared the above named accuser this 5th day of July, 1946, and made oath that he is a person subject to military law and that he personally signed the foregoing charge and specifications and further that he has investigated the matters set forth in the charge and specifications and that the same are true in fact, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

/s/ John K. Pritchard
Captain, Infantry
Summary Court.

PRESIDENT: There being no objections, the Charge and specifications are received and will be incorporated into the record.

(The Charge and specifications were then received into evidence)

Are there any special pleas by the defense?

DEFENSE: If it please the Commission, there is a special plea: To the jurisdiction of the Commission to try this accused under Specification 5 of the Charge.

Specification 5 charges the accused with willfully and unlawfully mistreating and contributing to the death of G. B. Serafin, an Italian.

Now, the letter of 5 December 1945, AG 000.5, previously introduced into evidence before this Commission sets forth the jurisdiction of the Commission, and it sets forth in paragraph 2 that the court has jurisdiction over all persons charged with war crimes who are in the custody of the convening authority at the time of the trial.

Of course, we do not question the jurisdiction of this court to try this accused for war crimes. However, we maintain that the court does not have jurisdiction over the offense as set forth in Specification 3.

The same letter sets forth under paragraph 2b that the Military commission established hereunder shall have jurisdiction over all offenses including, but not limited to, the following:

(a) The planning, preparation, initiation or waging of a war of aggression (which is the Class "A" trials up at Tokyo) or a war in violation of international treaties, agreements or assurances, or participation in a common plan or conspiracy for the accomplishment of any of the foregoing.

(b) Violations of the laws or customs or war. Such violations shall include, but not be limited to, murder, ill-treatment or deportation to slave labor or for any other purpose of civilian population of or in occupied territory; (and the next phrase is the important phrase) murder or ill-treatment of prisoners of war or internees or persons on the seas or elsewhere.

And further, the next paragraph is the ill-treatment of civilian population before the beginning of the war.

Now, at this stage of the proceedings, we are called upon to plead to the Charge and to the specifications. The specifications must be drawn consistently so that the accused may plead thereto and prepare a defense, and it must set forth an act over which this court or Commission, rather, has jurisdiction.

Now, we are charged with the death of an Italian. It is our contention that there is no allegation that the Italian was a prisoner of war. There is no allegation that he was an internee within the meaning of paragraph 2b of the letter previously quoted from.

It is our belief that the authority to constitute these legal commissions is limited. We are confined solely to the letter of SCAP in which it says jurisdiction shall be assumed over the ill-treatment of prisoners of war and internees.

It is our contention that those prisoners of war must have been Allied prisoners of war -- soldiers, sailors, marines or if they are internees, Allied civilians overrun in the Philippines or elsewhere when the Japanese first started this war.

There is no allegation in this specification as to how Serafin was ever in the jurisdiction of the Japanese. Perhaps, gentlemen, he committed some offense against the Japanese and was thrown in jail, was thrown in the prisoner of war camp. But that specification must be ruled upon as it stands. Evidence cannot be brought before this court to substantiate it in this argument. We don't care what the evidence is. The specification must be drawn so that the court knows that it has jurisdiction over the offense charged under the letter of SCAP.

It is our contention that the mere wording "J. B. Serafin, an Italian" does not give this court jurisdiction because the Italians were never Allies of the United Nations. I do recognize that after the Italian surrender, they were given the status of co-belligerents against Germany, but never against the Japanese, and under that status, an Italian could not become a prisoner of war or an internee within the meaning of the SCAP directive so as to give this court jurisdiction.

On that basis, I ask that this court rule that it does not have jurisdiction to try the accused under Specification 3, and that the specification be stricken.

PROSECUTION: Anticipating, if the court please, before the trial started some time ago, that this objection would come up, prosecution addressed to the Director of Civilian Affairs Division, Washington, D. C., a letter requesting clarification of the status of Italy on or about January, 1945, and setting forth the facts as regard to the man Serafin who is charged with dying at the contributing hands of Keniohi Kondo in Specification 3.

In response to our letter under date of July 17, 1946, the prosecution was in receipt of a cablegram from the State Department which advised substantially as follows: That on or about 13 October, 1943, Italy declared war on Germany and was at that time accepted by the Allied Powers -- Britain, Russia and the United States as a co-belligerent. She did not declare war on Japan until 15 July, 1945 and at that time, she declared war unofficially.

Serafin is charged with dying in Japan in January, 1945. Therefore, the State Department advised as follows: That under these circumstances, only Japan as sovereign power could rule as to the status of Italian Nationals insofar as their relationship to Japan was concerned.

In the absence of any ruling in this connection, they told us to consider each individual case on its own merits. If Serafin was, in fact, treated as a prisoner of war and war atrocities were committed against him by Japanese, then they would be held responsible for such acts, because such acts would be overt acts on their part, considering Serafin as a prisoner of war.

Therefore, such overt act would spell out an intention on their part to treat that particular individual as a prisoner of war and they would, therefore, be held responsible for those war atrocities, if they were in fact committed.

The prosecution would like to incorporate into the record of these proceedings the answer to our letter on Serafin, dated 17 July 1946, which is the answer from the State Department on this very point.

DEFENSE: I am going to object to this introduction of this or the incorporation of this into the record, on the grounds that it is not signed. We don't know who sent it. There is no signature to it at all.

Now, from the contents of it, you might think it was sent by the Secretary of State. Perhaps it was sent by a clerk in his office -- someone who might not be competent to comment on whether or not this court has jurisdiction.

I think in the second place, whatever the State Department feels about this matter is entirely incompetent. The jurisdiction requirements of this court are set forth. This specification must meet it. Whether or not somebody in Washington thinks this court has jurisdiction is not controlling at all. It's for the court to decide. This person -- we do not know who he is -- has stated only Japan as sovereign power could rule as to status of Italian Nationals insofar as their relationship to Japan was concerned, and I think that is the controlling feature.

The Italians declared war on Japan the 15th day of July, 1945. This man could not be a prisoner of war or interned at the time of his death under the definition of prisoners of war and internees as set forth in the SCAP directive.

I object to the admission of this into the record on the ground that it is not signed.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, this is an official answer on official heading of an Agency of the War Department, and, therefore, as an official record, I believe there should be no question as to its admissibility.

PRESIDENT: The objection as to the admission of this cablegram is overruled, not sustained, and it will be admitted into the record.

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, in further argument, the prosecution feels that the only question that this Commission has to decide with respect to Specification 3 is whether or not this man was in fact a prisoner of war, whether he was treated as a prisoner of war, and whether Kaniahi Kondo, the defendant, committed any overt acts, any war crimes against Serafin.

The prosecution is prepared to prove by affidavit and live testimony that in fact, Serafin was treated as a prisoner of war.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I am going to object at this time to the offering of any evidence to prove the specification. This argument is on the specification alone and it makes no difference what proof he has. He has charged us with contributing to the death of an Italian.

We maintain the court doesn't have jurisdiction, no matter what his proof is. He cannot argue his proof at this time.

PROSECUTION: The court may in its discretion, on motion of the prosecution amend the specification to include the words "prisoner of War", which I have stated we propose to prove.

Therefore, at this juncture of the proceedings, the prosecution requests permission of the Commission to amend Specification 2 by adding the words after C. B. Sarfin, an Italian "Prisoner of War".

I have made a motion. Do you object?

DEFENSE: I object to it, on this ground: There has just been introduced before this Commission a copy of a cablegram received from the State Department signed by someone we don't know, who sent it, and because that person is of the opinion that if this man were treated as a prisoner of war, this court can assume jurisdiction.

Now, I object strenuously against the introduction of that cablegram unless it is shown by whom it is sent. It could have been sent by anybody. He is merely expressing an opinion and just because it comes from the State Department, sir, does not lend it authenticity.

PRESIDENT: This has been admitted in evidence. I overrule the objection.

DEFENSE: Now, the prosecution is seeking to amend his specification to conform with someone's opinion from the State Department.

Now, the State Department didn't set up these courts. The State Department didn't give jurisdiction. Jurisdiction is given under a certain letter from SCAP and SCAP received this jurisdiction from a joint declaration of the Chief of Staff.

These are the documents that should be before this court to show jurisdiction -- not a cablegram from somebody in the State Department. That's why I objected to the introduction of that cablegram, because someone has expressed an opinion and now, they are seeking to amend their specification, to conform to that cablegram, and, therefore, argue that the court can assume jurisdiction. The court is now assuming jurisdiction on the opinion of someone they know not whom in Washington, D. C., in the State Department who received a letter and we don't know what the letter said and on the basis of that, rendered an opinion. We do not know whether he consulted anybody -- whether he looked at anything at all. I object to the amendment of the specification on those grounds.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, we would like to additionally offer with the radiogram previously admitted into evidence, a copy of the letter sent out to the Civil Affairs Division, requesting information upon which that is an answer, dated 28 June, 1946, signed by Frank E. Meek, Lt. Col., FA, Executive Officer of the Legal Section of SCAP. (Handing paper to defense)

DEFENSE: Sir, this letter requests advice as to the exact status of Japanese Nationals, and the answer to that question -- whoever sent that cablegram, took it upon himself --

PRESIDENT: You mean the Italian Nationals?

DEFENSE: I mean Italian Nationals, I am sorry, and in answer to that question, somebody took it upon himself to render his opinion as to what the jurisdiction of this court was.

I think it's highly improper to accept that in evidence. I ask now that it be withdrawn and I object to the introduction of this letter.

PROSECUTION: So far as the radiogram is concerned, I think that the court has stated three times that it has been admitted in evidence and I don't think counsel should constantly make reference to it. An objection has been made to the letter. I feel that if the radiogram is incorporated into the record, that the letter upon which that is an answer should also be brought in.

PRESIDENT: On what grounds are you objecting?

DEFENSE: I object to it, sir, because of my objection to the cablegram; the objection is against the whole transaction.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The letter will be admitted into evidence.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I still have before the Commission my motion to amend Specification 3, to include the words "Prisoner of War". I would like also to point out that after the insertion of the words "Prisoner of War, if the Commission so determines, the problem becomes academic. If the Prosecution fails to meet the proof of the Specification that Serafin was, in fact, a prisoner of war and treated as such, then the defendant, may, of course, be cleared of the specification. Therefore, the burden is still on the prosecution as to the specification and we propose to prove it.

I, therefore, renew my motion as to the amendment to include those words.

PRESIDENT: You want the words inserted --

PROSECUTION: After the word "Italian".

PRESIDENT: After the word "Italian"?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: What are the words exactly?

PROSECUTION: "Prisoner of War".

PRESIDENT: Does the defense have any comment to make on this motion to amend the specification?

DEFENSE: I object to it on this ground, sir: The letter giving jurisdiction gives jurisdiction over ill-treatment of prisoners of war. Now, a prisoner of war is a combatant of a nation at which the Japanese -- with which the Japanese were at war, or prisoners we hold, a nation we hold a war against. An interpreter would be a non-combatant.

Now, this man died in January, 1945. Italy declared war on Japan in July, 1945. Up until that time, they were allied nations -- Japan and Italy. I say this court cannot assume jurisdiction over the offense as charged because even though you amend that specification and you prove that he was in a prisoner of war camp or that he was treated as a prisoner of war, that does not make him a prisoner of war, according to the definitions as laid down of rules of land and warfare, and that's what we are governed by. We are not governed by anybody's opinions as to who was a prisoner of war. There is a definition as to who was a prisoner of war and it's set forth in the Manual, and the charges in this case are drawn in violation of the laws and customs of war which are all set forth in the rules of land warfare. We should abide by that in determining whether or not this man is a prisoner of war.

Merely saying he was treated as a prisoner of war -- because that is the only proof he intends to offer -- on the basis of the cablegram signed by lord knows who in Washington, he seeks to give the court jurisdiction over this offense.

I object to the amendment on those grounds.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, the defense counsel seems to take great issue of the fact that this radiogram is signed by lord knows who. It might have been signed by a clerk or it might have been his opinion. I would also like to point out to the Commission that in addition to whoever sent this, this anonymous character from the State Department, the legal section of SCAP is of the opinion that Kenichi Kondo is guilty of a war offense against J. G. Serafin. If they weren't of that opinion, the specification would not have been sent down to this Commission for its consideration.

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to object to that. I ask that it be stricken from the record and ask the court to disregard it. What the legal section of SCAP thinks has nothing to do with this case. They have affidavits; they receive charges and they forward them. What their opinion is doesn't make any difference. The legal section of SCAP can't give this court jurisdiction. This court's jurisdiction is derived from the directives it receives and not from any opinion.

PRESIDENT: We have a motion to modify Specification 3 by inserting the words "A prisoner of war" after the word "Italian", right?

PROSECUTION: Yes.

PRESIDENT: The motion is granted and the specification will be so modified.

Kenichi Kondo, at this time, the Commission will hear your plea to the charge and specifications read to you. You may plead either "guilty" or "not guilty".

ACCUSED: I plead not guilty.

DEFENSE: Let the record show of the Charge, and on each and every specification.

PRESIDENT: Are you pleading for all of the specifications or each one in turn?

DEFENSE: Plead to the charge and all of the specifications.

PRESIDENT: You plead not guilty to the Charge and all eleven specifications?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: As read to you?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: The prosecution will make its opening statement.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, the prosecution desires to make a short opening statement in this case.

The accused, Kenichi Kondo, was a medical orderly, a medical Superior Private in two camps in the Osaka Area; from 21 January 1945 until 8 May 1945, the accused was at the Headquarters Main Camp in the Osaka Area known as "Hoinsho Camp". From about 9 May 1945 till about the 15th of August 1945, he was at the Osayama Prisoner of War Camp, also in the Osaka Area, the bulk of this time in handling the prisoners of war at the Headquarters Main Camp where we allege the accused committed atrocities as set forth in specifications one to ten.

At Headquarters, Main Camp, there was, of course, a dispensary for American and Allied Prisoners of War. At this dispensary, there were various medical personnel --

Those are Specifications 1 to 3. Specifications 4 to 10 allege the usual run of beatings and mistreatment of Allied prisoners of war, except that in this case, which is slightly different from the others, most of these prisoners of war were sick patients which in the eyes of the prosecution makes the acts of the defendant more aggravated.

The prosecution has to offer approximately fifteen affidavits from American prisoners of war which all will show to the Commission a line of action by the accused with respect to sick prisoners of war, which show how he mistreated them.

In addition, very fortunately, the prosecution has two live witnesses: Chief Boatswain's Mate Phillip K. Saunders, who was the American commander of Headquarters Prisoner of War Camp for several years and who knows the defendant intimately and will testify at length about him.

In addition, we also have an interpreter, the English interpreter who was at the camp during the time that Tsuichi Kondo was there.

The prosecution feels that it can prove all the allegations and charges that Kondo was, in fact, ruthless in his treatment of sick American and Allied prisoners of war.

At this time, before the offer of any affidavits, the American medical personnel set up to take care of the sick American prisoners of war and Allied prisoners of war. One of those medical men was a Lieutenant Hochman, who was the American doctor in charge of the dispensary. The only other Japanese who was there most of the time was the accused, Kenichi Kondo.

Now, Kenichi Kondo had two months' medical training. Dr. Hochman was a doctor -- graduated from a medical school. When American prisoners of war came to sick call every morning, they would be examined by Dr. Hochman, and he, in turn, would tell Kondo what was the matter. In some cases, he would suggest that the prisoner of war stay in because he was sick, or something was the matter with him. Kenichi Kondo would determine in his own mind if that man was sick and if he decided he wasn't, he would send him out to work.

In addition, the prosecution will prove that at sick call in the mornings, Kondo beat sick prisoners of war -- that he beat sick prisoners of war outside of the dispensary.

Prosecution proposes to prove that Kondo was partially responsible for the deaths of two American prisoners of war and Serafin, an Italian, by refusing them medication when Dr. Hochman told him that they needed medication -- by denying them rest and treatment when Dr. Hochman said they should have rest and treatment and by sending them out to work when they were sick.

prosecution would like to request the permission of this Commission at the close of the case to withdraw all original affidavits and substitute therefor certified true copies, by reason of the fact that it is anticipated that certain of these affidavits will be used in other cases.

DEFENSE: No objection, sir.

PRESIDENT: No objection.

PROSECUTION: At this time, the prosecution would also like to state for the record that to the best of our knowledge or information, none of the affiants or authors of the statements or affidavits which the prosecution proposes to offer are at the present time in the Philippines, Ryukyus, Japan or Korea.

At this time, the prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 1, the original affidavit of Clayton Woodrow Atwood, Pharmacist Mate, Second Class, US Navy.

DEFENSE: Before these documents are introduced into evidence, we wish to make a blank objection to the reception of all signed or unsigned statements into evidence, on the grounds that they are hearsay.

I ask that the Commission take that objection against each and every affidavit, or of a signed or unsigned statements.

PROSECUTION: I have made the offer.

PRESIDENT: You make the objection to that affidavit?

DEFENSE: I make the objection to all affidavits on the grounds that all affidavits are hearsay, the accused not having been advised that they were taken, the accused not having an opportunity to cross-examine or examine the affiants.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: I have this specific objection, sir, to make: The third paragraph of the second answer, the seventh line, beginning with the word "because" and ending on the eighth line "degrees", on the grounds that it is a conclusion. A witness cannot testify as to his conclusions. The witness is not competent to testify as to conclusions. He can testify to what he saw and what he heard the accused say.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The commission will consider the affidavit for what it is worth.

DEFENSE: Certain portions of this affidavit are stricken. However, by agreement with the defense, the prosecution is going to read it. It's the first two lines or the three lines that are agreed to be stricken on the first page.

PROSECUTION: Does the Commission desire the prosecution to indicate to them what specification each affidavit will apply to?

PRESIDENT: Yes, it does.

PROSECUTION: Reading now from Prosecution's Exhibit 1, affidavit by Clayton Woodrow Atwood, referring to Specification No. 1, "I was confined...."

The affidavit of Clayton Woodrow Atwood, Pharmacist Mate Second Class was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 1.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 2, the original affidavit of Dr. David Hochman.

DEFENSE: I have no specific objection to the introduction of this affidavit. However, I would like to call the court's attention when you receive your copies, it's prefaced as "Testimony of Dr. David Hochman". I call the court's attention to the fact that this is not testimony. This is a sworn statement or affidavit, and it should not be given the weight that testimony is entitled to receive.

I also call upon the court to disregard the descriptive phrase in the box, "In the matter of the atrocities committed at Hoinaho POW Camp, Japan, on or about March, 1944" on the grounds we know not by whom it is given and they are not the words of the affiant.

PROSECUTION: Has the court ruled on its admissibility?

PRESIDENT: It will be received.

The affidavit of Dr. David Hochman was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 2.

PROSECUTION: This affidavit is offered as to Specification 1.

Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 3 the original affidavit of Staff Sergeant John Harold Zimmer.

DEFENSE: I have this specific objection to this affidavit. Do you want to give the law member a copy of it?

(Prosecution hands copy to law member)

DEFENSE: The last question, sir, on the first page, I object to the answer and to the question on the ground that it's leading. The question is: "State what you saw and heard regarding the complete details surrounding the deaths of BM 2/c Smith and BM 1/C Moss in February 1944, and tell to what extent Moniehi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly, was a contributing factor."

The objection to the answer and the question is on the grounds it's leading and not proper.

PRESIDENT: You are objecting to what?

DEFENSE: To that question and to the entire answer on that ground first. I have further specific objections to portions of the answer.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: On the fifth line, sir, of the answer to that question, on page 2, beginning with the word "as" to the end of the sentence "work", on the ground it is a conclusion. This witness is attempting to testify as to what someone else felt, something which he is not competent to do. If he were here as a witness, he couldn't testify to that and the court cannot place any probative value on anything he might say as to what went on in somebody's else mind.

I ask that that portion of the answer be stricken.

PRESIDENT: Where does it start?

DEFENSE: It starts "as --

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: On the eleventh line, sir, the same answer, commencing with the word "Smith" and ending with the word "bed" -- purely a conclusion on the part of the witness and not competent evidence upon which this court can base its findings. He is drawing a conclusion as to why somebody did something.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The court will consider it for what it is worth. Change that from "court" to "commission".

DEFENSE: Sir, I object to the entire next paragraph with the exception of the last sentence. I object to this portion:

"I do not know what the cause of Smith's death was, nor do I know just what time he died. An American lieutenant named Kauffman, who was from New York City, and who was a doctor in the Medical Corps, should be able to give more information about this incident, as he was present at sick call every day with Kondo."

We already have his affidavit.

"I was told that Kondo refused to let Smith stay away from work by Sergeant Hector J. Bussey of Shawnee, Oklahoma, who was a close friend of Smith and who had heard the story from Smith directly. (It's hearsay twice removed) I did not actually witness any of the above incident, except that it was easy to see that Smith was ill."

I ask that it be stricken on the grounds that it is hearsay, except the last sentence where he finally tells us something what he did see or did not see. "I did not see Kondo beat Smith at any time, nor did I hear that he did."

It's the only portion of that testimony that he can testify to, and the rest of it is all hearsay and I ask that it be stricken.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled and the Commission will consider it for what it is worth.

PROSECUTION: "In the matter of the manner in which Koniahi Kondo, Japanese --

DEFENSE: I object to that, Mr. Read. That has happened once before.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. The affidavit is admitted in evidence as is.

DEFENSE: That is not part of the affidavit. The man has sworn to the answers contained herein and the prosecution is attempting to read the face piece of an affidavit which is not sworn to by anybody -- attempting to read it into the record. We don't know who wrote it.

PROSECUTION: I withdraw it; I will not read it.

PRESIDENT: What?

PROSECUTION: I will withdraw my reading of that particular matter.

The testimony of S/Sgt John Harold Zimmer was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 3.

PROSECUTION: This affidavit is offered as to Specifications 1, 2 and 10.

Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit 4, the original affidavit of Staff Sergeant Tasker Homer Bliss.

DEFENSE: I object, sir, to the last question and answer on the first page.

The question: "Did you witness any improper medical care of prisoners while interned?"

On the ground that it's a leading question and the answer, of course, giving a response to a leading question should be stricken.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: I object, sir, to specifically the second line from the bottom, "Boatswain Mate 1/C Robert W. Hess died of beriberi after Konda refused to treat him" on the grounds that it is a conclusion; the cause of a man's death is very technical to which only a medical man is entitled to testify.

This man is not qualified as an expert witness and we should not receive his opinion as to what the cause of death was.

On that ground, I ask that that portion of the answer be stricken.

PRESIDENT: Overruled.

DEFENSE: Top of the following page, second line, "even though they had beriberi, dysentery, or pneumonia, without treatment of any kind."

I ask that that portion be stricken on the same ground -- that it is a conclusion by a person not qualified as an expert witness to testify before this Commission as to what people were suffering from.

PRESIDENT: Overruled. The court -- the Commission will consider it for what it is worth.

The testimony of S/Sgt. Tasker Homer Bliss was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 4.

PRESIDENT: What specification is that?

PROSECUTION: Sir, the affidavit in question is offered as to Specifications 1, 2 and 10.

Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 5, original affidavit of Harold Eugene Thomas, BM, 2/C.

DEFENSE: Sir, I object. The specific objection is to the first answer that appears on the second page, on the ground that it's a conclusion by a person not qualified as an expert witness to testify before this Commission as to what may have caused the death of any person at any given time or any given place.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: The second line of the next answer, "taken ill," down through the word "sail", on the grounds that it's a conclusion, as to why this man couldn't attend sick call.

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

DEFENSE: The second line or third line from the bottom of the same answer, "understood that it was a regular happening." on the ground that it was hearsay. This man didn't see it.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

DEFENSE: The answer, the last sentence, the fourth answer on that page, commencing "However" and ending with the word "conclusion" -- on the ground that it is a conclusion; the witness is not competent to so testify. Somebody told him something and he basis his conclusion on what somebody told him. It's hearsay.

In the first instance, in the last sentence, it's purely the conclusion on the part of the affiant and he does not state facts sufficient to warrant the drawing of the conclusion.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The Commission will consider it for what it is worth.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution's Exhibit No. 5, which I shall now read is offered as to Specification 2.

The testimony of Harold Eugene Thomas, BM, 2/C, was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 5.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 6, original affidavit of Alvin Eugene Delong.

DEFENSE: Object to the second question from the bottom of the page: "Of your own knowledge, just how did Kondo contribute to the causes of the death of Hess?"

The objection to the answer is the same; it is in response to a leading question, and ask that it be stricken from the affidavit and not received into evidence.

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

DEFENSE: The third question on the second page, is it:

Q. Do you consider Kondo responsible for the death of Hess?

On the ground that it is a conclusion, calling for a conclusion of the witness not only as to fact but as to a legal conclusion. The responsibility is a question of law and that's what this Commission sits at this time to determine, whether or not this accused was responsible for the deaths of these men or not, the acts he is alleged to have committed contributed to their death and this Commission should not receive before it the conclusions or the opinions of unqualified witnesses as to matters to which an expert witness should take the stand and testify.

PRESIDENT: Objection to the question is overruled and the Commission will consider the question and answer for what it is worth.

DEFENSE: Allright, sir, I object to the last answer on the ground that we are not charged with the death of Knutson -- whoever Knutson is.

PROSECUTION: It's crossed out.

DEFENSE: It is not crossed out on my copy.

I will withdraw it, sir; it wasn't marked down on my copy. Evidently, it is marked out on the other copies.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution's Exhibit No. 6 is offered as to Specification No. 2.

The testimony of Alvin Eugene Delong was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 6.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 7, the original affidavit of Dr. David Hoehmann.

DEFENSE: No objection to any portion of that affidavit, sir.

PROSECUTION: The affidavit is being offered as to Specification No. 3.

The testimony of Dr. David Hoehmann was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 7.

PROSECUTION: At this time, Mr. Black will continue the reading of the affidavits. I would like to state to the court no documentary evidence will be offered as to Specifications 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, that that will all be by oral testimony of live witnesses. In addition, there will be oral testimony by live witnesses as to Specifications 1, 2 and 3.

PRESIDENT: The court will now take a ten minute recess.

The Commission then took a recess until 0950 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PROSECUTION: With the permission of the Commission, the prosecution will continue.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution will offer in evidence what purports to be an official document issued out of the Commander Third Fleet Liberation Form Able, made by one Knudsen Aage Harreby. His last name is Knudsen.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I am going to object to the introduction of this statement in evidence on the grounds that it is not signed. We don't know by whom it was written. I realise it was written on a Liberation Form Able, but there is no way of knowing who wrote it.

Under the rules of admission of evidence before this Commission, affidavits, depositions or other signed statements, any diary, letter or other document, including sworn or unsworn statements, appearing to the commission to contain information relating to the charge are admissible.

Now, this is an unsigned statement and nowhere in the rules under which this commission operates does it appear that an unsigned statement can be received in evidence.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, this appears to be an official document, issued out of the Commander, Third Fleet, and apparently in the regular course of events.

DEFENSE: Sir, this is not a document issued by the Commander, Third Fleet Liberation Form Able; this is a statement written by someone -- person unknown -- on a form supplied by the Commander, Third Fleet and there are some initials on it, but not the initials of the person supposed to make the statement. We don't know who wrote it. Certainly, this Commission can't allow itself to speculate on who wrote it and assume that it was written by whom it was purported to be written by.

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, reading paragraph (a) on page 5 of Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals:

"Any document irrespective of its classification which appears to the commission to have been signed or issued by any officer, department, agency or member of the armed forces of any government without proof of the signature or of the issuance of the document" may be admitted into evidence.

DEFENSE: Sir, this is not a document that is issued by the Third Fleet. This is merely a statement by someone written on a form furnished by Third Fleet. It's not an official document. It certainly doesn't come under the subdivision (d), "Any diary, letter or other document, including sworn or unsworn statements, appearing to the commission to contain information relating to the charge" as a diary or a letter or other document has to be identified as to who wrote it. There is no identification here.

If this can come in evidence before this Commission, I submit that I can walk along the street and pick up anything that may have been written on a form, Eighth Army, and submit it as evidence before this Commission on this or any other charge brought before the Commission.

PROSECUTION: May I add before this Commission -- this may be anticipatory -- but there will be testimony by live witnesses regarding this matter contained in this instrument.

DEFENSE: That doesn't affect the instrument at all one way or another. If he has live witnesses, let the live witnesses testify. That will be the best evidence of what he saw happen, but here, you have a statement by a person unknown and it should not be received in evidence.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled and the Commission will consider this document for what it is worth.

PROSECUTION: That is Prosecution's Exhibit No. 8, offered in support of Specification 9.

The statement of Knudsen Aage Havreby was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 8.

DEFENSE: I ask the prosecution at this time as to whether or not they offer this statement as the unsigned statement of Knudsen Aage Havreby?

PROSECUTION: This statement is offered as a report prepared by someone under the Commander Third Fleet from the statement made to them or to the person --

PRESIDENT: This is the same one that we have just ruled on?

DEFENSE: I am just asking whether they offer this as a statement of Knudsen.

PRESIDENT: It has been admitted.

DEFENSE: I understand that it is in evidence, sir. I am not objecting to it, sir, but I am asking them to state for the record --

PRESIDENT: Have you the original copy of this?

(Prosecution hands paper to the Commission)

PRESIDENT: The Commission would like to inquire of the prosecution as to what connection there is between "C-o-n-d-o-r" and the accused, "K-o-n-d-o".

PROSECUTION: This is apparently a misspelling, or at best, an attempt to write the name phonetically. The accused's name is Kondo.

PRESIDENT: Is prosecution going to submit evidence to prepare for this misnomer?

PROSECUTION: The prosecution will not submit any evidence to explain the difference in the spelling, but the prosecution will be ready to show that the only man this refers to is the accused.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution offers in evidence a certified copy of an affidavit by David Hoehmann; the original of this affidavit was in the possession of the prosecution but has been misplaced or has become lost. I believe the defense is aware of the situation.

DEFENSE: This is certified as being the true copy by Alfred B. Edgar, Jr., Second Lieutenant, Investigating Officer, War Crimes Investigating Detachment, and we have no objection to the introduction of this certified copy.

PRESIDENT: To what specification?

PROSECUTION: Specification 10, Prosecution's Exhibit 9.

DEFENSE: I have this one objection to this affidavit - a portion of it. On the second page, the second answer from the bottom, the second paragraph:

"The Japanese will deny these facts and produce books and records to show what patients were treated and medicine was given, but I saw them make many entries that were false statements and are far from showing a true record."

I object to it on the grounds that it is hearsay. This man is attempting to testify in rebuttal as to what we may or may not offer in defense of this accused. It's highly prejudicial to the accused; this man has no knowledge of what we might attempt to offer in defense and here he attempts in anticipation thereof to tell us that any records we might offer are falsified. It is hearsay. He has no knowledge of the Japanese language and he hasn't indicated that he has knowledge of such and he attempts to tell us in this affidavit that they will make false entries in Japanese.

I ask that the court strike the affidavit and disregard it on these grounds.

PROSECUTION: Sir, the affiant is an American medical officer, was at this camp and was in an excellent position to know and to express an opinion.

DEFENSE: Sir, he is expressing an opinion as to what may have been done with certain books. We don't know what books he is talking about and the Commission doesn't. Would the Commission like to assume that any document we might bring in here is falsified because this man says that they made false entries? He doesn't speak of this accused. We don't know of whom he is talking. He doesn't have the right to testify to that extent. If we offered something, he could come forth in rebuttal and say, "I saw entries being made and those aren't the entries. That's a different proposition." But he doesn't know what we might bring before this court and yet, he attempts to tell us and tell this Commission that they will deny these facts and they will produce books and records to show that all these entries are false.

PRESIDENT: The objection is based on the grounds --

DEFENSE: On the grounds, sir, that it's a conclusion in the first place -- no showing by the witness that he understands Japanese or that he would know what records were made.

PRESIDENT: Strike out that paragraph.

DEFENSE: Of that answer starting with "The Japanese will deny these facts" and ending with the word "record".

PRESIDENT: The objection is sustained.

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, there is evidence in that very statement which says, "but I saw them make many entries that were false statements."

PRESIDENT: The objection is sustained.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution will offer in evidence affidavit by Frank R. Allen, in support of Specification 10, Prosecution's Exhibit 10.

DEFENSE: Sir, I object to the second answer from the bottom.

PROSECUTION: It's stricken.

The defense has asked the prosecution to read the portion stricken and the prosecution will read that into the record.

PRESIDENT: No objections.

The statement of Frank Niles Allen, Private First Class, US Marine Corps, was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 10.

PROSECUTION: With the permission of the Commission, Mr. Hand of the prosecution had the original affidavit, which was lost or misplaced and a mimeographed copy which is certified is offered in evidence in the place of the original.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I have no objection.

PRESIDENT: To what specification does this refer to?

PROSECUTION: That's Specification 10, sir.

Prosecution offers in evidence as its Exhibit No. 12, affidavit of John Harold Zimmer.

PRESIDENT: To what specification is that?

PROSECUTION: Specification 10, sir.

DEFENSE: I object to the answer in response to the last question on the first page on the grounds that the question is leading.

The question is:

"Q. State what you know of your own knowledge concerning the beating of George Langer, while he was in the hospital suffering from diarrhea, by Kenichi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly, at Camp No. 1, Omiya, Japan."

It is a leading question assuming facts and an answer in response to a leading question is not competent and should not be received into evidence.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution has no comment to make, sir, except that the Commission may admit it and evaluate it for whatever it may deem fit.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled, and the Commission will consider it for what it is worth.

DEFENSE: Sir, I object to the answer to the second question on that page -- first question on page 2: "Who was responsible for this incident?" as calling for a legal conclusion on the part of the affiant, usurping the province of this Commission which sits now to determine who was responsible for these incidents.

This man is qualified to tell you -- to testify what the accused said and as to what he saw and nothing further than that.

I submit to you that this rule as to the admission of hearsay evidence is merely the admission of affidavits. They in themselves are hearsay. And on top of that, there is hearsay in the affidavit -- conclusions and everything else to which the witness is not competent to testify, and it denies this accused every right. The mere fact that he has counsel, he has interpreters doesn't mean a thing.

The witness can testify as to what he thinks, what the other thought, what somebody five miles away thought -- it is all incompetent evidence before the Commission and the Commission weighs it.

I submit there is no weight attached to it, and it should not be received because it's prejudicial; merely the presence of it in the record is prejudicial.

PRESIDENT: The objection is not sustained.

The affidavit of John Harold Zimmer was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 12.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as its Exhibit No. 13 affidavit of John Harold Zimmer, in support of Specification 10.

DEFENSE: I am going to object to the entire affidavit on the ground the whole thing is hearsay. He goes ahead and describes an incident alleged to have occurred sometime in January, 1945; he describes everything that happened and then admits that the victims themselves told "me about the incidents mentioned above. I saw them sitting cross-legged in the guardhouse, and was told by them later, that they had been in this position for about fourteen or fifteen hours."

Now the man has no personal knowledge of what went on. He claims to have heard this from the victims, but I object to it on the grounds that it was hearsay.

PROSECUTION: Hearsay is admissible before this Commission.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

The affidavit of John Harold Zimmer was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 13.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as its Exhibit 14, affidavit of Lonnie C. Merritt, W/O, in support of Specification 10.

DEFENSE: I have no objection to any portion of this affidavit; I do want certain portions already stricken to be marked out-read in evidence.

The affidavit of Lonnie C. Merritt, W/O, was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 14.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in evidence as its Exhibit 15, affidavit of La Moyne C. Bleich, Major, in support of Specification 11.

DEFENSE: No objection to any portion of this affidavit, sir.

The affidavit of La Moyne C. Bleich, Major, was then received in evidence, was read and marked Prosecution's Exhibit 15.

PROSECUTION: And this, if it please the Commission, concludes the reading of affidavits and statements for the prosecution in support of the specifications.

Prosecution calls as its first witness, Chief Boatswain Mate Phillip E. Sanders.

CHIEF BOATSWAIN MATE PHILLIP E. SANDERS, U. S. Navy, attached to the IPS Section, Tokyo, a witness for the prosecution, was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q State your name, grade, organization and station.
A Phillip Earl Sanders, Chief Boatswain Mate, U. S. Navy, now attached to the IPS Section, Tokyo.

Q Were you ever stationed in the Osaka Main Camp?

A From October 20, 1942 until June 1st, 1945.

Q What was your status at that camp?
A Prisoner and Camp Commander.

Q Were you a prisoner of war?
A I was.

Q For what period of time were you Camp Commander at the Headquarters Main Camp?

DEFENSE: Excuse me, may I have the official court interpreter interpret for the accused?

PROSECUTION: No objection by the prosecution.

Q For how long a period of time were you the Camp Commander at the Headquarters, Prisoner of War Camp in Osaka?
A From the time it opened, October 20, until we were bombed out, June 1st, 1945.

Q Do you know the accused, Kaniehi Kondo?
A I do.

Q Is he present in the court?
A Yes, here (indicating).

PROSECUTION: May the record show that he pointed to the accused.

Q For how long a period of time were you familiar with the activities of Kanichi Konde at the Headquarters Camp?
A From the early part of 1943 until June, 1945.

Q What were Kanichi Konde's duties at that camp?
A He was a medical orderly in charge of the sick bay. His duties were to examine the sick bay patients in the morning, to keep the sick book, admit patients to the dispensary -- a little hospital that we had -- send seriously ill patients to Ikebiejo Hospital.

Q What were your specific duties as Camp Commander at the Headquarters Camp?
A I was responsible for the morale of the camp, the upkeep, the sanitation, charge of all outside working parties and general overall charge of the camp.

Q Will you explain to the Commission the medical set-up at the Headquarters Camp insofar as American medical personnel were concerned?
A We had an Army captain by the name of Paul Roland who was a surgeon, and his duties were to take care of any outside accidents and any emergency cases in the area. We had an Army first lieutenant by the name of David Hochmann who was in charge of the medications, bed patients and dispensary, to see that the proper medicines were issued out. We had a Chief Pharmacist Mate by the name of Merritt who was his assistant and a British naval medical steward by the name of Hodson who was assistant to Dr. Hochmann.

Q Was there also a medical steward named "Ginger"?
A Ginger Hodson.

DEFENSE: What's that please?

A His name was Ginger Hodson.

DEFENSE: "Ginger" and "Hodson" are the same person?

A The same person.

Q "Ginger" was his nick-name?
A That's correct.

Q What American doctor was in charge of the dispensary for sick POW's?
A Dr. David Hochmann, First Lieutenant, US Army.

Q Now, will you explain to this Commission the Japanese medical set-up at the Osaka Main Camp?
A There was a Japanese Army officer by the name of Lt. Nosu who was the senior medical officer and he had the over-all duty of all the camps in the area. He was assisted by Lt. Higashino, Lt. Haruo, an officer cadet, Komata and the man he had in charge of the dispensary for the treatment of the prisoners was Kanda.

Q How often did Dr. Koma attend sick call for POW's?
A In the beginning, he used to come over once every three weeks for a period of about six months, and he stopped coming over except in the case of emergency.

Q How often did the other Japanese doctors come to sick call for American POW's?
A About once every three weeks or more.

Q Who had the actual operation of the dispensary, so far as Japanese medical personnel was concerned?
A Kanda, Superior Private.

Q Was he in complete authority of that dispensary, so far as you know?

DEFENSE: I object to this question and answer on the ground that it calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness. The witness is not competent to testify to conclusions.

PROSECUTION: He is not testifying to a conclusion. May I reframe that question. The defense cannot object because he has not testified. I asked him if he knew who was in complete authority of the dispensary. We don't know what his answer is so we don't see how you have any objections.

DEFENSE: If the answer to this question is "yes" or "no", I have no objection to it, but I can see what is coming next and that's why I am objecting to it now.

It is calling for a conclusion on the part of this witness as to who is in authority of the dispensary -- something he is not competent to testify to.

PROSECUTION: There is no question that he is competent to testify. Here is the Camp Commander of the camp. Who is better to testify than he?

PRESIDENT: Objection is not sustained.

Q Will you answer that question, please?
A I do.

Q Who was that?
A Kanda.

Q What time was sick call each morning?
A Sick call was supposed to be between 6:30 and 7:00 o'clock in the morning.

Q Will you explain to this Commission briefly how sick call operated at the Headquarters Camp.

A All the prisoners had to line up outside of the dispensary and there was a little stoop inside of the dispensary. On this stoop would stand Dr. Hochmann, Chief Pharmacist Hayashi and Singer and Kondo. Sometimes, there would be another soldier there who would be awaiting instructions from other camps to determine how sick call would be held. The patient would come up, state his illness; Dr. Hochmann would examine him and give his diagnosis of the case and Kondo would examine him and he would determine whether he was ill enough to stay in camp or go to work. And if there is any medication to be given, Kondo would authorize it to be given to him.

Q Have you attended sick call at the Headquarters Camp very often?

A A number of times.

Q Approximately how many times would you say you had attended sick call at this camp?

A Oh, between seventy-five and one-hundred different times.

Q Would that be during the entire time that you were stationed at that camp as Camp Commander?

A It was.

Q Have you ever seen Kondo overrule any of Dr. Hochmann's decisions?

A Yes, I have.

Q Under what general circumstances would that be?

A Well, if there was no visible signs of illness on the man, why, Kondo would overrule them diagnoses and send him to work.

Q Of your own knowledge, did everydecision that Dr. Hochmann would make have to be approved by Kondo?

A It did.

Q Do you know how much medical instruction Kondo has?

A Well, from general information of the camp, we understood he had about two months' experience in a Japanese military hospital.

Q Have you ever seen him overrule any of Dr. Hochmann's diagnoses of sick POW's?

A Yes, I have.

Q Will you tell this Commission instances that you personally know of concerning lack of Kondo's knowledge of medical information?

DEFENSE: I object to this question on the grounds it's leading.

PROSECUTION: Nothing leading about it. I haven't told him what to say.

DEFENSE: You told him what you expected. You told him about what to testify, in respect to what to testify to.

PROSECUTION: I haven't told him what the specific acts are. If he knows or if he doesn't know, he can so state.

DEFENSE: This is the only time that we can protect the rights of the accused and I call upon the Commission to direct this examination along legal lines -- the way it should be directed. Let the witness testify to what he saw, what he heard the accused say.

I think it's highly prejudicial to allow the witness to be led, to drag this stuff out. If he knows a certain instance, he should say what those instances are.

PRESIDENT: Will you repeat the question.

(The reporter then repeated the question)

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

A Well, one case in particular, we had a British Master of an oil tanker who was a prisoner in our camp, who had been very ill for a long time and our doctor diagnosed his case as ulcers of the stomach. The man was unable to eat and week by week, he was gradually getting worse. He was losing weight, losing his strength. So, when he went to sick call, our doctor diagnosed his case as ulcers of the stomach because there was no visible signs of any illness. Kondo overruled his objections and sent the man out to work. Later on, as time went by, he became worse where he was unable to move about the camp. So, he was sent to Ichiaka and several months later, he died with ulcers of the stomach. A man would come up -- he would have a fever from malaria, or illness -- a slight cold, and because of the fact that Kondo would put his hand on the forehead like that (indicating) and if his forehead wasn't hot enough to determine he had a fever, he would say, "Out to work". A number of times, this would happen: If there was no visible means of illness, say a man had a bad case of diarrhea and was suffering on the borderline of diarrhea and dysentery, to find out whether or not he had one or the other, Kondo would request --

DEFENSE: If the court please, if the witness is assuming facts, I object to his testimony. If he is talking of specific instances, I have no objections. He was asked to relate specific instances.

PROSECUTION: He is so relating. I don't see any reason for counsel jumping up in the middle of his testimony. He is telling things of his own knowledge.

DEFENSE: Will you read back a portion of the answer, please?

(The reporter then read back the answer)

PROSECUTION: Counsel will have an opportunity to cross-examine this witness.

DEFENSE: That's no answer to my objection, Mr. Rand. This is a court of law.

PRESIDENT: The witness will proceed and will confine his answers to what he knows of his own knowledge.

A This story that I tell you I had specific knowledge, because I was at the camp. I was the Camp Commander and I knew what was going on in this camp. When a man came up and complained about having diarrhea or dysentery, if he had no blood in his stool, they couldn't diagnose the case as diarrhea or dysentery, the man went to work.

Q Could a prisoner of war who came to the dispensary claiming he was sick, could that prisoner of war stay in camp if he had no visible sign of illness?

DEFENSE: I object to the question on the grounds it's leading.

The proper question is: What happened when a man came to sick call. That's all. What did he see.

PROSECUTION: I again remind the Commission that this is the Camp Commander who was the one who is in a position to know what went on and can answer from his own knowledge as to the facts. He has testified he has attended sick call about seventy-five times. He should be in a position to know.

DEFENSE: I still insist. I don't care if he was a Camp Commander or what he was. He is a witness in a court of law and he testifies as to what he saw and as to what the accused said, and he can testify as to nothing else. The mere fact that he is a prisoner of war Camp Commander doesn't change the status.

PRESIDENT: Repeat the question.

(The reporter then repeated the question)

A A number of times he has allowed them to remain.

PRESIDENT: I think the prosecution should reword that question to bring a specific case within his knowledge.

Q Have you ever seen Kenpo at the POW dispensary refuse to allow a prisoner of war who claimed he was sick stay in camp because he had no visible signs of illness?

DEFENSE: I object to the question, on the same grounds; it's still a leading question.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled.

Q Will you answer that question?
A Sometimes, when the sick list was very low, when there wouldn't be a number of men on the sick list, he would listen to Dr. Hochmuth's diagnosis and permit a man to stay in camp, but those occasions were very rarely.

Q At sick call each morning, what were the usual complaints?
A Diarrhea, heavy chest colds, malnutrition, borderlines of pellagra and beriberi and general weakness.

Q Who decided each case himself?
A Kondo was the final decision.

Q Have you ever seen Kenichi Kondo strike any American prisoner of war at sick call?
A I have.

Q On what occasions?
A We had a man in our camp by the name of Dougherty. He was the First --

Q Just tell me general specific instances.
A I saw him strike a First Engineer by the name of Dougherty.

PROSECUTION: This is off the record --

DEFENSE: Nothing is off the record, as far as I am concerned, with respect to this man's testimony. Now asked the man a question and he attempted to answer it.

PROSECUTION: Just a minute, Mr. Weil. I am trying to make this specification coherent.

PRESIDENT: Let the witness answer the question in his own words.

A I saw him strike a number of prisoners in our camp at sick call. He struck a First Engineer on an American oil tanker because he was late coming to sick call. Some men he would consider they were faking; he would strike them. He beat a young British prisoner of war in our camp because he stayed in camp with permission of the duty officer, because he didn't come to sick call. He struck a Chief Officer in an American oil tanker who was injured because he wouldn't stand up at attention to him. He struck him and beat him about the face. I have seen a number of these personally; saw them with my own eyes and I know them to be true, outside of the numerous other complaints I received from the medical officer who was in charge of the sick call.

Q Did you ever have any conversations with Kenichi Kondo about his treatment of prisoners of war?
A I did.

Q What were these conversations?
A About him striking the prisoners of war at sick call in the morning, his harsh treatment and failing to comply with the wishes and failing to assist our doctors and medical staff we had in camp.

Q What did you say to him specifically?
A I told him he was violating all the treaties of International Law; his treatment of the prisoners was brutal and unealled for and he did not have sufficient knowledge to be a medical orderly and he should pay more attention to our medical staff we had who were competent to handle the sick people in our camp.

Q And what was his answer to that?
A One time, we had an official conference with an interpreter -- the medical officer of the camp and myself in my office. We finished over the general question and he promised me that in the future, he would work with us; he would not beat any more prisoners.

DEFENSE: Just a moment, please. I object to this answer. It's not in response to the question. He testified that he made a certain statement to Kondo and you asked for Kondo's answer. This is something entirely different.

PROSECUTION: This is not something entirely different. This is a meeting at which Kondo was present and Kondo was speaking to him.

DEFENSE: I want to know if that at that meeting, he told Kondo what he testified to a few moments ago, about violating treaties. I have no objection.

PRESIDENT: Confine yourself to the question, continue.

Q Who was present at this meeting that you speak of?
A Mr. Iisha, Camp Interpreter, Dr. Hochuen, myself and Kondo.

Q And where did that meeting take place?
A In my office.

Q Approximately when?
A This was about in August, 1944.

Q What initiated that meeting?
A After a particularly vicious incident of a beating of a young British prisoner of war, an accumulation of other events that happened.

Q And what was discussed at that meeting?
A His treatment of the prisoners of war at sick call, his brutality, forcing the men to go to work and our doctor was not in a position at that time -- his word wasn't accepted as to whether a man was sick or not and it reached such a stage, we had to do something about it. We had to call a conference to see if we could iron out the difficulties and I got the staff together and we had this conference to see if we couldn't do something about it, before we carried the matter to the colonel, who was a very difficult person to see.

Q At that time, did Dr. Hochman at the meeting make any statement to you about Kondo, or to Kondo directly?

A He made the statements in my presence that he felt as though he should not ever come to sick call any more because his decisions were overruled.

DEFENSE: I object to his statements as hearsay -- as to what somebody else said.

PROSECUTION: I am going to request this Commission to permit all hearsay evidence that this witness may offer on the following grounds: That as this Commission permits hearsay evidence in affidavits, sometimes more than once removed, it should also permit hearsay evidence where it has to be presented by this witness. The prosecution realizes the danger of hearsay evidence and will attempt as much as possible to prevent such testimony.

However, the Commission must realize that as Camp Commander, Chief Boatsman Mate Sanders could not be physically present all over camp and perhaps himself witness all of the incidents that took place. However, he was in a position as Camp Commander to get official knowledge of everything that took place within that camp and he was a person who was in the best position to know what was going on.

Therefore, if in fact a doctor complained to him about Kondo's treatment, I think he should be permitted to testify because he was the Camp Commander. He would be the one to whom all complaints of any nature whatsoever would be brought and I believe the Commission should make the ruling at this time because there will be additional information which will be solicited from this witness which will be based on hearsay -- incidents told to him by victims which we will present to this court.

PRESIDENT: The objection is not sustained.

DEFENSE: Is that the ruling of this Commission, that this man can testify as to anything beyond his personal knowledge?

PRESIDENT: The objection is not sustained. The Commission will not explain its decision.

DEFENSE: The prosecution has asked for a ruling.

PRESIDENT: Confine your questions to bring in evidence so far as possible to exactly what he knows of his own knowledge.

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir, but I will have to rely on hearsay information where he did not see a beating but it was told to him by a victim.

The prosecution contends that that should be admissible because as Camp Commander, he would be in a position to know all official complaints or anything that took place within the camp.

But I will try to avoid as far as possible, any hearsay information.

PRESIDENT: The prosecution will proceed.

A He did.

Q What were those statements?
A Those statements were to the effect that he felt as though he had become useless in the camp; that he did not see why he should attend sick call any more because his decisions and the diagnoses were completely overruled and he saw no reason why he should go down there and be humiliated and pushed around because he had no business being there any more, because his decisions were overruled, and he accused Kondo of considering him incompetent.

Q After you and Dr. Hochman stated your complaints, what did Kondo say at that meeting?
A He said in the future that he would agree to work with us and pay more attention to the doctor and that he would not strike any more prisoners of war.

Q Had you stated to Kondo anything about striking of sick prisoners of war?
A I did. I told him that he was wrong in doing that.

Q Did Kondo state anything to you with respect to that?
A He said he knew he had done wrong and he said in the future, he wouldn't strike any more prisoners.

Q Did he state he would abide by Dr. Hochman's decisions?
A He did.

Q Did he state anything else that you remember?
A No.

Q Did he in fact abide by the statements he made at that meeting, subsequently?
A No, he did not.

Q How?
A About two weeks later, why, he caught a man sleeping outside of the room and he kicked him about the shins and beat him about the head and the body because he was sleeping outside without a blanket on his stomach.

Q Did he continue to overrule, of your own knowledge, Dr. Hochman's diagnoses and recommendations with respect to sick prisoners of war?

A Within a month or so after that, he was back doing the same thing that he had done before the conference we had.

Q Did he still continue to hit prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q Did he still continue to order sick prisoners of war to go to work?
A He did.

Q Did you, as Camp Commander, ever make any official report on Kendo's treatment of sick prisoners of war to higher authorities?
A I did on a number of occasions.

Q When was the first occasion?
A Well, during the course of a day's work, I made a number of verbal complaints to Lt. Matsumura who was Camp Commander.

Q When?
A Oh, at least about once a month during the period from 1944.

Q And what did you say to him specifically?
A I told him that Kendo was causing a lot of trouble in camp by beating the prisoners and due to the fact that our camp was in good health, we could afford to leave them stay in and rest up while they were ill, and all over the camp he was causing a lot of trouble by his attitude at sick call.

Q Did you ever make any official writings out to any of the camp authorities regarding Kendo's treatment of sick POW's?
A I did.

Q Did you make more than one report?
A I did. I made a number of written reports.

Q When was the first written report that you made?
A I don't exactly remember the first one, but I know I made an official letter of protest to Lt. Nosu who was the senior medical officer about his treatment of British prisoner of war by the name of Hoarsley.

Q Did anything ever come of that complaint?
A Nothing.

Q Did you ever make any other official complaint?
A I made a written protest about his treatment of Dougherty, an American civilian prisoner of war.

Q To whom did you make that?
A To Lt. Nosu.

Q When?
A It was shortly after hereceived a severe beating at sick call.

Q Did anything ever come of that?
A Nothing.

Q Did you ever make any written reports to Lt. Matsumura, the Camp Commander?
A I sent several written reports to him, but mostly, my reports and complaints were verbal.

Q And what specifically were those complaints?
A About his treatment of the prisoners of war at sick call.

Q Which was what?
A Forcing some of the sick men to go out to work when they should have remained in camp on rest days.

Q Did anything ever come of your complaints to Lt. Matsumura, the Camp Commander?
A Nothing.

Q Did you ever have conversations with Kenichi Kondo other than at that meeting you have mentioned, in which you spoke to him about his treatment of sick POW's?
A I did.

Q About how many times would you say?
A Oh, at least a dozen times.

Q What was his answer to you when you made your complaints?
A Sometimes, he wouldn't even answer me. He would [illegible] off and leave me standing there. At other times, he would listen to my complaints and he would mutter something in his own language and leave me there. I never would get any satisfaction out of him.

Q After your complaints on these occasions, when you spoke to Kondo, did he ever reform in his treatment of POW's?
A Well, he did for a bout two weeks after the incident we had on July 4, when he beat a number of men in one room for calling him "beka".

Q Now, referring to Specification 1 in which Kenichi Kondo is charged with contributing to the death of Petty Officer First Class David W. Smith, did you know such a prisoner of war?
A I did.

Q And he been sick?
A He had been sick.

Q Of what?
A He had been sick of malnutrition for a long time and he contracted a bad cold which developed into pneumonia.

Q About when was this?
A This was in the spring of 19 -- I mean in the winter of about 1943 -- it was '44.

Q Had Smith been going to sick call?
A He had been to sick call a number of times.

Q For approximately how long before he died?
A At least a month before he died.

Q Had he been given medication, do you know?
A At that time, we had very little medications in the camp to be given. What they had they wouldn't give it to the prisoners. We were treating them with our own medicines.

Q What was Smith being treated for?
A For influenza and a heavy cold.

Q Do you know whether Smith was ever denied any medical attention by Kondo?
A Except on Dr. Hochmann's report to me.

Q What was his report to you?
A He said that Kondo had sent him out to work when he was ill.

Q What else did he say?
A He said that he was given no medications.

Q And when was this?
A This is shortly before he was admitted to the camp hospital.

Q Did you ever have any conversations with Kaniehi Kondo about David W. Smith?
A I did not.

Q Do you know anything else about the death of David W. Smith, other than what you have told us?
A Nothing.

Q With respect to Specification No. 2, in which the prosecution alleges that Kondo contributed to the death of Petty Officer First Class Robert W. Hess, did you know a prisoner of war named Hess?
A I did.

Q Had Hess been sick while you were at the camp?
A Yes, he was a very sick man, at the time he came to our camp.

Q Are you very familiar with the circumstances concerning Hess' sickness?
A I am.

Q Will you tell the Commission just what was the matter with Hess?
A Hess came to our camp suffering from malnutrition and dysentery. While he was in our camp, he steadily became worse and he developed yellow jaundice, and he had [illegible] all over his body and he was a very sick man. So, he was sent to the Itchioka Hospital where he stayed for several months. He was returned to our camp in very poor condition. He was a very weak man, but he was sent out to work and he worked for a number of months, but his condition steadily became worse and he had been going to sick call but all he would receive would be a few powders of crushed charcoal and B-1 powders. The man was very ill from malnutrition and dysentery. It became so bad that he was finally admitted to the sick bay and he was very yellow from jaundice and about on a Friday, he started to turn blue, and all day Saturday, he steadily became worse. So, Sunday morning, we notified Kondo that the man was about to die. So, he give him orders to prepare a litter party to carry him to the hospital. We prepared a litter party and put a man on the litter. Outside the camp, the man died -- about 100 yards outside of the camp.

Q How long had Hess been coming to the dispensary for medication?
A Off and on about nine months.

Q When did he start getting really bad prior to his death?
A I would say about a month before his death.

Q During that month, had he been coming to the sick call?
A Yes, he did. He came to sick call practically every morning.

Q Who was treating him there?
A Kondo was and Dr. Hochman.

Q Were they giving him any medication?
A Nothing outside what we received from the Japanese - this crushed charcoal which they used for diarrhea and dysentery and some B-1 powders.

Q Did Dr. Hochman make any recommendations regarding treatment of Hess?
A He did.

Q And what did he say?
A That he was overruled.

Q What did Dr. Hochman recommend?
A Dr. Hochman recommended that that man stay in camp because he was badly in need of a long period of rest.

Q To whom did he make that recommendation?
A He told Kondo that.

Q And what did Kondo say?
A Kondo told him to go to work on the sick-man work detail.

Q Was Hess ever allowed to stay in camp when Dr. Hochman recommended it?
A Sometimes, Dr. Hochman was able to convince him that he be allowed to remain in camp and he would stay in camp two or three days and he would be forced out to work again.

Q Did he work a majority of the times when Dr. Hoshman recommended to Kondo that he not work?
A He did.

Q Did Mr. Ass ever tell you that Kondo had made him work?
A Yes, he did.

DEFENSE: Just a minute. I object to this question on the grounds it's leading.

Mr. Kind might as well take the stand and testify as to that question.

PROSECUTION: I don't get the analogy myself.

PRESIDENT: You object to that on what grounds?

DEFENSE: It's leading, improper question.

PRESIDENT: Record the question.

Q During the month immediately preceding Ass' death, did you ever have any conversations with Him about his attendance at sick call?
A I did.

Q And what were these conversations about?
A Well, he told me that he had been going over to sick call and he said the shovel wasn't doing him any good and you couldn't convince that stupid Jap over there that he was sick and he was sent out to work and he said, "There is no use going to sick call any more. You don't get any attention. You are only forced out to work." He was a man that never complained very much.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will take a ten-minute recess.

The court then took a recess until 1045 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecutiment and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PROSECUTION: I wish to remind the witness that he is still under oath.

Q Did you have more than one conversation with Mr. Ass regarding his treatment by Kondo?
A Only several times.

Q And were they all to the same effect, as you have just testified?
A All to the same effect.

Q Did you ever have any conversations with Dr. Hoshmann about Kondo's treatment of Mr. Ass?
A I did.

Q At what times?
A It was after his death, Dr. Koehnen was ever my office and we were talking about the general health of the camp and he said it was a damn shame that Hess had to die, because if he had remained in camp several months resting, we would have been able to give some medicine to him; he would be still alive.

Q Did he say that to you?
A He did.

Q How soon after Hess' death did he say that?
A That was about ten days after his death.

Q Did he tell you at any time that Kenichi Kondo had made Hess go to work while he was sick?

DEFENSE: I object to this on the grounds that it's leading.

PROSECUTION: I will reframe the question.

Q Did Dr. Koehnen ever tell you any specific instances of any mistreatment of Hess by Kondo.

DEFENSE: Same objection, sir.

PROSECUTION: I don't see anything leading about that, sir. I haven't mentioned any instances.

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

Q Will you answer the question, please?
A Yes. He never mentioned to me any specific instance, except every morning at 9:00 o'clock, the doctor made a report to me about the health of the camp and the men who went to work and the men who should have stayed in the camp. One morning, he told me that Hess had been sent out to work and he was out in the line-up. We had to line all the men up out in front of the camp in the road and he told me that Hess had been sent out to work. I pulled him out of the line and put him in a party where he could go out and lie down during the day and be what you call a "suiji toban" -- that was a man who made tea for the people who were working out at the factories and he would be able to lie down all day while he was there.

Q Did Dr. Koehnen ever tell you what Hess died of?
A He said he died from malnutrition and complications from beriberi.

Q Did Dr. Koehnen ever tell you whether anyone was responsible for his death?
A He said he was --

DEFENSE: Objection, please, a leading question. I object to it on the grounds also that what Dr. Koehnen told him is hearsay. Dr. Koehnen's affidavits are before this Commission.

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A He did.

Q Who did he say that was?
A He said, "Well, there is another good man that died all on account of Kondo forcing him out to work."

Q Did he elaborate any further on that answer?
A He said the man would have been alive if he had been allowed to remain in camp for a longer period of rest.

Q Were there any further discussions about this particular case of Hess, and if so, what in detail were they?
A There was no other discussion at that time that I can remember of.

Q Did you know an Italian named Serafin?
A Anthony Serafin, I did.

Q Will you tell this Commission something of his background?
A He was an Italian National, serving in the British Merchant Marine Service and while England was at war with Italy, he was interned for a short period in England; because of his long and faithful service with the Cunard Line, he was given a civilian Merchant Marine license ticket by the British Admiralty and allowed to go to sea at his own request on British merchant ships. He was captured in the South Atlantic by a German raider after his ship was sunk and brought here to Japan and made a prisoner of war.

DEFENSE: Object to that on the grounds it's a conclusion on the part of the witness. It's a legal conclusion as to who is a prisoner of war -- a matter of law. This witness is not qualified to testify as to who was a prisoner of war.

PROSECUTION: Who is better qualified to testify than a Camp Commander as to what the status of an individual was, by overt acts.

DEFENSE: It doesn't alter the fact, also, that the definition of a prisoner of war is a thing that is outlined in the Technical Manual.

PRESIDENT: You say he was treated as a prisoner of war?

A He was designated as a prisoner of war by the Imperial Japanese Army.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Q When did Serafin first come to the Headquarters Camp?
A In November, 1942.

Q And will you tell the Commission what you knew about his physical make-up?

A He was a very small man. He was about 5'4", weighed about 130 pounds. He had been a waiter and had been engaged in hotel work, working in the mess hall and taking care of rooms in the capacity of a steward on board passenger liners. He wasn't very strong. He was an elderly man about 54-55 years old.

Q When Serafin first came to the camp, what did he do? What job did he do?

A Because of his age and size, he was made an officers' orderly, amongst the Allied officers we had in the camp.

Q What was his status in the camp at that time?

A What do you mean by that, sir? He was listed as the officers' orderly.

Q Was he a prisoner of war?

A He was a prisoner of war.

DEFENSE: Same objection is made. I will take the same ruling.

Q Did his status change from a prisoner of war at any time -- from that time until his death?

A No.

Q Was he always treated as a prisoner of war?

A He was treated as a prisoner of war.

Q And for how long a period of time did he act as officers' orderly?

A For about a little over a year and then I transferred a number of our officers to Zentsuji. We had two other elderly men acting as officers' orderlies and he was to be sent out to work. So, I took him in my room to act as my orderly.

Q And how long did he act as your orderly?

A About nine months.

Q At the end of that nine months, what did he do?

A The camp staff was being cut. You mean what he did during that time?

Q At the end of the nine months, what was his next job?

A The camp staff was cut down and the camp commander said we had too many men working in the camp and the men were not to go to work in camp. So, he agreed to go out to work, provided he could go to this sick-man detail that we had. That was a detail where we sent men who were crippled, one-legged men and men who were in random condition, and he worked at this place for about two months and finally, his job folded up and then he was in the general pool working outside.

Q Approximately when was this?
A This was toward the end of 1944.

Q Around that time, had Serafin been complaining of any illness, if you know?
A Towards the end of 1944, he began to suffer from beriberi.

Q What treatment did he receive?
A Very little, if any.

Q Did he report to the sick bay for treatment?
A He did, several times.

Q Do you know whether Dr. Hochman made any recommendations to Kondo about the treatment of Serafin?
A He did.

Q What were those recommendations?
A He said that Serafin was too old and too weak a condition to be sent out to work.

Q Do you know what Kondo's reply to that was?
A At that time, we were having a little bit of trouble in our camp. We had the men who were missing limbs, had several old men who could not hear -- they were doing work in the camp called "paper work", making notebooks and envelopes and making those boxes that you put medicine in, that was being sent out to civilian firms and because there was no visible means of illness about Tony, he was in the group that were sent out to work, and Dr. Hochman tried several times to keep him in camp so that he could work on paper work because he wasn't very strong -- not strong enough to do the heavy stevedoring work that he had to do outside.

Q Who made him go out to work?
A That decision was made by Kondo.

Q Do you know that of your own knowledge?
A I do.

Q Towards the end, what kind of work was Serafin doing?
A While he was in the general pool, there were so many men taken from the line up, some would go to the steel mill; some would go out in the bay, unloading ships and other men would go to the docks and he was more or less taking his chances. Sometimes, I used to pull him out of the line and send him to an easy detail that I knew was an easy detail for that day, but as a rule, he was in the stevedoring gang.

Q And what kind of work were they doing in the stevedoring gang?
A They were unloading ships, unloading freight cars, moving commodities about in large store rooms, warehouses.

Q Was that considered heavy work?
A It is.

Q Do you know whether Dr. Hoehman on more than one occasion recommended to Kendo that Serafin be kept in camp because of his age and not be permitted to go to work?

DEFENSE: I object to it on the ground that it's leading.

PRESIDENT: You objected to it for what reason?

DEFENSE: The question is a leading question.

PRESIDENT: Will the prosecution rephrase the question?

PROSECUTION: I am asking if there was more than one occasion. If there isn't, he will say "no".

DEFENSE: If he says "no", it implies that there was more than one occasion.

PROSECUTION: If the defense contends that he is lying, he can question him on it more on cross-examination.

DEFENSE: He can answer "no"; that means that there was none. It's a leading question.

PROSECUTION: If there is more than one occasion, I will find out what those occasions were.

DEFENSE: Was there more than one occasion?

PRESIDENT: What did you ask -- if there was more than one occasion?

PROSECUTION: I have forgotten the question.

DEFENSE: I believe the law member sees what I am driving at. No matter how the answer is given, "yes" or "no", evidence will be before the court that on at least one occasion something was done.

PROSECUTION: He has already testified that there has been one occasion.

PRESIDENT: He testified to that.

PROSECUTION: He has already testified that there has been more than one occasion.

PRESIDENT: The question is whether there has been more than one occasion?

PROSECUTION: That's what I asked.

PRESIDENT: Will the witness answer the question?

A There was, sir.

Q And when was that other occasion or occasions giving us time and place and what the conversations were.
A The last three months of 1944, the men who were old and in a run-down condition worked in our camp as I told you, on paper work. About every ten days or so, they would hold a sick call on paper workers and they would go through them; it was more or less a farce. They picked out the men who were obviously not able to work outside and sent the rest out to work. And he was on this paper work detail. At various times, he worked probably two or three weeks at one time and then he comes in and is allowed to work on the paper detail for about a week and then he would be taken off and sent to work.

Q Who would take him off the paper work detail?
A Kondo.

Q Do you know that of your own knowledge?
A Yes, I was there.

Q Did you ever have any conversations with Dr. Hoehman about Kondo's treatment of Serafin?
A No, not particularly.

Q Did you have any conversations with Dr. Hoehman about Kondo's treatment of Serafin after Serafin died?
A Yes, I did and I wrote an official letter of protest to the colonel.

Q And what was contained in that letter of protest?

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to object, as to testimony of what may have been contained in the letter on the ground it's not the best evidence. The letter was written, and the letter should be produced in court as the best evidence of what it contained.

PROSECUTION: Here's the best evidence -- the man who wrote the letter.

DEFENSE: Mr. Rand, you know better than that. The best evidence rule applies when someone is offering a proof of a writing; the writing must be produced.

PRESIDENT: The witness will answer the question.

Q What was contained in that letter of protest that you wrote?
A I informed the colonel of the conditions at sick call, about Kondo's treatment of the prisoners, and because of the fact that this man had not been permitted to remain in the camp when he was obviously very ill, that it was a violation of International Law and the Geneva Convention and that there was nobody in the world responsible for this man's death except Kondo by forcing this man to go to work and absolutely refusing to allow him to remain in the camp.

Q Do you remember approximately when you wrote that?
A I did, immediately after his death, the following day.

Q Do you know whether any action was taken on that letter that you wrote?
A No action was taken whatsoever.

Q Did you ever hear anything further about it?
A I heard from various underground sources that I was writing too many letters of protest and I was about to be severely punished for doing it.

Q Did you ever have any conversations with the accused Kondo about Serafin?
A I did after his death.

Q When?
A Immediately after his death, the following day. I accused him of being responsible for Serafin's death, that he killed him, his death was just as though he killed him with his own hands.

Q And where did you tell him that?
A I told him that right over at sick call, at the dispensary.

Q Was that in the morning?
A That was in the morning and I told him that I would make a report of it to the colonel.

Q And what did he say?
A He said nothing; he acted as though he was very scared. He was very much in fear of what I was going to say to the colonel.

DEFENSE: I ask that that be stricken on the grounds that it's a conclusion -- that portion of his answer.

PROSECUTION: I will agree to have that portion stricken.

Q Were you able at that time to speak any Japanese?
A Just enough to carry out my work in the camp.

Q After Serafin's death, did you ever have conversations with Dr. Hochman about the death of Serafin?
A I did.

Q When did you have a conversation with him?
A Immediately after Serafin's death.

Q Where?
A In my office.

Q And what induced that conversation, if anything?

A We were trying to figure out some way that we could get rid of Kondo and get him out of camp.

Q And what specifically was said about Serafin's death by Dr. Hashimoto?

A Dr. Hashimoto agreed with me, said that there was nobody else responsible for Tony's death except Kondo.

Q Did he say anything else?

A He said it was a dirty shame that we had to put up with a man like that and we were trying to get some -- figure some scheme out where we could get Dr. Hara and have him transferred out of camp.

Q Did you write your letter to Colonel Marvin before or after your meeting with Dr. Hashimoto?

A Well, that same day; I wrote the letter after I had talked to Dr. Hashimoto.

Q You testified, I believe, that Dr. Hashimoto stated that he wanted to leave his job as doctor in charge of POW's, is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q When did he make such a statement to you?

A That was a long about the time of Serafin's death -- the early part of '45. He had complained to me a number of times -- he wanted to leave his job, but I would talk to him and convince him that it was his duty to remain on the job and still keep fighting and do what he possibly could with the prisoners.

Q When was the meeting that you have previously testified to with Hayashi, Kondo, Dr. Hashimoto and yourself?

A That was along about the latter part of 1944, if I remember correctly.

Q And will you tell this Commission in detail just what Dr. Hashimoto said to you with regard to his giving up his job as POW -- as medical officer in charge of POW's?

DEFENSE: I object to this on the ground that it was hearsay and there was no showing that the accused was present at the time the statement was made.

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A When we had our conference and previous to that, he came to me and he says, "Chief, I don't see no reason why I should be going to sick call in the morning to be humiliated." He said, "I am a man of the medical profession," He said, "I have graduated from the finest medical school in the world," and he said, "I practiced medicine, and to stand down there and have a young man who doesn't know an aspirin tablet from a dose of castor oil to tell me I don't know what is wrong with a man when he is sick. I only stand there. I am in danger of being beaten up as he beats the other prisoners of war. He humiliates me. He makes fun of my decisions. He says, "I can't take it any longer. He said, "I am going to blow up and strike him and then I will be executed for it." And we had a long talk on that line. I told him I would try to get there more than I possibly could and I would have the other group leaders present when I was present so they could intervene when anything started. I told him he was our only man we could turn to, to help us when we were sick and he had to stick on the job, and he agreed to stay there.

Q Did Mr. Eschmann at that time give you any specific instances other than what you have already previously related?

A Oh, there was so many instances he complained about it's pretty hard to remember. It was just a general over-all rotten condition of the camp.

Q Did you know an American prisoner of war named Robert M. Barber? Spell that. Did you know a prisoner of war Robert M. Barber?

A Yes, he was a captain of a British oil tanker.

Q Was he at the Headquarters POW Camp?

A He was.

Q Do you remember an incident involving Captain Barber and Konde?

A Well, one morning at sick call, when Captain Barber went over to see if he could get some kind of stomach powder, he was suffering from ulcers of the stomach, he was told there was no powder there and he was a trained Britisher; why, he didn't know enough to keep talking. He kept insisting, insisting, and he was pretty angry because he was receiving no attention, and he did talk in a loud voice and he told, he said, "The Japanese sick-boy around here is all bawled up and Konde slapped him in the face.

Q When did this incident take place?

A This took place shortly before he was sent to the Fukuoka Hospital.

Q When?

A That was in the fall of 1944.

Q How many times did he hit him?

A He slapped him three or four times about the face.

Q Strike him very hard?

A Yes, he was hit pretty hard.

Q Do you remember the "baka" incident?

A Yes, I do very well.

Q When did that take place?
A That was on July 4, 1944.

Q Will you tell this Commission exactly what you know about that incident?
A Well, it was a ruling of the Japanese Army to cure diarrhea and stomach ailments, you had to sleep at night with a blanket around your stomach and during the hot months, our barracks in this camp were very crowded; each man was allowed about 28 inches of space and the camp was full of lice and bed bugs and vermin and it was almost impossible for a man to sleep with any covering on him. During the night, Kondo made an inspection of the camp. Of course, he found a number of the men who were asleep who did not have blankets on their stomachs. He had a flashlight with him and he woke up practically everybody in the room and the men were pretty angry about being awakened and they told him to get the hell out of there and they called him "baka". That's the Japanese word for "crazy". The man hollered "baka" at him. Several of them, in fact, were down on the lower bay. He couldn't determine who the man was who hollered "baka" at him, and he brought the men out in one section and stood them up at attention. He had the Corporal of the Guard with them. He started kicking them and slapping them and beating them about the face and body and tried to make the men admit who called him "baka". The fire watchmen came in my room and woke me up and I got over there on the end of where I saw this one man group, where he had just been knocked down by Kondo. I interfered and talked to Kondo and quieted the room down, and got Kondo outside of the room and the Corporal of the Guard and I told him he had no business going in there striking the men and creating a disturbance because they had to work hard and what sleep they could get, they needed it badly and he was doing wrong by coming in there and bothering the men and waking them up. He agreed he wasn't going to do that any more; he agreed that the men needed their sleep and he went out and went over to the office. This happened around midnight.

Q Do you know what POW's, if any, were struck by Kondo at that time?
A Yes, sir, there was a Chief Petty Officer by the name of Vance, a Marine Sergeant, a man by the name of Venton, a Marine Sergeant, a Marine Private by the name of Cordoyne, and a Marine Private by the name of J. M. Smith.

Q Did any of these men make any complaint to you about this incident? Did any of these POW's make any complaint to you about this incident?
A Yes, a whole room complained to me.

Q Did any of these five men that you have mentioned specifically make any complaint to you about this incident?

A Yes, they did. They said there was no man in that group that was guilty, that hollered at him, and they said that he came in there and just acted like a wild man, just acted as though he was insane. He blew himself up in a fit of temper that nobody could talk to him or do anything with him.

Q Did any of these five POW's state that they had been struck by Kendo?
A Yes, they all did.

Q Did they state what weapons, if any, he used?
A The Corporal of the Guard had one of these heavy sticks, and Kendo used a stick, a bamboo stick and kicked them with his hob-nailed shoes.

Q Did he use his fist at all, do you know?
A Yes.

Q Did Kendo after this incident make any promises to you?
A Yes, he agreed that he wouldn't wake the men up any more and he said that he would hold me responsible for all the men to be sleeping with blankets around them.

Q Did he keep his promise?
A No.

Q About a week later, did anything happen at this camp?
A Well --

DEFENSE: I object to the question on the grounds that it is leading. Let's examine him as though he were an eye witness.

PROSECUTION: I haven't suggested what happened. I am asking him what, if anything, happened. I don't see anything leading about that whatsoever -- not the slightest.

PRESIDENT: Make your question more specific about what kind of incident it was.

PROSECUTION: He is objecting because it's leading now. I will reword it, sir.

Q Do you know an American POW at that camp -- or did you know -- named Kettles?
A I do.

Q Do you know of any incident involving him and Kendo?
A About seven or eight days later when Kendo was going about the camp again and we had been warned by the fire watchman, most of the men were woke up so they could get their blankets on them, but this man Kettles was sleeping outside of the window, outside the room on a plank because the heat of the room was terrific.

It was almost impossible to sleep in there and he was found outside sleeping on this plank without any clothing on him. He had a small fundoshi issued to him, like a loin cloth. Because he was sleeping out there without any protection, Kondo blew into a fit of temper and kicked him and beat him about the face and body with his fist.

Q Did you have any conversation with Kondo after this incident about his treatment of Nettles?
A No, I didn't.

Q Did you know a POW at Headquarters Camp named Doherty?
A I do.

Q Do you know of any incident involving him and Kondo?
A I do.

Q When did that take place and what was the incident?
A Well, it took place about the middle of 1944. This man Doherty was an elderly man about 54 years old. He was a First Engineer on an American oil tanker and he had an ear injury during a battle with a German raider, with this oil tanker; there was a heavy explosion on board the ship and he was almost practically deaf and he had been suffering from a bad cold. He, Merritt, the Chief Pharmacist Mate told him to stay in and report to sick call the following morning. When the word was passed about the camp for sick call, Doherty did not hear the word passed.

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to ask that all of this testimony be stricken because it's hearsay. He is testifying what somebody else told him. There is no way of this court determining the truth of what Merritt said. We can cross-examine this man for twelve days; we aren't going to find out what Merritt said to him. I don't question that Merritt said certain things to him, but there is no way of determining that Merritt is telling the truth.

I am not contesting the Chief's veracity. I am questioning what Merritt said. That's the reason for the rule against hearsay.

PRESIDENT: Reply to that question. The witness will proceed.

A He was told to report to sick call by Merritt, the Chief Pharmacist Mate, the following morning. When the word was passed in the camp for all men to report to sick call, Doherty did not hear the word passed because in order to talk to Doherty, you had to get alongside his ear and shout so he could hear you. Sick call was in progress and almost over when one of the men who returned from sick call told to Doherty that sick call was now in progress and he better get over there and he got over there late, Kondo flew into a fit of rage. He made a kick at him and he wore these leather slippers. He pulled off his slipper and slapped him alongside the face with it several times and then sent him back to his room. The man was sick.

Q Did Doherty at any time tell you about this incident?
A Doherty, when he came back on sick call, came to my office and told me about it.

Q Did he tell you he had been struck by Kondo?
A Yes.

Q As a result of this incident, did you have any conversations with Kondo about it?
A I made an official protest, written letter to Mr. Nosu about it.

Q Was that the protest you had previously testified to?
A No, that's another protest.

Q And what protest was this?
A I said that it should be taken into consideration that this man was an elderly man and he couldn't hear and it was impossible for him to have heard the word for sick call as it was passed around the camp, and it was an act of Kondo's cruelty because he beat him. He did not take into consideration the fact that the man was sick and was deaf and he couldn't hear the word passed.

Q Did anything come of this report that you made to Mr. Nosu?
A Nothing.

Q Did you know a POW at the Headquarters Camp named Moraley?
A I did.

Q What was his nationality?
A He was a Britisher.

Q And do you know of any incident involving him and Kondo?
A I do.

Q When did this take place?
A This took place in 1944.

Q Do you remember about when?
A It was toward the latter part of 1944. I don't remember the exact date.

Q Will you tell this Commission what the incident was involving Kondo and Moraley?

A This young lad Horsley, when he came to our camp, he was about fifteen years old. He was acting as a cabin boy aboard a British freighter and at the time the incident happened, he was seventeen years old and he just returned to our camp from Ichiaka Hospital, having been sent there with a very bad case of dysentery. He was almost a skeleton. I think the lad weighed about ninety-five pounds, and because of his age, when the Japanese duty officers used to come around during muster, they used to comment with him; they asked him how old he was, if he was homesick and if the work was too hard for him, and such as that. This night, Lt. Kajiyama who was duty officer, when he came into the room and held muster, he stopped and looked at him a little while and asked him how he was feeling, and Horsley told him he was sick. He didn't feel very well. So, Lt. Kajiyama told him through the interpreter that he could stay in camp the following day and rest. So, the following morning, after all the men fell in outside, we had to make a detail to count and show where every man was at, and we showed up missing one man, who was Horsley, who remained in camp without going to sick call and through the regular procedure we had to comply with, with the Japanese. And because he did not come to sick call, and he was taking a day of rest, Kondo -- he just went insane. He had the man brought over to the sick bay; he started kicking him about the shin and beating him about the body and face and kicking him in the stomach and Dr. Hochman interfered and tried to stop him and I came around the corner of the building and I got in on the tail end of the beating and I interfered and had the beating stopped. We sent for the interpreter who was with the duty officer that night when he gave permission for Horsley to remain in camp and he said my statement was true, that the duty officer did order him to remain in camp, and Kondo stated it made no difference who it was; he was the only man who could give him permission to stay in camp and we finally got Horsley back out of there. The man's face was swollen up and he was bleeding from the mouth. We finally got him away from there and we returned him to his room.

Q Did you have any conversation with Kondo about his treatment of Horsley?
A I did.

Q What did you say to him?
A I told him he was a coward and he was only standing on his position of being a Japanese and we were prisoners of war, and if I had my way about it, I would kill him for it.

Q What did Kondo say to you?
A He said nothing about it, and I told him I was going to make an official written protest about it.

Q And did you?
A I did.

Q To whom?
A I made it to the senior medical officer, the Japanese medical officer.

Q Is that Dr. Kora?
A Dr. Kora.

Q And what did you say in that report?
A I told him just exactly of the conditions under which Kearsley remained in the camp and Kondo's treatment of him.

Q Did anything ever come of that protest?
A Nothing.

Q Did Kearsley also tell you about the beating he received from Kondo at that time?
A No, the kid, well, we talked about it, but it was just a general conversation. I was toward the end of the bed; I saw what happened.

Q Did you know a POW named Knudsen?
A Which Knudsen?

Q From New York?
A Yes, I do.

Q Do you know of any incident involving him and Kondo?
A I do.

Q When did this take place?
A This took place about the middle of 1944.

Q And what was that incident?
A This man Knudsen was the Chief Officer on an American Oil tanker; he was a prisoner of war in our camp. He was working at the Sumitomo Warehousing Company and during the course of his work, a large stack of rice bags fell over and came down and struck him on the shoulder and the back and the hips, and the bags completely covered him and the prisoners who were working with him pulled the bags off of him and pulled him off to one side and we had several Pharmacists Mates or Navy Pharmacists Mates, who were working on that party and they examined him to the best of their ability and they determined there was no bones broken or anything like that, although the man was injured and he was unable to stand up. So, he was taken to the rest house that we had at the working party there and there he remained the rest of the day until late in the afternoon when the work was done for that day and he was returned to the camp. He was carried back to camp on a litter, and it was always a policy of the camp if a man was injured at work, he was allowed to remain in the camp for several days and Knudsen had to walk bent over and he had to be assisted about the camp by several other members of the camp and he had been in about five days and during the bed patient check, when Kondo used to come around the camp and make his inspection of the people who were sick and ill in bed, who were physically unable to go to sick call, he came in the room, was holding sick call in the room and he was there; this man Knudsen was being returned from the toilet by two members of the camp staff and he came into the room and Kondo saw him up out of his bed where he had put him when he returned from work and said that he was faking, and you couldn't make him understand that the man had gone to the toilet. He had to go to the toilet. He told him to stand up and it was impossible for Knudsen to stand up because of his injury and because he didn't stand at attention, Kondo started to beat him about the face and the body and knocked him down. A member of the staff came into my room and I told him what had happened. I run into the room and Kondo was screaming and hollering like a madman. I interfered and got him out of the room. I told him I was going to make an official protest.

Q Did you make an official protest?
A I did.

Q To whom did you make it?
A I made it to the Camp Commander and Dr. Hosu.

Q And just what did you say in that protest?
A I told him the exact circumstances of his injury and Kondo's conduct.

Q Did you have any conversations with Kondo about his treatment of Knudsen?
A I did. I told him he was nothing but a coward.

Q During the time you were Camp Commander, at the Headquarters Camp, did Kondo ever change from his normal treatment of the POW's as you have testified?
A He did didn't, except for short periods of time after each time we would get together and we would have an argument together, why he would sort of work with Dr. Hoshman for a period of about ten days or two weeks, and he would be right back to his same practice again.

Q Other than the beatings you have testified to on my questioning, have you ever suffered -- received any other complaints about Kondo's treatment of POW's at sick call?
A I received so many of them that it's almost -- it's hardly impossible for me to remember them.

Q And from whom did you receive those complaints?
A From the various men who had been to sick call and from Dr. Hoshman and Merritt, the Chief Pharmacist Mate, Ginger Hodsen.

Q And over how long a period of time have you as Camp Commander been receiving these complaints?
A For a period of almost three years.

Q What, in general, again, were those complaints?
A About his treatment at sick call and not being able to remain in camp when he was sick.

Q When you say "his", do you refer to Konde?
A Konde.

Q Was there any Japanese personnel at your camp by the name of Gender? Was there any such Japanese person in your camp?
A Not to my knowledge.

Q To your knowledge, did Morafin receive any special treatment for his complaints at sick call?
A No, he did not.

Q To your knowledge, did Hess receive any special treatment at sick call for his complaint?
A He did not.

PROSECUTION: At this time, if the Commission please, the prosecution is through with the direct examination of this witness.

I believe the defense does not want to cross examine at this time today, because it's close to recess, is that correct?

DEFENSE: That's correct. So, I ask for an adjournment till tomorrow morning.

PROSECUTION: Do you offer any objection to the Commission interrogating before you do?

DEFENSE: I believe I would like to cross-examine before the Commission asks questions.

PROSECUTION: It's very close to recess time anyway.

PRESIDENT: Take a recess. The Commission will adjourn till 0900, tomorrow morning.

The court then at 1900 hours, on 5 August 1946, adjourned to meet at 0900 hours, on 6 August 1946.

Leonard M. Rand

LEONARD M. RAND,
Chief Prosecutor.

Yokohama District Courthouse
Yokohama, Japan

6 August 1946

The court met, pursuant to adjournment at 0800 hours, all the personnel of the court, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and the reporter who were present at the close of the previous session in this case being present.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: May the records show that the witness Sanders is reminded that he is still under oath.

I still have one or two questions I would like to ask this witness.

PRESIDENT: Continuation of the direct examination?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued)

Questions by prosecution:

Q During the time that you were camp commander at the Headquarters POW Camp, of your own knowledge approximately how many American prisoners died?
A In our camp alone, there was only eleven prisoners died altogether.

Q How many American prisoners did you have in the camp?
A That number varied from time to time. The camp was originally started off with eighty Americans and we averaged between one-hundred fifty to two-hundred fifty Americans in the camp.

Q About how many American prisoners of war died at Yokohama Hospital?

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to object to this line of testimony, to this question on the grounds that it is irrelevant, immaterial. We are not charged with any incident at Yokohama Hospital. It is improper.

PROSECUTION: I have a reason for this line of questioning.

PRESIDENT: Is it pertinent to any of these specifications?

PROSECUTION: Well, I withdrew the question. I am anticipating, perhaps, a portion of the defense and I can use this on rebuttal. I will withdraw the question.

Q Do you know a man named Hayashi?
A I do.

Q What was his status at Headquarters POW camp?
A When he first came to the camp, he was assigned as the camp interpreter and later, he became the area interpreter and he would be sent out to the various camps where there was trouble or misunderstandings; he would go there to straighten them out.

Q What was his nationality?
A Japanese.

Q Is this the same Hayashi that you refer to when you mention the meeting that took place between you, Kondo and Dr. Hoshman?
A It is.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q Mr. Sanders, how many prisoners all told were there when the Osaka Main Camp opened up in '42?
A In '42, eighty.
Q Eighty American prisoners?
A Eighty American prisoners.
Q Any British or Dutch?
A Not until later on, in October and November when we started to receive the other nationalities, we had British and Dutch, Chinese, Indians, South Africans, one Cuban, two Argentinians -- several Greeks.
Q Now, at the end of 1943, how many prisoners of war were there in the main camp?
A Between the two camps, about 650 men.
Q You say two camps?
A Yes.
Q What was this second camp you speak of?
A The camp was divided into two sections; the other section was across the street originally.
Q Well, then, in the section in which you were, with the American prisoners of war and in which Kondo operated the dispensary, how many prisoners of war were there in '43?
A In '43, in our camp there were 327 men in our group and the group across the street, there was over 300.
Q They all used the same dispensary?
A No, at first, we had no dispensary.
Q Well, how long a period of time did you have a dispensary?
A From the early part of 1944.

Q Until the early part of 1944?
A At the beginning of the early part of 1944, we built the new camp next to our camp; we built an addition to that and then we merged the two camps together.

Q Now, before you merged the two camps together, when you first went into the Osaka Main Camp, there was a dispensary, isn't that correct?
A No, no dispensary.

Q In 1942, no dispensary?
A No.

Q What did Kondo operate in?
A He carried a little bag around with him and they had a store room in the British section and he would come into camp and use my office sometimes and I had another office in the other camp where the Sergeant Major of the Royal Scotch, he used that and most of the time, they used the room where the men lived in.

Q Did you make any complaint about that?
A Yes, but the colonel told us that they were building a new camp and very soon after we were there, we started to work on another camp.

Q You started to work on a new camp in '43, the latter part of '43?
A The latter part of '43 we started to work at it.

Q And you completed it at the beginning of '44?
A Beginning of '44.

Q Did both your group and the group across the street use the same facilities for sick call?
A Yes.

Q Well, Kondo administered or took part in the examination of the sick prisoners of war out of the group of over 600 men, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q And he had no help at all?
A He had several times a one-star soldier with him and most of the sick call was held by our own men with Kondo in attendance.

Q By that you mean Dr. Hoehman did the examination?
A Yes.

Q And Merritt and Ginger?
A Yes.

Q Were present?
A That's right.

Q Now, can you recall, Mr. Sanders, approximately in the latter part of '43 how many men would go on sick call a day on an average?
A On an average, in a daily workday, about 25 to 30 men.

Q Out of the 400?
A Yes.
Q The figure ever materially increase over that?
A No, that was about the average.
Q Now, out of this group of 80 American prisoners of war that you first went to camp with, how many officers did you have?
A I had no officers in the original eighty group.
Q When did the officers come in, if they came in?
A In October, 1942, and November, 1942.
Q Were they American officers?
A They were American and British and Norwegian officers.
Q What was their rank, if you remember?
A Two British officers, one was a lieutenant in the Navy and the other was a first lieutenant in the Royal Scotch -- the five Norwegian officers; one was a lieutenant commander, two lieutenants and two ranks equivalent to lieutenant junior grade in the American Navy. We had a lieutenant commander in the American Navy; one Army captain, regular Army; one Army first lieutenant, and one Army second lieutenant.
Q Was that whole group in your section of the camp?
A Yes.
Q And what did these officers do? What duties did they all assume?
A They assumed no duties.
Q No commissioned officer was given any duties by Colonel Kurata, is that it?
A No.
Q No commissioned officer was designated as the senior officer of the prisoners of war?
A No.
Q You were designated as the senior officer?
A I was.
Q Was there any explanation for that?
A When Lieut. Tsutsumi, the Major General of the area there sent me to Osaka with 150 men. I was the senior NCO in the group. We was in Osaka up until October when we were taken over by the Central Army and Colonel Kurata was the officer in charge, and as I was the officer -- non-commissioned officer in charge of the original group, the first group of prisoners to come to Osaka, they kept me in charge all the way through.
Q And your responsibility was to get out labor parties; you were responsible for morale and you were responsible for sanitation. What else were you responsible for?

A The Japanese held me responsible for everything that happened in the camp pertaining to the operation of the camp.

Q Did you find it necessary to call any of these officers for any help?

A I used to go to the officers whenever any occasion would arise; I would go to them and talk it over with them, tell them my plans and ask their advice.

Q Did they cooperate with you?

A They did.

Q Do you recall the names of any of these officers?

A Yes, I do. Lt. Commander Callahan, Captain Strong, Lt. Thompson, Lt. Faliday.

Q Did you explain to any of these men about the various incidents you described yesterday?

A Yes, they were thoroughly familiar with the incidents that happened in our camp.

Q Did they ever witness any of these incidents?

A The doctor did. Lt. Commander McGinnis, who was a dentist in our camp witnessed these incidents.

Q Do you know where he is from?

A I think he is from Oklahoma.

Q Naval doctor?

A He is a Naval Commander at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Q Now, you had described to us the Japanese set up as far as the medical department was concerned. You said that Dr. Nosu was in charge.

A Yes.

Q And he had three assistants, Miyabara, Murao and Ano. Now, Dr. Nosu was in the main camp most of the time?

A Most of the time he was.

Q Where was his office?

A In the far side of the main building.

Q Was it in close vicinity where sick calls were held?

A I would say 250 feet.

Q And how many times do you think, can you testify Dr. Nosu would come to sick call during the week?

A During the week?

Q Yes.

A Seldom.

Q Did he ever go?

A Yes, cause, when we first came in the camp and first opened it up, he came to the camp to hold sick call -- about once a month, approximately every three weeks. After about six months, his duties became somewhat heavier; because they were establishing other camps in the area, he very, very seldom would ever come to sick call -- possibly once every six months.

Q And Dr. Maruo, Miyatake and Amo, they were out circulating around the branch camps?
A Branch camps and in our camps.

Q They hit your camp in a regular circuit, is that it?
A Dr. Maruo and Amo stayed in our camp practically all of the time and they would only leave the camp to go down to Moji to bring other prisoners in the camp.

Q What were their duties?
A I can't say; they were more or less administrative duties in the office. Dr. Maruo was originally charged with the health of our camp, but we very seldom saw him -- about once a month.

Q Did you ever see him at sick call?
A Very seldom. He held sick call when he first came to the camp once every other week or so.

Q And Dr. Amo, he was a probationary officer?
A That's right.

Q How often did he attend sick call?
A About once every ten days, or two weeks.

Q How did Dr. Hochman get along with him?
A Dr. Hochman got along with him very well.

Q And how well did Dr. Hochman get along with Maruo?
A Very well with him from the very beginning he was in our camp.

Q And the other doctor, Miyatake?
A Nobody ever got along with Miyatake.

Q Now, how many other Japanese enlisted personnel operated in that dispensary examination room or what was set up as an examination room?
A Kondo was there most of the time and at other times, at that period, the whole entire area was in progress of being organized; medical soldiers that were going out to the other camps were to attend sick call with Kondo to learn how they was to handle the prisoners in their new camps. Sometimes, we would have two or three men there, and sometimes, maybe five men would attend sick call at the same time. These men were more or less under instruction in preparation to going to new camps.

Q Do you recall a Corporal Hiraiwa?
A No, I don't.

Q You don't recall him at all?
A No.

Q How about a Corporal Nomura?
A No. What is his nick-name?

Q I wouldn't know.
A It is very difficult for a prisoner to find out a man's real name.

Q How about Sergeant Kobayashi?
A Kobayashi -- I know him.

Q Where did he work?
A Kobayashi had charge of the Red Cross Medicine Storeroom and worked in the office.

Q In the medical office, is that it?
A In the Central Medical Office.

Q And Sergeant Major Okuyama?
A He didn't come to our camp until 1945 and he was in charge of the office -- the Central Office.

Q Do you recall a Superior Private Yasufugu?
A No, I do not -- I do not recognize that name.

Q Superior Private Hirakawa?
A Hirakawa? That name is familiar. I believe he worked in the office with Dr. Maruo.

Q How about Superior Private Hayakawa?
A I don't recognize that name.

Q Superior Private Wakatsuji?
A No.

Q Let's see if I have the correct pronunciation.

INTERPRETER: Wakatsuji.

A There was only one Superior Private in our camp.

Q You mean Kondo?
A Kondo later was supposed to make Superior Private.

Q How about Kato? Superior Private.
A I don't recognize that name.

Q Kishimoto, also Superior Private.
A I don't recognize that name.

Q You don't recognize any of these names, except Kobayashi and Okuyama. So, every day, then, Kondo, the accused, would be in on the examination of the sick prisoners of war out of the group of over 600 men, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q But Nosu could give orders to Kondo, couldn't he?
A Any officer in the Japanese army could give orders to anybody, whether they are in the medical, infantry or where they are at.

Q Correct. Did you ever see Nosu in the company of Kondo? Did you ever see them together?
A About the camp, yes.

Q Did you ever hear any conversations between them when he had an interpreter? Did you understand what was going on?
A No, I did not.

Q You don't know what orders Kondo may have received from Nosu, do you?
A No, I don't.

Q You don't know what orders Kondo may have received from any medical officer, do you?
A I do not.

Q Are you familiar with any orders Kondo may have received from Colonel Murata?
A Colonel Murata I don't believe ever gave orders to a Private. That's not the policy of the Japanese army.

Q And your testimony is that the average number of men on sick call was twenty-five a day?
A Twenty to twenty-five a day.

Q You didn't have very many sick men at that camp, did you?
A No, we did not.

Q Now, who was Konde's immediate superior?
A Who was his immediate superior? That we never had been able to find out.

Q You think Dr. Nosu was his superior?
A Dr. Nosu was the doctor in charge of the entire area.

Q He would be his superior, wouldn't he?
A He would be, yes.

Q He was the medical officer in charge of the Osaka area? Was he not?
A Yes.

Q This was the Osaka Main Camp, was it not?
A That's right.

Q And Konde worked in the so-called dispensary?
A He worked in the dispensary.

Q So, Nosu would have control of Konde, would he not?
A Indirectly he would.

Q Through a chain of command?
A He may have.

Q You are not familiar with any orders Kondo may have received from the Camp Commander Matsumura?
A I am not.

Q Now, what time did you hold your work parade?
A At 7:00 o'clock.

Q That was right after sick call, is that it?
A Right after sick call.

Q Now, how did you determine who was going be sick call every given morning, Chief?
A These men would contact our doctor and our American doctor would tell them to fall in line to sick call.

Q Now at night or in the morning, were you given a list of those men who were going to appear on sick call?
A No.

Q Did you ever know before your work parade how many men were going on sick call?
A No, I would not know.

Q Now, in the morning, would you receive from Colonel Hirata or the Camp Commander, some other Japanese personnel, A request or an order for so many men to go to work?
A Yes.

Q And what would be the number of men on a normal day?
A On a normal day, between 500 and 550 men.

Q And what would the balance of the men do?
A Some of them would remain in camp, working on paper work. Some men were sick and then we had an unusually large camp staff in that camp because we had all the main store rooms of the area there.

Q You had how many men, would you say, on permanent detail in the camp between?
A Between sixty and seventy men.

Q Was that just work in the store rooms?
A Yes.

Q How about mess -- prisoner of war mess?
A We had seventeen men working in the galley.

Q What other details did you have?
A We had sanitation details.

Q How many men on that?
A Oh, that would vary from day to day because we would be able to -- some men would have been injured ob-work, so that we could keep our rice ration up, we would put him on a camp detail that would go from five one day to maybe fifteen.

Q Any other details, Chief?
A We had a mail detail to handle the RedCross mail; that varied according to the mail that would come into the camp. Normally, we kept three men on that, but it would go up as high as fifteen men.

Q But that mail came in very seldom?
A On an average about once a month, in the latter part of 1944.

Q I am not interested in anything as infrequent as that. Any other details that were steady, day to day?
A Yes, we had a paper detail.

Q That's a detail you testified to yesterday?
A Yes.

Q That would vary according to the number of men you could get put on to the detail?
A That's right.

Q To do light work?
A That's right.

Q When your men fell out for work detail and lined up in the road, guards from the companies would come and pick them up, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q And who would assign the various groups to go to the dockyards or to go some place else to work?
A Well, we had in each group a prisoner who would be the foreman of the work group. We would receive the work list most of the time the night before the day we was supposed to go to work. We notified each group leader how many men he would have and the policy of the camp, a man could go to work at any company he chose. We did not designate any man to go to a certain company. The men would go to the work leader of that group and request to go to work with him tomorrow morning.

Q What did you do? Post that on the bulletin board?
A We posted that on the bulletin board.

Q That was with the approval of the Japanese commander?
A Yes.

Q So that if a man didn't feel too well, he could go to the board and see where he could go to do the lightest work?
A That's right.

Q If he got there in time, he would go to that work?
A Yes. Most of the men who were found sick and weren't allowed to remain in camp, we would see that he would go to an easy detail.

Q Suppose I don't feel too well; I could go to the bulletin board of a certain afternoon -- or is it evening?
A In the evening.

Q And find posted there the work program for the following day?
A Yes.

Q And if I got to that work leader early enough, I could get on that detail, couldn't I?
A If I knew you was a good enough man to work on that detail, yes.

Q And someone who was really sick --
A That was my job and the other two group leaders' job to see that those men were placed on a working detail where they would have easy work.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I don't want to interrupt defense counsel's examination, but I feel that he is testifying too much himself, and I feel that he should elicit all answers from the witness rather than a "yes" or "no" after he propounds all the facts within his own question.

DEFENSE: If the court please, this is cross-examination; I can lead this witness to the fullest extent. I am putting to him a question and asking him if I was a prisoner of war, what I could do and get away with, and he is testifying whether I could or not. It's perfectly legitimate cross-examination.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Q Well, Chief, if enough men did that, some men who weren't well would be cut off from an easy job, wouldn't they?
A Ask that again, please.

Q I say if enough men in a prisoner of war camp did what I just outlined to you --
A Yes.

Q Some men who really were sick would be deprived of an easy job, wouldn't they?
A You might have gotten away with it the first few months of the camp, but after we organized, we knew who was who in the camp. We knew the gold-brickers; we knew who the men were, who were trying to cooperate and were working with the camp.

Q You did have a few gold-brickers?
A Yes, a few.

Q How many did you have?
A Two or three men.

Q Two or three men out of six-hundred; are you sure that's all you had?

A To my knowledge, that's all we had.

Q To your knowledge; do you think there may have been more that you didn't know about?
A Maybe one or two more.

Q Most of them American soldiers, or were they British, Dutch and everything else?
A All nationalities.

Q All nationalities gold-bricked?
A The gold-bricksrs were mostly Americans.

Q You think, Chief, anybody feigned illness at any time to get an easy job?
A That could have been possible, yes.

Q You think that happened pretty often, do you?
A No, I don't.

Q Do you know of any specific instance?
A No, I don't recall any specific instance.

Q Now, most of your trouble at that camp arose from your sick call?
A What was that?

Q That was your chief worry at camp? Sick call?
A That was my chief worry, yes.

Q How many times did you testify you went to sick call?
A Oh, I would pass by the sick call every morning, but most of the time, I would stand there and attend sick call about seventy-five or one-hundred times.

Q Are you sure it was as much as that?
A Possibly more than that.

Q How much more?
A I don't know.

Q Well, give me an approximation, Chief. I don't want to tie you down.
A Maybe fifty times more. I was in that camp three and a half years.

Q I know you were, Chief. You think one-hundred fifty times at tops you went to sick call?
A It might have been the tops, yes.

Q Now, that camp was open from the twentieth of October, '42 to the first of June, correct?
A That's correct.

Q And you think the tops you went to sick call about one-hundred fifty times?
A Possibly that, yes.

Q And sick call was your chief worry in that camp, was it not?

A That was my chief worry.

Q And Kondo was the chief offender in that camp?
A That's correct.

Q You realize, Chief, that from 20 October 1942 to 1 June 1945, there are 984 days?
A So?

Q And you went to sick call about once every six days?
A Yes.

Q Don't you think you could have gone more often?
A No, not under the circumstances I had in that camp.

Q Why not, Chief?
A Because I had guards to argue with and men to line up and I had a big job to line up all those 700 men every morning.

Q There were about eight commissioned officers in that camp, weren't there, Chief?
A That's right.

Q Couldn't you have one of them to help you?
A It's against the International Law to have one of them help -- for one of the officers to work.

PRESIDENT: Just ask him what he did; don't ask him what he should or should not have done.

Q It's against International Law for an officer to check upon the well being of his men?
A If you would have been in that camp, you would understand what I am telling you now.

DEFENSE: I ask that that be stricken from the record.

PROSECUTION: Just a minute. The defense counsel has asked this man a question. I want this witness to give his answer before being checked off by defense counsel.

PRESIDENT: Let the witness answer the question.

PROSECUTION: I want the witness to answer the question.

DEFENSE: I asked him whether it was against International Law for an officer to check the well being of his men. That's the question. That's the question he should answer. I request that he be directed to answer that question alone.

PROSECUTION: The Commission has already ruled that the witness will answer the question.

Q Is it against International Law, Chief, for an officer to check as to the welfare of his men?
A That I don't know -- that part of the International Law.

Q Now, Chief, you know that that is not International Law. International Law is not concerned with the duties of an officer with respect to his own men.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to this line of questioning; it has nothing to do with the issues involved in this case, and counsel is arguing with the witness.

PRESIDENT: Objection sustained.

DEFENSE: I can't question the witness along these lines?

PRESIDENT: Don't argue with the witness.

DEFENSE: I am not arguing with the witness. I am asking whether he knows or not --

PRESIDENT: Just ask the witness; don't interrupt the witness.

Q Will you answer the question, please?
A I wouldn't like to answer that question in the court, sir, because I have been in the service a number of years and I don't wish to show a degredation to my officers.

Q I didn't hear that.
A I don't wish to show my officers up in poor light, sir.

DEFENSE: Is that in the record?

Q Now, when you would go to sick call, Chief, would you stay there for the whole time you were on?
A Sometimes, if my duties would permit me, yes.

Q You had a lot of things to do in the morning, did you not?
A I did.

Q How many assistants did you have with your labor detail?
A In what way do you mean that?

Q To help you. I don't mean the group leaders; to help you with what you had to do?
A I had one assistant.

Q Who was he, Chief?
A It was Chief Water Tender in the American Navy by the name of Scott.

Q And what did he do? Anything you told him to do?
A Sir?

Q He did anything you told him to do?
A He carried out my orders.

Q Now, on any given orders, Mr. Sanders, what would you have to do between breakfast time and the time your labor details went out of camp?
A I had to prepare the camp for morning muster; I had to see that the water was ready for the men to take their wash. I had to see that their messes were properly served. I had to take care of at least three or four hundred complaints in the morning about the food, how it was prepared, take care of complaints about what was going to be done that day and then men refusing to go to work here and there -- probably have to shift them around to various working parties and probably have to change the entire schedule of the working parties because the Japanese never came out and did what they were supposed to do.

Q You were a pretty busy man every morning?
A Every morning.

Q You only had one assistant?
A I had one assistant to help me with all the working parties and outside details.

Q Couldn't you get another one?
A They would not allow us to have any more.

Q Did you make a request for more?
A In the beginning I did, yes.

Q How did you make a request? To whom?
A To the Camp Commander.

Q Now, Dr. Hochman attended sick call every morning?
A Every morning except when he himself was sick.

Q Now about this other doctor, this surgeon you spoke of? Did he play any part in morning sick call?
A No.

Q Nothing but attend accidents and emergencies, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q What did he do? Spend most of his time outside of the camp?
A He spent most of his time in his bunk.

Q Now, you testified yesterday that sometimes Kondo would listen to Hochmann, but that was rare?
A That's true.

Q Normally, when there was no visible means or no visible signs of sickness, Kondo would have sent a man to work?
A That's correct.

Q Did you see him send a man to work where there were visible signs of sickness?
A Yes, I have seen him send men where there was visible signs of sickness.

Q Is that Hoss?
A Hoss was one. They sent a whole group of thirty-five men out to work who had mumps. They put masks on their faces and sent them to a special working detail. Him and Dr. Ansaba were the cause of that.

Q Dr. Ansaba was there?
A And him with him.

Q He was there?
A On that occasion.

PROSECUTION: I object to counsel arguing with this witness. There is a proper method of examination.

PRESIDENT: I want the arguing with the witness to cease. Just ask him the questions. Let him reply before you start off with the next question.

Q What was that occasion, Chief? When was it?
A That was about in February, 1945.

Q What is Dr. Amo?
A Yes.

Q Dr. Hochmann was there that day?
A Yes, Dr. Hochmann was there.

Q Were you there all the time?
A Where?

Q Were you there at the timethe examination went on?
A That morning?

Q Yes.
A Yes, I was there.

Q You remember the names of the men who had these mumps?
A I can't recall their exact names.

Q Were they American prisoners of war?
A American and British.

Q Mixed group?
A Yes.

Q Did Dr. Amo examine these men?
A Dr. Ansaba didn't examine them.

Q Who examined them?
A Nobody examined them. He just said, "Go to work".

Q Dr. Hochmann examined them?
A Dr. Hochmann examined them.

Q Did he speak to Dr. Amo?
A Yes.

Q And then the men went to work?
A They went to work.

Q I see. How many times did the men report on sick call with the mumps?
A They came in one time, and most of the time, they were sent out to work; nobody bothered about coming. Dr. Hochman brought all these men before the doctor at sick call. He was a duty officer that morning and the doctor said, "Go to work".

Q The doctor said "Go to work"?
A Yes.

Q Now, when you had these conversations with Kondo as you testified to, who was your interpreter?
A Most of the time, Hayashi and we had several other interpreters in the camp.

Q Remember their names?
A Nishimoto was one; Kimura.

Q When did Hayashi come to the camp?
A When did he come to the camp?

Q Yes, please.
A I think he came to our camp in about January, '43, if I remember correctly.

Q He stayed there till the end of the war?
A Yes.

Q You testified yesterday that you had a conference with Kondo, Hayashi, Hochman and yourself; is that right?
A That's right.

Q That was in August, 1944?
A Yes, sir.

Q At that time, did Hochman talk to Kondo?
A Through the interpreter, yes.

Q What was Kondo's reply to Hochman?
A Well, he agreed that he would try to work with him more in the future -- pay attention to his diagnoses and promise us that he would not strike any more of the prisoners.

Q Did he say anything else to him at the time?
A Who?

Q Kondo say anything else to Hochman?
A No, Kondo just sat there and listened -- listened to our complaints.

Q He made no explanation of his action?
A He did not.

Q He just said, "Well, I will work with you in the future and I won't slap any more prisoners"?

A That's correct.

Q Did he ever complain to you about any prisoners of war?
A Who?

Q Kondo.
A No, he never complained to me about it.

Q Is that the time that Koshman was supposed to have said, "There is no use of my going to sick call"?
A Previous to that, he did tell me that.

Q Did he also at that time say -- oh, previous to that?
A Yes.

Q When did he tell you that he was afraid that he might strike Kondo and be executed?
A He told me that a number of times.

Q You weren't afraid to strike Kondo, were you?
A What?

Q You weren't afraid to strike Kondo, were you?
A No, I wasn't afraid to stryke him.

Q You did, in fact?
A Correct.

Q How many times?
A I hit him one time.

Q No question you being executed for that, was there?
A What's that?

Q You weren't afraid of being executed?
A That was over the Knudsen deal; he didn't want that to be told to the colonel.

Q The fact that you struck him?
A Yes.

Q Did he try to strike you back?
A No, he didn't strike me back. He knew better than that.

Q You testified yesterday that you made various reports and complaints to Hoga, Matsumura with respect to various incidents. When you received no action in compliance with your request, did you make any further complaints?
A That was as far as we were able to go.

Q Did you speak to your officers about it?
A They were thoroughly familiar with the situation.

Q Did they make any effort to do anything?
A They couldn't make no effort to do anything.

Q No chance to see Murata, was there?
A No.

Q Murata wouldn't speak to you?
A He wouldn't speak to nobody in the camp.

Q Did Matsumaro speak to you?
A Matsumaro, every day.

Q And did you make your complaints to him verbally every day?
A Yes.

Q Did he do anything to you?
A He did nothing.

Q You got no cooperation from anybody?
A I got no cooperation from nobody.

Q You didn't get any cooperation from your own officers?
A I did get cooperation from my own officers, but not from the Japanese.

Q And the American surgeon spent most of his time in his bunk?
A That's right.

PROSECUTION: There is no testimony before this court that he spent any time in his bunk.

DEFENSE: The witness has already testified to it.

PROSECUTION: That the American surgeon spent most of his time in his bunk?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: The American?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PROSECUTION: That I would like to clear up from the record. I didn't hear anything in the testimony that the American surgeon spent most of his time in the bunk.

PRESIDENT: What?

PROSECUTION: The counsel has stated that the American surgeon spent most of his time in the bunk. I don't recall anything in the record.

DEFENSE: I questioned the witness about the American surgeon spending most of his time in the bunk, and the witness replied that the American surgeon spent most of his time in the bunk, is that correct?

WITNESS: Right.

Q What kind of a man was Nosu, if you know, Chief?

A Just an average typical "ornery" and cruel, ruthless Japanese.

Q He acted peculiarly?
A Not any much different than the rest of them did.

Q Very excitable man, wasn't he?
A He was excitable.

Q He talked in a very loud voice?
A Yes.

Q And he ranted, raved?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see Matsumuro strike Kondo?
A I never did.

Q You know that several prisoners of war have testified in their affidavits that they saw it?
A Yes, they did see it.

Q You never saw that?
A I never saw that.

Q Did they ever tell you about it?
A Who was that?

Q Any of these men ever tell you that they saw Kondo get beaten by his officers?
A They saw one morning after the morning "tenko". that they saw the Camp Commander strike Kondo.

PRESIDENT: One morning after what?

A After "tenko" -- that's the morning muster, sir.

Q Do you recall a Staff Sergeant John Harold Zimmer?
A Zimmer, sir? Yes.

Q What did he do at the camp?
A He was on the outside, working detail.

Q Zimmer says in his affidavit -- several affidavits he made: "I have seen Matsumura beat Kondo when there were too many men who stayed away from work because they were sick." Now, I ask you this, Chief: Did any man just stay away from work detail because he didn't feel like going to work?
A Could any man?

Q Did any man?
A There may have been a few of them who stayed away from work.

Q Few men didn't go to sick call, didn't go to work call; just stayed in their bunks, is that it?
A No, they never stayed in their bunk.

Q What would they do?

A They would go over and talk and try to get on the sick list.

Q A few of these men were gold-bricksers, were they not?
A A few of them were gold-bricksers.

Q You testified with respect to Smith. Dr. Hochmann was thoroughly familiar with Smith's case, was he not?
A He would be, yes.

Q He had closer contact to him than you did?
A He did.

Q Have you read Dr. Hochmann's affidavit?
A I did not, no.

Q Have you read any of the affidavits in this case?
A No, only one man -- Atwood's.

Q Who?
A Atwood.

Q None of the others?
A No.

Q Dr. Hochmann says in February or March Smith came to him on regular sick call, complaining of illness. "In my examination it developed that Smith was undernourished and poorly developed." Was he a small man?
A Yes, he was.

Q "There were no positive signs -- symptoms of pneumonia present at this examination. I did, however, recommend to the Japanese medical orderly, Kunishi Kondo, that Smith be kept in camp for a few days in order to enable him to rest up." Dr. Hochmann goes further, "Kondo, I believe, acting upon general instructions that no prisoner, unless definitely sick (high temperature, broken bones) would be permitted to rest, refused to allow Smith to remain."

Now, do you know anything of these general instructions that Kondo received?
A That's true, the only way that you could be put on the sick list was when you had a high fever and evidence of an injury or some illness.

Q Where did those orders come from?
A That I don't know.

Q But there were orders to that effect?
A That was the general opinion of the camp.

Q I see, and those are the orders that Kondo operated under?
A Possibly so.

Q Now, what was the medical supply in late '43 and early '44, if you know?
A That I don't know for sure. I do know that there was a lot of Japanese medicine in the store room but we did not have access to that.

Q How long was Smith ill, if you recall?
A Smith was a pretty sick man when he came to our camp from the Philippine Islands.

Q He was?
A Yes.

Q What was he suffering from?
A Malnutrition.

Q Have beriberi or pellagra or anything like that?
A They all had that.

Q And he had that too, is that it?
A I believe he was on the borderline of pellagra and beriberi, as all the prisoners were.

Q And that was the result of malnutrition?
A Malnutrition.

Q In the Philippines?
A In the Philippines.

Q When you first came to this camp, were you allowed any rest?
A When we first opened up the camp, we were allowed to rest four days a month. That was on orders from Tokyo.

Q I mean when you first came to the camp, was there one substantial rest period before you started to work?
A Yes.

Q How long was that?
A About ten days.

Q What sort of work was Smith doing, do you recall, prior to February or March of 1944?
A He worked in the steel mills and general stevedoring.

Q He hadn't complained of illness prior to this incident in February, had he?
A Not to me he had not.

Q You don't know whether he went on sick call prior to that time or not?
A I don't know.

Q Now, Hess was a friend of yours, was he not?
A I knew Hess for several years in the Navy.

Q In the Navy?
A Yes.

Q And were you taken prisoner together?
A No, he was taken prisoner off the USS Quail in the Philippines.

Q You were taken in Guam?
A I was taken in Guam.

Q When did Hess first come into the camp, do you recall?
A I think there was two groups came; I believe he came in November, '42.

Q Was he a well man at the time?
A No, he was not a well man at the time.

Q What was he suffering from, if you know?
A Malnutrition.

Q Any evidence of beriberi or pellagra at that time?
A No, not at that time.

Q That was in November '42; now, a short while after that, he broke out about the middle of '43, did he not?
A There was a whole group started going down pretty bad about the middle of '43, especially the men who came from the Philippines. Most of these men had malaria, had dysentery and diarrhea.

Q A combination of tropical diseases?
A Yes, sir.

Q And Hess broke out with sores, is that correct?
A Ulcers.

Q Ulcers. What are the nature of these ulcers?
A We in the Service call them "Guam Blisters".

Q And as a result of that, he was sent to Itchiska Hospital?
A No, he had yellow jaundice when he went to Itchiska Hospital.

Q He didn't go to Itchiska because of sores?
A That was part of the reason, yes.

Q And how long did he stay at Itchiska?
A I think he stayed there about four months.

Q Did you ever see him over there?
A Whenever we took patients to Itchiska.

Q How did they treat him over there?
A They were treated terribly.

Q What sort of condition was he in when he came back?
A In a very weak condition.

Q And he rested for a month after he came back, didn't he?
A Yes.

Q Did Kondo allow him to rest for a month after he came back?
A No, we put him on paper work.

Q Did he stay in his barracks for a month?
A He stayed in his room because we worked it so -- we had our own prisoner foreman in charge of the work detail, of the paper work.

Q Kondo made no attempt to send him out to work?
A What's that?

Q Kondo made no attempt to send him -- take him off paper work and send him out, did he?
A Not at that time he didn't.

Q So, one month later, was he getting better?
A No, he was just about the average; he was gaining a little bit of weight.

Q He gained some weight; how about the sores on his body?
A His sores were gone.

Q He was running a fever?
A No, I don't know whether he was running a fever or not.

Q He was just thin and undernourished?
A That's right, just like all of us.

Q All of you were, weren't you? After he worked on the paper detail for a month, he went out to work, is that it?
A He did.

Q How long did he work before he complained and went to sick call?
A He worked for several months.

Q He never went to sick call during that time?
A No.

Q At the end of that time, his condition was pretty bad, is that it, Chief?
A It began to get worse.

Q It began to get worse. Sores break out again?
A No, the sores did not break out on him again.

Q Was he running a fever?
A No.

Q Did he have any broken bones?
A No.

Q He went to sick call?
A He did.

Q And he was sent to work?
A That's correct.

Q Now, at that time that was called, was that around April or May '44?
A What's that?

Q Was that around April or May of '44?
A When he started to get worse?

Q Yes.
A Yes.

Q That's the time when you would put him out on an easy detail, give him a chance to rest?
A Yes.

Q Now, you testified in direct that on a certain Friday, Kondo was in his bunk, and you say he started turning blue.
A That's true.

Q And you said on Sunday, you notified Kondo, is that correct?
A Sunday morning we notified him when we saw that he was about to die.

Q What did you do between Friday and Sunday?
A All we could do -- just let the man lay in his bunk.

Q Did you call Dr. Nosu?
A It was no use to try to call Dr. Nosu. He had many times previous to that refused to do anything it.

Q How about Dr. Harris?
A He wouldn't come over.

Q Did you ask him to come?
A No, he didn't ask him.

Q Did he know that Kondo was ill?
A They knew that the man was ill; we had nine men at that time seriously ill.

Q But you didn't notify Kondo till Sunday?
A Kondo saw him Friday and saw him Saturday.

Q Do you know what Kondo could have done with respect to getting a doctor for him?
A Evidently, he didn't do nothing.

Q Do you know what he did?
A What's that?

Q Do you know what he did?
A I don't know whether he saw any doctor or not, but I do know that there was no doctor come to see him.

Q I understand that. Do you think he was qualified to treat him?
A Who?

Q Konde.
A Konde was never qualified at any time to treat anybody.

Q But that was his job, wasn't it?
A That was his job.

Q You testified that Dr. Hoehman was rather upset after Hess died, didn't you?
A Yes, I did.

Q Dr. Hoehman knew Hess pretty well, didn't he?
A Hess was in the group that came with Dr. Hoehman.

Q Is that right?

PROSECUTION: Just a minute. I object to such remarks by counsel. I don't think they are necessary, and I ask that it be stricken from the record.

DEFENSE: I consent that it be stricken.

Q Dr. Hoehman came to the prison camp on the same ship?
A On the same prison ship.

Q And you testified yesterday that about ten days after Hess died, Dr. Hoehman was very upset about it, wasn't he?
A Yes.

Q And he told you that if it hadn't been for Konde, Hess would have lived?
A He said that little son-of-a-bitch kept him in the camp; he would have still been alive today --

Q You read Dr. Hoehman's affidavit?
A No, I have not read his affidavit.

Q Dr. Hoehman has an affidavit now in evidence before this Commission, to which he was questioned as to the circumstances surrounding the death of a Petty Officer Robert W. Hess. Is that the Hess you are speaking of?
A That's the Hess.

Q And Dr. Hoehman's answer is, "No, I cannot recall the circumstances, but I do recall the name." You think it's a little queer?

PROSECUTION: Just a minute. I object to that form of question. Counsel wants to interrogate him on it;

let him ask him about it, not "Do you think it's queer?"

DEFENSE: I submit to the court this is cross-examination.

PROSECUTION: It's not a proper question.

DEFENSE: It is a proper question. I want to know what he thinks. He has testified that Hoehmann was very much upset over Hess. Ten days later, he accused Kondo of causing his death. In the affidavit of Dr. Hoehmann, he doesn't even recall it.

PRESIDENT: What is the question?

PROSECUTION: I think the question can be reframed.

DEFENSE: "Do you think it is a little strange that Dr. Hoehmann doesn't recall Hess, or the circumstances of his death"?

PROSECUTION: The question was, "Do you think it's queer?"

DEFENSE: I am sorry. I will strike the "queer" and change it to "strange".

PRESIDENT: You changed the question from "queer" to what?

DEFENSE: "Strange".

PRESIDENT: The witness will answer that.

A He should recall that incident.

Q But hedoesn't, does he?
A Not according to what you have said.

Q There are three affidavits here from Dr. Hoehmann. Now, you testified yesterday with respect to Serafin. You testified that he [redacted] officers' orderly for one year.
A Yes.

Q And that he was your orderly for nine months and at that time, you said that the camp staff was too big?
A That's correct.

Q And Serafin had to go to work.
A That's true.

Q Well, how much had the camp staff grown at that time?
A Well, I think from the beginning of about 25 men to over 100 men.

Q And that was cutting in on the work parade?
A That's true.

Q Do you know where those orders came that Serafin go to work?
A No, I don't. He was among a large number of men who were forced out to work at that time.

Q Who did you receive your request or demands for work parties from?
A From the Camp Commander.

Q It's possible, then, that he was the one that ordered Serafin out?
A At the time that those men were ordered out to work, they did not receive any paper to carry out the paper work and we were using them in the camp as sanitation squadron.

Q You testified at the end of 1944, two months after he went out to work doing heavy work --
A Yes.

Q He began to show symptoms for beriberi.
A That's true.

Q That's the first time he had beriberi, to your own knowledge?
A- Yes, to my knowledge, yes.

Q What did he have -- wet beriberi or dry beriberi, do you recall?
A He started out with oedema and then it went to wet beriberi; that was the common beriberi that was there.

Q How long did he suffer from that ailment before he went on sick call?
A That I don't know.

Q He possibly may have suffered from it for some time before he went to sick call?
A He possibly had, yes.

Q When he went to sick call, you testified that he was sent to paper work, is that correct?
A He was sent back to the paper work detail.

Q Who sent him to that detail?
A Kondo.

Q Kondo would say "paper work"?
A That's correct.

Q If Kondo didn't think he was ill, he would say "work"?
A Outside work.

Q How long did Serafin work on paper work?
A Intermittently for several months.

Q During the latter part of '44?
A Yes.

Q Now, prior to his death, do you know how many times Serafin attended sick call?
A No, I don't.

Q You testified yesterday that when he was on paper work, he went on sick call trying to get off the paper work, is that correct?
A No, anybody who was sick that we felt was sick in the camp, we tried to get him on the paper work detail because that was considered a light job.

Q Anybody who was on paper work detail try to get off that?
A No, they tried to get on the paper work detail to keep from going outside to work.

Q I know. If they were very sick, Chief, would they try to get off paper work to go to bed?
A We would arrange that ourselves.

Q How did you do that?
A We just let the man go to his room and turn in on the top shelves and whenever the Japanese "hancho" would come up, we would say he is in the "benjo" -- in the toilet.

Q You were in a position to take care of these men?
A Yes.

Q You testified that he was taken off paper work and sent on manual labor, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Did you see him the day he went to sick call?
A No, the way that circumstance happened, we run out of paper and the men were laying -- remained in the camp, waiting for the paper to come. They would say it would come tomorrow; it wouldn't come tomorrow. It would be here the next day. We had to keep them in there to unload the trucks. The Japanese people found out there wasn't going to be any paper for a whole month; they sent the whole gang out to work with the exception of the cripples.

Q Who sent out the whole gang to work?
A The medical people did.

Q Did these men go down on sick call first?
A Yes, they held the sick call first; Kondo held that.

Q Do you know where the orders came out from?
A No, that came from the Camp Commander.

Q Now, have you read Dr. Hochman's affidavit in connection with Serafin?
A No, I have not.

Q Dr. Hochman testified to an affidavit in respect to Serafin. "Despite his age, he was assigned to do manual labor. Exactly what he did I don't know. On the evening of 16 January 1945, he returned from work completely tired and exhausted and with a head cold. He told me he felt he could not continue to work any longer because of his physical condition. With the permission of Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese medical orderly, Serafin was sent to his bunk and told to stay there. I wanted to hospitalize Serafin, but this was not permitted by Kondo. Serafin remained in his bunk all the following day. On the evening of 18 January 1945, between 2000 and 2100 hours, Serafin died."

A I think that that is incorrect -- the dates.

Q Do you question Dr. Hochmann's --
A The date.

Q How about the circumstances?
A The circumstances are quite correct. When he was returned to the camp, he was carried into the camp because he had fainted from work. He was carried into the camp and permission was given that night by Kondo for the man to be away from evening muster in order that he lie down. During that night, sometime between 1:00 o'clock in the morning and 5:00 o'clock in the morning, when we had to get up, Serafin died. He was brought into the camp in the afternoon and the following morning, he died.

Q I see. You don't think he died between 2000 and 2100 hours on the 18th?
A No.

Q Dr. Hochmann so states; perhaps it is just a lapse of memory, you think, isn't that it, Chief?
A What's that?

Q You think Dr. Hochmann is just mistaken as to the time?
A Nobody knew exactly when he died, but it was some time in the morning. We had an evening muster -- a late muster between 11:00 and 1:00 o'clock. That was every night. There was a complete bunk check.

Q I see. So, his bunk was checked and he was alive?
A He was alive at that time. So, he must have died between 1:00 and 5:00 o'clock in the morning as far as we could determine.

Q The next day, you accused Kondo of causing his death, didn't you?
A Yes.

Q Was any attempt ever made to get old men off the labor details?
A Yes.

Q When was the first attempt made?
A When we started -- when they first came to the camp in 1942. We organized and pleaded for a long time for a job to be created in the camp and they finally did start the paper work.

Q What do you mean by "we"?
A I and my other "hanchos" that I had in the camp -- Scott and Sergeant Major Matheson.

Q How about Dr. Hochmann? Did he join in that?
A Sometimes he did.

Q Dr. Hochmann in his affidavit says, "Before the death of Serafin, I had been thinking about writing a request to the Japanese to excuse old men over the age of forty from manual labor. After the death of Serafin, I did this."
A I think he did that at least about twelve times during the period he was in the camp.

Q He doesn't remember, is that his testimony?
A I do; I remember.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I didn't get that question.

DEFENSE: I said, "And he doesn't remember".

PROSECUTION: You are asking this witness if he doesn't remember?

DEFENSE: I said, "Then, he doesn't remember?"

PROSECUTION: Is that a question or a statement by counsel? I don't understand.

PRESIDENT: The objection is sustained. That question will not be answered.

PROSECUTION: It's not a question, sir.

DEFENSE: Then, is it your opinion that Dr. Hochmann doesn't remember these requests?

PROSECUTION: I object, calling for a conclusion on the part of this witness.

PRESIDENT: That question will not be answered. This witness knows nothing about Dr. Hochmann. You are bound by what Dr. Hochmann states in his affidavit.

DEFENSE: I want the record to show that the counsel for the defense is limited in his cross-examination when great liberality has been shown to the prosecution in his direct examination.

PROSECUTION: I ask that the statement be deleted from the record by this Commission as there is no basis for it.

DEFENSE: I move for a mistrial, if the court please. I move that a mistrial be declared on the grounds that the accused is not being given a fair trial guaranteed to him by SCAP directive.

PROSECUTION: May I answer that?

PRESIDENT: Yes.

PROSECUTION: I think that every liberality has been given to the defense counsel in his cross-examination of this witness, and I feel that the rights of the accused have been protected and will be protected by this Commission and I think it's unfair that defense counsel make such a statement to this Commission, to American officers.

PRESIDENT: The statement will not be deleted; the motion for a mistrial is not granted.

DEFENSE: Is the witness directed to answer my last question or is that last question to be withdrawn?

My question was: "Then, Dr. Hoehmen does not remember, does he?"

Now, this witness has testified to various things said by Dr. Hoehmen and various things done by Dr. Hoehmen doesn't mention them.

Now, there is a question as to whether Hoehmen doesn't remember them, or is it a question that those things didn't happen? It's a question of fact.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment, if the Commission please. Regardless of what those facts are, how can this witness state whether Dr. Hoehmen remembers or not. He can state what the facts are in his opinion. If they do not agree with the affidavit, that's something for the counsel to argue before this Commission. But, he obviously can't state if Dr. Hoehmen remembers or not. How can he look into somebody's else mind?

DEFENSE: I ask the Commission to recall when this witness was allowed to testify as to what persons thought; these affidavits are filled and the evidence is replete as to why things were done by other people and why motions for striking them from affidavits have been denied, I have the right to ask from a live witness the same question.

PRESIDENT: Does the prosecution object to the witness answering his question?

PROSECUTION: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT: Very well; the question will be asked.

Q Then, Chief, you believe that Dr. Hoehmen doesn't recall making those requests?
A I believe he doesn't recall or else, refuses to make statements.

Q You know of any reason why he should refuse to make a statement?
A The same reason a lot of prisoners of war who are back in the States refuse to come back out here again.

Q I don't mean come back; I mean to make a statement.
A We have found in our section, the International Prosecution

Section, the men have made their complaints in affidavits because they do not want to be returned to Japan as a witness.

Q How about those men who made very strong affidavits?
A Those are the few men who are willing to come back out here and testify.

Q You know how many men came back out here to testify?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to this line of cross-examination. It was not brought out in direct examination; it has nothing to do with the issues in this case.

DEFENSE: It was brought out in direct examination that he is now at the International Prosecution Section, brought over here to testify in these cases. I think it's perfectly proper to inquire, since he has made this voluntary statement, as to how many men are out here.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I again strenuously object; it has nothing to do with the issues in this case. If counsel wishes to attack this witness' credibility, let him do so. But his line of cross-examination has nothing to do with any of the issues in this case. He is merely wasting the time of this court.

DEFENSE: I don't see where it prejudices the prosecution's case in any way.

PROSECUTION: It has no prejudice, but it has nothing to do with the case; it should not be in the record. It's cluttering up the record.

DEFENSE: I asked him how many other men came out here to testify, if he knows.

PRESIDENT: You can answer that question.

A To my knowledge, about ten men have come here so far, sir.

Q Anybody else from this camp?
A From this camp, no.

Q Now, with respect to Robert M. Barber, you say he was a British Sea Captain?
A That's correct.

Q Merchant Seaman?
A Merchant Marine.

Q Suffering from stomach ulcers?
A Stomach ulcers.

Q And when did he first come to the camp, Chief?
A In November, 1942.

Q Second group that come in, is that it?
A No, he was, I think, in the fourth group.

Q Did he work in work parties?
A He worked for about several months.

Q Weren't these Merchant Seamen officers, ships officers, treated the same as the Army and Navy officers?
A No.

Q They worked, is that it?
A They were considered as privates, equivalent of privates in the Japanese army.

Q What kind of work did he do?
A Stevedoring work.

Q About how old a man was he?
A He was about, I think, somewhere in the neighborhood of about 40 years old.

Q Big?
A No.

Q Were you present on this occasion on sick call; you testified Kondo slapped him.
A Yes.

Q When did it take place?
A It was at morning sick call, between 6:30 and 7:00 o'clock in the morning.

Q Around when -- the time of the year?
A What time of the year?

Q Yes.
A That was in the early part of -- the latter part of '45.

Q November, December?
A Along about November and December.

Q Who else was on sick call that day?
A There was a number of prisoners on sick call that day.

Q I mean Japanese?
A Japanese -- Kondo was the only man present.

Q And is that the time he was told there was no powders?
A Yes.

Q Do you know of your own knowledge whether there was powder?
A There was no powder in the box.

Q There was no powder in the box?
A No.

Q And he insisted that he have powder, is that right?
A Yes.

Q What else did he say to Kondo?
A Well, he cursed him pretty bad.

Q He cursed him?
A In a loud tone voice, yes.

Q In English, is that it?
A Yes.

Q Do you think Kondo could understand what he was saying?

PROSECUTION: I object, calling for what somebody else might have thought; how can this witness know?

DEFENSE: I will agree that it be withdrawn.

Q His tone of voice was loud?
A That's right.

Q Nasty? He was angry, wasn't he, Chief?
A Yes, he was angry.

Q And you agree with me, Chief, regardless of language, you get sore at somebody and make faces and talk loudly, they understand?
A Yes.

Q How long did he bawl Kondo out?
A He spoke to him for about a minute

Q All the while bawling him out?
A Well, he wasn't exactly bawling him out; he told Kondo it was his job to get the medicine there, that it was in the store room; it was his job to have the medicine there on sick call in the morning so that he could treat the patients. The man was right.

Q There was no powder there, was there?
A No, there was no powder there because Kondo was too lazy to get it and bring it over.

DEFENSE: I ask that it be stricken as a conclusion.

A That was practically every day the same thing.

DEFENSE: Just a minute, I ask that that be stricken on the grounds that it is a conclusion.

PROSECUTION: I ask that it stay in the record on the grounds that it's responsive to the question.

DEFENSE (To Reporter): Will you read the answer and question, please?

(The question and answer were read by the reporter)

DEFENSE: I didn't ask him why there was no powder there. I ask that it be stricken as a conclusion.

PRESIDENT: The answer to that question will be stricken from the record.

DEFENSE: How about the portion that there was none there? That stands, does it not, sir?

PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q He struck him three or four times on that occasion?
A Yes.

Q Did he knock him down -- hurt him?
A No, just slapped him hard.

Q No permanent injury, was there?
A No.

Q He walked away?
A Yes, he did.

Q Now, we come to this 4th of July incident that you termed the "baka" incident. When did that regulation concerning sleeping with blankets across your stomach first go into effect?
A In the first summer that we were in the camp.

Q That was in '42?
A '43.

Q Everybody knew, did they not, Chief, that you are supposed to sleep according to Japanese regulations with a blanket across the stomach?
A Yes.

Q And you, knowing that Kondo would be around to see whether you were obeying regulations or not, had your fire watch posted, did you not?
A We did.

Q So that he could warn you?
A Yes.

Q And this night, somebody slipped up, is that it?
A Possibly the fire watch was down at the other end of the camp.

Q Was this a normal tour of duty on Kondo's part?
A It was the normal tour of duty as the men in the duty section; there was supposed to be a duty medical man with each section watch.

Q When he came, you weren't there?
A No, I was not there.

Q And you don't know when he came in or anything?

PROSECUTION: Are you asking that or making a statement?

DEFENSE: I am asking that.

PROSECUTION: Then, direct it in the form of a question; it sounds like a statement to me.

DEFENSE: The witness understands.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I don't understand whether that is a statement or a question. Counsel drops his voice at the end and it stands on the record as a statement.

DEFENSE: Read it back, please.

PRESIDENT: We are trying to impress on the defense counsel: Frame your questions in the form of a question, not just saying something, or making a statement after the witness has finished replying to your question. You are making lots of statements of your own.

Q Then, you don't know, do you?

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A I don't know what time he came into camp.

Q Now, from whom did you get the story about this?
A The fire watch woke me up when the commotion started.

Q Who was on fire watch that night, do you recall?
A One of the British boys.

Q How far away from this barracks did you have your quarters?
A My room, about the length of this room.

Q How long after it started did you get in there?
A Within about a minute or two.

Q You stopped it immediately?
A Yes.

Q So this went on for a minute or two?
A Yes.

Q "And in that minute or two, the man beat me, struck Sergeant Runak, Sergeant Vontom, Private Ordoyne, Private Smith, and one other man". Who was the other man? Vance?
A Vahoe.

Q Was he an Army soldier or was he Navy?
A He was a Chief Radioman in the Navy.

Q Do you know what his first name was?
A No, I do not.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, counsel has just made a statement that in that minute or two, all these men were struck, and then he proceeded to ask this man about Vance. He has made a statement and a question. I suggest that if he wants to interrogate this witness, that he phrase everything in the form of questions. The record is replete with statements made by counsel. If you read that back, you will understand what I mean.

DEFENSE: All right, we will read it back, please.

(The reporter then read the desired portion)

PROSECUTION: Does the Commission see what I mean.

PRESIDENT: Those were questions?

PROSECUTION: Yes, but the statement he made previously -- he made a voluntary statement that these men were beaten within a space of one minute and then he proceeds to ask some questions. He doesn't ask questions about the beating within a space of a minute; it's merely a voluntary statement by counsel which is not proper and he knows that.

DEFENSE: Sir, the witness has already testified in direct examination as to this incident. Well, I can make a voluntary statement as to anything he testified to and put it right back to him.

PROSECUTION: If counsel wishes to make statements, let him take the stand. It's not the proper way to interrogate this witness and he knows it.

PRESIDENT: Proceed. Try to frame your statements in the form of questions.

Q Vance, then, Mr. Sanders, is a Navy man?
A Yes.

Q I see. Now, did you see Kondo strike any of these men?
A No, I saw him strike none of the men, but I saw a man that had been knocked down when I came into the door; it happened right inside of the door.

Q You don't know who struck him, do you? You didn't see anybody strike him, did you?
A No.

Q Then, you don't know who struck him, do you?
A Oh, yes, I know who struck him because I knew who was there doing the striking. There is only two men that could have done the striking.

Q But you didn't see who did it?
A I didn't see who did it, but I know who did it.

Q It may have been the Corporal of the Guard.
A He struck him, too.

Q He had the bamboo stick, didn't he?
A So did he.

Q You testified on direct that there was one bamboo stick.
A He had a stick there; he had hold of a broom in his hands.

Q You didn't see him strike anybody with a stick, did you?
A No.

Q Did you see him grab it?
A What?

Q The broom?
A No.

Q But you saw the Corporal with the bamboo stick?
A Yes.

Q Did you see anybody get kicked?
A No.

Q How many Japanese people were there in that room at that time?
A There was a soldier of the guard, a corporal of the guard and Konde.

Q There were three people, weren't there?
A Yes.

Q You don't know which one of the three struck anybody, do you?
A What?

Q You didn't see any of the three strike anybody?
A I know that him and the corporal of the guard did the hitting.

Q You didn't see it, did you, Sanders?
A No.

PROSECUTION: Just a minute; he testified to this question at least six times. I see no further purpose in pursuing it.

DEFENSE: He is saying that he knows but he didn't see. Every time he says, "I know", I will ask him did he see it.

PROSECUTION: Ask him how he know sit. I object to the repeating of this question -- it's repetition.

PRESIDENT: Don't repeat the question. He said he didn't see it.

DEFENSE: If the court please, can we take a recess?

PRESIDENT: The court will take a ten minute recess.

The court then took a recess until 1000 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PROSECUTION: The witness is reminded that he is still under oath.

Questions by defense (continued):

Q On direct examination, Chief, you testified, did you not, that on that night when you came into the room, you quickly quieted Kondo down, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q You never had any trouble, did you, quieting down a situation like that?
A No, I wouldn't consider it trouble.

Q Did anybody else quiet him down?
A No.

Q You were the only one in camp whom he had any respect for in regards to that?
A Yes.

Q How about this corporal and this soldier, Chief, did you have trouble with them?
A No, I very seldom had any trouble with the guards.

Q On that night?
A On that night, no.

Q Now, at that time, you testified that Kondo told you that he held you responsible to see that these men slept with their stomachs covered.
A Yes.

Q And you understood, did you not, that he was seeking to enforce a Japanese regulation known to the men at that time?
A Yes.

Q Is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, with respect to Nettles, you testified that Nettles was found sleeping outside of the barracks, is that correct?
A Outside of his room.

Q Outside of his room?
A Yes.

Q Was he out in the open?
A Yes.

Q Was there a regulation against that?
A Yes.

Q Was that known to Nettles and the rest of the men?
A That was known to the camp.

Q Was he covered out there?
A No, he was not covered.

Q You know the reason for the regulation?
A The reason for the regulation was that they wanted everybody to be in the room.

Q Security precautions, you believe it was, Chief?
A No, just to see that they wouldn't have any difficulty in holding their bunk check.

Q Normal regulation, don't you believe?
A Normal regulations? Yes.

Q And Nettles that night disregarded that regulation, did he not?
A Yes.

Q You know if any other man had been disregarding that regulation?
A Yes, quite a few of them had been.

Q Any of them caught doing that?
A No.

Q That's the only instance where a man was caught?
A That was the only instance where he was caught.

Q Was there ever an instance on bed check when the Japanese personnel couldn't find certain men?
A Yes, there was a number of instances.

Q Where were those men at that time, if you know?
A They would probably be in the toilet.

Q Not violating any regulations?
A No.

Q The first instance of a violation of that regulation, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Was it ever violated after that?
A A number of times.

Q Anybody ever caught?
A No.

Q Kondo at that time was on duty, is that it?
A He was in the duty section.

Q Was he making his tour of barracks at that time?
A Yes.

Q Did you see him strike Nettles?
A No, I did not.

Q How many guards did the Japanese have controlling that camp at night?
A At night? One guard.

Q Would he be in a position to see Nettles?
A Sure, he saw him.

Q Is it possible that the Japanese guard is the one that struck Nettles?
A No.

Q You didn't see it?
A No, I know who struck him, though.

Q You don't know of your own knowledge, do you, Chief?
A I do know what the man told me.

Q You don't know of your own knowledge, do you?
A No.

Q How soon after this incident did you get there?
A Within a couple of minutes.

Q Was this in the same barracks, the same group of men that the "baka" incident occurred?
A No.

Q Different group of men?
A Different group.

Q You speak to Nettles after this incident?
A Yes.

Q Was he injured?
A His shins were injured -- where he was kicked on the shins.

Q Was he able to go to work the next morning?
A Yes.

Q No permanent injury?
A No.

Q Did you make a protest after the Nettles incident?
A Not an official protest.

Q What sort of a protest did you make, Chief?
A I told Matsumuro, the Camp Commander, what had happened because I knew there would be a report made by the Japanese Staff.

Q What did Matsumoto say?
A He said nothing about it.

Q Did you talk to him through an interpreter?
A No.

Q Did he understand you, Chief?
A A little English -- between English and Japanese, he understood.

Q Did you find that you had quite a bit of language difficulty -- that the barrier prevented you from fully explaining your position?
A Yes.

Q And do you feel that there were times for misunderstanding because of language?
A There may have been, but when I felt that there would be a misunderstanding, I always obtained an interpreter.

Q Normally, when the Japanese Company Commander would come out, would he bring an interpreter with him?
A There was an interpreter in every duty section.

Q How many duty sections were there?
A Sometimes there would be three and sometimes seven or eight sections.

Q There would be seven or eight interpreters?
A Yes.

Q All Japanese?
A All Japanese.

Q The only interpreters you could remember are Hayashi, Nishimoto -- is that his name?
A Nishimoto.

Q And Kimura?
A And Kimura.

Q Did you ever use Kimura to interpret for you?
A Yes.

Q And the other man you mentioned, did you use him also?
A Yes.

Q Were they pretty proficient in interpreting?
A Yes, they were.

Q Now, with respect to John Doherty, Jr., where did this incident take place which you testified to on direct examination?
A Where did it take place?

Q Yes.
A At sick bay.

Q You recall about when it was?
A Not exactly -- the exact date.

Q Was it in 1944, Chief?
A 1944.

Q You say Doherty was a little deaf?
A Doherty was deaf.

Q Was he totally deaf?
A Not totally deaf, no.

Q How long had you known that he was deaf?
A Since he came to the camp.

Q As Camp Commander, did you make any arrangements so that he could be fully aware of what he was expected to do and what he was expected not to do?
A Yes.

Q What were those arrangements?
A We made out written instructions and they were read to each group as they came into the camp -- what the regulations were -- to the camp.

Q Now, were you present at sick call that day?
A At sick call that day?

Q Yes.
A No, I was not present at sick call that day.

Q Then, you didn't see this incident either, did you?
A I was at the gate after the men had departed for work and they were still continuing sick call.

Q How far from sick call was that?
A What's that?

Q How far away from sick call was that?
A That was the sick call that started in the morning; most of the time, the way we tried to work it, the real sick men who were bed patients and the men who were sick in the camp were on the end of the line; the men who were expected to go to work or who were trying to stay in would be in the front of the line.

Q So, then, it's true, is it not, Chief, that on an ordinary sick call, there were men that were expected to have to go to work, was it not?
A Yes.

Q And normally, how many would you say that was out of a group of twenty-five?
A That were expected to go to work, we would expect that at least fifty percent would be sent to work.

Q These men received a little medication and then sent out, is that the way it was?
A Yes.

Q What were these men known to be suffering from, Chief?
A Colds and diarrhea, malnutrition.

Q You testified on direct examination, did you not, that Doherty was late for sick call?
A He was.

Q How late was he?
A I would say he arrived over there shortly after 7:00 o'clock.

Q He knew he had to go on sick call, did he not?
A He did.

Q There was no question of the fact that he was deaf and that --
A The excuse was that he didn't hear the word passed.

Q He knew when sick call was held, did he not?
A Yes.

Q Was there anybody present, rather?
A Dr. Hochheim, Merritt, and Ginger were there.

Q Was Doherty knocked down?
A No, he was not.

Q Was he cut or bruised?
A No.

Q What happened to him after the incident occurred?
A He went to work.

Q He went to work?
A Yes.

Q He was able to work, was he not?
A Yes, he was able to work.

Q He was just generally run down, the way anybody else was, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q There was no question of a sick prisoner being sent to work, is there, Chief?
A No.

Q Do you know why he was reporting to sick call?
A Because he had a bad cold.

Q Did he receive medication that day?
A What's that?

Q Did he receive any medication?
A He had been receiving medication.

Q On that day?
A On that day, he received no medication.

Q Because he was late?
A Yes.

Q Were regulations posted at that time, Chief, that sick call be held between 6:30 and 7:00 o'clock?
A Yes.

Q Chief, had you ever gone to a medical Naval sick bay a little late for sick call?
A Yes.

Q Have you ever been denied any medication?
A No, I have never been denied any medication.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to the question. It has nothing to do with this case.

PRESIDENT: Repeat the question.

(The reporter then read back the question)

PROSECUTION: I am objecting to that question on the grounds it has nothing to do with the issues in this case.

PRESIDENT: You are not talking about this —

PROSECUTION: He is talking about an Allied or an American Naval sick bay; he is not talking about the Japanese dispensary at the Headquarters POW camp. It has nothing to do with this case.

DEFENSE: If the court please, we are charged with the violation of the laws or customs of war. We are charged here with striking sick prisoners of war. We are charged with refusing to give medication. I think it perfectly competent to show that such incidents might take place in our own establishments. Certainly, it wouldn't constitute a violation of laws or customs of warfare.

PROSECUTION: If the Court please, counsel is interrogating this accused about the American prisoner of war named John Doherty, Jr., Specification 7. There is no allegation in that specification that this man was refused medication. The only allegation is that he was hit by Kenichi Konde.

DEFENSE: That's true, sir. I am questioning with respect to that specification now, but if the court will glance at Specification No. 10, we are charged between the 31st of January, 1945 and the 8th of May, 1945 among other things with wilfully and unlawfully failing, neglecting and refusing to provide them necessary medicine and medical attention..." I think it's perfectly proper. I am not confining my questions to one specific specification entirely.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The witness may answer that question.

Q Your answer, Chief, is that you were never denied medical attention in the Naval dispensary, is that correct?
A No, I never was.

Q You say that there was some marks on Doherty's shins?
A No, I did not.

Q Would you say, Chief, that the effects of the mistreatment could be seen on the following day?
A No.

Q Now, with respect to Horsley, when did he come to the camp?
A In November, in '42.

Q And your testimony is that at the time, was it not, that he was fifteen years of age?
A Fifteen years of age.

Q What kind of work was he doing?
A In the camp?

Q Yes.
A Outside work, stevedoring and in the steel mills.

Q Was he physically fit to do it?
A When he came to our camp, he was.

Q Was he suffering from any disease at that particular time?
A Not at that time, no.

Q You testified that he went to Itchioka Hospital?
A Yes, he did.

Q What was he suffering from, Chief?
A Dysentery.

Q And how long did he stay at Itchioka?
A About three months.

Q And he came back here?
A Yes.

Q Cured?
A Yes.

Q What was his state of health after he came back?
A He was in a very weakened condition.

Q Do you recall when he went to Itchioka?
A No, I don't recall when he went to Itchioka.

Q Well, can you tell me approximately what year it was in, Chief?

A It was in 1944 when he went to Itchioka.

Q About when did he come back?
A Several months later; I don't remember the exact date.

Q How long before he returned from Itchioka -- strike that -- how long was he back in the camp before this incident occurred that you testified to?
A He had been back to camp about six weeks.

Q Had he been resting?
A We fixed him up with a job outside as a checker.

Q Was he reporting on sick call during that time?
A No.

Q No attempt was made, was there, to take him off that job and put him at heavier manual labor?
A No.

Q What was wrong with him this particular day that you testified to?
A Well, he was just a young lad in the camp and there was nothing wrong with him except that he was -- the kid had been very ill and he was very weak and run down.

Q And what was the name of the Japanese officer that gave him permission to stay in?
A Kajiyama.

Q What was his duty at camp?
A He was a supply officer.

Q And at that time, was he duty officer?
A Duty officer.

Q Do you know whether or not this information was conveyed to Kondo before sick call?
A No.

Q Was there a check made at sick call or before sick call to determine just how many men were available for work, how many men were on sick call and how many men would stay in camp on permanent detail so that the Japanese would know just where everybody was?
A No.

Q You testified, correct me if I am wrong because I may have the wrong impression, that Kondo found out one man was missing; was that your testimony?
A That's correct.

Q How did he find that out, Chief?
A Well, when we lined the men up outside in the road, we knew exactly how many men was out to work; we knew the exact number of men who were in camp. That's the permanent camp detail. We got the list from the doctor how many men was working on the paper work and how many men was on the sick list and then that report had to be turned in immediately. After the men had shoved off, that work had to be done at the gate.

Q And to whom was that report turned in?
A That was turned in to the Camp Commander.

Q And do you know if he in turn would show it to Kondo?
A Yes.

Q So that he could check your figures; were those your figures?
A Yes, those were my figures.

Q Did he check your figures against the number of men he had on sick call?
A Yes.

Q And that is the way that he had found out one man was missing?
A That's correct.

Q Well, Chief, if your report was made up to show that so many men were staying in camp and so many men were going to work and so many men were going to sick call, in order for Kondo to realize that one man was missing, then Horsley's name was on that sick list, wasn't it?
A No, my report was correct, but Kondo's report could not be correct because he was short one man.

Q Well, if your report would show, for instance, fifteen men were going to sick call, you didn't include Horsley in that count, did you?
A No.

Q Horsley didn't go to sick call, did he?
A No.

Q Kondo would have fifteen men before him, wouldn't he?
A That's correct.

Q How would he be missing a man?
A He would be missing a man because I would turn in 660 men out for work and the number of men in the camp and I had him listed in the camp on a "general" -- that's rest, remaining in camp. My figures were correct.

Q Well, did you have them down by name?
A No, just by numbers.

Q Well, Kondo wasn't interested in how many men were actually going on work details, was he?
A Yes, his report had to jibe.

Q He just had to report, did he not, how many men were on sick call?
A That's correct.

Q And then Lt. Kajiyama would take sick call, subtract it from the number of men going to work, or add it to the number of men going to work and the number of men staying in camp and he had a total of everybody.

PROSECUTION: Are you asking a question?

DEFENSE: Yes.

A That was correct.

Q Your record would show, taking these numbers, for example, would it not, 200 men going to work?
A Yes.

Q Two-hundred men stay in camp?
A Yes.

Q Now, was Horsley one of these 200 men?
A Yes.

Q Say, 25 men to sick call.
A Yes.

Q Now, Kondo would get that report, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q And the only man he would see would be the 25 men on sick call?
A Yes.

Q And he would count them and see 25 men?
A Yes.

Q Now would he know if you could tell us, Chief, that somebody was missing?
A When I put on the report, I list opposite so many men here and so many -- this place and that place and then I had on this report one man is resting.

Q That was an addition?
A That brings the total up to the camp. We had to account for every man, where he was at. Like, for instance, we put down on Osaka Ko working party, 40 men, Sumitomo working party, 100 men; one man in camp; so many men on paper work; so many men working in the galley and I had down this one man -- rest.

Q You didn't have his name down?
A No, just the number.

Q Do you recall how many men were resting that day?
A No, I don't recall.

Q Was it more than one?
A I think he was the only one that day that was remaining in camp -- that is actually resting in camp.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I don't like to interrupt. Counsel is interrogating this witness on Horsley. The specification is that Horsley was beaten by Kenichi Kondo. The specification is very clear. I don't see any necessity in going to all of these extraneous matters which have nothing to do with the specification; it is irrelevant and is cluttering up the record. It has no bearing on it whatsoever.

DEFENSE: If the court please, there is nothing irrelevant or immaterial in seeking to inquire into the circumstances of an incident.

PRESIDENT: What?

DEFENSE: Inquiring into the circumstances of this incident. I am not confined to just asking this man whether so and so was beaten on such a day. I have the right to inquire what the circumstances were to show whether the beating was justified, whether it was purely arbitrary -- what happened.

PRESIDENT: The witness will answer that question.

A Sir, --

PRESIDENT: Answer the question; the objection is overruled.

A Will you ask the question again?

Q I asked you whether there was more than one person marked "rest" on that particular day.
A We had several men in camp -- men who did not have -- who were minus their legs and several permanently crippled men. They were allowed to remain in camp as "rest".

Q At the time this Japanese officer told Horsley to stay in camp, did he tell him to report on sick call?
A No.

Q Were you present?
A Yes.

Q He didn't tell him that at all?
A No.

Q Did you testify yesterday that Kondo sent for Horsley?
A That's correct.

Q By name?
A No.

Q What did he do?
A He asked the doctor -- told him that that man was resting in camp and he says, "Bring this man here." So, Merritt went over and brought the man over to the sick bay.

Q Which doctor do you mean?
A Dr. Hoshman.

Q Then, as far as you know, Kondo never received any official notification that Horsley was allowed to rest?
A No.

Q Was Dr. Hosa in camp on that day?
A I don't think so.

Q You made an official protest, did you not, with respect to the Horsley incident?
A Yes.

Q Now, what effects were there? You testified that Horsley was bleeding from the mouth as a result of that beating.
A Yes.

Q Did you see the beating?
A I saw the end of the actual beating.

Q And you saw blows struck?
A Yes.

Q And he was bleeding from the mouth?
A Yes.

Q Anything else?
A His face was swollen up.

Q How long did his face remain swollen up?
A For several days.

Q Did his bleeding of the mouth stop?
A After we got him back to the room.

Q Any teeth knocked out?
A No.

Q Any permanent injury?
A No.

Q After that, after that incident, what happened to Horsley?
A Horsley worked the following morning.

Q Did he work that day?
A That day, no, he remained in camp the rest of that day.

Q And he worked the following morning, you say, and he continued to work after that?
A Yes.

Q Now, with respect to Aage Horreby Knudsen, you testified, did you not, that he had an accident?

A He did.

Q Did you see it, Chief?
A The accident? No, I did not.

Q What's the basis of your knowledge with respect to it?
A Well, whenever a man was injured at work, we received a written report of all the information to the accident from the work leader so that the man could be placed on the sick list as having been in an accident.

Q Who was the work leader, do you know, of that group?
A Goodrich.

Q Goodrich and did you receive the official written report?
A Yes.

Q And then Goodrich in his report stated that certain bags of rice -- is that it?
A Yes.

Q Had fallen on Knudsen?
A Yes.

Q And injured his back. Did you ever ask Knudsen what happened?
A In telling the story of what happened, I would be questioning anybody who was in an accident. I tried to get all of the information I could because any man who was injured at work still continued to draw his pay when he remained in the camp and we were allowed to put him on a full rations.

Q What did Knudsen tell you about that incident?
A He was working around the base of the a back of rice; they had a plank where they used to run up the plank and pile it up higher, and one end of the pile of rice gave way and the top bags came down, striking him on the shoulders and back.

Q Do you recall when that happened?
A Not exactly; I don't remember that date.

Q Have you read the statement about Bowlby made by Mr. Knudsen?
A No, I did not.

Q I will read it to you.

DEFENSE: This statement is offered by the prosecution as the statement made by Mr. Knudsen. He says:

"Cooker 2 also Fujioka in Cooks Camp No. 1, knocked me over when I was unable to walk due to pain in my back occured while carrying a large plank that ordinarily took 4 men to carry.

Now, you have testified, have you not, that Knudsen told you that he was in an accident and those bags fell on his back?

A Yes.

Q Is it your opinion that he no longer recalls what happened to him?

PROSECUTION: I object to that. I object to the form of that question.

DEFENSE: Well, sir, here's my situation. I have two inconsistent statements, one allegedly made by Knudsen to Chief, and one allegedly made by Knudsen to somebody in the Commander Third Fleet, Liberation Force Able. I am trying to find out where the truth lies. I am bound by this paper.

PROSECUTION: You can only ask this witness what he knows, and whatever he states, that's what this witness knows.

DEFENSE: He knows now.

PRESIDENT: Ask him what he knows about that.

DEFENSE: Is it the Commission's ruling that I can only ask this witness what he knows of his own knowledge?

PRESIDENT: You can ask the witness what the man told him.

DEFENSE: I cannot inquire into it any further?

PRESIDENT: What?

DEFENSE: I cannot inquire into it any further, trying to explain the discrepancy and the two inconsistent statements of one man?

PRESIDENT: You can proceed.

Q Can you make any explanation, Chief, as to why Knudsen would tell you one thing and make a statement --
A What's that?

Q Can you give us any explanation as to why Mr. Knudsen would make one statement to you and then later, make a different statement?
A Did he say there that he was carrying a plank?

Q "Plank".
A It's a large plank; it's about this wide (indicating) and about twenty feet wide that the men would shift around and they would set it up on this pile of rice; they would stack up different stacks of different heights and they would put this heavy plank up on this stack so that the man could get a start to run when they are carrying this heavy bag on their shoulders; they would run up this plank and drop this bag that they were carrying on their shoulder, on top of this stack. Evidently, when this plank was put up, when they were carrying this plank to get it in position, when he was trying to put it in position, that's when the stack fell over on him.

Q I think your explanation helps us to some degree, but he still says he suffered this injury carrying a large plank that ordinarily took four men to carry. Are you sure, Chief, that this injury didn't occur because he attempted to pick up excessive weight?
A I don't think so from the way I could remember it.

Q Did you see the Knudsen beating?
A I didn't see the actual blows struck, no.

Q Where did it occur?
A In Room 9.

Q What is that -- a particular part of the sick bay?
A That was his own room; he was, because of his accident, confined to his bed.

Q And what time of the day did this occur?
A About 7:30 in the morning.

Q And you testified, did you not, that Kondo was making his rounds of the bed patients?
A That's correct.

Q Was anybody else with him?
A Horwitz was with him.

Q Horwitz?
A Yes.

Q Any other Japanese personnel?
A No.

Q How many bed patients did you have at that time?
A I don't remember; we used to have on an average maybe six or seven -- maybe ten.

Q This would be immediately after sick call?
A Immediately after sick call.

Q What injury was sustained from this beating?
A No permanent injury.

Q How long after this incident did he recover fully so that he could walk normally?
A About four or five days later.

Q Was he on the road to recovery when this thing happened?
A Yes.

Q How long after the accident did the beating occur?
A I think about five or six days after.

Q You testified that two men were helping him walk?
A Yes.

Q When you came in, you testified that Kanda was in a rage.
A Yes, he was.

Q You quieted him down all right?
A I quieted him down, yes. I struck him.

Q Strike him with the fist?
A Yes.

Q Closed fist?
A Yes.

Q Did you knock him down?
A Yes.

Q How many times did you strike him?
A Just one time.

Q One good blow, is that it?
A That's all.

Q Did he say anything to you?
A No, he said nothing.

Q Did he make any complaint?
A No, he did not.

Q What did he do?
A What's that?

Q What did he do?
A He left the room then.

Q What did you do with Knudsen at that time?
A We put him in his bunk.

Q Who else was present outside of Merritt?
A That was all.

Q Now, you testified, Chief, I believe, that certain men were on full rations and other men were on half rations?
A That's correct.

Q Was there a regulation as to that?
A Yes.

Q What was that regulation?
A That regulation came from Tokyo, supposedly from Tokyo, that the men who worked every day were to receive 700 grams of rice. The men who were sick were only supposed to receive 500 grams. Officers were supposed to receive between 350 and 375; men who were injured at work received 700 grams per day.

Q So that when Marvitt says in his affidavit, Chief, that Kondo had the authority or took it upon himself to cut rations of sick men in half, he is not speaking with any knowledge, is he?
A No, I wouldn't say he is.

Q That is a regulation, to your knowledge, that applied to all camps in Japan?
A Yes.

Q Now, are you familiar with the supply of medicines in the camp all during your stay there?
A Yes.

Q At any time was there a severe lack of medicine?
A From what I found out later, there should never have been a pinch for medicine.

Q Well, at the Osaka Camp, it is true, is it not, that they had received supplies from all camps at the Osaka District?
A Yes.

Q And they distributed it from there?
A That's correct.

Q If you saw certain medicines there, you would know, would you not, if that was medicine intended for the Osaka Main Camp?
A The medicines that were in our dispensary, he would have to draw the medicine from Kobayashi who was in charge of the store room for the sick call.

Q Now, isn't it true, Chief, that Dr. Nasu was the one who gave this medicine supply?
A No, I don't think Dr. Nasu authorized the withdrawal from the store room. I think that came from Marvo or Dr. Asaba. I don't know which of the two, but it was directly under Nasu.

Q You recall Titus, Ozendine, Lewis?
A I know them, yes.

Q Do you recall an incident in which they were beaten?
A Them boys was beaten quite often.

Q What were they? They didn't hesitate to break regulations?
A No.

Q Pretty rough boys?
A They were.

Q There is some testimony here that on one occasion, they stole some soap, do you remember that?
A Which time?

Q Well, they received a severe beating for it, supposedly administered by ten guards and supposedly also participated in by the Camp Commander and the accused Kondo.

A I remember that incident, yes.

Q Where did that take place?
A That took place in Room 11.

Q What were the circumstances behind it?
A This group broke into the store room and stole about 500 packages of cigarettes and I think about 100 bars of soap, and this happened a few days before the "Chubu Gun" inspection. And the American who was in charge of that store room discovered the theft the following morning and he made an immediate report to the Japanese authorities, and the Japanese duty officer and the supply officer came over and they started to investigate.

Q Did they pick out Oxendine, Lewis and Titus?
A No, they took the whole room at first, and everybody knew who done it in the camp. The prisons know, but the Japanese didn't know. So, the Camp Commander threatened -- he made the statement that he would take all of our clothing away from us, and see that we did not receive any more Red Cross clothing, foods and medicines and take away all the privileges of the camp, and he withdrew the evening meal from the men.

Q Was that unless --
A Unless the guilty people admitted that they were the ones who went into the store room.

Q What did Oxendine, Lewis and Titus do?
A They admitted they were the men who went into the store room.

Q Were they beaten before they admitted?
A Not before they admitted it, no.

Q They weren't beaten to force a confession, were they?
A No. Just a minute; the whole room was struck; the whole room was lined up outside and they had the Japanese guards and the camp staff there and they [illegible] all the men go back into the room. As they passed the staff, each one of the staff slapped the man about the face, struck him with his fist and then they put them in the room and lined them up and said the guilty men had to confess who were the ones who went into the store room and stole the soap and cigarettes.

Q Those three stepped forward, is that it?
A No, in that group there was nine men.

Q They all stepped forward?
A Yes.

Q Did you see what happened after that?
A I saw most of it, but they took the men over to the guardhouse and we weren't permitted to get near them.

Q Kondo go over to the guardhouse?

A All the staff went over.

Q Was the Camp Commander there?
A Yes, he was there.

Q Did he issue any orders?
A That I don't know. Did he do what?

Q Did he issue orders that sent the whole staff over there?
A I don't know whether he sent them over there. He said all the men who were guilty had to go to the guardhouse. So, the whole staff went with them.

Q Did Colonel Murata go there?
A Not that night, no.

Q Was he there later?
A The following day he came to camp.

Q Did he see any of this incident occur?
A No.

Q Do you recall the "thug"?
A Yes.

Q Who was that?
A Fujimoto.

Q Did he play an important part in this beating?
A In that beating, yes.

Q Did you actually see Kondo participate in it?
A Yes, I saw the whole group there.

Q What did you see him do?
A Out in the passage way, he was among the group that slapped and struck the men as they were lined up to go in their room.

Q You didn't see him take part in any torture?
A I could not see what happened at the guard house because it was a policy of the Japanese authorities whenever they were going to punish a man or a group of men, they would immediately station two guards with fixed bayonets so nobody could approach the scene and see what happened. They were afraid that we would take a hand in it and there would be a mutiny started.

Q Do you recall whether or not these men were tried and sent to prison?
A They were.

Q You know what sentence they received?
A They received seven days and eleven days, and three men, I think, received sixteen days, if I remember right.

Q For the theft of how many cigarettes?
A Five hundred packs of cigarettes.

Q And how many bars of soap?
A About 100.

Q You testified, did you not, that Kobayashi -- Sergeant Kobayashi was in charge of the medical supply.
A Yes, that's what we understood from the set up.

Q And Kondo didn't have direct access to those supplies, did he?
A All he had to do was to get the key.

Q He had to go to somebody to get the key?
A Yes.

Q He didn't have the key himself?
A No.

Q Did you ever see how Kondo got his supplies in the morning?
A No, I didn't.

Q You don't know what went on -- whether Kobayashi gave him certain medicines?
A No, I don't know.

Q You testified, Chief, that you had this meeting in August of 1944 and Kondo promised that he wouldn't mistreat anybody after that and you testified that for a short while, he maintained that promise.
A About two weeks he did.

Q You also testified, did you not, that he cooperated with Dr. Hochman?
A He did, yes.

Q Now, while Kondo was cooperating with Dr. Hochman, isn't it true that the number of men that went on sick call and stayed in the camp began to increase?
A It would go up and down periodically.

Q When he was cooperating, it would go up?
A Yes.

Q And then you testified he changed?
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether or not Kondo might have received orders from Colonel Murata or the Camp Commandant with respect to the number of men?
A No, I wouldn't know that.

Q It is highly possible, is it not?
A Yes, it is possible.

Q Or he might have received orders from Dr. Nosu?
A He may have.

Q Did Dr. Hochman ever talk to you about Dr. Nosu?
A Yes, a number of times.

Q Did he ever express an opinion to you that he thought Dr. Nosu was crazy?
A We considered the whole group of them crazy.

Q But in particular, wasn't Dr. Nosu erratic?
A Well, I wouldn't say he was more so than the rest of them. They were all more or less erratic. You never knew from one day to the next what they were going to do or how they were going to act.

Q And did they know themselves how their superior might act?
A Who is that?

Q For instance, Kondo, would he know from one day to the next how Nosu might act?
A He should; he lived here all of his life.

Q You wouldn't say, then, that Nosu was particularly erratic?
A I wouldn't say he was too erratic.

Q Now, with respect to providing medical attention and medicine, have you ever seen Kondo refuse to give medicine to a man who was visibly ill?
A Not visibly ill, no.

Q Never saw him refuse to treat a man whom he can look at and see he was ill?
A No.

DEFENSE: The defense is finished with its cross-examination. You may inquire.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q Chief Sanders, in Specification 4, it is alleged that Kenichi Kondo did mistreat Barber, a British prisoner of war by striking him about the face. You have testified about that, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q How do you know about that?
A Because I was at the gate when this happened.

Q Did you see this?
A I saw the end of it, yes.

Q And you know that that actually took place?
A I knew that that actually took place.

Q In Specification 5, it is alleged that on 4 July 1944 Kenichi Kondo, the accused, did mistreat and abuse wrongfully Sergeant Vontom, Private Ordoyne and Vance and Smith by striking them about the body with fists and bamboo stick and by kicking them. You testified about that in court, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q How do you know about that?

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to object to this on the grounds that any answer would be hearsay -- not made of the witness' own knowledge.

PROSECUTION: The court has already admitted statements by the witness based on hearsay, on his direct examination.

PRESIDENT: What was the question?

PROSECUTION: How does he know about that.

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A Because I came into the room just at the end of this incident, and I could see what had happened.

DEFENSE: I ask, if the court please, that that be stricken.

PRESIDENT: You could see what?

A I could see what had taken place during the incident, how the men had been lined up and stood at attention and between Kondo and this Corporal of the Guard, they struck these men.

Q Now, were you told by the victims that they had been struck by Kondo?
A Yes, and everybody else that was in the room.

Q No question that Kenichi Kondo was the perpetrator?
A He was one of them that participated in it.

Q Now, there seems to be some question about how long the incident took place. You were awakened by whom?
A By the fire watch.

Q And when you got there, what was the status of the fight? Had it terminated?
A It had terminated.

Q Did you find out how long the fight had been going on?
A It had been going on for some time before I was awakened. The fire watch was standing outside; when he saw the men had been struck, he come immediately and woke me up.

Q About how long would you say that it had been going on?
A At least about ten or fifteen minutes.

Q Were you told that?
A Yes.

Q Now, Specification 6, it is alleged that on the 11th of July, 1944, the accused Kondo mistreated and abused Private Nettles by kicking him and striking him about the body with fists. How do you know about that?
A Because I got there after it was over with and Nettles told me what all had happened.

Q Did he tell you right at that time?
A Right after that it happened.

Q In Specification 7, it is alleged that Kondo mistreated and abused Doherty who was sick by striking him about the head with a leather slipper. How do you know about that?
A I was there.

Q Did you see it?
A Yes.

Q Did Doherty also tell you about it?
A Yes.

Q In Specification 8, it is alleged that Kondo mistreated and abused Horsley, who was sick, by striking him about the body and head with his fist. How do you know about that?
A I was there.

Q Did you see it?
A Yes.

Q Did Horsley tell you about it?
A Yes.

Q In Specification 9, it is alleged that Kondo mistreated and abused Knudsen, who was sick, by striking him about the head and body with a leather slipper. How do you know about that?
A I came in the room after that had happened.

Q Were you told that by Knudsen?
A I was told that by Knudsen and Merritt, both.

Q Anybody else tell you about it?
A No.

Q Did Knudsen have any visible effects of that beating?
A No.

Q About how many men came on sick call each morning?
A On an average of about twenty-five men.

Q During the half hour period on sick call, did the doctor have ample time to examine each patient?
A No, I wouldn't say that he had ample time to examine them.

Q Did he have a chance to look at each patient?
A Yes, he did.

Q As Camp Commander, were you in a position to know everything that went on in the camp?
A I was in position to know everything that happened in the camp.

Q So far as you know, who was the Japanese in charge of the dispensary?
A Kondo was.

Q Is there any question in your mind about that?
A There is no question about that in my mind at all.

Q Were you ever told that anyone else had charge of the dispensary?
A No.

Q Were you ever led to believe that anyone else had charge of the dispensary?
A No.

Q Did Kondo ever tell you that he was in complete authority in the dispensary?
A Yes.

Q Were you ever led to believe that Kondo was acting under orders of someone else in the operation of the dispensary?
A No, I was never led to believe that he was.

Q Who was Kondo's superior?
A Well, I would say Dr. Nosu was his superior. But the chain of command in the medical outfit in the Japanese Army -- there is nobody who will ever be able to understand that set up, because everybody never knew who was the boss. You never could pin anybody down.

DEFENSE: If the court please, I am going to object to this line -- this answer, rather, on the ground that the accused is expressing an opinion.

PROSECUTION: You have asked him to express opinions on statements with regard to affidavits.

DEFENSE: Well, in that case he had spoken to American prisoners of war and American prisoners of war had made statements and they were inconsistent. I think I have a right to -- and here he is expressing an opinion as to the Japanese chain of command.

PRESIDENT: What is the question?

(The reporter read the question and answer)

DEFENSE: I ask that the answer be stricken on the grounds that it was not responsive. He was asked who was his superior and he went on to make this lengthy statement.

PROSECUTION: I think it's very responsive.

PRESIDENT: I think it's very responsive. The question will be answered.

PROSECUTION: It's already answered.

Q How many times did you hit Kondo?
A One time.

Q Was that over the Knudsen incident?
A Yes.

Q Why didn't Kondo report you for striking him?

DEFENSE: I object to this on the grounds that it's calling for a conclusion as to what took place in someone's else mind and this witness is not competent to testify as to why somebody didn't do something.

PROSECUTION: You have already asked that, counsel. You brought out that he struck Kondo.

DEFENSE: I didn't ask why Kondo didn't report him. Just because I didn't ask the question, that doesn't mean that it's proper on redirect examination. It still calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness. That's something which he is not competent to testify to.

PROSECUTION: Counsel has asked this witness lots of questions which have called for a conclusion on his part. Now, he suddenly objects to one.

DEFENSE: Yes, I have. I have asked him for conclusions as to what his state of mind was -- not as to somebody's else.

PRESIDENT: What was that question?

(The reporter read the question)

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A I don't know why he never reported me, sir. My opinion is because he realized he was so much entirely in the wrong by striking this man who was sick.

DEFENSE: I ask that it be stricken, sir. It's a conclusion on the part of the witness and not responsive.

PROSECUTION: I asked him "why"; and he is stating the reason.

DEFENSE: He is not competent to testify as to why somebody else didn't do something.

PROSECUTION: The court has already ruled on its admission.

PRESIDENT: You stated you didn't know?

A I did not know.

PRESIDENT: You are expressing an opinion?

A Yes, sir.

DEFENSE: Is that portion already answered stricken from the record?

PRESIDENT: His answer terminates with the words "I did not know."

Q Defense counsel has read a portion of Merritt's affidavit which stated that he had the authority or took it upon himself to cut rations of sick men in half, to which you have testified. Also, in the affidavit, Merritt has stated Kondo prescribed medicine and examined the sick men, ordered sick men to work in all kinds of weather?
A That's correct.

Q Any doubt about that?
A No doubt about it.

Q Beat them, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q Any doubt about that?
A No doubt about it.

Q Ordered sick men to work in all kinds of weather -- strike that -- disturbed them at night while they were trying to sleep, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q Caused unnecessary trouble in the camp when it could have been avoided, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q Is there any mistake about that?
A No mistake about it.

Q Dr. Hochman made an affidavit in this case in which he stated Kondo "made decisions that should have been made by a doctor and often overrode my decisions." Is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q He further states "he hit sick POW's over the head with books, slapped their faces, hit them with his fists and kicked them." Is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q Any doubt about that?
A No doubt about it.

Q You have testified previously that you have had conversations with Dr. Hochman about Serafin, is that correct?
A I did.

Q Will you state again to this Commission what Dr. Hochman told you concerning the responsibility for the death of Serafin?
A He said he considered Kondo responsible for that man's death because he was too old and in no condition to have ever been sent out to work.

Q Was there any equivocation in the statement when he made it to you?
A No.

Q Referring to specification 2 in which it is alleged that Kondo contributed to the death of Robert Hess, by forcing him to work when he was physically unable to do so and denying him the necessary medical treatment, you have previously testified to a conversation between yourself and Dr. Hochman as to the responsibility for Hess' death, is that right?
A That's correct.

Q Will you repeat to this Commission, again, what the conversation was?

DEFENSE: I am going to object to it on the grounds that it was hearsay and wasn't made in the presence of the accused.

PRESIDENT: Objection is not sustained.

A When we first found out about Hess, the condition of Hess, it was quite a bit of shock to the men in the camp, because he was a likeable man. He never did complain very much. Dr. Hochman made the statement that if that man had been allowed to remain in camp and received proper rest, that he could have recovered from his illness, and because Kondo was the man who sent him out to work, he considered that he was responsible for his death.

Q Did you ever personally talk to Kondo about his beating sick prisoners of war?
A I did.

Q On more than one occasion?
A On more than one occasion.

Q Did you ever talk to Kondo about his denying sick prisoners of war medical treatment?
A No, not denying them medical treatment; I did speak to him about striking prisoners of war and sending the sick men out to work.

Q Did you ever speak to Kondo about his overruling of Dr. Hochmann's decisions?
A Yes.

Q On more than one occasion?
A On more than one occasion.

Q And what was his answer to you on that?
A Most of the time he just wouldn't answer me about it.

Q And when he did answer it, what did he say?
A He said that he was running the sick bay; that he was the man in charge.

Q Did Kondo admit to you that he had ever struck any sick prisoners of war or any prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q On more than one occasion?
A On more than one occasion.

Q Did he admit it in the meeting that was held where you were present, Dr. Hochmann, Kondo and Hayashi?
A Yes.

Q Did he admit that he overruled Dr. Hochmann's decisions?
A Yes.

DEFENSE: I object to this line of questioning on the grounds that it's leading. I ask the reporter to read back the entire line of questioning so that the court can see --

PROSECUTION: Counsel for the defense has been leading the witness.

DEFENSE: I can lead on cross-examination. It's a fundamental rule of law.

Sir, prosecution is putting words in the witness' mouth and the witness is answering "yes"; the questions are leading, and I ask that the entire testimony from that portion of the testimony just read be stricken and the record disregarded. Let the examination proceed as redirect-examination should proceed; Direct questions.

PROSECUTION: If the court please, the majority of the answers which the witness has given have already been brought out in direct and redirect-examination; there is nothing new that has been brought out now. It's merely a clarification. Counsel should not object because there is nothing new that has been brought out.

DEFENSE: This is the first time that the prosecution has attempted to put any evidence before the Commission to which the accused has already admitted. There is no testimony up to this point as to any admissions by the accused.

PRESIDENT: The foregoing testimony will not be stricken from the record. The prosecution will try to refrain from leading questions so far as possible.

Q At the meeting that took place that you have just referred to, did Kondo make any admissions to you about mistreatment of prisoners of war?

DEFENSE: I object to that question on the grounds that it's leading. The proper question: At the meeting, what did Kondo say? That is a direct question.

PROSECUTION: There is nothing leading about it. If he says he knows, that's the end of it.

PRESIDENT: The objection is not sustained.

Q Will you answer the question?
A He did make admissions at that meeting.

Q Now, will you tell this Commission what admissions Kondo made about mistreatment of prisoners of war?
A He admitted that he had beat the prisoners of war at sick call; he admitted that he overruled Dr. Koshimura's suggestion and he admitted that he was wrong.

Q Wrong in what respect?
A In his treatment of the prisoners.

Q What else did he admit?
A Well, I don't exactly remember the other things that he admitted. That was the gist of the conversation.

Q Were those admissions made to complaints that were being registered at that time?
A Yes.

Q Were those complaints that you had been registering to him for a long period preceding that meeting?
A They were.

Q Did you ever see Kondo strike prisoners of war?
A I have.

Q Do you know whether Kondo ever received any orders to strike prisoners of war?
A No.

Q So far as you know, did he act under his own orders?
A I think he did.

Q Did you ever see Kondo refuse to hospitalize sick prisoners of war?
A No, I did not.

Q Did you ever see Kondo refuse to give medications to sick prisoners of war?
A Only if a man came late, he would send him out to work without any medicines.

Q Did you ever see Kondo disturb the prisoners at night?
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether he was under any orders to disturb the prisoners at night?
A No.

Q Did you ever see Kondo overrule any of Dr. Hochmann's decisions with regard to sick prisoners of war?
A At times, I have.

Q Do you know if he was under any orders to overrule Dr. Hochmann's decisions?
A No.

Q Did you ever see Kondo send any sick prisoners of war to work?
A I have.

Q Do you know whether he was ever under any orders to send sick prisoners of war to work?
A I don't know whether he was under orders to do that or not.

Q Were you ever led to believe at any time whatsoever, during the entire period of time that you were at the camp as Camp Commander, that anyone other than Kanichi Kondo, the accused in this case, was in charge of that POW dispensary?
A No.

PROSECUTION: Would the court care to take a recess at this time?

PRESIDENT: The court will take a ten minute recess.

The court then took a recess until 1100 hours, at which hour the personnel of the court, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution is finished with redirect examination. Does the defense wish to recross?

RECROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q You testified, I believe, as to how far away from the scene of that "being" incident your quarters were.
A Yes.

Q How far did you say that it was?
A Just about the length of this room.

Q Was it in the same building?
A In the same building -- the long building.

Q Separated by doors?
A By two thin partitions

Q And you also testified, did you not, that this beating went on for ten or fifteen minutes before you got there?
A The beating, I imagine, just started when the man came and called me.

Q So, it wasn't going on for ten or fifteen minutes?
A The arguing -- when they got the men ready to line up -- that went on for some time.

Q But the beating wasn't going on for ten or fifteen minutes, is that correct?
A No.

Q And the beating was going on for one or two minutes, is that correct?
A That's correct.

Q You also testified that you were in a position to know everything that went on in the camp, did you not?
A Yes.

Q Don't you mean by that, Chief, that you were in a position to hear from someone as to what might have happened?
A Yes.

Q You weren't in a position to see everything, were you?
A No, I was not.

Q And isn't it true that most of what you have testified to here today and yesterday is what you were told by other people?
A By reports and the people whom I had in charge of various groups.

Q You don't believe, do you, Chief, that Kanda is strictly on his own in the operation of his sick bay?
A I would say he was more or less on his own.

Q But there was a medical officer, his superior, there?
A Yes.

Q And a medical officer would check from time to time, would he not?
A Not with us they wouldn't.

Q I mean would check the sick at all?
A Yes.

Q Were you ever present? You have testified once that you were present with Dr. Ano, Dr. Hoshuan when some thirty-five men had the mumps, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q And Dr. Amo was the one who sent these men to work?
A Yes.

Q So, on that occasion, Chief, it was Dr. Amo who disagreed with Dr. Hechman?
A Yes.

Q Now, this meeting that you had in August of '44, Hechman, Kondo, the interpreter -- who else was present?
A And myself.

Q And yourself. That was right after the Knudsen incident, wasn't it?
A Yes.

Q Was that the next day?
A Yes, it was about the next day.

Q That's the day following the time that you knocked him down and struck him?
A Yes.

Q Kondo was a little afraid of you?
A What's that?

Q Was Kondo afraid of you?
A I don't know whether he was or not.

Q Did you threaten him at that meeting?
A No.

Q Did you make any attempt to hit him?
A No.

Q Was he given a full opportunity to explain his actions?
A He certainly was.

Q Do you recall a prisoner of war by the name of Yaeger?
A Who?

Q Yaeger.
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether or not he ever was in the hospital?
A Yes, he was in the hospital.

Q Do you recall when?
A It was in late '42 and early part of '43.

Q Do you know what he was suffering from?
A Malnutrition and beriberi, I believe.

Q Was there an incident involving Kondo and Yaeger?
A I had a report about it that he kicked him over there at sick call.

Q You don't know that of your own knowledge?
A No.

Q Do you know what brought about this incident?
A No, I don't.

Q Do you know whether or not Yaeger received any serious injuries as a result of it?
A No.

Q Did you see Yaeger after it happened?
A I saw him about three days after it happened.

Q What was his physical appearance?
A Well, the man was a very sick man when he was over there. That's where we had all the critically ill patients in the beginning.

Q Do you know what brought about that incident?
A No, I don't.

Q Merritt was prisoner of war medical orderly, was he not?
A He was.

Q Pretty familiar with what went on at sick call?
A He was.

Q He was in a better position to see than you were?
A He was.

Q Now, if Merritt says "a lieutenant and the senior medical officer", do you think he is referring to Nosu?
A No, we called our senior medical officer Dr. Hoshuma. How does he refer to that?

Q He is answering a question: "Who was this Japanese doctor at Osaka Camp No. 1? And he says, "he was a lieutenant and the senior medical officer".
A That was Lt. Nosu.

Q And he also says that he backed Kondo in everything he did.
A Yes, he would.

Q Did you on occasion see him there?
A Very seldom I ever saw Dr. Nosu. He used to come out of his office and come into the sick bay to the toilet which he would do quite frequently during the day.

Q Now, it was your opinion and it still is, is it not, that Kondo was not qualified to treat and prescribe sick men?
A Yes.

Q In your opinion, then, his knowledge was less than that of a Pharmacist Mate in the Navy, was it?
A Much less.

Q How about an aid-man? Did you have an aid-man?
A We don't have an aid-man in the Navy.

Q Are you familiar with the work done by aid men in the Army?

A No, we have Senior Petty Officers, Senior Line Officers in the Navy; also in the engineering force -- that was before the war -- they were all given instructions in first aid -- it lasted about a period of over three months.

Q Do you think that Kondo would have the training that a first aid man might have?

A No.

Q Probably not as good?

A Not as good.

Q Do you know of your own knowledge just how much training he had?

A No, only from what he told us.

Q What did he tell you?

A He said he was several months in the Japanese military hospital before he came to our camp.

Q Did he ever attempt to treat sick prisoners of war beyond his ability?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to the form of that question on the ground it calls for an answer that this witness couldn't possibly know. He doesn't know the extent of his ability.

DEFENSE: The witness has testified that he has less ability than a first aid man. I am seeking to determine whether or not Kondo took upon himself to treat sick men.

PROSECUTION: How does this witness know what the extent of his ability is?

DEFENSE: He testified that he has less ability than a first aid man.

Q Did he ever attempt to treat sick prisoners of war beyond his abilities as a first aid man?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Was the treatment that he gave limited to applying salves or bandages, or something?

A Yes.

Q Anything of more serious nature than that?

A He never would do it; he would make our own men do it.

Q That, don't you believe, was to their advantage?

A To whose advantage?

Q To the sick men's advantage?

A Certainly, it was.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by members of the Commission:

Q With reference to Specification 4, the specification alleging that certain incidents in connection with Robert M. Barber, the British Prisoner of War, occurred between the 1st of January and the 16th of February, 1944 --

A Yes.

Q You stated that about November or December, 1944 the incident occurred. Will you clear up that point?

A That incident happened shortly before we merged the two camps and we merged the two camps in January of '44. I don't remember the exact dates on it.

Q To the best of your remembrance and knowledge, where would you say that incident occurred?

A Right around the holiday period, between December and January, sir.

Q December of '45 and January of '44?

A Yes, sir.

Q You testified that "We made numerous attempts to have the older and frail men excused from work." You later stated that the requests included Dr. Hochman's on several occasions, is that correct?

A Yes, sir.

Q What were the details or wordings of these requests -- or to put it in other words -- what concessions were you requesting?

A We had heard through the prisoner grape vine about the other camps in our area and through our conversation with the Camp Commander, that we were trying to get a detail brought into the camp -- that is, some outside company -- that would give us work of a light nature that these old men and cripples could work. Our idea was that we wanted as many men to get on the working list as possible so that we could get an increase in our rations.

Q Then prior to Serafin's death, you had never made a request to excuse older men from work entirely, had you?

A Before his --

Q Before Serafin's death?

A No, sir, not entirely; no, sir, not to be entirely excluded from work.

Q Then is or isn't Dr. Hochman correct when he states that he made a specific request that men over forty years of age be excused from work some time after Serafin's death? Could that statement be correct, to your knowledge?

A It could be correct, to my knowledge, but Dr. Hochman and I and Sergeant Major Mathesen and our officers had talked this over a number of times and we had talked it over with the Camp Commander and the interpreters to have some provision made for these elderly men to work at easy details. We have been trying that ever since the camp had been established at various times.

Q Then, as far as you know, Dr. Hochman's written request to excuse men over forty occurred but once?
A I think that he wrote that several times, sir, to my knowledge. I know he wrote letters several times about the old men.

Q Prior to Serafin's death?
A Yes, he did prior to his death. Dr. Hochman was continually writing letters to that effect and to the conditions of the camp.

PRESIDENT: No further questions by the Commission, the witness will be excused.

DEFENSE: Just a moment, please. I have just a few questions.

RECROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q These letters, whom were they addressed to?
A To the Camp Commander and the senior medical officer, the Japanese medical officer.

Q Chief, when you were liberated, what steps were taken to get statements from the prisoners of war?
A There was no steps taken.

PROSECUTION: I object to the question. I don't see that it has anything to do with the issues in this case. It's entirely irrelevant, immaterial.

PRESIDENT: What was the question?

DEFENSE: I asked what steps were taken to get statements from the prisoners of war after they were liberated.

PROSECUTION: It has nothing to do with the issues of this case. It's irrelevant and immaterial.

DEFENSE: Can I make an offer of proof, sir? We have various men alleged to have been beaten and we have no affidavit from any of them. None of the victims supplied us with affidavits except Knudsen and maybe one or two others.

PRESIDENT: What steps were made by who?

DEFENSE: By the persons who liberated them. I assume it was done at the Replacement Depot, the Third Fleet.

PRESIDENT: By the witnesses?

DEFENSE: No, sir, by the American authorities after these prisoners of war were liberated.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution would be glad to make a statement as to why they were not.

DEFENSE: I think the witness can testify.

PRESIDENT: The witness can answer the question. Answer the question.

A There was no attempt to question the majority of the prisoners when we were liberated. At my camp, we liberated our own selves. We took the surrender of the Japanese units that was in our area. We notified the railroad people that we demanded a train with two engines, and we came across Japan. We met our Naval Forces and Australian Forces at Hamamatsu. They took us to the rescue and gave us clothing and from there, we were transported by destroyers to Kisarazu and the Navy put us aboard planes and took us directly to the States. Most of the men there was quite a lapse of time before anybody contacted them for a statements.

Q That was Naval personnel, was it not?
A That's right.

Q Army personnel went to the 29th Replacement Depot at Lingen?
A I don't know where they went to.

Q Do you know under what circumstances a statement would be taken from Knudsen by the Third Fleet?
A No, I do not.

Q Were you ever contacted to make a statement?
A Yes.

Q Where was that? Back in the States?
A In Washington.

Q Then, no liberating team came to your camp in Osaka?
A No, I wasn't at the Osaka Main Camp when the war ended.

Q Where were you when the war ended?
A At Takaoka Camp No. 10.

PROSECUTION: What possible connection has all this questioning to do with the issues in this case? Counsel wishes to comment that we do not have the affidavits from the victims. That's proper in the final argument. What has it got to do with the interrogating of this witness or any of the issues in this case?

DEFENSE: Well, sir, I am just making the offer of proof. I am trying to find out why it was that certain statements may not have been taken. Maybe there is a reasonable explanation for it. I don't like to comment on something to which there is a reasonable explanation -- to paint a dark picture when it may not be that way. I think it's perfectly fair and legitimate.

PROSECUTION: Counsel is permitted to paint any pictures he wishes in the case and he may draw inferences for the court's decision why there are not certain affidavits, which we can meet.

However, I think we are wasting the time of the court by pursuing this line of questioning. What difference does it make from this witness --

DEFENSE: I am through with him, anyhow.

PROSECUTION: Is the Commission through with this witness, sir?

PRESIDENT: Yes. The witness is excused.

(Witness excused)

PROSECUTION: May it please the Commission, would it be proper for Chief Sanders to remain in the court room while the next witness for the prosecution testifies?

DEFENSE: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT: Is it the intention of the prosecution to return him to the stand?

PROSECUTION: We might. I don't know, depending upon what the defense puts out.

DEFENSE: There will be no definite testimony today, anyhow. I have no objection.

PRESIDENT: All right, if there will be no objection.

PROSECUTION: Thank you, sir.

The prosecution will call for its next witness, Hisakichi Hayashi.

HISAKICHI HAYASHI, a witness for the prosecution, was sworn and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q What is your name?
A Hisakichi Hayashi.

Q Mr. Hayashi, during the war, were you ever employed by the Japanese Army?
A Yes.

Q And in what capacity?
A I was acting as a Nisei interpreter at Osaka POW Camp, Main Camp.

Q What is that main camp also known as?
A Chikko.

Q Is Chikko the town where this camp is located?
A Yes.

Q And when did you start working as interpreter at this camp?
A 24 November, 1942.

Q And how long did you continue to so be employed?
A Till the end of September, 1945.

Q Do you remember a man by the name of Chief Sanders?
A Yes, I do.

Q Was he at that camp during the time that you were there?
A Yes.

Q Did you know him well?
A Yes, I did.

Q Do you see him in this court room?
A Yes, I do.

Q Will you point him out?
A (Indicating)

PROSECUTION: May the records show that the witness has identified and pointed out Chief Sanders.

Q What was Chief Sander's duty at that camp?
A He was taking charge of war prisoners in Osaka.

Q When you say he was "taking charge" of war prisoners, do you mean -- what do you mean?
A He was acting on part of war prisoners in having contact with the Japanese authorities.

Q Do you remember a Dr. Hoshman at that camp?
A Yes, I do.

Q What was his status at that camp?
A He was examining the patients, war prisoner patients.

Q At sick call?
A At sick call.

Q Do you remember a prisoner of war by the name of Merritt?
A Yes, I do.

Q And what did he do at that camp?
A He was assisting Dr. Hoshman at the dispensary.

Q Was there any other Allied prisoner of war in the dispensary?
A There was a British war prisoner whose nickname was "Ginger".

Q Do you know Kenichi Kondo?
A Yes, I do.

Q Do you see him in this court room?
A Yes.

Q Will you point him out?
A There he is (indicating).

PROSECUTION: May the record likewise show that the witness pointed out the accused, Kenichi Kondo.

Q Was Kenichi Kondo at Osaka Main Camp during the period you were there?
A Not all the time.

Q For how long a period was he there while you were there?
A I don't remember exactly -- the exact period, but at the end, he went to some camp -- Oeyama Camp, I think.

Q At the end, you mean -- when, in 1945?
A I believe it was 1945.

Q And when you came to that camp, was Kondo there?
A Yes, -- no, he wasn't there.

Q He came when? About?
A He came a little later -- probably in the early part of 1945.

Q What was Kondo's duty or job at the camp?
A He was taking charge of the dispensary for the Japanese Army.

Q Who was treated at that dispensary?
A War prisoners.

Q Who else was with Kondo in that dispensary?
A Dr. Hochman, Merritt, and Ginger.

Q Were there any other Japanese personnel regularly on duty at the dispensary with Kondo?
A No.

Q Was there any Japanese doctor on duty at the dispensary with Kondo?
A Once in a while, he came down.

Q When you say "he came down", who do you mean?
A Dr. Amao or Dr. Maruo or sometimes, Dr. Mori.

Q Will you tell the Commission about how frequently these three mentioned Japanese doctors would visit the dispensary?
A I don't know.

Q Have you any idea? Were they there every day?
A No.

Q Were they there once a week?
A I don't think so.

Q Were they there about once a month?
A Probably once or twice a month.

Q Some time in 1944, do you recall a meeting or a conference at which you, Chief Mate Sanders, Dr. Hoehman and Kondo were present?
A Yes.

Q Will you tell the Commission how this meeting came about?
A One day, Dr. Hoehman told me that he will quit working in the dispensary. I asked why. He says his decisions was not considered and he cannot work with Kondo any more. So, Dr. Hoehman, Sanders and myself made arrangements to meet Kondo in Chief Sander's room. And there, we had a conference. Dr. Hoehman told Kondo to consider his opinion in regard to treatment of war prisoners -- patients of war prisoners.

Q Excuse me, just a moment. I don't want to interrupt you, but when you say Dr. Hoehman told him to consider his opinion, you mean Dr. Hoehman's opinion?
A Yes, I did.

Q Please continue.
A And at the same time, Chief Sanders suggested that Kondo should not beat war prisoners. To this, Kondo agreed that in the future, he will treat war prisoners -- patients of war prisoners -- kindly, and will not beat any of them, and also, cooperate with Dr. Hoehman and consider his decisions -- his opinion.

Q Was the subject of sending sick prisoners to work discussed at that meeting?

DEFENSE: Object to it on the ground that it's a leading question.

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, in the first instance, the witness is a Japanese and in the second place, the rules of evidence have been considerably relaxed and liberalized and it is not my purpose to lead this witness, but rather to facilitate and expedite. I do not intend to put words into the mouth of the witness.

DEFENSE: I think the same expeditious procedure can be followed, if the witness is asked, "Was anything else discussed? What was discussed?"

PRESIDENT: Repeat the question.

(The reporter then read the question)

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled. The question will be answered.

A Yes, I think it was talked about.

Q Who talked about it?
A Dr. Hochman.

Q And insofar as you are able to remember, tell the Commission in substance what he said.
A I don't recall the exact words.

Q You need not tell the Commission the exact words, but what the substance of it was. Do you understand? What did they talk about with reference to sending sick prisoners of war to work?
A That was in connection with considering Dr. Hochman's opinion; whenever he suggests that a patient should not go to work, Kondo should consider and take his ideas into his own consideration.

Q All this took place in the presence of Kondo?
A Yes.

Q And you were acting as the interpreter?
A Yes, I did.

Q Was the subject that the prisoners of war not be disturbed while asleep discussed?
A Yes, it was.

DEFENSE: Same objection on the grounds it's leading, sir.

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

A Yes, it was.

Q Will you tell the Commission about it.
A Dr. Hochman also suggested that the prisoners of war should not be disturbed during the nighttime and Chief Sanders also suggested that because Chief Sanders think that prisoners of war will need all slumbers. They should rest good during the nighttime for the next day's work, and it was ordered by Dr. Hosa to put all the prisoners should put blankets around their bodies during nighttime, and it was inspected during nighttime and they ever find any prisoner of war without blanket, they wake him up and tell him to put the blanket over them.

Q Did Dr. Hochman or Chief Sanders complain about Kondo doing that?
A Yes.

Q And what did they complain about?
A They complained that Kondo should not go around during the nighttimes and disturb prisoners of war.

Q Had Kondo done that before?
A I don't know.

Q Did they at this meeting say that he had done it?
A Yes.

Q Who said?
A Sanders.

Q What did Kondo say, if anything, at the conclusion or during this meeting?
A He agreed that he will not disturb in the future.

Q And what about sending sick prisoners to work?
A He just says that he will consider Dr. Hochman's opinion.

Q Did he say anything with regard to his overruling Dr. Hochman's opinion about sick prisoners?
A He said he will cooperate with Dr. Hochman.

Q What else did he say?
A He also says that he will not hit any war prisoners in the future.

Q You mentioned the blanket incident. Do you know anything about the "baka" incident?
A I think it was Chief Sanders who told me that Kondo hit several war prisoners because he was called "baka" during night inspection.

Q Do you remember a prisoner of war by the name of Hess?
A Yes, I do.

Q What about him do you remember or know?
A He was an American war prisoner and it was told by Chief Sanders and Merritt that after his death that he was going on to work while he was sick.

Q Do you remember a man by the name of Serafin?
A Yes, I do.

Q Will you tell the Commission what you know about him?
A He was an Italian, an old man who did not do hard work. He was working as officer orderly at first and then afterwards, as the orderly of Chief Sanders. Later, he started to go out to work, and one day, as I was told, he was carried back from work.

DEFENSE: I object to that on the grounds of hearsay.

PRESIDENT: Read the question.

(The question was then read by the reporter)

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

A And later, I was told he died.

Q Had he been sick?
A Yes, he was.

Q Was he sick when he went to work?
A Yes.

Q Going back to Hess for a moment, did Hess die?
A Yes, he died.

Q Was he sick?
A Yes, he was sick.

Q Did he go to work while he was sick?
A That I do not know.

Q Do you remember a man by the name -- a prisoner of war by the name of Doherty?
A Yes, I do.

Q Will you tell the Commission what you remember or know about him?
A Doherty was an old American war prisoner; his hearing was not good, and I was told by Sanders that he was hit by Kondo because he didn't -- he was late in reporting on sick call.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I am going to ask that this testimony be stricken on the ground that this witness has offered to corroborate Chief Sander's testimony and all of this testimony as to specific instances -- his corroboration consists entirely of testifying what Chief Sanders has told him at one time or another. On that grounds, I ask that it be stricken, as it cannot be corroborating testimony and hearsay at the same time.

PRESIDENT: Objection is overruled. The Commission will receive hearsay evidence for what it is worth.

Q Please continue.
A That's about all.

Q What was the physical condition insofar as you know of Doherty? Was he a big man -- a strong man?
A He was a big man, but he was an old man and rather weak.

Q What happened to Doherty?
A I was told that he was hit by Kondo for being late on sick call.

Q Then what happened to him?
A That's about all.

Q Do you remember a British prisoner by the name of Horsley?

A Yes, I do.

Q Will you tell the Commission what you know about him?
A This was also told to me by Sanders, that he was sick and was given permission to stay in by the duty officer on the previous night and next day, he was found sleeping in room, and he was hit by Kondo because he did not report to the sick call.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I am going to object to this line of testimony and ask that it be stricken on the grounds that it's offered in corroboration of the Chief's testimony and is merely hearsay as to what the Chief told him and it cannot be offered in corroboration, if it is hearsay. It can add no weight to the Chief's testimony.

PRESIDENT: It is overruled; the Commission will receive the evidence for what it is worth.

Q What happened to Horsley?

PROSECUTION: This may be repetitious, if it please the Commission, but I would like to have him repeat that.

A Horsley was given permission to stay in for a day by the duty officer on the previous night.

Q Do you remember the name of the duty officer -- the Japanese duty officer?
A Yes.

Q All right, continue.
A And next morning, he was found in his room without reporting to Kondo and he was slapped by Kondo.

Q Do you know or did you know an American prisoner of war by the name of Knudsen?
A Yes, I do.

Q Please tell the Commission what you know about this prisoner.
A This was also told to me by Chief Sanders, that he was hit by Kondo because he did not report to sick call when he was hurt on the back.

Q Do you know how Knudsen was hurt?
A No, I do not.

Q Do you know what part of his body was hurt?
A The back was hurt.

Q Do you remember the incident involving a prisoner of war who was found sleeping outside of the room on a bench?
A Yes.

Q Will you tell the Commission about that?

A I forget the name of the war prisoner, but he was found sleeping on the bench one hot night, and I believe he was hit by somebody and the next day, I got permission to let prisoners sleep on the benches and gave that permission to Chief Sanders.

Q Shortly after this meeting about which you have testified, did you see a report written by Chief Sanders?

DEFENSE: I object to this question on the grounds it's leading.

PROSECUTION: I will withdraw the question.

Q Did you have occasion to hear about complaints against Kondo prior to this meeting?
A Yes.

Q By whom were these complaints made?
A Dr. Beckman.

Q How about Chief Sanders?
A He also made complaints.

Q Did Merritt ever tell you about it?
A Yes.

DEFENSE: I object to these questions on the grounds that they are all leading. This witness is Japanese, I know, but he is testifying in English and the same procedure can be followed as is followed with an English speaking witness.

PROSECUTION: The fact that he is testifying in English is really for the convenience of all concerned.

DEFENSE: It certainly isn't too convenient for the accused.

PROSECUTION: I realize that.

PRESIDENT: Objection overruled.

Q Did Merritt ever complain to you about Kondo?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see any written complaints about Kondo?
A No.

Q When you say "no", you never saw or you don't recall?
A I don't recall.

Q Will this refresh your recollection: Did you see a report by Sanders shortly after the beating in which he made certain complaints against Kondo?
A I do not remember whether it was afterwards or before the meeting, but I saw a copy of the complaint which Chief Sanders made.

Q And where did you see this report?
A In his room.

Q And to whom was it addressed?
A It was addressed --

Q If you know.
A I don't recall to whom it was addressed.

Q Was it addressed to Lt. Matsumuro?
A I can't recall that.

Q Or Dr. Hosa or Colonel Murata?
A I don't know which.

Q It was addressed to somebody?
A Yes, to one of the Japanese officers.

Q Did you read this complaint?
A Yes, I read it.

Q What did it contain?

DEFENSE: I object on the grounds that it's not the best evidence; the best evidence of what that letter contained is the letter itself; whatever this witness testifies, there maybe some fault in his memory, his ability to read English and he cannot give us the best evidence of a writing; the only evidence, the best evidence of a writing is the writing itself, unless you can prove the whereabouts of the writing itself.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I would like to ask this witness two or three simple preliminary questions.

PRESIDENT: You withdraw that question?

PROSECUTION: Temporarily.

Q Mr. Hayashi, do you read English?
A Yes.

Q Did you read this report that you have just mentioned?
A Yes, I read it.

Q Did you understand it?
A Yes, I understood it.

Q Do you recall its contents? Do you remember what was in it?
A No.

Q What did the report say? I will withdraw that question. Do you have that report?
A No.

Q Do you know what became of that report?
A No.

Q What did Chief Sanders say in that report and about whom was he talking, if anyone?

DEFENSE: I object to that on the grounds that it's leading.

PROSECUTION: What's leading?

DEFENSE: It's leading.

PROSECUTION: I don't see anything leading.

DEFENSE: The question properly is -- if the court is going to receive his testimony -- What were the contents of the letter. Let's not try to narrow it down to one specific instance.

PROSECUTION: I am trying to refresh his recollection. I am trying to help him. I am not trying to testify for him.

DEFENSE: The witness has already testified that he doesn't remember, that he doesn't know.

Q If you don't understand me, or the question, tell me.
A Yes.

Q And I will say it again.

PRESIDENT: Do you understand that question?

A Yes.

PRESIDENT: All right, the question will be answered.

A I don't recall exactly what was the contents.

Q Well, what do you recall about it?
A I can't remember.

Q Did this report have anything to do with some of the things talked about at the meeting?

DEFENSE: I object to it on the grounds that it's leading, Sir. He has attempted in every way to find out what the report contained and the man says he doesn't know. He can't recall.

PROSECUTION: I am trying to help him refresh his recollection.

DEFENSE: You are not trying to refresh his recollection; you are trying to lead him into an answer.

PROSECUTION: I haven't the slightest idea what he would say was in it.

Q You stated before that prior or before the meeting, Hochmann, Sanders and Merritt complained about Kando?
A Yes.

Q What did they complain about?
A They complained that Kondo overruled Dr. Hochman's decisions.

Q What else?
A That he hit the war prisoners.

Q Anything else?
A That's all I can remember.

Q Were there any complaints made after the meeting?
A Yes, I think.

Q By whom?
A By Chief Sanders.

Q Anyone else?
A No.

Q When you say complaints were made, against whom were the complaints made?
A Against Kondo.

Q Mr. Hayashi, did Dr. Hochman ever say anything to you about the death of Serafin and Hess?

DEFENSE: I object to this question on the grounds that there is no showing that the accused was present, and it's hearsay.

PRESIDENT: What?

DEFENSE: There is no showing that it was in the presence of the accused. It was hearsay.

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

Q You may answer.
A Please repeat it.

Q Did Dr. Hochman tell you about the death of Hess and Serafin?
A No.

Q Who told you?
A Chief Sanders.

PROSECUTION: The defense may cross-examine, unless the Commission has any questions before the defense.

DEFENSE: May I hear the last question and answer, please?

(The reporter then read the last question and answer)

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, at this time, I move that all of the testimony of this witness be stricken from the record on the grounds that this witness was brought forward to corroborate the testimony of Chief Sanders with respect to various specifications on which there is no other testimony.

Now, corroborating evidence must be direct evidence to sustain a conviction in this case. This witness has testified to every incident and his knowledge is based on what Chief Sanders told him. Therefore, there is no probative value that this court can attach to this man's testimony, because this court has the testimony of Chief Sanders before it already.

On that basis, I ask that it be stricken from the record.

PROSECUTION: Assuming that all the defense counsel has stated to be correct, there is ample corroboration by this witness regarding some of the testimony given by Chief Sanders, particularly with reference to the meeting.

PRESIDENT: The objection is overruled, and the Commission will accept this evidence for what it is worth.

DEFENSE: At this time, I ask the court for a recess as the commencement of the court's examination of this witness will avail us of nothing.

PRESIDENT: The court will now take a recess, at 1225 hours, to meet at such time as we will decide upon in a few minutes.

(After a short deliberation, the president announced:

The court will adjourn to meet at 8:00 AM., 7 August, 1946.

The court then, at 1225 hours, on 7 August 1946, adjourned to meet at 0800 hours, on 7 August 1946.

DISTRICT COURTHOUSE
Yokohama, Japan

7 August 1946

The Commission met, pursuant to adjournment, at 0900 hours, all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and reporter who were present at the close of the previous session in this case being present.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: Mr. Hayashi, the witness, is reminded that he is still under oath. I believe the defense is ready to cross-examine at this time.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued)

Questions by defense:

Q Mr. Hayashi, are you now employed?
A Yes.

Q By whom are you employed?
A Kyoto Prefecture Government.

Q What is your job?
A Interpreter.

Q For whom?
A For the Police Department.

Q Do you work with the Allied Forces?
A Yes, cooperate with them.

Q How long have you been so employed?
A I was employed last November.

Q When you first arrived in camp in November of 1945, how many prisoners of war at Osaka Main Camp were there?
A I forget the exact number, but somewhere around 500.

Q Were they all in one camp?
A No, they were in two camps.

Q How many dispensaries or sick bays did they have at that time to treat any of those prisoners who might be ill?
A Two.

Q And who operated those dispensaries?
A What do you mean by who operated?

Q You testified yesterday that Kondo operated the dispensaries, did you not?
A Yes.

Q Well, I ask you now who operated the two dispensaries at that time.

A One of them is Kondo, I believe, and the other, I forgot the name.

Q Where was Kondo's dispensary located?
A Kondo's dispensary was located in one of the buildings -- one of the camp.

Q One of the two camps?
A Yes, one of the two camps.

Q And what prisoners of war were interned in that camp?
A I believe it was British.

Q British prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q And how long did Kondo remain at that dispensary with those British prisoners of war?
A I don't remember how long, but he remained there until those two camps was put in one.

Q Was that about the beginning of 1945?
A Probably it was.

Q And from November, 1942, then, until the two camps were joined in one, the accused Kanichi Kondo was treating British prisoners of war, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Were there any American prisoners of war in that camp that he was treating?
A Yes, few.

Q How many?
A I don't remember the number -- very few.

Q Who had charge of that section of the camp?

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, I would like counsel for the defense to confine himself to the dates so that we know what period he is talking about.

DEFENSE: I am talking about the same period -- from November, 1942 until the camps were joined into one.

Q Do you know that portion of the camp?
A You mean the prisoners' side, yes; Matheson was in charge.

Q And not Mr. Sanders, is that correct?
A Matheson was in charge of the British Camp and Chief Sanders was in the American camp.

Q How many men did Matheson have charge of?
A Approximately 200.

Q How many men did Chief Sanders have charge of?
A 300.

Q So, then Mr. Sanders was not Camp Commander of that entire camp, was he?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question, if the court please; it is asking for a conclusion of the witness. The witness has testified that Nathoons was in charge of the British section -- of the so many British prisoners of war, and that Sanders was in charge of so many American prisoners of war.

PRESIDENT: Of that entire camp?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir, at that time there were two separate units in the camp. That's what it amounted to. One was on the other side of the road. That's all.

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A Not the entire camp.

Q Now, in '44 when the camps were joined -- these two units were joined together, who was in charge?
A Chief Kumata.

Q Was Nathoon a British prisoner of war?
A Yes.

Q Now, from November, 1942 until the camp was united in one, was there a dispensary at which sick call was held for the British prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q Was there also a dispensary where sick call was held for the American prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q Now, during that time, Mr. Sayashi, who was the Japanese medical orderly who was holding sick call for the American prisoners of war?
A I think Kondo, for both camps.

Q Kondo held sick call for both camps?
A Yes.

Q Then Kondo held sick call for over 500 prisoners? Is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, were there any British medical officers interned?
A No.

Q How many medical officers were there in the entire camp, in November '42 until 1944, the beginning of 1944?
A Two.

Q Do you recall who they were?
A Dr. Hoshman and Dr. McGinnis.

Q Was he an American prisoner of war?
A Yes.

Q Do you know what his rank was?
A Lieutenant.

Q Now, specifically what was your job from November '42 till the beginning of February, '44?
A I was taking charge of the cards of the war prisoners and sorting out of the mails with war prisoners.

Q I didn't understand the first part of your answer.
A The name cards.

Q During that time, you weren't acting as an interpreter, were you?
A I was at the same time.

Q How did you spend most of your time -- in the office taking care of cards or outside interpreting?
A In the office, taking care of the cards.

Q It's true, isn't it, Mr. Hayashi, that you were Colonel Murata's interpreter, is it not?
A Not necessary.

Q You interpreted for him, did you not?
A Yes.

Q Did you do most of his interpreting?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever interpret for Colonel Murata when he made speeches to prisoners of war?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall any of the things he said to them?
A Yes, some of the things.

Q Did you ever interpret the conversations had between Colonel Murata and Mr. Sanders?
A Yes.

Q How many conversations do you recall Mr. Sanders having with Colonel Murata?
A I don't know how many times.

Q Well, let's see, he spoke to him at least once, didn't he?
A Yes.

Q Did he speak to him twice?
A Yes, I believe.

Q Could it have been as many as five times?
A Possibly.

Q Could it have been as many as ten times?

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, I object to this line of questioning. I don't see that it makes any difference whether he interpreted conversations between Colonel Murata or for Colonel Murata with Sanders.

DEFENSE: If it please the Commission, this man was put to the stand to corroborate the testimony of Chief Sanders; Chief Sanders has also testified that he never spoke to Colonel Murata.

PROSECUTION: I don't think that is an accurate statement by defense counsel. As a matter of fact, the record will show what the testimony is and I don't think counsel for the defense is stating the record as it is.

DEFENSE: As I recall the testimony, Mr. Sanders said it was very difficult to talk to Colonel Murata and this man has already testified that he spoke to him at least ten times.

PROSECUTION: I don't think the witness has so testified.

Q Mr. Hayashi --

PROSECUTION: Wait a minute; there is an objection.

PRESIDENT: If the prosecution wishes to go over the testimony to assure himself of that point, he may do so, but in the opinion of the Commission, Chief Sanders did state that no one could talk to Colonel Murata.

PROSECUTION: No, he didn't say that. If I recall it, sir, he said that it was "difficult".

PRESIDENT: If you decide to raise the point, you may go over the testimony. If it isn't in the direct testimony, the objection will be sustained, but if you find that that testimony is in there -- and I think it is -- the objection will not be sustained.

Do you care to go back over that testimony?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, the record states, I am fairly certain, that Chief Sanders said in response to some question that it was very difficult for anyone to talk to Colonel Murata, but he never stated that he didn't speak to Colonel Murata and this line of questioning is to whether Chief Sanders spoke to Colonel Murata. Obviously, as Camp Commander, he must have spoken to Colonel Murata. They were in close proximity. He was a Camp Commander. Chief Sander's statement was that other people had difficulty in talking to Colonel Murata and the record will show that.

I suggest that the record be checked; I am positive that that was the meaning -- it was very difficult for anyone to talk to Colonel Murata.

PRESIDENT: I suggest that we take a short recess while we check the evidence. The court will take a recess.

The Commission then took a recess until 0815 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and reporter resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: The witness is reminded that he is still under oath.

DEFENSE: The reporter will read those two portions in the record in which questions were addressed to the witness Sanders relative to his conversations with Colonel Murata.

The reporter then read the desired portions of the testimony.

DEFENSE: Is that sufficient for the court?

PROSECUTION: In any event, there is evidence by witness Sanders that he had spoken to Colonel Murata. Furthermore, if the court pleases, we will recall, with the permission of the Commission, Chief Sanders, in rebuttal, to clarify the point, if there need be any further clarification.

DEFENSE: Now, if it please the Commission --

PRESIDENT: Are you still objecting to the witness answering the last question?

PROSECUTION: May we have the last question?

(The reporter read the last question)

PROSECUTION: The prosecution will withdraw the objection.

PRESIDENT: At this time, the Commission wishes to read from the SCAP directive, governing the admissibility of evidence in these cases.

"The Commission shall admit such evidence as in its opinion would be of assistance in proving or disproving the charge, or such as in the Commission's opinion would have probative value in the mind of a reasonable man. The Commission shall apply the rules of evidence and pleading set forth herein with the greatest liberality to achieve expeditious procedure...."

That directive from SCAP will be adhered to. It is the desire of the Commission to expedite the case.

Q All right, Mr. Hayashi, could it have been that Chief Sanders talked to Colonel Murata as many as ten times?
A I don't think so.

Q I can't hear you.
A I don't think so.

Q Between five and ten times, is that your answer?
A Yes, between five.

Q And you interpreted for him on each of those occasions?
A Not all the time.

Q How many times did you interpret for him?
A I don't remember.

Q Did other people interpret for Mr. Sanders and Colonel Murata?
A Yes.

Q So, then, there were other times, were there not, that other interpreters were used by Mr. Sanders when he talked to Colonel Murata, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q So that when you say between five and ten times, you mean that's how many times you interpreted for him, don't you?
A No.

Q What do you mean by it?
A I heard it from other interpreters they had a conversation.

Q Tell us how many times you interpreted for him, in conversations between Colonel Murata and Mr. Sanders?
A I don't remember how many times.

Q More than once?
A Yes.

Q More than twice?
A Yes.

Q As many as five times?
A Yes.

Q You yourself interpreted as many as five times. Do you believe any other interpreter interpreted that many times?
A I don't think so.

Q How many interpreters were there in camp?
A There were three civilian interpreters and later on, about five soldier interpreters.

Q Besides yourself; at some time or another, there were eight other interpreters?
A Yes.

Q Now, in these conversations that Chief Sanders had with Colonel Murata, did he complain about general conditions?
A No.

Q Did he complain about the kind of work men were doing?
A Yes, sometimes.

Q And what would Colonel Murata do, do you know?
A He simply said he would take care.

PRESIDENT: A little louder.

A He said he will take care.

Q Now, how many other Japanese enlisted personnel were there working as medical orderlies at this camp between November and May, '45?
A I can't recall the exact number.

Q You take a guess.
A I should say eight -- about eight persons.

Q Did they work in conjunction with Kenichi Kondo?
A No.

Q Where did they work?
A They worked for the whole camp.

Q Did they take part in examining prisoners of war sick patients?
A No.

Q So, then, Kenichi Kondo was the only Japanese medical orderly that took part in sick call from November, 1942 to May, 1945, is that correct?
A Not only him.

Q Who else was there?
A There is some other soldiers, too.

Q Do you recall who they were?
A (No response)

Q Do you recall how many?
A There were two when the war ended -- two others.

Q When the war ended, Kondo wasn't at the Osaka Main Camp, was he?
A Yes.

Q When you say "yes", you mean he wasn't?
A He was.

Q He was at the Osaka Main Camp in August of 1945?
A No.

Q I ask you once again, while he was there, how many Japanese medical orderlies assisted him?
A Two.

Q What was Kondo's rank in November of '42?
A I believe he was just private.

Q Is that the lowest rank in the Japanese Army?
A Yes.

Q Was he the lowest ranking private in the Osaka Main Camp?
A I beg your pardon?

Q Was he the lowest ranking private in the Osaka Main Camp?
A Yes.

Q You have testified that Kondo was in charge of the dispensary. Now, I wish you would elaborate on that for the Commission. What do you mean "in charge of the dispensary"?
A He was taking care of the sick war prisoners.

Q He was receiving instructions from somebody, was he not?
A Yes.

Q And who would he receive his instructions from?
A Dr. Nosu.

Q Dr. Nosu. Anybody else?
A Sometimes from Dr. Amae.

Q Anybody else?
A Dr. Maruo.

Q So, when you say he was in charge of the dispensary, you mean that he worked in the dispensary and took care of the sick call, isn't that what you mean?
A Yes.

Q He wasn't free to do what he pleased in that dispensary, was he?

PROSECUTION: I object to that question, if the Commission pleases. How would that witness know? If he knows -- DEFENSE: All right, I withdraw it.

Q There were other Japanese medical personnel in Osaka Main Camp, were there not?
A Yes.

Q Japanese enlisted personnel who outranked Kondo, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q You recall Corporal Hiraiwa?
A Yes.

Q What was his job?
A He was taking charge of the dispensary when we again moved to Chikko.

Q When you moved to Chikko?
A Yes.

Q What do you mean by "moved to Chikko"?
A We were burned down once and went to other camp and back to Chikko again.

Q About when was that?
A You mean airraid?

Q When you moved to Chikko; was that in 1945?
A Yes, it was in 1945.

Q Do you recall when Corporal Hiraiwa came to camp?
A No.

Q While he was in the camp and before you moved to Chikko, he was in charge of the diagnosis room, was he not?
A Yes, I think I seen him.

Q He was Kondo's immediate superior, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall Corporal Nomura?
A Yes.

Q Where did he work?
A He also worked in Chikko Camp.

Q Did he work in the Osaka Main Camp?
A Yes.

Q What was his job, if you recall?
A He was working with Kondo, I believe. I don't know whether it was before Hiraiwa or after him.

Q At one time or another, between 1942 and May, 1945, Nomura worked with Kondo?
A Yes.

Q And was he corporal at that time?
A Yes, I believe.

Q He was then Kondo's superior while he was there, wasn't he?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall Sergeant Kobayashi?
A Yes.

Q Where did he work?
A He also worked with Kondo.

Q What was his job?
A I believe he was supplying medicines.

Q In charge of the medical supply room, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Also Kenichi Kondo's superior, wasn't he?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall Sergeant Major Okuyama?
A Yes.

Q Where did he work?
A He also worked in the main camp -- sometimes.

Q Did he work in the medical department?
A Yes.

Q What did he do? Take charge of records and things like that, do you know?
A I don't know.

Q While he was there, he was also Kondo's superior, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall superior private Yasufugu?
A No.

Q Superior Private Hirakawa?
A Yes.

Q When did he come to camp, do you recall?
A I beg your pardon?

Q Do you recall when he came to camp?
A No.

Q Do you recall what his job was while he was there?
A Yes, I recall now; he was taking care of the patients before Kondo in the main camp.

Q Before Kondo came there?
A Yes.

Q And when did Koniehi Kondo come to camp?
A I believe it was early part of 1945.

Q Now, do you recall Superior Private Nakatsuji?
A The name is familiar to me.

Q How about Superior Private Kato?
A I don't remember.

Q Nakatsuji, was he a medical orderly?
A I don't know.

Q How about SuperiorPrivate Hayakawa?
A Yes, I remember him.

Q Was he a medical orderly?
A Yes.

Q When was he in the camp? While Kondo was there?
A Yes.

Q What was his duties, do you know?
A No.

Q How about Superior Private Kishimura?
A I don't remember.

Q Did you ever see sick call conducted?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see any other Japanese medical orderlies at sick call besides Kondo?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall when that was?
A It was in 1942 when Hirakawa was taking charge.

Q When did you say that was?
A 1942 -- end of 1942.

Q Kondo didn't come there till the beginning of '43, did he?
A No.

Q Then you could never have seen Kondo with somebody else in '42, could you?
A No.

Q At various times, however, there were other Japanese medical orderlies present at sick call, were there not?
A I believe.

Q Did you see them?
A No.

Q What makes you believe that there were?
A Because they told me they were in the dispensary.

Q Working in the dispensary?
A Yes.

Q But you don't know whether or not they worked on sick call, do you?
A No.

Q To the best of your knowledge and belief, then, Kondo was the only Japanese medical orderly that conducted sick call?
A That's what I saw.

Q Now, you said Dr. Nosu came down to sick call once in a while; how often do you think he would come down?
A Probably once a month.

Q Were you ever there when Dr. Nosu came to sick call?
A Yes, once or twice.

Q What took place, if you recall?
A He examined the sick patients.

Q Then what happened?
A And prescribed medicines.

Q Did the sick prisoners go to work?
A Yes.
Q Dr. Hochman there?
A Yes.
Q Did Dr. Hochman object to this prisoner of war going to work?
A Yes.
Q And Dr. Nosu sent him to work, anyhow?
A I beg your pardon?
Q Didn't Dr. Nosu send him to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A Yes.
Q How many occasions would you say that happened, of your own knowledge. You don't want you to testify to anything you heard.
A Two or three cases.
Q That you saw. Do you know who those prisoners were?
A Yes.
Q Do you recall their names?
A One Italian.
Q Italian?
A Yes.
Q The one who died?
A Yes.
Q You mean Serafin?
A Yes.
Q Do you recall when that was?
A
Q Could it have been in late 1944 or early 1945?
A Possibly.
Q Who else to your rellection was sent to work by Dr. Nosu?
A I can't remember the names. Hochman's objections?
Q American prisoners of war?
A Yes.
Q Could one of them have been a Navy man by the name of Hess?
A Yes.
Q Are you sure it was Hess?
A Yes.
Q Dr. Nosu sent Hess to work on sick call?
A No, I didn't see Dr. Nosu examine Hess.

Q Did you see Dr. Nosu examine a Navy man by the name of Smith?
A No.

Q Can you tell us approximately, Mr. Hayashi, how many times you saw Dr. Nosu examine prisoners of war and send them to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A I didn't see any.

Q Didn't you just testify that you saw him send Serafin out to work?
A I heard it.

Q From whom?
A From Sanders. I didn't see actually.

Q You heard that from Chief Sanders?
A Yes.

Q When did you hear that from Chief Sanders?
A You mean the time?

Q Yes.
A The time is not clear to me.

Q Was it back there in camp?
A Yes, back in the camp.

Q Was that right after Serafin died?
A Yes.

Q Anybody else present when Chief Sanders told you that?
A Scott was present.

Q Scott?
A Yes.

Q That's Chief Water Tender Scott?
A Yes.

Q Mr. Sanders' assistant?
A Yes.

Q Did Chief Sanders tell you that Dr. Nosu sent any other man to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A Yes.

Q Who else did he say Dr. Nosu sent to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A I don't remember the names, sir.

Q Do you recall about how many men it might have been?
A What I know is about three cases.

Q Any of these men die, do you know?
A Yes.

Q How long after they were sent to work did they die?
A I don't know.

Q Do you recall it being shortly thereafter?
A I don't remember.

Q And all this, Chief Sanders told you, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see Dr. Maruo at sick call?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see him send men to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A No.

Q Did you ever see Dr. Amo?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever see him send men to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A No.

Q Do you recall an occasion when thirty-five men were suffering from mumps at the camp?
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether or not those men went on sick call with the mumps?
A I believe they did.

Q Do you know whether or not they were sent to work over Dr. Hochman's objections?
A They were sent to work.

Q How do you -- strike that -- do you know who was present when they were sent to work?
A No.

Q Who told you they were sent to work?
A Sanders.

Q Didn't Sanders also tell you that Dr. Amo was present on that occasion?
A No.

Q Did Dr. Hochman ever complain that he couldn't work with Dr. Nosu?
A Yes, he did.

Q Did he complain to you and ask you to convey his complaint to somebody?
A Yes.

Q Whom did he ask you to convey his complaint to?
A To Colonel Murata.

Q What did Dr. Hochman say about Dr. Nosu?
A Dr. Hochman says that he will not listen to his opinion about treating the patients and if that's the case, he is no use of working in the dispensary himself.

Q And that was his complaint about Dr. Nosu, isn't that correct?

A Yes.

Q Did he ever complain to you about Dr. Maruo?
A No.

Q About Dr. Amo?
A No.

Q What did Colonel Murata say when you told him of Dr. Hochman's complaints?
A He said he will take care.

Q What did he do, if you know?
A Nothing.

Q Did you ever hear him talk to Dr. Nosu about it?
A No.

Q Did you ever see Colonel Murata do anything about any of those complaints?
A Yes.

Q What complaint was that?
A That was about the distribution of Red Cross parcels.

Q You say a complaint was made with respect to the distribution of Red Cross parcels and action was taken on it?
A Yes.

Q Now, you have testified that various complaints were made with respect to the medical treatment received. Was anything ever done about that by Colonel Murata?
A I don't know.

Q To your knowledge, nothing?
A Yes.

Q You testified, did you not, that there was an order in camp that prisoners of war would sleep with blanks to over their stomach to protect them against diarrhea?
A Yes.

Q Is that a Japanese medical custom?
A I don't think so.

Q Was that order put out by Dr. Nosu?
A Yes.

Q Did you convey that order to the prisoners of war?
A No.

Q Do you know who did?
A Kimura.

Q Interpreter Kimura?
A Yes.

Q Did you hear him?
A Yes.

Q And what did he tell the prisoners of war?
A You mean did I hear that he conveyed that? No.

Q Did you hear him convey that?
A No.

Q How do you know that he conveyed it?
A Sanders told me that there was such an order.

Q Did Sanders tell you that that order came from Dr. Nosu also?
A Yes.

Q The Japanese soldiers sleep that way with a blanket across their stomach?
A I don't know.

Q Do you remember an incident where some soldiers disregarded that order and slept without blankets?
A Yes.

Q When did that take place, if you recall?
A I don't remember the time.

Q About the middle of 1944?
A Yes, I think -- somewhere in 1944.

Q Were you present on that occasion in the barracks?
A No.

Q Did you know what happened in the barracks of your own knowledge?
A No, not from my own knowledge.

Q Did you know who was present -- Japanese personnel present in the barracks?
A No.

Q You were told, were you not, by Chief Sanders that Kondo and two other men struck and beat some prisoners in the barracks?
A Yes.

Q Do you know who the other two men were?
A No.

Q Do you recall one of them being a corporal of the guard?
A Yes, I believe.

Q How was the corporal of the guard armed, if you know, at that camp?
A He just takes guns with him.

Q Had a rifle?
A Yes, rifle.

Q Was Kondo ever under arms at that camp?
A No.

Q You don't recall prisoner of war Hess, do you?
A Yes, I remember.

Q You do remember him?
A Yes.

Q How long was he ill?
A I don't know how long he was ill.

Q Do you recall him going to Itchioka Hospital some time in 1945?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall him coming back?
A No.

Q How long a time elapsed before he went to work after he returned from Itchioka?
A I do not recall.

Q What do you recall about Hess?
A I remember he died.

Q Is that the only thing you recall about him?
A Yes.

Q Everything you testified with respect to Hess yesterday was not of your own knowledge, was it?
A No.

Q It was told to you by Chief Sanders?
A Yes.

Q And the only thing you remember about Serafin of your own knowledge was the fact that Dr. Nosu sent him out to work, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Was there any other circumstances surrounding his death?
A (No response)

Q With respect to Serafin, do you recall how long he died after Dr. Nosu sent him out to work?
A I haven't any idea.

Q Well, he died in January of 1945. Does that help you refresh your recollection?
A No.

Q Do you recall Serafin being on a paper detail?
A Yes.

Q Was it after he came off the paper detail that Nosu said to him, "Out to work"?
A Yes.

Q Did Dr. Nosu take him off that paper detail and sent him to work?
A That's what I believe.

Q But you were at sick call when Dr. Nosu sent him out, were you not?
A No.

Q You testified before that you were at sick call when Dr. Nosu was there and you saw him send several men to work, did you not?
A Yes.

Q And one of those men was Serafin, isn't that correct?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I do not object to the question by the defense counsel, but I wish he would give the witness an opportunity to be able to make an answer. He is throwing three or four questions at him at a time before he can give him an answer; the witness is confused.

PRESIDENT: Give the witness plenty of time. He is trying to remember things happening.

DEFENSE: I give him time to think, but once he answers a question, I am free to ask him another one.

Q Didn't you testify to that?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I don't think the witness knows what the question is.

(The reporter then read the question)

A No, I make a mistake on that question.

Q What is your answer now?
A No.

Q You never saw Dr. Nosu send Serafin to work?
A No.

Q You just testified that Dr. Nosu took Serafin off the paper detail, did you not?
A Yes.

Q Is that also a mistake?
A No, it was his order.

Q Did he order Serafin specifically taken off paper detail?
A I don't think so.

Q Or did he order everyone taken off paper detail?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission pleases, I don't think that is a question. I think he is arguing with the witness.

PRESIDENT: The witness is trying to remember things in the past and the line of questioning is more to help him in his memory.

DEFENSE: Thank you, sir.

PROSECUTION: Give the witness time to think and answer the question.

PROSECUTION: May I make a statement to the court, please? This witness is Japanese. He has some trouble in remembering the facts. I don't think that there is any question that this witness is telling the truth.

However, I feel that counsel in propounding this question to this witness is doing it by suggesting a set of facts and saying, "Is that correct?" and I feel that the witness is being swayed by the facts in answering that way.

Now, if counsel would propound his questions and ask him what happened on a certain day or what took place and let the witness testify, I think that the answer will be clearer.

This way, counsel is suggesting the answers to him. I don't suggest he is doing it purposely, but by his questions being framed that way, the witness is answering "yes", perhaps in some cases and later on, is contradicting himself because there is some question as to whether it's hearsay or whether he knows about it on this Dr. Nosu incident. I don't think he is purposely intending to change his testimony. I believe that on the previous question, counsel suggested the answer to him, and I ask this Commission to request defense counsel to so word his questions, let the witness give his answers instead of the facts being propounded in counsel's question, merely because this witness is Japanese and he is having a little trouble.

DEFENSE: I call the court's attention to the fact that the directives or instructions distributed to prosecution and defense counsel are that Japanese witnesses are not to be led. I also call your attention to the fact that when Chief Sanders testified, he was led all over this court room.

Any attempt by prosecution to deny the defense its right to lead a witness on cross-examination deprives this man of the right to a fair trial.

Just a minute, Mr. Rand. This man took the stand and he was asked leading questions on direct examination. Objections were made and they were not sustained. I don't think counsel has the right to stand on his feet in this court room and ask that I be denied the right to ask leading questions.

PROSECUTION: Just a minute, counsel. I am not denying you or the accused any right. You know better. I am addressing my remarks to the court, please. I am asking this court to try and help this witness in giving his answers. We have no objection to any truth coming out. We are merely trying to help this witness. He is giving contrary answers.

Now, I am sure this Commission doesn't feel that he is lying. He is just having trouble in answering questions that are propounded to him. We are not objecting that the counsel question him. We are asking him to so direct his questions that he can give answers of his own knowledge.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is competent to weigh the evidence as presented by the witness and the witness will proceed.

Q You don't know whether or not Dr. Mosu specifically removed Serafin from paper detail or whether or not he just discontinued paper detail entirely, do you?
A No.

Q But you do know that it was on his orders that Serafin and others, we will say, no longer were allowed to go to paper detail, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q And they were sent out to do work?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall a prisoner of war by the name of Barber, a British Sea Captain?
A I remember him.

Q Were you present at sick call when Barber applied for some medication?
A No.

Q You know nothing, then, about any incident involving Barber and Kondo, the accused, do you?
A I heard the incident from Sanders later on.

Q Later on?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall a prisoner of war by the name of Nettles?
A I believe that was the prisoner who was sleeping on the bench.

Q Now, there was a regulation, wasn't there, in camp against prisoners of war sleeping outside the barracks, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q So that when Nettles was sleeping on the bench outside of the barracks, he was violating the regulations?
A Yes.

Q Do you know of any other instances where other prisoners of war violated that regulation?
A No.

Q Do you remember a prisoner of war by the name of Doherty?
A Yes.

Q Was he a British seaman?
A No, he was American.

Q He was American?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall his appearance?
A Yes.

Q His physical appearance?
A Yes.

Q How old a man was he?
A I should say he's about fifty.

Q Was he large or small?
A Large.

Q How about Barber? Was he a large man?
A Yes, he was quite.

Q Now, when you say "large", approximately how tall do you think Barber was?
A He was taller than you.

Q You think he was as much as six feet?
A How tall are you?

Q I am 5'8" - 8½".
A Probably about six feet.

Q Close to six feet. About how heavy was he?
A About 140 or 150 pounds.

Q Rather thin, wasn't he?
A Yes.

Q And Doherty, the same way?
A Doherty was rather fat.

Q Was fat?
A Yes.

Q About how much do you think he weighed?
A I should think he was about 180.

Q Did you witness any incident in which Doherty and Kondo were involved?
A No.

Q But you heard about it from Chief Sanders, is that right?
A Yes.

Q Chief Sanders told you about everything, did he not?
A Yes.

Q Do you remember a young British prisoner of war by the name of Horsley?
A Yes.

Q How old do you think Horsley was in 1944, if you know?
A Somewhere around 18.

Q Was he a little fellow?
A Yes.

Q Were you present when Horsley received permission from the officer of the day to remain in camp?
A No.

Q Were you present at any time in connection with an incident involving Horsley and Kondo?
A No.

Q Now, Horsley was struck, was he not?
A Yes, that's what I heard.

Q Chief Sanders told you?
A Yes.

Q Did Chief Sanders tell you why he was struck?
A Yes.

Q What did he say?
A He says that he was hit because he did not report to sick call.

Q Because he did not report to sick call?
A Yes.

Q And when did the Chief tell you that?
A I believe a couple of days afterwards.

Q Are you sure of that?
A Yes.

Q There is no mistake about that, is there, Mr. Hayashi?

PROSECUTION: He has already answered thequestion twice.

Q Chief told you not --

PROSECUTION: Just a minute. I have an objection to the court.

DEFENSE: You haven't objected.

PROSECUTION: I object to the court; the question has already been answered twice.

PRESIDENT: That question has been answered. Proceed.

Q You remember Knudsen?
A Yes.

Q He was a seaman, was he not?
A Yes.

Q- He suffered some injury?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall the circumstances of it?
A I believe he was working as stevedore and something heavy dropped and he was hurt.

Q Did you see it?
A No.

Q Chief Sanders told you,didn't he?
A Yes.

Q How long have you been up here in Tokyo, Mr. Hayashi?
A This time?

Q Yes, with respect to this case.
A I came up last Friday.

Q Did you see Chief Sanders up in Tokyo?
A Yes.

Q Did you talk to him about this case?
A No, I saw him yesterday.

Q Did you see him before yesterday?
A No.

Q You didn't see him in Tokyo at all, did you?
A I saw him before.

Q Where?
A In Tokyo.

Q When?
A Last month.

Q How long were you in Tokyo last month?
A Couple of days.

Q How often did you see Chief Sanders?
A Just once.

Q Where did you see him?
A At Meiji Building.

Q Did you and the Chief discuss this case?
A No.

Q Never mentioned it?
A We talked about it -- never discussed it.

Q I see. What did you talk about with respect to this case?
A He told me the incident and asked me if I remembered.

Q If you remember what -- the incident?
A Yes.

Q Did he describe all of these incidents to you?
A No.

Q Which ones did he describe to you?
A I described to him --

Q What did you describe to him?
A Those incidents to him that he told me.

Q And did you go over once again and he tell you the same thing once again up in Tokyo last month?
A Yes.

Q Everything you know about this case you heard from Chief Sanders, isn't that right?
A Yes.

Q At one time or another.
A Yes.

Q Isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q Did you hear anything new last month in Tokyo that you hadn't heard before?
A No.

Q Everything you testified to you heard from Chief back in camp?
A Yes.

Q That's your testimony?
A Yes.

Q Did you remember everything that Chief told you back in camp?

PROSECUTION: I object to the form of that question, if the Commission pleases.

PRESIDENT: Read the question.

(The reporter then read the question)

PROSECUTION: "Did you remember when" and everything else; I don't think the witness can answer a question like that.

PRESIDENT: The question was, Do you remember everything the Chief told you back in camp. He may answer that.

A No.

Q It was necessary, for the Chief, was it not --

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to the form of these questions. I suggest that he ask, "Was it necessary?" He is framing these questions in the form of statements and asking, "Is that correct". This witness is a Japanese and he is not given a fair chance to answer, because he doesn't understand. Ask him, "Was it necessary?" and let him answer "yes" or "no", instead of going through and stating a whole statement of facts and saying, "Is that correct?" all the time. We have seen instances where there has been a mistake in his interpretation of it.

DEFENSE: There is no interpretation before this court.

PROSECUTION: I have made an objection to the court.

PRESIDENT: Read the question.

DEFENSE: It was necessary for the Chief, was it not, to tell you these instances again so that you would remember -- to refresh your recollection by telling you these incidents again?

PRESIDENT: The witness will answer that question.

Q. Was it necessary for Chief Sanders to tell you about these incidents once more in Tokyo, last month, so that you would remember them, isn't that correct?
A Not every incident.

Q But those incidents that you didn't remember?
A Incidents I remembered but I did not remember the names.

Q You remember all of the incidents but not the names?
A Yes.

Q And it was necessary, then, for the Chief to supply the names to you, is that your testimony?
A Yes.

DEFENSE: At this time, I ask for a ten minute recess.

PRESIDENT: The court will take a recess.

The commission then took a recess until 0940 hours, at which hour the personnel of the commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: Mr. Hayashi, the witness, is again reminded that he is still under oath.

Q Mr. Hayashi, how much time did you spend with Chief Sanders in Tokyo last month?
A What do you mean?

Q How long a period of time were you and Chief Sanders together, conversing?
A About half an hour.

Q How long did you remain in Tokyo?
A A couple of days.

Q And how long did you -- how often did you go to the Meiji Building?
A Twice.

Q To see Chief Sanders on both occasions?
A Yes.

Q On both those occasions, only one half hour -- thirty minutes -- did you and he converse, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q About fifteen minutes on each occasion?
A I beg your pardon?

Q Was it about fifteen minutes on each occasion?
A No, Just half an hour on one occasion only.

Q And the second occasion, you didn't speak to Chief Sanders?
A I spoke to him but we did not speak about this incident.

Q You didn't speak about this case at all?
A No.

Q How long did you remain in the presence of Chief Sanders?
A You mean the second time?

Q Yes.
A I stayed about ten or fifteen minutes.

Q What was the reason for your visit to Meiji Building the second time?

PROSECUTION: If the court pleases, if the witness knows; how would the witness know what the reason for his visit was.

DEFENSE: If the court please, he went there. He must have gone there for a purpose, unless he left his hat.

PRESIDENT: Will you repeat that question?

(The reporter then read the question)

PRESIDENT: The reason for his visit?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PROSECUTION: I don't object to the question, if it pleases the Commission, but I object to the form of the question.

DEFENSE: I will put it another way.

Q Were you summoned to the Meiji Building by the prosecution the second time?
A No.

Q Did you go of your own volition, of your own free will?
A Yes.

Q All right, why did you go?
A To get my ticket fixed.

Q To get your ticket fixed?
A Yes.

Q To return --
A To Osaka.

Q I see. Who was present there at the Meiji Building when Sanders was there on the second visit? Who else was present?
A Mr. Rand.

Q Who else?
A And I don't know the names.

Q The other gentleman seated there at the table (indicating)?
A No.

Q How long did you remain there that day?
A About an hour.

Q Who got your ticket for you?
A American soldiers.

Q What was going on during that hour you were there with Mr. Rand and Chief Sanders?
A I was not in Mr. Rand's room all the time.

Q How long were you in the presence of Chief Sanders on that occasion?
A Ten or fifteen minutes.

Q What were you talking about, if you were talking?
A I asked him whether he has any chance of coming down to Osaka.

Q So, then, your testimony is that the total length of time you spent discussing that case with Chief Sanders was one half hour, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, on the occasion of your first visit, how long did you stay there with Mr. Sanders?
A About half an hour.

Q Did you ever sit in a conference where Chief Sanders spoke to Mr. Rand about this case?
A No. I was further away from their desk --

Q You weren't sitting with them at their desk?
A No.

Q Did you by any chance read the affidavits submitted by prisoners of war in this case?
A Yes.

Q When did you read those?
A When I first visited Meiji Building.

Q Is that the first day?
A Yes.

Q Did you read them yourself?
A Yes.

Q All of them?
A No.

Q How many of them did you read?
A What do you mean "how many"?

Q How many of these affidavits which the prosecution has submitted in this case as affidavits of prisoners of war did you read?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. This witness doesn't know how many affidavits are submitted in this case as admitted into evidence. He has not been in court. How wouldhe possibly know the answer to that question?

DEFENSE: I will rephrase it.

Q How many affidavits did you read?
A I don't know whether I read it or not.

Q You just testified, did you not, Mr. Hayashi, that you read affidavits, didn't you?
A Yes.

Q Did you read an affidavit or didn't you?
A Well, I don't know whether it's an affidavit or not.

Q What was it?
A (No response)

Q Was it something like this (indicating)? Something the width of the affidavit of Alvin Eugene De Long, Prosecution's Exhibit 6?
A No.

Q Was it typewritten?
A- Yes.

Q On paper that size, or approximately that size?
A Yes.

Q What did it contain?
A Contained the charges against Kondo.

Q Is this what you read (handing the witness the Charge and Specifications)?
A Yes.

Q Did you read anything else?
A No.

Q Was anything read to you at that time?
A No.

Q How long did it take you to read that paper?
A I haven't any idea.

Q You tell us how well you can read English. You know, rather, how well you can read English. How long would it take you to read these papers?
A Maybe ten minutes.

Q Was that part of the thirty minutes you spent in the office?
A No.

Q That was in addition to it?
A Yes.

Q Anybody explain those charges to you?
A No.

Q Did you understand them?
A Yes.

Q Did you recognize the names on those charges and specifications?
A Which names do you mean?

Q The names of the prisoners of war which this man is accused of beating or mistreating?
A Not all of them.

Q And those that you didn't recognize, Chief Sanders filled out for you, isn't that correct?
A No.

A No.

Q You testified a few minutes ago that Chief Sanders refreshed your recollection as to the names of men involved in a certain instance.
A Yes.

Q Did he do it at the time you read the charge and specifications?
A No.

Q Did that later, is that it?
A Yes.

Q Were you at any time present while Chief Sanders talked about this case with Mr. Rand?
A No.

Q Now, you testified with respect to a conference, in your direct examination, held in Mr. Sanders' office at which time you were present, Dr. Hochman, Chief Sanders and Kondo.
A Yes.

Q Do you recall when that was?
A The time, you mean?

Q Yes.
A It was winter.

Q You are sure it was in the winter?
A Yes.

Q What makes you think it was in the winter?
A There was a fire in the room.

Q You had heavy over-clothes on?
A No.

Q At that time, were you wearing an overcoat when you went out?
A Yes.

Q There would be no mistake about it, then, Mr. Hayashi, that it was wintertime, was it?
A It was absolutely wintertime.

Q About what month of the year do you think?
A That, I cannot remember.

Q That the conference at which Dr. Hochman complained about Kenichi Kondo's actions on sick call?
A Yes.

Q Is that the conference at which Dr. Hochman complained that there was no sense of going any longer to sick call?
A Yes.

Q Did you interpret Dr. Hochman's statements to the accused Kondo?
A Yes.

Q And you testified that he agreed to abide by Dr. Hochman's decisions and he would refrain from beating prisoners of war thereafter?
A Yes.

Q Do you know of your own knowledge whether or not he did refrain from beating prisoners thereafter?
A I believe he refrained.

Q Do you know of any incident which occurred after that conference at which time Kondo may have beaten a prisoner of war?
A No.

Q Chief Sanders ever tell you after that conference that Kondo had beaten another prisoner of war?
A Yes, I believe.

Q He did or he didn't?
A He did.

Q He did beat a prisoner of war after that conference, is that your answer?
A That was told by Sanders to me.

Q After the conference?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall whether that was in the winter of '43, '44 or '44 - '45?
A '44 - '45.

Q That conference took place in the Chief's room, did it not?
A Yes.

Q Did you know at that time that Chief Sanders had struck Kondo?
A No.

Q Do you know now that Chief Sanders had struck Kondo?
A No.

Q Did Chief Sanders ever tell you that he struck Kondo?
A No.

Q Now, who in that camp worked with the doctors -- the Allied prisoner of war Dr. Hochman in connection with making up of death certificates?
A Making up what?

Q Death certificates.
A Dr. Nosu.

Q Who interpreted at those conferences?
A There wasn't any interpreters.

Q Dr. Nosu speaks English, does he not?
A- Yes.

Q Now, you have testified that you interpreted certain speeches made by Colonel Murata, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q When Colonel Murata made those speeches, did he make them to the entire prisoner of war camp or just to a select group?
A Sometimes to the entire camp and sometimes to different groups.

Q Do you recall the contents of any of those speeches?
A Yes.

Q Tell the court the content of any one of them.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I object to any speeches that Colonel Murata made at this camp unless the defense is prepared to show that a particular speech has something to do with the charge and specifications in this case. We are not concerned with speeches made by Japanese personnel at Headquarters prisoner of war camp unless they concern the guilt or innocence of this accused.

I object to the question.

DEFENSE: If the court please, this man is charged for the course of his conduct from the first day he got in the camp to the day he left. I submit to the Commission that he was a soldier in the Japanese Army. He took orders from his Commanding Officer and what his Commanding Officer thought and orders with respect to the treatment of prisoners of war were is relevant and pertinent to the issues involved in this case.

Reference to the SCAP Directive will show while the fact that the man may have been operating under orders may not be a complete defense, it is mitigation.

On that ground, I think it's proper examination of this witness because he is the man who interpreted for the Colonel and he is the one who would know what was said.

PROSECUTION: That may be true, sir, but these questions have to be pinned down to a course of conduct which Kenichi Kondo had followed -- not speeches in general by Colonel Murata.

DEFENSE: Let's find out what he said.

PROSECUTION: I object to counsel going out on a fishing expedition on this witness. Let him direct his questions specifically to matters which may be in mitigation of Kenichi Kondo's conduct.

PRESIDENT: The speeches made by the Camp Commander may have a bearing on this case and the witness will answer the question.

A No.

Q What do you mean by "no"? Don't you remember the contents of any of those speeches?
A Yes, I remember.

Q Tell us what the colonel said.
A He says that within the camp is the only safety place for the war prisoners; they should obey the orders of army and take care of their health.

Q This was on one occasion?
A Yes.

Q Do you recall any other speeches he may have made?
A Yes.

Q What was the contents of that?
A That was a speech made when prisoners first arrived to the camp.

Q What did he say to the prisoners when they first arrived to the camp?
A He says that the prisoners arrived are under his control, and they should obey his orders.

Q Any other speeches made by the colonel?
A I don't recall any special instance.

Q Do you recall the colonel ever telling the prisoners of war what might happen to them if they disobeyed Japanese army regulations or his instructions?
A Yes.

Q What did he say?
A He says they will be severely punished.

Q Did he say by whom?
A By court-martial.

Q When those speeches were made, were the Japanese personnel present?
A Yes.

Q Have you ever been present at any conversation had between Dr. Nosu and the accused Kaniehi Kondo?
A No.

Q Did you ever hear Dr. Nosu give any orders to his medical subordinates?
A No.

Q Where was your office?
A My office was upstairs.

Q In what building?
A Chikko Main Camp.

Q Was that in the same building that the dispensary was in?
A Yes.

Q How far away from you was Dr. Nosu's office?
A His office was on the first floor.

Q Did you see Dr. Nosu around there most of the time?
A I don't know about that.

Q Isn't it true that if you couldn't see Dr. Nosu, you might hear him because of the way he spoke?
A Yes, I could tell him.

Q He was pretty loud and rough, wasn't he?
A Yes.

Q Did you ever hear him reprimanding any of his subordinates?
A No.

Q Outside of the one conference you had in the winter of '44-'45, at any other time did you interpret for Chief Sanders and Kondo with respect to any complaints which the Chief had?
A I don't recall.

Q As far as you are concerned, that's the only time that you were ever used to interpret at any conferences between those two men, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q What was Kondo's attitude at that conference? How did he act?
A He acted in the general way.

Q Was he calm?
A Yes, he was.

Q He didn't fly off the handle? Did he get excited?
A I don't think so.

Q Did he argue with Chief Sanders?
A Yes, a bit.

Q What did they argue about?
A I don't remember.

Q You want me to refresh your collection. He argued with Chief Sanders, did he not?
A Yes.

Q To the effect that he was following instructions, did he not?
A Yes.

Q That's what he told Chief Sanders?
A Yes.

Q The Chief accused him of beating prisoners of war. What did he tell to the Chief? What did he say to the Chief?
A Who? Kondo?

Q Kondo.
A He says he is the man taking charge of the dispensary.

Q What else did he say?
A That's all I remember.

Q You remember him saying that he also takes orders from Dr. Mosu and every other officer in camp?
A Yes.

Q And non-commissioned superior officers in camp?
A Yes.

Q You remember him saying that?
A Yes.

Q What did the Chief say to that?
A I forgot.

Q Did the Chief pay any attention to that explanation?
A I don't remember.

Q That whole incident is rather vague in your mind, isn't it?
A Yes.

Q Chief Sanders tell you about it up there in Tokyo when you spoke to him?
A No.

Q You didn't have to ask him any questions as to refresh your recollection with respect to that conference?
A No, I didn't have to ask him.

Q Did you speak about that conference with Chief Sanders up in Tokyo last month?
A Yes.

Q Did you tell Chief Sanders what had happened or did Chief Sanders tell you what had happened?
A I told him what happened.

Q Did you tell him when it happened?
A Yes.

Q What did the Chief say?
A I told him that I remember the charcoal fire in the room and he says that's right.

Q That's right? Anything else?
A No.

Q Now, do you know what the general condition of the prisoners were when they first came to that camp? In November, 1942.
A Yes.

Q They were rather run-down, undernourished, were they not?
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether or not their health improved through the following three years?
A I believe their health improved.

Q Do you know whether or not speeches made by Hideki Tojo were ever read to the prisoners of war?

PROSECUTION: I object to any speeches made by Mr. Tojo. I certainly don't see any possible connection with the accused Kaniehi Kondo. If you want to talk about speeches of Mr. Tojo, you can take every Japanese army general who made a speech and go right through headquarters camp and take every person who made a speech other than Colonel Murata.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, this man is a Japanese soldier. Tojo was the Premier of Japan and head of the War Ministry.

A I wasn't a Japanese soldier.

DEFENSE: Just a moment. I am not talking about you. Anything that came from that high and worked its way down to this camp is pertinent to the trial of this accused because at this same instant, Tojo is being tried in Tokyo for the acts of his subordinates, right down to the last man -- to the last soldier. He is charged with certain deaths, actions committed by his soldiers in the Philippines and elsewhere, and if he can be charged with their acts, there certainly must be a responsibility that is attributed to him by reason of it.

Therefore, anything he had to say in connection with the conduct of prisoner of war camps is pertinent in this man's defense and he certainly has a right to have it brought before this Commission.

PROSECUTION: Sir, there is nothing before this Commission as to what Mr. Tojo is charged with; nothing at all before the court. The charge and specifications are very simple: Did the accused, or did he not, commit these acts and atrocities which we claim are contrary to laws and customs of war. If he didn't, he is innocent. If he did, he is guilty. The facts are very simple. What Mr. Tojo has said doesn't have any bearing on it.

Q Do you know whether or not speeches made by Hideki Tojo were ever read and translated to the prisoners of war?

PRESIDENT: The objection is not sustained. The witness will answer the question.

A No.

Q You don't know whether they were?
A No.

Q Do you know whether or not Colonel Murata -- strike that -- do you know when Colonel Murata was appointed chief of the Osaka Prisoner of War camps?
A Repeat the question, please?

Q Do you know when Colonel Murata was appointed chief of the Osaka Prisoner of War camps?
A I don't know the exact dates.

Q Was it some time in 1942?
A Yes.

Q Was it prior to the opening of the camp -- of the arrival of the first group of prisoners at the Osaka Main Camp?
A Yes, I think so.

Q Do you believe it might have been around June of 1942?
A I don't know about that.

Q Was there anybody who was chief of the Osaka Prisoner of War Camps before Colonel Murata?
A No.

Q He was Chief, then, from the time the camp was constituted until the end of the war?
A Yes.

Q Is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Did Dr. Hoehman ever complain to you directly in relation to Kaniehi Kondo?
A Yes.

Q On what occasion was that?
A When he met me in the camp.

Q Was that at the time of this conference or on another occasion?
A Just prior to that conference.

DEFENSE: No further questions at this time.

PROSECUTION: In view of the fact that there is apparently some slight intimation that prosecution has perhaps colored this witness' testimony, we would like to straighten it out for the record.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by prosecution:

Q Mr. Hayashi, do you know me?
A Yes.

Q Just prior to the recess, you were being cross-examined by counsel as to conversations of Mr. Sanders about this case, is that right?
A Yes.

Q During the recess, did you talk to me?
A No.

Q Not at all?
A No.

Q Now, the first time that you came up to Tokyo was about when?
A The beginning of last month.

Q And where did you go?
A I went to the Meiji Building.

Q And whom did you see?
A I saw you.

Q At the time you saw me, was I alone or was I with someone, the first time?
A You were alone, I think.

Q Did you talk to me alone?
A I beg your pardon?

Q Did you talk to me alone?
A Yes.

Q Did we discuss the case against Kenichi Kondo?
A No.

Q We didn't discuss the case against Kenichi Kondo? I will reframe the question. Did I ask you questions about Kenichi Kondo?
A Yes.

Q And did I ask you questions about Kenichi Kondo with respect to the charge and specifications in this case?
A Yes.

Q And did we talk about them?
A Yes.

Q And at that time, did you remember about the meeting?
A Yes.

Q And at that time, did you remember about incidents which Chief Sanders had told you?
A Which incidents?

Q Did you remember generally about the incidents which you had said that Chief Sanders had told you?
A Yes.

Q Now, did you remember about those incidents because they were told to you at the time they took place at the camp?
A (No response)

Q Do you understand my question?
A No.

DEFENSE: I object to the question on the grounds it's leading.

PROSECUTION: Well, I don't think defense counsel should object about leading questions.

DEFENSE: There is a great deal of difference between cross-examination and direct examination of which I am sure the court is aware. This is this man's witness. He is offering to corroborate the testimony of Chief Sanders and it's highly prejudicial to the rights of the accused to allow the prosecution to lead the witness.

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I am not going into any of the matters which Chief Sanders has testified to. Mr. Black will straighten that out. What I am trying to straighten out is the intimation that the defense counsel has left with this court: that I as prosecution have attempted to color this witness' testimony, and I am attempting to clear it up.

DEFENSE: I make no intimation.

PRESIDENT: Word the question so he can understand. I see he has some difficulty understanding.

PROSECUTION: Every question defense counsel has propounded to him was a statement of fact which the witness answered "yes". It came out later on that there was a discrepancy in his testimony because apparently there he was expected to answer "yes" and he so answered.

I feel this witness has difficulty along that line.

DEFENSE: Let us then examine this witness in Japanese.

PROSECUTION: I object to any examination in Japanese. The defense counsel has cross examined in English.

PRESIDENT: We will proceed with this witness in English and you continue with your question and so word them that the witness can reply from his own knowledge.

Q Now, at the time you and I talked about the case, you have just testified you remembered of your own knowledge about the meeting, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q And did you remember who was present at the meeting?
A Yes.

Q Now, did you also tell me about things that Chief Sanders had told you while you were at camp?

DEFENSE: I object to that question, on the grounds it's a leading question.

PROSECUTION: The answer is "yes" or "no".

DEFENSE: This is redirect examination and there is a great deal of difference between cross-examination and direct examination. It's fundamental in the trial of law suits that you cannot lead your own witness.

PROSECUTION: Sir, may I refer the present of the commission to the SCAP rules which he has read at the start of the reconvening of court. We are trying to find out whether this witness was coached by the prosecution. This witness is a Japanese witness and apparently has had trouble answering questions. What objection is there?

PRESIDENT: The witness will answer the question.

A Yes.

Q Do you remember how long we talked about the case?
A I cannot estimate the time.

Q Did I ask you any questions about Kenichi Kondo to which you did not know the answers?
A No.

Q Now, did we have a further meeting at which Chief Sanders was present at which you, Chief Sanders and I were present?
A Yes, I did.

Q And we talked about Kenichi Kondo at that time?
A Yes.

Q But the first time you spoke to me, the first time you spoke about Kenichi Kondo was to me, is that right?
A Yes.

Q Mr. Hayashi, during the two occasions when you were up to Mr. Rand's office, did Mr. Rand or anyone else tell you what to say with regard to this case?

DEFENSE: I object to that question on the grounds it's leading. I refer to the court the rules as laid down by SCAP, and I believe that the rules say that great liberality should be allowed, but that is purely to protect the rights of the accused. It's not to invade upon his rights.

This man is a very important witness in this case. They seek to hinge all of Chief Sanders' testimony upon his corroborating testimony.

Now, he has been severely shaken on cross-examination, and now, in an attempt to reestablish him before this Commission, they are asking him leading questions and all he has to do is answer "yes" to every single question. That's all he has to do.

PROSECUTION: If it pleases the Commission, it's hardly an objection by the defense that an effort will be made by the prosecution to clarify the cross-examination.

DEFENSE: I don't object to their effort being made, but I certainly object to the way they are doing it. It's not proper redirect examination.

PRESIDENT: Read the question.

(The reporter read the question)

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A No.

Q You have testified that you knew a prisoner of war by the name of Serafin?
A Yes.

Q That he was sick?
A Yes.

Q That he was sent to work?
A Yes.

Q And that he died?
A Yes.

Q Was he treated as a prisoner of war?
A Yes, he was.

Q Was he treated any differently from any other prisoner of war?
A No.

Q During the time you and Kondo were at that camp, and also during the incidents with regard to Serafin, Hess, Doherty, Knudsen and Horsley, who was in charge of the dispensary?
A Kondo.

Q You have testified on cross-examination that Kondo had two subordinates in the dispensary with him, is that correct?

A Yes, later part.

Q The latter part of when?
A The latter part when he -- the latter part of the time he was in the Chikko Main Camp.

Q In 1945?
A Yes, I believe it was in 1945.

Q Were these two other Japanese in the dispensary with Kondo? Withdrawn. Did these two Japanese in the dispensary have a higher rank than Kondo?
A No.

Q Was Kondo promoted during the time he was in that camp?
A Yes.

Q Who was the medical person, the Japanese medical person in charge of sick call during the entire time you and Kondo were at that camp?
A Kondo.

Q Was there anybody else in charge of sick call?
A No, I don't believe so.

Q There is no doubt in your mind about that, is there?
A No.

Q That you know of your own knowledge?
A Yes.

Q To be a fact?
A Yes.

Q You have testified about a meeting or conference at which you, Mr. Sanders, Dr. Hochman and Kondo were present, is that right?
A Yes.

Q Against whom did Hochman and Sanders complain?
A Against Kondo.

Q Did they complain about anyone else at the dispensary?
A No.

Q At other times, other than the meeting, did Dr. Hochman complain to you about Kondo?
A Yes.

Q Did Mr. Sanders complain to you about Kondo?
A Yes.

Q Did Merritt complain to you about Kondo?
A Yes.

Q Did any of these prisoners complain to you about any other Japanese at the dispensary?
A No.

Q That you know of your own knowledge, is that right?
A Yes.

Q What did Merritt, Hochman, Sanders complain to you about?
A They all complained that Kondo will not cooperate with Dr. Hochman.

Q Anything else?
A That he hits the war prisoners.

Q At this meeting when Sanders and Hochman made these complaints about Kondo, in Kondo's presence, did Kondo say to them that he would cooperate with Dr. Hochman in the future?
A Yes, he did.

Q That he would not beat sick prisoners?
A Yes.

Q That he would not overrule Dr. Hochman?
A Yes.

Q That he would not disturb sick prisoners at night?
A Yes.

Q Did Kondo at that time say that Dr. Nosu ordered him to beat sick prisoners?
A No.

Q Did he at that time say that Dr. Nosu told him to send sick prisoners to work?
A Yes, sir.

Q Did he at that time say that Dr. Nosu told him to disturb sick prisoners at night?
A (No response)

Q Do you understand that question?
A That question is hard to answer by "yes" or "no".

Q I will withdraw the question.

DEFENSE: If the court please, I object to the question. There is no evidence before this Commission at all that any sick prisoners were ever disturbed at night. The only evidence is the "baka" episode.

PROSECUTION: I have withdrawn the question.

Q Did Kondo ever disturb sick prisoners at night while they were asleep?
A Yes.

Q Did Kondo at that meeting say that Dr. Nosu or anyone else told him to do that?
A Yes.

Q What did he say?
A He says that Dr. Nosu ordered him to see that his orders are carried out.

Q Did he say anything else?
A No.

Q Was that with regard to the blanket incident?
A Yes.

Q Dr. Nosu told him to see that the men had blankets about them, is that right?
A Yes.

Q He didn't see him --

DEFENSE: I object to this question on the grounds that it is leading.

PROSECUTION: You don't know what it is.

DEFENSE: I know what it is.

PRESIDENT: Wait until he asks the question.

Q Did Kondo say at that meeting that Dr. Nosu told him to beat the prisoners when making a blanket inspection?
A No.

Q You testified on cross examination with regard to speeches made by Colonel Murata, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Did Colonel Murata in any of these speeches say that the Japanese personnel would beat prisoners?
A No.

Q Did he ever say that the Japanese would beat sick prisoners?
A No.

Q Did he ever say that the Japanese would send sick prisoners of war to work?
A No.

Q Who was the American or British prisoner of war who complained to you or to others about Kondo?

DEFENSE: I didn't hear the question, please.

(The reporter then read the question)

DEFENSE: Object on the ground it's leading. There is testimony that Hochman and Sanders complained to him. He is trying to lead this witness into enlarging upon that list. I think the proper question would be: Who complained?

PROSECUTION: Strike out the word "others". May I rephrase the question?

PRESIDENT: Strike out the "others".

Q Who complained to you about Kondo?
A Dr. Hochman, Sanders, Merritt.

Q Did Ginger complain to you about Kondo?
A No.

Q On how many different occasions did these prisoners complain about Kondo?
A I don't remember how many times.

Q Were there more than one occasion?
A Yes.

Q Were these occasions before the meeting?
A Yes.

Q Were they after the meeting?
A No.

DEFENSE: If the court please, will we determine what beating he is being questioned about?

PROSECUTION: There is no question about any beating.

DEFENSE: Did you say before the meeting?

PROSECUTION: I said "the meeting", I am sorry.

Q Will you tell this Commission as well as you can the period of time during which these complaints were made against Kondo?
A (No response)

Q Do you understand the question?
A Yes, I don't remember the time.

Q Were these complaints made in 1943?
A I don't think so.

Q Were they made in '44?
A Yes.

Q Were they made in '45?
A No.

PROSECUTION: Would the Commission like to take a short recess?

PRESIDENT: Are you through?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: You are through with the redirect?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: Are you prepared for recross? Do you mind a ten minute intermission?

DEFENSE: No objection at all.

PRESIDENT: There will be a ten minute intermission.

The court then took a recess until 1045 hours, at which hour the personnel of the court, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: The witness is reminded that he is still under oath.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q Mr. Hayashi, you understood the questions I put to you this morning, did you not?
A Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: At this time, the Commission pleases to notify the defense counsel that the witness was a witness for the prosecution and they had the right to examine him in English. You pressed a desire to examine him in Japanese. On your recross, you have that privilege, if you wish.

DEFENSE: I didn't express the desire to examine him in Japanese. I thought the prosecution felt that he didn't understand the question.

PRESIDENT: If you feel that you want to examine him in Japanese, you may do so.

DEFENSE: He has just admitted that he understands my questions. That's good enough for me.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Q You remember testifying this morning about your two visits to the Meiji Building?
A Yes.

Q You remember testifying that on your second visit, you went there to get your railroad ticket?
A Yes, sir.

Q You also testified, did you not, that you had no conversations with Mr. Rand or Chief Sanders with respect to this case on that occasion?
A On the second visit?

Q Yes.
A Yes.

Q Did you have conversations relative to this case on the second visit?
A No.

Q Do you recall just testifying in redirect examination when Mr. Rand put certain questions to you?
A Which do you mean?

Q Mr. Rand a few moments ago asked certain questions, did he not?
A Yes.

Q Did you recall him asking you if after the first meeting you had a further meeting?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment, I don't want this witness to be confused. I did not say that that meeting was on another day in my direct. I ask counsel for the defense to ask his questions so that there is no confusion about what the answer might be.

DEFENSE: I will get to it.

PROSECUTION: I know you will get to it, but I don't want this witness to be confused by your questions.

DEFENSE: This witness is testifying under cross-examination -- recross-examination; he has stated in open court that he understands my questions. It's just a question of his answering them.

PRESIDENT: Are you objecting to that question?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir, because it's not definite enough.

PRESIDENT: Repeat the question.

(The reporter then read the question)

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A I don't remember.

Q You don't remember the question being put to you this morning in court about twenty minutes ago --

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, in order to help this witness, I suggest that the reporter look in the record and find the exact question I put to the witness and his answer and have that propounded to him.

DEFENSE: I have no objection.

PROSECUTION: Counsel has propounded a question to this witness. I have said that I want that question propounded from the record so that there will be no question as to what it was.

PRESIDENT: What is the question before the Commission.

DEFENSE: Sir, I asked the witness a question. There was an objection on the grounds that the witness might be confused and the prosecution wants the question read from the record.

PRESIDENT: Which of you is going to select that question?

DEFENSE: The prosecution is going to select that question. He is the one objecting to my question.

PRESIDENT: What is your question?

DEFENSE: My question was whether he remembers testifying on redirect examination as to a further meeting at the Meiji Building.

PRESIDENT: What does the prosecution object to that question?

PROSECUTION: I don't know whether the question now was exactly the way it was worded when I objected to it, sir.

PRESIDENT: You have no objection to that question?

PROSECUTION: I have no objection to this question, no.

PRESIDENT: All right, the witness will proceed to answer that question.

Q I ask you again, do you recall testifying a little while ago in response to Mr. Hand's questions as to a further meeting at the Meiji Building?
A Yes.

Q Now, you went to the Meiji Building, did you not, on one occasion, on one day, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, was this further meeting the same day or the following day?
A The same day.

Q At what time did you go to the Meiji Building on the first occasion?
A About 9:00 o'clock.

Q How long did you remain there?
A Just before noon.

Q And that time you spent with Mr. Hand, is that correct?
A Not all the time.

Q Part of the time?
A Yes.

Q And what time did you return from the Meiji Building?
A In the afternoon.

Q Was it in the afternoon that you returned?
A No.

Q When did you next come back to the Meiji Building?
A It was on a Monday.

Q Monday was the second occasion?
A Yes.

Q What date was the first occasion?
A Saturday.

Q So you did go on two separate days, isn't that correct?
A Yes.

Q And on the second occasion, did you have a further meeting with Mr. Rand and Mr. Sanders?
A No.

Q At any time did you speak to Mr. Sanders up at the Meiji Building?
A Did I what?

Q At any time did you speak to Mr. Sanders in the Meiji Building?

PROSECUTION: When?

DEFENSE: I am asking him.

PROSECUTION: He has already testified that he has spoken to him. You are asking a question. I want this Commission to have these questions propounded so that the witness can intelligently answer them.

DEFENSE: I will strike it.

Q On what day of the week did you speak to Mr. Sanders at the Meiji Building?
A On a Saturday and a Monday.

Q You spoke to him on two occasions?
A Yes.

Q On the first occasion, on Saturday, Mr. Rand was present and Mr. Sanders, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q And on Monday, Mr. Rand was present again and Mr. Sanders?
A No, I met Chief in the corridor -- not in the room.

Q Didn't the Chief come into the room at all?
A He came in, but he didn't speak to me.

Q What day was that -- Saturday or Monday?
A Monday.

Q But the Chief was speaking to you on Saturday with Mr. Rand?
A Yes.

PROSECUTION: Sir, we have gone over this seven times that I know of at the first meeting that accused spoke to Sanders the first time. How many times does the court have to know that? I don't see any point in this.

DEFENSE: Sir, he has been objecting that the witness is confused. I am trying to be definite as to what happened.

PROSECUTION: Sir, there is no new matter being brought out; this has been covered on the previous cross-examination. Unless it is the defense's intention -- and if it is, I would like him to so state -- that they are accusing the prosecution of coaching this witness as to what to say --

DEFENSE: I make no accusations, sir. I am really attempting to show to this court that on these occasions that the witness Sanders and this witness conversed about the case.

PRESIDENT: We are cognizant of that. That had been admitted.

PROSECUTION: Sir, in all of these conversations that counsel is interrogating --

DEFENSE: Just a minute, please.

PROSECUTION: I am talking to the court. On all of these occasions that counsel is interrogating the accused, I, Mr. Rand, was present at the meetings. Now, I am asking the defense counsel to state to this Commission whether they are accusing the prosecution of coaching these witnesses. I was present at all of these meetings. It has been brought out by defense counsel --

DEFENSE: I make no accusation that he was coached, sir. I, however, wish to bring this before the court. It's my opinion and I am attempting to show it -- this is my offer of proof -- that at the time that this witness was examined by Mr. Rand, Mr. Sanders was present and when this witness didn't remember things, he was told these things by Mr. Sanders in the Meiji Building in Tokyo last month. That's my offer of proof.

PROSECUTION: Sir, we have gone into the matter at considerable length. I think this Commission is able to form its opinion as to whether this witness was told anything by myself or Mr. Sanders. Unless the defense is going to contend that he was coached by the prosecution, there is nothing further to be gained out of cross-examination on this point, and I object to it.

If the court please, I would like to have the defense state whether they are accusing the prosecution of tampering with this witness. I would like them to state it for the record.

DEFENSE: Once again, I repeat I do not accuse them of tampering with the witness. However, I offer to prove that Sanders was examined -- or this man was examined; they were free to tell each other as to what happened in that camp and now this witness is brought in to corroborate Chief Sanders' testimony -- a very important fact in the defense of this accused.

I believe that the court has ruled that I am entitled to so show, if I can. This is merely an offer of proof that I am stating now.

PRESIDENT: What are you trying to bring out with this line of questioning?

DEFENSE: I am trying to show, sir, that when this man didn't recall instances, his memory was refreshed by Chief Sanders.

PROSECUTION: Sir, he has so testified.

PRESIDENT: He has testified. He can be refreshed by documents or by evidence that he can read. He can always refresh a witness' memory. We are cognizant of that, if that is your only point.

DEFENSE: Sir, a witness' memory can be refreshed on the witness stand through a writing which he himself wrote or an official document, but when a witness' memory is refreshed by another witness, it goes far beyond refreshing the recollection of the witness according to the rules of evidence.

Now, he has testified that he didn't recall certain names. I wish to go into that further and find out how much he was told about these incidents because it is apparent that he knows nothing of his own knowledge and everything was told to him by Chief Sanders. It is very important whether or not everything was told to him at the camp what happened or it was told to him in Tokyo last month.

PROSECUTION: Sir, may I make a statement. Counsel's last statement is not accurate. Everything that this witness has testified is not what Chief Sanders has told him because he was physically present at that meeting where Kenichi Kondo was there and where Sanders was there and where Hochman was there, and that's of his own memory and not what someone else told him and I object to counsel's statement in that regard.

PRESIDENT: For the information of the defense, the witness has already so testified right here that all the matters to which he has testified were told to him in camp. His memory may have been refreshed subsequently.

DEFENSE: I am not bound by his answer, sir. I wish to apologize to the Commission and to the prosecution in that I did state that he has no knowledge of anything. He does have knowledge of the conference held some time in the middle of the winter of '44 - '45.

PROSECUTION: He has further testified that he has had conferences with other people -- other than at this meeting with Hochman, Merritt and Sanders. He has admitted to this court that other things were told to him by Sanders at camp and that his memory was further refreshed at the office. The Commission is aware of that.

Now, what need further do we have to go into that? The Commission may draw its own conclusion as to the value of his evidence along that line.

I, therefore, object to continuing this line of examination. He has admitted that his memory was refreshed. He has admitted that these things were told to him.

PRESIDENT: The defense will be permitted to proceed with its recross-examination.

Q Now, you testified on cross-examination that you did not remember the various names of the various prisoners of war, isn't that correct?
A Yes, some of them.

Q Will you tell me how your memory was refreshed as to the Barber incident?
A My memory was refreshed by Sanders stating that he was a friend of a civilian war prisoner Brown, whom I know very well.

Q And what else did Sanders state about it?
A That's all.

Q Did Sanders say Barber is the man who went on sick call who had stomach ulcers and wanted powder and didn't receive it?
A No.

Q He didn't tell you that?
A No.

Q How about Nettles? Did you remember him?
A When he says that he is a young English prisoner.

Q Who was the young English prisoner? Nettles?
A No. Horsley.

Q Now, I am talking about Nettles, Mr. Hayashi.
A Nettles -- when he told me the incident that a war prisoner was struck because he slept on the bench and I remember that incident because the next day, I got permission so that the prisoners can sleep on the bench.

Q From whom did you get the permission?
A I got it from Matsumura.

Q He is the Camp Commandant?
A Yes.

Q And how about prisoner of war Doherty? Did you recall him by name?
A Yes.

Q And you say you recalled Horsley by name?
A Yes.

Q So the only person -- and how about Knudsen?
A Knudsen, I know him.

Q The only person your memory had to be refreshed about was Barber, was that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, are you sure, Mr. Hayashi, when you spoke to Sanders and you said, "I don't remember Barber", are you sure that Mr. Sanders didn't say to you, "He is the Naval captain or merchant captain who was beaten by Kondo at Siakeall"?
A No.

Q Now, you testified in redirect examination that Kenichi Kondo was in charge of the dispensary, is that right?
A Yes.

Q Now, what do you consider the dispensary to consist of?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I object to the form of the question. Let the defense ask him, "What did the dispensary consist of?" -- not "What do you consider.."

DEFENSE: If the court please, he expresses an opinion as to who was in charge of the dispensary. Now, I think I am entitled to inquire what he means by "dispensary".

PRESIDENT: Repeat the question.

(The reporter then read the question)

PRESIDENT: The question will be answered.

A The dispensary is the place where medicine is kept and some persons in charge to dress or take care of the sick persons.

Q Now, you remember testifying that Corporal Hiraiwa was there at the dispensary?
A Yes.

Q What did he have charge of?
A I believe he was in charge of the dispensary.

Q Hiraiwa was in charge of the dispensary, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Kondo wasn't in charge of the dispensary, was he?
A When Hiraiwa was there?

Q When he wasn't there.
A When he was there?

PRESIDENT: Will the counsel specify the time he was there?

DEFENSE: I am getting to it now, sir.

Q When Hiraiwa was there.
A When Hiraiwa was there, he wasn't in charge.

Q When he wasn't there?
A He took charge of it.

Q Kondo took charge, is that what you mean?
A Yes.

Q How, how often was Hiraiwa away from camp?
A I don't know.

Q You testified that when he wasn't there, Kondo was in charge. How many times was he away?
A I don't know.

Q How about Sergeant Kobayashi? What was he in charge of?

PROSECUTION: I object to these questions on the ground that the matter that has been brought out on redirect examination of this witness has been gone into before by defense counsel on the medical personnel at the camp. It's merely repetitious.

DEFENSE: If the court please, the man has testified on redirect examination that the accused was in charge of the dispensary. I am now attempting to show that the accused was not in charge of the dispensary.

PROSECUTION: All this testimony has been brought out on the cross-examination of this witness before. It's merely repetitious.

DEFENSE: It hasn't been brought out with respect as to who was in charge of the dispensary.

PRESIDENT: Objection is not sustained.

Q Sergeant Kobayashi was in charge of the medical supplies, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Those medical supplies were part of the dispensary, weren't they?
A Yes.

Q Sergeant Major Okuyama was also in the medical department, was he not?
A Yes.

Q What were his duties?
A I don't know.

Q He was the ranking non-com in the dispensary, was he not?
A Yes.

Q Were all these other men in the dispensary his subordinates?
A No.

Q Were any of them his subordinates?
A No.

Q Now, when you testified on redirect examination that Kenichi Kondo was in charge of the dispensary, you meant, did you not, that he conducted sick call?
A Yes.

Q That's as far as his responsibility went, to your knowledge, is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Now, you testified in redirect examination in connection with Kenichi Kondo's disturbing prisoners at night; do you know of any instance in which Kondo disturbed prisoners at night?
A I didn't see any.

Q Do you know of any?
A Yes.

Q What is that instance?
A When he was called "baka".

Q Was this in connection with the fact that the men had removed the blankets they were supposed to wear?
A I believe so.

Q Do you know of any other instance?
A No.

Q Now, these complaints that you received from Dr. Hechman and Mr. Sanders and Merritt, to whom did they ask you to convey those complaints?
A They never asked me to convey.

Q Was it then just the fact that you could understand English and they would come to you and tell you certain things were wrong, is that it?
A Yes.

Q And they never asked you to go to Colonel Murata or Captain Matsumura?
A There was other channels to reach him.

Q What were those channels?
A Interpreter Kimura was attached to that camp as the interpreter.

Q Do you recall Ginger?
A Yes.

Q He was a British prisoner of war, was he not?
A Yes.

Q He could speak a little Japanese, couldn't he?
A Yes.

Q Could he understand Japanese?
A I don't know.

Q Did you ever converse in Japanese with him?
A No.

Q Did he ever complain to you about Kondo?
A No.

Q Do you know whether or not he ever complained to anybody else?
A No.

Q Now, all these complaints that you received were in 1944, is that correct?
A That is correct.

Q No complaints were ever made to you in 1945, and none were made to you in 1945, is that your testimony?
A Yes.

Q Do you know whether or not Dr. Hochman ever went directly to Lieutenant Nosu with respect to certain sick prisoners of war?
A I don't know the subject but I know that Dr. Hochman went directly to Dr. Nosu.

Q How often do you think he went? How often do you say that he went?
A I have no idea.

Q You believe it was quite frequently?
A No, I don't think so.

Q Did you see him go to Nosu's office?
A No.

Q How do you know that he did go to Dr. Nosu?
A Dr. Hochman told me.

Q And what did he tell you he went about?
A I forgot the subject.

Q Was it in connection with a sick prisoner of war?
A Yes.

Q Does Kenichi Kondo speak English?
A I don't think so.

Q Does he understand English to your knowledge?
A No.

Q Does Dr. Hochman have the ability to express himself in Japanese?
A No.

Q What was the greatest number of prisoners of war at the Osaka Main Camp between '42 and '45?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment; I object to this question and this whole general line of questioning, if the court please. What value is the Commission getting out of the fact that Kenichi Konde did or did not commit these war crimes, or is there any mitigation in this last previous line of questioning? What value is there? You are wasting the time of the court. I feel obliged to object because there is nothing being gotten out, and I object to the question and the whole previous line of questioning.

DEFENSE: Sir, I think it's pertinent to the issues to show just how many people there were and this is my offer of proof -- just how many men were confined in this camp, because --

PRESIDENT: That has all been covered before, several times.

DEFENSE: Now, I am asking what the greatest number of men was because I think it has been conclusively proved here that this man was the only Japanese medical orderly that treated prisoners on sick call. I want to show this court how many prisoners of war there were at that camp. I think this is very important.

PROSECUTION: Sir, that was testified to by Mr. Sanders on the stand.

PRESIDENT: That has all been offered in previous testimony and the time of the Commission should not be taken up by matters that have been definitely covered.

DEFENSE: Mr. Sanders' testimony was as to the number of men present in the camp at the beginning.

I have no further questions at this time.

PRESIDENT: Any questions by the Commission?

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by members of the Commission:

Q You have shown some difficulty in answering a question which involved the word "discuss". Do you know what the word "discuss" means?
A Yes.

Q What does it mean?
A In talking over some subject.

Q On several occasions, you said you did not discuss a certain matter, and then when they rephrased the question and asked you did you talk about it or answer questions, you would say "yes" and the Commission is interested to see why you would make that difference between "discuss" and "answer questions".

A I think I was confused.

Q You were confused. You do know what "discuss" means?

A Yes.

Q If you talked about a matter and answered questions about the matter, you were discussing?

A Yes.

PROSECUTION: Does the Commission desire to inquire further of this witness? Any questions?

PRESIDENT: No further questions by the Commission.

PROSECUTION: May I ask the President of the Commission whether he desires this witness to remain where he might be available some time during the rest of the trial? He lives in Kyoto and unless the Commission desires him or the defense, why, he will probably go back.

PRESIDENT: The Commission has no desire for him to remain.

PROSECUTION: Does the defense desire him?

DEFENSE: How far does he go?

PROSECUTION: Kyoto.

DEFENSE: How long does it take him to get back from Kyoto?

PROSECUTION: Overnight train.

DEFENSE: He can go. You have his address so we can reach him if we want him?

PROSECUTION: The record has it.

PRESIDENT: It's an overnight ride.

PROSECUTION: All right, Mr. Hayashi.

(The witness was excused)

PROSECUTION: At this time, prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 16, certified copy of death certificate of David W. Smith from the Prisoner of War Information Bureau.

(Prosecution handing paper to defense)

DEFENSE: No objection.

PROSECUTION: Will it be admitted in evidence?

PRESIDENT: It will be admitted in evidence.

(The death certificate of David W. Smith was then received in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 16)

PROSECUTION: The prosecution now offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 17, certified copy of death certificate of Robert W. Hess, from the Prisoner of War Information Bureau.

(Prosecution handing paper to defense)

DEFENSE: No objection.

PRESIDENT: It will be admitted in evidence.

(The death certificate of Robert W. Hess was then received in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 17)

PROSECUTION: At this time, the prosecution offers in evidence, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 18, certified copy of death certificate of G. B. Serafin from the prisoner of war Information Bureau.

DEFENSE: No objection to the introduction of that exhibit.

PRESIDENT: It will beaccepted in evidence.

(The death certificate of G. B. Serafin was then received in evidence and marked Prosecution's Exhibit No. 18)

PROSECUTION: At this time, the prosecution rests.

PRESIDENT: The defense will make its opening statement.

DEFENSE: If the court please, the defense will make a motion for a finding of not guilty on the various specifications.

If the Commission please, at this time, the defense moves for a finding of not guilty as to specifications 1, 2, 3, 5, 10 and 11.

With respect to specification 1, this accused is charged with willfully and unlawfully mistreating and contributing to the death of Petty Officer First Class David W. Smith, by beating him, by forcing him to work when he was physically unable to do so and by denying him necessary medical treatment.

If the court please, that, in effect, is a charge of murder because murder in Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence is there any charge under which a person can be indicted for contributing to the death of a human being. In effect, it's a charge of murder.

It is our contention that in the proof of the prosecution at this stage of the proceedings, you must make out a prima facie case as to each and every allegation of the specification.

When we say a "prima facie" case according to the court-martial, there must be some evidence of a competent nature upon which this person can be found guilty as charged. Now, we have before the Commission many affidavits -- fifteen in number. Some of them make reference to the death of Smith and Igoe and Griffin. As far as these affidavits made out by prisoners of war not trained in medicine, I think I need make no comment because they are not qualified to testify and, therefore, their testimony is not competent and should not be considered by this Commission in connection with the charges of death.

However, with respect to the affidavits, testimony of Merrick and Dr. Hoehnen, they are the only two medical men who have testified in this case through affidavit.

Now, with respect to Smith, Dr. Hoehnen in his affidavit states that "Smith came to me on regular sick call complaining of illness. In my examination, it developed that Smith was undernourished and poorly developed. There were no positive symptoms of pneumonia present at this examination. I did, however, recommend to the Japanese medical orderly, Kenichi Kondo, that Smith be kept in camp for a few days in order to enable him to rest up. Kondo, I believe, acting on general instructions that no prisoner unless definitely sick, high temperature, broken bones, would be permitted to rest, refused to allow Smith to remain. He was sent to work and a few days later, developed pneumonia."

The evidence before this court is from Dr. Hoehnen's testimony that at the time of that examination Smith was undernourished and poorly developed and I submit from the testimony of Chief Sanders, every prisoner of war in that camp was undernourished.

His further testimony is that there was no high fever because he says if there was, Kondo would have allowed the man to remain. He further says that a few days later, he developed pneumonia and as a result of that pneumonia, because of his extreme weakness, malnutrition and lack of resistance, he died within a short time and on that testimony, this man is brought before this Commission and charged with contributing to the death of Petty Officer First Class Smith.

I submit that no prima facie case against this accused has been made out.

To the contrary, the evidence of the prosecution has shown that if Kenichi Konde did send that man to work on that day, he did so because the man had no signs of illness. He was running no temperature. He complained to the doctor that he felt ill; that's as far as it went. There were no outward signs of illness. And on that basis, this man whom we have learned through the prosecution's testimony had two or three months experience as a medical orderly sent the man out, acting on general instructions received from his commanding officer, Dr. Hosa and the other officers in that camp.

This testimony, gentlemen, is the basis of what amounts to a murder charge against the accused. That is as far as we go with respect to Smith in medical testimony. Anything else, it appears in these affidavits, is purely the imagination of other prisoners of war who after being prisoners of war for three or three and a half years, and listening to everything they heard in these barracks and out on their work details, sat down and wrote out affidavits as to what they saw and what they heard. These statements are greatly exaggerated; it has been proved here by these eye witnesses.

On the basis that no medical testimony has been introduced before this court upon which this court [illegible] prisoner of war guilty of contributing to the death of [illegible] Smith, I ask a finding of not guilty as to specification 1, and I call your attention that Dr. Hochman was asked, in regard to anything further that you care to state about the matter in question? and he said, "No".

Dr. Hochman in his affidavit doesn't blame Kenichi Konde for the death of Smith. Dr. Hochman makes an attempt to make a reasonable explanation as to why Konde did not send that man to bed, or why he didn't let him remain in camp and it is a reasonable explanation.

There has been testimony from Chief Sanders that orders were out, unless a man was visibly sick, he goes to work. This man, a soldier in the Japanese army, was carrying out his instructions.

With respect to specification 2, we are charged with the death of Hess, and the only testimony we have with respect to the death of Hess are mere conclusions by non-expert witnesses that Kenichi Konde caused the death of Hess.

Dr. Hochman, however, does not recall the circumstances of Hess' death, and we have been told by Chief Sanders that right after Hess died, Dr. Hochman was so upset, he said to Sanders, "Kenichi Konde, that dirty little Jap, caused the death of Hess" and yet, when he sits down to write out his affidavit, his testimony to be offered in evidence on the trial of Kenichi Konde whom he has said caused the death of Hess, he doesn't remember the circumstances. I submit to this court that Dr. Hoehmen never made that statement because Dr. Hoehmen as a medical officer in the United States Army, if he felt that this man was responsible for the death of any of his men whom he tried so hard to take care of for three and a half years, his statements and his feelings would be down in black and white so that this court would have before it the true picture of what went on at the Osaka Main Camp while Hoehmen was attempting to treat, to take care of his men. To the contrary, he said that Hess died and "I don't recall the circumstances."

I submit to you, gentlemen, that it puts to lie Chief Sanders -- that Hoehmen never made that statement to him.

So far as Serafin is concerned, I submit that is murder -- Specification No. 5.

Dr. Hoehmen makes out a separate affidavit, gentlemen, in which he was questioned about each of these instances.

"Do you recall the circumstances surrounding the death of a man named Serafin?"

And he answers that he was, despite his age, assigned to manual labor.

Well, this man didn't assign people to manual labor.

When a person came to sick call and the accused didn't think he was a fever, he sent him to work. What kind of didn't did was not within his jurisdiction to determine. They had officers in charge of work details. They had Chief Sanders out there with 400 some men. "On the evening of the 16th of June, he returned from work, completely tired and exhausted, and with a head cold. He told me that he felt he could not continue to work any longer because of his physical condition. With the permission of Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese medical orderly, Serafin was sent to his bunk and told to stay there. I wanted to hospitalize Serafin, but this was not permitted by Kondo."

Now, there was no denial to Hoehmen the right to treat Serafin. He could send him to the hospital; why he didn't send him to the hospital, we don't know.

If this man Kondo were a man who sent men out to work and took delight in seeing them die, this was an excellent opportunity. When Hoehmen went to him and asked for permission to put him to bed, he said, "Put him in the bunk."

That, gentlemen, shows that the man could not have contributed to the death of Serafin. Further than that, prosecution's own witness, has stated that Dr. Nosu is the man who took Serafin off the paper work. Dr. Nosu is this man's superior. Dr. Nosu took this man off paper work and sent him out. He became ill and when he came back, Kenichi Kondo said, "Send him to bed". That's the proof of prosecution witnesses and I submit to you, gentlemen, that a prima facie case has not been made out upon which you can find this man guilty of specification 3.

With respect to specification 2, if I may go back, there is some testimony that Hess was put in bed for a month, after he complained of his illness by Kondo. He rested in bed for a month and then came out again to go to work.

Now, Hess suffered from 1943 till the time of his death sometime in '44 some disease. He was an ill man and he was sent to Ichiaka Hospital and he was cleared up, and he came back again, and he went to work. He wanted to go to work, so Chief Sanders testified, and then he became very ill. He was placed in his bunk on a Friday and Chief Sanders said, "He noticed he was blue on Friday, and on Sunday, we notified Kenichi Kondo. They tried to get him to a hospital, and he died."

Now, gentlemen, is it reasonable to charge this man with the death of Hess when he lay in his bed, deathly ill, Friday, Saturday and part of Sunday? Dr. Hochman was there; Japanese doctors were in the camp. Do you expect this man to have treated Hess? This man is not a medical officer. He has no knowledge of medicine beyond first aid, and probably it doesn't go that far, and he was the lowest ranking medical man in that camp and he was the man whose duty it was to administer to the sick men who came out of over 600 prisoners of war, between November '42 and May of 1945 -- almost three years.

For almost three years, he is the only man that took care of the sick call for the Japanese medical detachment, and the prosecution seeks to put the burden of every incident square on the shoulders of a private in the Japanese army and charge him with contributing to the death of three prisoners of war when their own testimony is to the effect that he had certain orders, that if a man wasn't visibly ill, he would go to work. There is some testimony with respect to Serafin that he was taken off his paper detail and sent to work. There is no testimony at all -- no testimony at all -- that this man ever sent Serafin to work. Chief Petty Officer Sanders never testified that this man sent Serafin to work. The Chief Petty Officer testified that Serafin was taken off paper work and he assumes that this is the man that did it.

Hayashi, prosecution's witness, testified that Dr. Hara took Serafin off the paper work.

Gentlemen, there was no prima facie case with respect to specification 3. On the basis of that alone, without going into the cause of death or what contributes to a man's death, with respect to specification 1 and 2, may I repeat, there is some evidence that these men were sent out to work but there is no evidence that at the time they went out to work, they were sick to the extent that this man was allowed to have them remain in camp.

Now, I realize there is a lot of testimony before this Commission that Dr. Hoffman complained that Kenichi Kondo wasn't cooperating with him, and I ask the Court to take notice of the fact that this is a Japanese prisoner of war camp; there are American prisoners of war. Chief Sanders testified there were some gold-bricks among the American prisoners of war and among the British.

There may have been quite a few occasions, gentlemen, when a man wasn't sick and he sought to get off of work and this man had to send them to work. The same thing happens in our own dispensary, day after day. This certainly is not the basis for a war criminal upon which a man can forfeit his life, certainly, not upon this testimony.

I have the affidavit of Lonnie C. Harvick. Lonnie C. Harvick was a prisoner of war, medical orderly and he, I understand from Chief Sanders' testimony and Hayashi's testimony, was present at sick call day by day, and here's what Lonnie has to say:

(Lonnie C. Harvick, speaking of the Japanese doctor in Camp No. 1:

"I do not know his name, but he was a lieutenant and the senior medical officer. He turned practically everything over to a guard named Ozeki and backed Ozeki in everything he did. This medical officer had no interest in the sick men and he never examined them or prescribed medicine for them. Ozeki prescribed medicine and examined the sick and ordered sick men to work in all kinds of weather; beat them; disturbed them at night while they were trying to sleep; caused unnecessary trouble in the camp when it could have been avoided and had the authority or took it upon himself to cut rations of the sick men in half."

We know that is not true. There is a man that was there every day. There is a man who should know the circumstances of which he is speaking. He doesn't condemn the actions of Kondo with respect to the three men who died.

I realize, gentlemen, that he does say he sent sick men to work in all kinds of weather, but, gentlemen, he sent men who came on sick call to work -- whether or not they were sick, we don't know whether or not his men knew they were sick, we don't know. He had his orders as it is testified to by prosecution witnesses: when a man is not visibly sick, he goes to work.

With respect to specification 5, as aptly known as the "beam" incident, we are charged with beating 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 men, and gentlemen, there is no testimony before this Court that anybody saw those men beaten. There is no affidavit that five men were beaten. There is purely the testimony of Chief Sanders and he testified when he came into the room, it appears as though someone had been beaten, but there were three Japanese in the room and the corporal of the guard is the one who had the stick, not Kenichi Kondo; and because Kenichi Kondo was a person who operated sick call at this camp every day and because Kenichi Kondo had the onerous task of sending men to work who might be sick without his knowledge, everything is piled high on Kenichi Kondo. But there is not one iota of credible evidence upon which this court can convict of this accused of that beating because nobody saw it.

There is Kunak's affidavit, Yonton's affidavit, Ordoyno's affidavit, Smith's affidavit, Vasco's affidavit. Did the men get beaten and have it roll off their back like water off a duck's back? Did they forget about it? These men, when they were freed from the prisoner of war camp, were questioned as to what atrocities were committed. Where are these affidavits, gentlemen? Did it actually ever happen? Is this somebody's imagination? Who actually participated in the beating? There is no affidavit at all that Kenichi Kondo beat these men. There is some evidence that Kenichi Kondo was in the room. That's as far as the evidence goes. Nobody saw a blow struck. Nobody can come before this court and say, "I was struck." Nobody has come before this court and testified that he was struck, either through affidavit or as an eye witness.

On that basis, I say to this court that there is no prima facie case made out by the prosecution as to the specification No. 5 and on that basis, I ask for a finding of not guilty.

With respect to specification 10, we are charged that between 31 January, 1945 and 8 May 1945, Kenichi Kondo as medical orderly in charge of sick prisoners of war, did, willfully and unlawfully, mistreat and abuse numerous Allied Prisoners of War by failing, neglecting and refusing to provide them necessary medicine and medical attention, and by striking, kicking and beating them and forcing them to work when they were physically unfit to do so.

To the contrary, gentlemen, so far as this portion of the specification is concerned, Chief Sanders said Kondo never refused to give necessary medicine and medical attention except when a prisoner of war was late at sick call. It's certainly not a war crime, and there is certainly no showing that that prisoner suffered at all because he doesn't the medicine when he showed up late for sick call.

I think on that basis, alone, that portion should be stricken from the specification, but above and beyond that, the evidence with respect to the mistreatment of prisoners of war between 31 January, 1945 and 8 May 1945 comes from affidavits in the first instance which say Kondo beat numerous prisoners of war. They don't tell us when; they don't tell us when. They don't tell us why.

Now, with respect to beatings specifically alleged, these men might have well been talking about these beatings. How do we know what they are talking about there. Is this man being tried twice for the same offense? These specifications are drawn once specifically and then in a general catch-all specification; it might very well be, if the court is convinced of the proof and they feel that Kenichi Kondo did beat all the men with which he is specifically charged with the beating -- it might very well be that those are the same men -- the men that these men meant when they say, "I saw him beat numerous men." There is no way of telling what they are talking about, and because of that fact, because of the fact that the court might allow itself to convict a man of two specifications alleging the same offense, I ask that that be stricken and a finding of not guilty be returned upon it.

With respect to specification 11, the only evidence offered on the part of the prosecution to substantiate that specification is the affidavit of Major Bleich, and here in his affidavit he says as follows:

"Because of the inadequacy of medicines, our best treatment was to prescribe rest. The Japanese medical man, Jap Star Private KONDO, however, was extremely arbitrary in refusing to allow men to stay in from the work details. He would require diarrhea cases, for example, to show him their stools --

PRESIDENT: Pardon me. Are you reading from Bleich?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: And are you reading the copy where the paragraph is stricken?

DEFENSE: It's the only paragraph with reference to Bleich. I am reading from the third page of the affidavit. Bleich was the medical officer at the Oryoma Camp.

-- so that he could determine whether the case was serious enough. Many times I had to shake thermometers up to get him to allow our men to stay in, as a temperature decline in fever would always be an excuse for KONDO to send such cases back to work."

If there is no visible signs of illness; if there is no sign of temperature, these men must go to work, and the mere fact that he required diarrhea cases to bring their stools to him for examination, certainly does not show that he is arbitrary. To the contrary; he is seeking to determine what was wrong with these men. That is not arbitrary. There is an honest and sincere effort on the part of the man to find out who was sick and who wasn't sick, who had diarrhea and who didn't have diarrhea, so that he could perform his job as he was required to by his superior officers. The mere fact that he required stools to be brought before him, I think, is in his favor because that's the only way you can determine whether it was diarrhea or amoebic dysentery or bacillary dysentery from which these men were suffering. It is certainly the most important factor to be considered in determining whether or not a man should go to work or not. That's the only evidence we have with respect to specification

No. 11. And there, we are charged with willfully and unlawfully mistreating certain American Prisoners of War by forcing them to work while physically unable to do so, and there is nothing, gentlemen -- no specific instance at all as to what happened -- no way to determine whether or not the man was sick, who was he talking about, when did he send to work.

With respect to these other specifications, I feel that there is a prima facie case in the record at this time upon which we shall be called to answer, because Chief Sanders has testified to some extent as to coming in on the tail end of a beating. I believe his testimony was he came in on the tale end of the beating of Moraley, the beating of Doherty, and the beating of Krumbach, and that to my mind is a prima facie case which we should be called upon to answer before this court, but with respect to these other specifications, no such case has been made out. Seeds of suspicion may have been planted, but there is no competent evidence upon which a prima facie case can be based to show that this man was responsible and did contribute to the death of three prisoners of war; also, that he beat five prisoners of war on one occasion; that he mistreated numerous others, sent them to work at Osuka Camp or that he did the same thing at the Oeyama Camp.

I call upon the Commission with respect to specification 1, 2, 3, 5, 10 and 11 for a finding of not guilty.

PROSECUTION: If it please the Commission, it appears according to defense counsel's motion that K.niehi Konde, the accused in this case, was not such a bad fellow after all.

PRESIDENT: Before you proceed now, is he going to call any witnesses?

PROSECUTION: Sir?

PRESIDENT: Is the defense going to call any witnesses?

PROSECUTION: Sir, this is a motion to strike certain specifications to which I am now replying and depending upon whatever ruling the Commission makes, the defense will have to proceed.

PRESIDENT: He has moved for a finding of not guilty?

DEFENSE: Sir, this is a motion for a finding of not guilty.

PRESIDENT: At this time?

DEFENSE: Yes, the court hears the argument of the defense and the prosecution and retires to deliberate, to determine whether a prima facie case has been made out.

PROSECUTION: I repeat, that it appears that the defendant is quite innocent in all of these matters, and that perhaps the prosecution has planted the "seeds of suspicion", to quote defense counsel, in the Commission's mind as to certain of the specifications.

I propose at this time to look and see just what evidence the prosecution has brought forth to this court, to see whether or not Kenichi Kondo is as good as the defense would have us believe.

I will go in reverse and take Specification 11, which the defense has requested that the Commission strike. Now, if the Commission will note, this affidavit of Colonel Fleish is made in a different camp -- Oeyama Camp, but the matters now on the record are the same which took place in the Headquarters Camp, namely, the sending of sick prisoners to work.

Now, defense counsel will have you believe that because Colonel Fleish says that Kondo had sick prisoners showing their stools to determine whether or not he had diarrhea is a point in his favor. May I remind the Commission of Chief Sanders' testimony when he stated that Kondo -- to show his ignorance of medical matters -- insisted that a man had to show him his stool to see if there is blood in it before he would diagnose a case of dysentery or diarrhea, no matter what Dr. Beahman said. And this affidavit is stronger against this accused because it happened at a different camp and showed his whole method of how he treated prisoners of war, that it wasn't different at one other camp than it was at another.

On that basis alone, it is prima facie evidence as to that specification.

Now, as to Specification 10, prosecution is a little puzzled as to defense's motion to strike because we feel it's our strongest specification.

Now, I would like to read excerpts of the affidavit in evidence about this accused, Kenichi Kondo and I will quote:

From the affidavit of John Harold Zimmer, Staff Sergeant:

"...Kondo beat so many men unmercifully, with clubs as well as fists, that it is impossible for me to recall the specific individuals who were beaten by him".

From the affidavit of Tasker Homer Bliss, Staff Sergeant:

"When prisoners went to Condo at sick call in the morning, for medical treatment, Condo very seldom examined the men but would send them out to work, even though they had beriberi, dysentery, or pneumonia, without treatment of any kind."

From the affidavit of Dr. David Beahman:

"Kondo hit sick POW's over the head with books, slapped their faces, hit them with his fists and kicked them."

The affidavit of Frank E. Allen, with respect to the Grimsley incident, where Grimsley is beaten with shovels, pick handles, etc., in which he identifies Kenichi Kondo by name as being a participant.

The affidavit of David Granger, Pfc:

"A private, Conde, a medical orderly, used to beat and hit men although they were sick."

The affidavit of Zimmer again, which is the beating of Yaeger who was in the hospital, where he beat him with his feet and knocked out several of his teeth; in evidence before this Commission.

The affidavit of Lennie C. Merritt, which defense has quoted for this Commission, in which Kondo ordered sick men to work in all kinds of weather and beat them and disturbed them at night.

And further, the testimony of Mr. Hayashi on the stand at the meeting where Kondo admitted that he hit prisoners -- sick prisoners, and further than that, the direct evidence of Chief Boatswain's Mate Sanders on the stand where he himself saw Kondo hit prisoners of war on innumerable occasions whose names he could not now remember. Our strongest specification -- I will make no further comment on that -- Specification 5, the "baka" incident.

Defense would have you believe prosecution has not made out a prima facie case. However, in the record stands testimony of Chief Sanders that he came there with a man lying down and with Kondo standing over him with visible effects of having been struck, and further, that he was told by each victim that Kondo beat them. By each victim -- he, Sanders, was told. He was in a position as Camp Commander to know what was going on. He would be the logical person for people to come and tell him if they were hit.

Now, if you feel that Chief Sanders is lying about everything, then you may very well find him not guilty of this specification, but if you do, you must hold all this testimony to be worthless, or otherwise, you would have to imagine that he dreamed up this incident and that these victims' names were things he dreamed up in his own mind.

Prosecution feels that there is ample evidence before this Commission that we have made out a prima facie case.

Now, with respect to Specifications 1, 2 and 3, it is prosecution's contention that no matter how sick a man is -- no matter, for example, a man named John Smith would under ordinary circumstances die on Friday, if by someone's act he is made to die on Wednesday, the person who makes him die on Wednesday is guilty of contributing to his death, and the law so holds.

It's prosecution's contention that these men were very sick and that he, Kenichi Kondo, the accused, contributed to their death and hastened their death, and perhaps caused their death by making them go out when they were sick by overruling Dr. Kuchmann's decisions, a competent medical man.

Now, the fact that Kenichi Kondo may have acted under orders, that's no excuse. That's something defense may bring out in their defense. We are merely arguing now, if the Commission please, as to whether we, the prosecution, have made out a prima facie case.

We must make out a prima facie case, and if we have, then the burden rests upon the defense to go ahead.

Now, the defense has made some to do about the fact that Kenichi Kondo acted under orders. I refer the Commission to the SCAP rules which state that the fact that a person acted under orders --is no excuse, but merely in mitigation, and if in fact, that is true, that is something the defense will have to bring out, and that will be only in mitigation of the accused's acts, not in exoneration.

Defense has, in its motion, cast reflection on the credibility of Chief Sanders, who is, of course, one of the bulwarks of the prosecution's case. Chief Sanders was on the stand here for a long time. Did the defense attempt to attack his credibility then? No. Why not?

Now, with respect to Smith, the first specification: In referring to Dr. Hochmann's affidavit, I would like to call the Commission's attention to the fact that he states Kondo refused to allow Smith to remain. He also states in there he thought that he might have been acting under someone's orders. I again point out to the Commission that that is no defense but merely mitigation. And we have only to make out a prima facie case.

With respect to Hess, Dr. Hochmann does not remember. However, if you will look at the death certificate, you will note that Dr. Hochmann's name does not appear on the death certificate and it is possible that he may not remember the circumstances. However, Sanders was very definitein his statements about the death of Hess because he knew Hess. He is very definite about his statements of Dr. Hochmann. If you refuse to believe Sanders, if you find a finding of not guilty on Specification 2, then you must find that Sanders' testimony is a lie, and if you do that, you must find all of his testimony a lie and I don't think you can do that.

With respect to Serafin, there is ample testimony before this court by Sanders as to Serafin's status, as to the fact that he was sent to work while he was old and aged and sick by Kondo.

Dr. Hochmann's own affidavit on Serafin states that Kondo refused to allow him to be hospitalized. It is so stated right in his own affidavit.

Defense has in its argument made mention of the fact that Kenichi Kondo had only two months medical training and offers that as an excuse. This Commission has testimony before it in affidavit evidence that there was a competent doctor at the dispensary, one David Hochmann, but that his decisions were constantly overlooked by this accused, Kenichi Kondo. If he were interested in the welfare of Allied prisoners of war, would he not have taken the advice of a competent medical officer instead of acting on his own? The answer is obvious. The prosecution feels that we have certainly made out a prima facie case on all specifications and even go beyond that.

And the defense should be called upon to proceed with its case.

DEFENSE: Before the court retires, I would like to say a few words with respect to Specifications 1, 2, 3.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I object to it; the defense counsel has already made the motion.

DEFENSE: I have no objection to your answering my argument, if you care to let me make it.

PROSECUTION: I object that the defense counsel has had its opportunity. I don't think it should go on ad infinitum. The court is aware of the issues.

DEFENSE: May I have a ruling from the court?

PRESIDENT: In the mimeographed form, Headquarters, Eighth Army, Subject: Rules of Procedure -- Trials of Accused War Criminals, dated 8 February 1946, it does not provide for other than the defense making its opening statement. The defense has made its opening statement in which it has requested that certain specifications be stricken from the record --

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, the defense has not made its opening statement yet. It has made a motion to strike certain specifications.

PRESIDENT: Preceding its opening statement?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: He didn't include that in the opening statement.

PROSECUTION: That is not a statement. The prosecution has answered the argument of defense counsel and we feel that the matter should rest at this time and the Commission should make its decision. We don't feel that there should be any additional argument on it.

PRESIDENT: I understood that he was making an opening statement, including that motion in his opening statement, is that right?

DEFENSE: No, sir, that's not correct.

PRESIDENT: Your motion to strike precedes your opening statement?

DEFENSE: Motion for a finding of not guilty, sir, may be made at the conclusion of the prosecution's case on the grounds that they have failed to make out a prima facie case.

It is distinct and separate from my opening statement. That will come after a ruling is made by the court.

However, at this time, I have asked the permission of the court to say a few words in addition to what I have said before and the prosecution is objecting. I feel that it's discretionary with the court whether you will allow me an additional few minutes to make further comments.

PROSECUTION: I object because the defense counsel has spoken for approximately twenty minutes on his motion to strike the specifications. I have answered them. I feel the court can decide the matter now. The issues are very clear before the court and they have had testimony for three days and an affidavit evidence and I feel they can make up their minds so it is and I don't feel there should be any further argument at this time.

The counsel for defense has already made its argument and I have answered it and I feel the matter should rest.

DEFENSE: I didn't realize that the prosecution was so intrued with my request to make an additional few comments to the court. I will withdraw it.

PRESIDENT: The court will recess; the court will take a recess for five minutes.

The Commission then took a recess until 1215 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the counsel, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session. The Commission will go into a closed session.

PROSECUTION: Sir, do you wish to state that you are adjourning until tomorrow morning?

PRESIDENT: No, we are going now into closed session.

The court was closed, and upon being reopened the president announced:

PRESIDENT: The motion by the defense for a finding of not guilty of specifications 1, 2, 3, 5, 10 and 11 at this time is denied. The defense will proceed.

The court will adjourn until 0800 hours, tomorrow morning, 8 August 1946.

The court then, at 1250 hours, on 7 August 1946, adjourned to meet at 0800 hours, on 8 August 1946.

Leonard McNaul

LEONARD M. RAND
Chief Prosecutor

DISTRICT COURT HOUSE
Yokohama, Japan

8 August 1946

The Commission met, pursuant to adjournment, at 0900 hours, all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and the reporter who were present at the close of the previous session in this case being present.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: At this time, if the Commission please, the prosecution would like to present to the Commission for its determination by the Commission of what it desires to do.

A telecon received yesterday from Washington directed to Colonel Carpenter with reference to a witness, Tech Sergeant Walter C. Ryan who is now flying over from the States to testify in War Crimes Trials, in which it is mentioned that he knows facts concerning Kenichi Kanda, and I wish to present to the Commission a copy of the telecon received yesterday of which the defense was apprised by phone yesterday, for determination by the Commission as to what it desires to do.

DEFENSE: I am going to object to this being shown to the Commission unless it is presented as an exhibit in this case, because it contains more than what prosecution has just stated. True, it's a cablegram from some place in the States with reference to Sergeant Ryan, but it goes further than saying that he knows something about Kenichi Kanda.

On that basis, unless it is offered as an exhibit, I object to the Commission seeing it.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, this telecon is an official document received at GHQ, SCAP, in the normal course of business, and, therefore, under the SCAP rules, is admissible -- the document that is being presented to the Commission for its determination as to what it desires to do with reference to the testimony of this witness who is now flying over here.

Therefore, I believe the document should be received by the Commission in order for it to make up its mind as to what it desires to do.

PRESIDENT: As I understand it, it's an official War Department communication?

PROSECUTION: This is a telecon received from Washington.

PRESIDENT: An official War Department communication, and it contains information as to the status of a witness?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: And you desire to ascertain whether we think we need that witness?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: A witness for the prosecution?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will receive that official message to decide whether it needs a continuance for an extra witness or not, to decide whether we consider to continue to wait for the arrival of the witness or not.

DEFENSE: Sir, I have no objections to that -- to the document as an official document.

Now, the prosecution stated that there is a witness flying over here. I think on the basis of that, the Commission can determine whether or not they wish to hear that witness. There is no need to see that statement. I know the contents of it and I say it has been misstated to the Commission.

PROSECUTION: I show the document to the President and Law Member:

(The prosecution hands paper to the President)

Has the Law Member ruled on its admissibility yet? The prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution's Exhibit No. 19 telegram received from Washington, directed to Colonel Carpenter with reference to the status of a witness, Tech Sergeant Walter J. Ryan.

PRESIDENT: This teletype is in no ways to be considered as evidence. It is information as to the whereabouts of a witness, and we will determine at the conclusion of this case for the present witnesses whether we desire this witness. At this very moment, the Commission will not make a decision as to whether we need this witness.

All you have got to do is to reply by radio as soon as possible. This case will be closed in about two days. We haven't heard the defense yet.

PROSECUTION: A radiogram was dispatched yesterday, airing air priority for this witness and he is flying over as a witness under an AAF priority. The prosecution feels that the testimony of this witness should be in the case in order to aid the Commission in reaching a verdict, if they find that this man is guilty.

Prosecution does not know what this man will testify to or what his knowledge consists of, but on the basis of the radiogram, we feel that he has some knowledge of the activities of Kenichi Kondo at Headquarters Camp.

We, therefore, feel that is testimony that should be before this Commission. As to what juncture of the proceedings the testimony should be received, I leave it up to the Commission's discretion.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will take a few minutes recess; the defense counsel and the prosecution will accompany us.

The Commission then took a recess until 0900 hours, at which hour the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

PROSECUTION: At this time, prosecution desires to withdraw from evidence its offer of Prosecution's Exhibit No. 10.

At this time, prosecution wishes to make a statement and a motion for the record. Prosecution requests this Commission to grant a continuance of approximately one week until the arrival of Technical Sergeant Walter C. Ryan, an American, a former American prisoner of war who was stationed at Headquarters Camp in the Omine Area, Sergeant Ryan, and is now flying over under A-2 priority and it is anticipated that he will be here within approximately six days.

Prosecution makes this motion for the following reasons: All through the trials of these war crimes cases before these Commissions, it has been very evident that affidavit and paper evidence have been very unreliable and we have been seeking constantly to attempt to protect the rights of the accused and also to aid the prosecution in getting live witnesses over from the Japan so that these Commissions could hear direct evidence as to any war crimes atrocities committed by these accused and something upon which they could place greater value and greater credence.

We now have a witness who mentions in his radiogram that he knew the accused, Kenichi Kondo and that he was at his camp for a period of several years. It is, therefore, logical to assume that he knew about the accused and that he knew concerning his activities at this camp. The prosecution feels that he is, therefore, in a position to aid this Commission in determining whether or not Kenichi Kondo is innocent or guilty of the charge and specifications and we feel that if a witness is available and is coming over here and will be here in such a short time and may aid the Commission in determining whether or not this accused is guilty or innocent, that the Commission should receive that evidence and should, therefore, continue. We feel that even protecting the rights of the accused, he should be here to testify because he is a live witness and would have first hand knowledge of the accused and the prosecution, therefore, makes its motion for a continuance of approximately seven days.

DEFENSE: If the court please, the defense opposes the application for a continuance on the grounds that defense counsel is now under emergency priority to return to the United States and will not be available at the end of six or seven days when this witness comes before the Commission. There is no other counsel in this trial.

I wish to state for the record that Major Martin does appear on the orders. Major Martin, however, only appears on the orders to certify to the record because it was known at the time this trial commenced that I would be not here to certify to the record.

On the basis of the fact that the present defense counsel will not be available when this case is continued, I respectfully request that the trial proceed.

PROSECUTION: May I answer that for the record? In answer to defense counsel's objections to the continuance on the ground that he will not be available, I wish to state that other counsel can be appointed in his place and stand to protect the rights of the accused and to continue with the trial, that there are many cases where defense counsel would have to withdraw from a trial by reason of sickness, redeployment, death or any other reason; that doesn't mean that a trial may not go on. The important consideration is whether the rights of the accused will be seriously jeopardized. I would like to state further for the record that the trial has been in progress three days. It has had the benefit of Lt. Weil's cross-examination of the prosecution's witnesses. Prosecution feels that he has done a good job for the accused and we feel that his work should not be lost.

Further, we wish to state that our principal witness, Chief Sanders, has testified here and is on orders to return to the United States on Monday.

DEFENSE: If the court please, I don't see what bearing that has on my request that the trial continue. Chief Sanders has already testified.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will grant a continuance for approximately one week to meet at the call of the president.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, on the basis of the Commission's ruling granting a continuance, the defense now moves for a mistrial, on the grounds that the rights of the accused have been prejudiced.

If the Commission please, according to the SCAP regulations dated 8 December 1945, it is stated among the rights of the accused, that the accused is entitled to be represented by counsel prior to and during trial appointed by the convening authority. It is our contention that that means the same counsel throughout the trial and that any attempt to introduce new counsel in the middle of a case prejudices the rights of the accused.

Now, I appreciate the fact that new counsel can read the record, if it is gotten up in time and he can also converse with old counsel. However, whether or not he agrees with the manner in which the trial has been conducted to that point is something we cannot determine. And if it is his opinion the trial has not been properly conducted and he cannot put in evidence of his defense in accordance with the procedure followed, or the evidence adduced prior to the time he took over, then, the rights of the accused have been prejudiced.

I have conducted the trial for the defendant along certain lines. If new counsel does not agree with me, he is bound by what is in the record and there is nothing he can do to add this evidence.

On that basis, the rights of the accused have been prejudiced. That is the only thing which is important to this court. This court sits now to determine the guilt or innocence of this man on certain charges, including three charges of murder.

Now, prosecution has made certain statements. What difference does it make? Counsel goes off, is changed; other counsel is available. I state now that in the defense section of the War Crimes Commission attached to the Judge Advocate Section, Eighth Army, we have five lawyers; two are actively engaged in the trial of a war crimes case in Court Room No. 1. One of them is in Manila. The fourth is awaiting to receive verdict in Court Room No. 3 this morning and has started the preparation of another case, and I am the fifth.

On that basis, we have nobody who can come in and try this case for this accused. We have received a new counsel assigned to War Crimes Defense. However, it is not fair to the new counsel nor to the accused to require him to walk into this court room and for the first time to appear before a military commission in the trial of a war criminal charged with three deaths when half of the case is in the record.

On that ground, the rights of the accused are certainly prejudiced. He is not getting the services of experienced counsel, and I don't care whether the man has tried court-martial or anything, because this certainly is not a court comparable to court-martial courts.

I call upon the Commission to take judicial notice of the fact that when the prosecution comes before these commissions, they come down with two or three prosecutors and no prosecutor has ever been required to go into a court room until he has had experience by sitting in and listening to the trial of a case and if this continuance is granted, we will be forced by necessity to send an inexperienced man, and I don't care whether he is a lawyer of four or five or ten years experience, we will be forced to send an inexperienced man in the court room to defend this accused on murder charges.

On that basis, I respectfully call upon the Commission to declare this trial a mistrial.

PRESIDENT: Will the defense counsel state the emergency requiring him to go to the United States?

DEFENSE: Personal emergency, sir.

PRESIDENT: The motion by the defense counsel for a mistrial is denied.

PROSECUTION: Sir, have you indicated up to what point you will adjourn?

PRESIDENT: You will get a continuance for approximately one week. The court had given but it and the Commission will meet at the call of the president.

The court then, at 0915 hours, 6 August 1946, adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

RICHARD H. RAND
Chief Prosecutor

DISTRICT COURT HOUSE
Yokohama, Japan

20 August 1946

The Commission met, pursuant to adjournment at 0900 hours, and the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and reporter who were present at the close of the previous session in this case being present, except: Mr. Black, Assistant Prosecutor, excused by the appointing authority, and Lt. Weil, defense counsel, has been redeployed to the States, and by order of the appointing authority, Major Phillips has been substituted in his stead, and he is present in court.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution wishes to state that the witness, Tech Sergeant Walter C. Ryan arrived last Friday, and the prosecution is ready to proceed.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, the defense is not ready to proceed at this time.

At the present time, I am engaged in another trial. The record which has been made in this court heretofore is not completed. It will be necessary for me to go over this record very thoroughly before there is a chance for me to start in the defense of this case.

I have been advised by the court reporter, that the record will be ready on or about the 30th of this month. It's impossible for me to say now just exactly what will be necessary for me to do after reading the record and after talking to the defendant in this case and talking to Sergeant Ryan and the witnesses that will be necessary to be called and that emphasis should be placed upon the testimony.

The defense urgently requests that no date certain be set by the Commission at the time for recessing in this case, but rather have the Commission adjourn until recalled by the recorder. Colonel Reichmann will notify the president the very first moment that it will be possible for me to continue in the defense of this particular defendant.

PRESIDENT: The defense will keep Colonel Reichmann and the prosecution informed in ample time, and we will all be ready to proceed as soon as you are ready.

Any remarks?

PROSECUTION: I don't believe that the Commission should adjourn without a date to be fixed. While it is true that Major Phillips is now in the case, the investigation of the case by the defense has been worked on by Lt. Weil, and the bulk of the prosecution's case is in. There is merely two witnesses and perhaps one exhibit on records, and I feel that after the record is completed, which is stated by defense counsel will be about the 30th, it should not require very much time after that to come into court to represent this accused and I, therefore, feel that some day should be fixed shortly after the 30th for the court to convene, if at that time defense counsel still feels he hasn't had sufficient time to protect the rights of the accused, the prosecution will agree by stipulation to a further reasonable continuance for him, but I do believe that the court should set some fixed time.

DEFENSE: If the court please, causing the court to come here and meet only to be recessed again for a different date, I believe, is a waste of the court's time and it certainly is a waste of the prosecution's time, and I know it's a waste of my time.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I didn't say that the Commission would come here to meet. I have stated that if defense counsel at the end of a certain time stated that he did not have sufficient time to protect the rights of the accused, the prosecution will agree by stipulation which will become part of the record to any further continuance, but I believe some definite date should be fixed.

DEFENSE: We can't agree by stipulation as to the date the court can sit. That can be done only by the president.

PRESIDENT: We set the date; the date is not arranged or changed outside of the court room.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I still urge that some definite date be fixed after the 30th of the month in order that this case may not be just hanging in the air.

As I have stated, I believe the bulk of the work on the defense has been done. Their witnesses have been probably alerted and questioned and they have had investigators on the case, and it's merely this one witness who was entered in the case after the bulk of the prosecution's case is in.

DEFENSE: For the purpose of informing counsel for the prosecution whose method of preparation is altogether different from that of the defense, when a defense lawyer goes into a case, sir, he is thoroughly capable on all the facts of the particular situation that is involved. We don't intend at any time to come into a case where the counsel is not thoroughly prepared. It would be a waste of the court's time and there would be too much of an opportunity for a slip up to occur whereby in the review by history of these particular cases, that we would be subject to severe criticism. I don't know how counsel for the prosecution prepares his cases, but I do know how we prepare them down in our office, and I know that only the most thorough preparation can be given these cases so that the court and the Eighth Army is not subject to criticism in the future. I can see counsel's point that by having a date set, that it will be necessary for me to come in and give my presentation on that particular date. I think that on a lot of occasions, on a lot of counsels, that would be desirable, but in trying these cases,

If the Commission please, I am not supposed to be trying them myself. I am supposed to be Chief of the Defense Section and supposed to be running the Defense Section, just as Colonel Blackstock's office is running the prosecution.

But in these cases of emergency, well, I'm to jump in and the emergency situation is such that I have got to get it over as quickly as possible so as to get the rest of the work finished without [illegible]

[illegible] the greatest diligence will be used on my part to get this case to trial and over with as quickly as possible.

PRESIDENT: The court will grant a continuance; the case is to be adjourned to meet at the call of the President.

The defense counsel will appear in person to the President of the Commission on August 21, the approximate date you will be ready to proceed.

By reason of circumstances beyond our control, the case was adjourned from August 20th to the present day. PROSECUTION: With the approval of the defense, the prosecution recommends that thereafter the record be immediately after the introduction of the charges and specifications and that the reading of the record include all matters thereon, that is argument and other things which came up during the course of the trial. Is that satisfactory to the Commission, Sir?

PRESIDENT: Yes, it is.

The Commission reassembled pursuant to adjournment, at 0900, all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the reporter and the interpreters who were present at the close of the previous session on this case being present. The accused was also present.

Major Burton K. Phillips, Chief Defense Counsel was also present.

PROSECUTION: At this time, if the Commission please, the prosecution calls as its witness, Tech Sergeant Walter C. Ryan, who was flown over here from the States to testify in this case, and for this reason the case was adjourned until this time.

Technical Sergeant Walter C. Ryan, US Army, a witness for the prosecution, was sworn and testified as follows:

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, up to this time the prosecution has not been granted permission to reopen their case. They had once closed it and now, by placing another witness on the stand, they must request and the Court must grant the right to reopen.

PROSECUTION: I make a motion for permission of the Court to reopen my case and present the testimony of Sergeant Ryan.

LAW MEMBER: And have you explained why the Sergeant was not present and available at the time you recessed?

PROSECUTION: I think the record shows that, sir. The record shows that the prosecution has rested and I now ask permission of the Court to reopen my case to introduce the testimony of Sergeant Ryan.

LAW MEMBER: Does the defense have any comments?

DEFENSE: The defense has no objections.

LAW MEMBER: Motion is granted.

PROSECUTION: May the record show that the witness had identified the accused.

Q. When you got to the Omuta main camp what prisoners of war were stationed there, that is nationalities?
A. There were two sections in the camp. One consisted of a British section which consisted to about 300 men and the other section was known as the "American Section" which consisted of prisoners of war taken at Guam and the Philippines, and several merchant marine men from the American Merchant Service, and a few from the British, and about 85 Indian merchant marine men and Chinese.

Q. Now when you first got to the Headquarters POW camp, how many American prisoners of war were there?
A. About 235.

Q. Did that number of Americans ever materially increased or decreased during the period you were at the camp?
A. Decreased due to the number of deaths that existed there during the period I was there.

Q. When you first got to the camp, how many dispensaries, if any, did they have for all of the prisoners of war, all nationalities?
A. They had in the American section a small room which they used as a dispensary. In the British section they had a bay which was set aside to hold about 30 to 40 men from both camps who were classified as unfit to go to work and remained there for hospitalization.

Q. When was the first time that the American section had a dispensary available to it?
A. About June, 1943.

Q. At that time who was in charge of that dispensary? Let me reword that question. Who was the Japanese medical person in charge of that dispensary at that time?
A. Kenichi Kondo.

Q. How long did Kenichi Kondo stay at the Omuta main camp, as far as you know?
A. About the end of April 1945.

Q. What were Kenichi Kondo's duties in the Omuta main camp?
A. He supervised the sick call each morning which started at 6:30 and remained open until 7:00.

Q. Maybe in detail, what did his duties consist in supervising the sick call?
A. The men would line up on the outside of the sick bay before 6:30 at which time Kondo would open the sick bay. The first in line would go up and give their number and Doctor Kodama, an American medical doctor, would be there at Kondo's side, and the men would give their symptoms to Doctor Kodama, explaining what was bothering them. He would in turn explain to Kondo what was wrong with them and he would either recommend medication or that they should remain in camp for the day.

Q. Who kept the sick book and the medical records for the POWs?
A. Kondo kept the records for the Japanese.

Q. At sick call in the morning, what Japanese medical personnel would place men who were ill on the sick list?

A. Kondo was a member of the medical personnel who placed the men's names on the sick list.

Q. At the dispensary, what Japanese medical personnel made admissions to the camp hospital?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, that is objected to unless specified by the prosecutor as to an occasion that this man might not be. A general admission like that "who made admissions" within the knowledge of this particular witness is a matter which is subject to severe cross examination. A more general statement by this witness is nothing more than an inflammatory statement. It requires the witness to go into and dig out whereas if the witness will testify, or be asked to testify, as to his own knowledge of the occasions which he noticed this being carried out by the defendant, then there would be no objection by the defense.

PROSECUTION: I will withdraw the question and rephrase it.

Q. At the dispensary at the Headquarters Camp, do you know of your own knowledge, who would make admissions, what Japanese medical personnel would make admissions to the camp hospital?

A. The only information I can give in that question is that on occasions I have known Doctor Yoshura would have to get Lieutenant Kondo's permission for patients to be admitted into the sick ward.

Q. Who was Captain Baland?

A. Captain Baland was an American medical officer who was a surgeon and who participated in several operations while he was in the camp, but had no part in the normal sick call or dispensary functions there.

PRESIDENT: At this point the Commission will take a 10 minute recess.

The Commission took a recess until 1004 hours, at which time the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the reporter and the interpreters and the absent recess duty basis.

A. The Filipino was guard of honor who was still under guard and

Q. Did Doctor Baland attend the sick call for the American POWs at the main camp?

A. [illegible]

Q. [illegible]

A. Doctor Yoshura was an American doctor, a officer who worked at sick call each morning with Kondo.

Q. For how long a period of time did Doctor Yoshura work in the dispensary at sick call with Kondo?

A. He worked there all during the period in which Kondo was at No. 1 Camp at Cabanatuan.

Q. Was there any other doctor, American doctor, working at the dispensary with Doctor Yoshura at sick call?

A. There was one other American doctor by the name of Bumpus who was in the No. 1 Camp for tuberculosis and, during which time he was there, he assisted in dressings and small operations such as boils and abscess and anything in that line.

PRESIDENT: How do you spell this name?

A. I am not sure but I believe it is B-U-M-P-U-S-(-K-N-O).

Q. Do you remember what period of time Doctor Bumpus aided Doctor Yoshura at the dispensary?

A. I do not remember the dates but it was during 1944.

Q. Who was Leonie C. Merritt?
A. Leonie C. Merritt was a chief pharmacist mate in the United States Navy who worked in the sick bay helping Doctor Hoshuan dress injuries that were sustained while out working by various men.

Q. Was Merritt in attendance at sick call each morning, if you know?
A. Yes.

Q. Who was "Ginger"?
A. Ginger was an English pharmacist mate who, I believe, was a member of the British Navy. He performed the same duties as Merritt.

Q. If you know, did "Ginger" attend sick call every morning with Doctor Hoshuan?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, you have stated that the following American medical personnel were in attendance at sick call: Doctor Hoshuan, Merritt and Ginger. Were there any other medical personnel who were at attendance at sick call during from Doctor Yamaguchi, who you said was there just a short time?
A. That is all I remember of my own knowledge.

Q. Now at the Headquarters Main Camp, who was Doctor Nasu?
A. Doctor Nasu was a Japanese medical officer who was in charge of a medical section in the Omuta camp area.

Q. Did Nasu, if you know, ever attend sick call for the American POWs in the morning? If so, how frequently, to which men was ever
A. I have never seen Doctor Nasu in attendance at the morning sick call, however he did perform, maybe twice a month he would come around and check the sick men who were remaining in camp that day.

Q. Who was Lt. Higuchi?
A. Lt. Higuchi was another Japanese medical officer who, from what I had seen him in our camp, would just on occasions be the officer-of the Day, which amounted to once every 10 days.

Q. Was Lt. Higuchi, if you know, ever in attendance at the sick call for POWs?
A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Who was Lt. Haran?
A. Lt. Haran was another Japanese medical officer who was in and out of our camp on various occasions and, from what I know, would visit several camps in our area on periodic visits.

Q. Did Lt. Haran, if you know, ever attended morning sick call for the American POWs?
A. He never attended the morning sick call but he, on several occasions, performs the same checkup as Doctor Nasu made on the bi-monthly check-up on the men remaining in camp who were unable to go to work.

Q. Who was Doctor Ano?
A. Doctor Ano was in our camp, just the first time I had seen him was a few minutes. I left with a 100 man group that was transferred to Kokura.

Q. Did Doctor Ano, if you know, ever attend morning sick call for American POWs?
A. I have never seen him on morning sick call.

Q. Now you have mentioned Doctor Noso, Lt. Miyahira, Doctor Maruo, Doctor Ano and Kondo--were there any other Japanese medical personnel, if you know, who had anything to do with the American POW dispensary at Headquarters Camp?
A. The names you just mentioned were the only ones who I know had anything to do with the functions of medication in our camp.

Q. While you were at the Headquarters Camp, do you know of any one who was beaten by Hanichi Kondo?
A. Yes.

Q. What were their names?
A. Myself.

Q. Were you beaten on one occasion or more than one occasion?
A. On two occasions.

Q. Now when was the first occasion that you were beaten by the accused, Hanichi Kondo?
A. The first occasion during April of 1943.

Q. Where precisely in the camp did the incident take place?
A. This took place in the English section of the sick bay which had been set aside for the 50 to 60 man groups, in which men who were unable to go out as daily workers were isolated in this particular section.

Q. Will you tell the Commission just how the incident arose and what took place.
A. This incident took place in the middle of April and at this time I had a foot condition known as beriberi and had been hospitalized for that reason, and the fact that I was just recovering from amebic dysentery and malaria recurrent attacks. At that time Kondo, who was a Second Class Private in the Medical Corps and who was in the sick bay on student status, had ordered myself and several other men to go out to work on this day. I went out to work and the only detail which was left open for me to work on this particular day, was known as the "Shunagan Detail."

PRESIDENT: What?

A. "Shunagan" I believe. I don't know how you spell it but it was the heavy carrying lumber detail. On this "Shunagan Detail" it was the general practice for men who were unable to comply with the required amount of work set aside by the Japanese "Honcho" to be beaten. Knowing this, I returned to the camp rather than go out on the detail in an attempt to work that day due to the fact of the beriberi condition existing in my feet. That evening at 6:00 Kondo came into the sick bay section and was checking the work list numbers that day. Upon checking he found out that I had not gone out to work on this particular day. Kondo called my number which was "Goju", which means 50 in the Japanese language, I went over to where he was standing. He asked me why I had not gone out to work that day when he had ordered me to. I showed him the condition of my feet in which beriberi was evident and told him that was the reason why I had not gone out that day. He started shouting at me in Japanese which I did not understand and told me to "Kiotsuke", which in Japanese means "stand at attention". I came to attention and then he proceeded to hit me around the face with his closed fist.

Q. How long did that beating take place?
A. That beating took place about two minutes.

Q. Do you remember now, approximately how many times he hit you with his fist?
A. About 10 times.

Q. Were the blows weak or hard?
A. The blows were hard.

Q. How at the end of that beating, did you feel any physical effects of it?
A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell the Commission what it was.
A. At the end of the beating, I discovered I had lost two teeth, the two upper left teeth, as a result of this beating.

Q. Will you show the Commission where those two teeth were.

PROSECUTION: Let the record show the witness indicated the left upper portion of his mouth which showed two teeth missing.

Q. Now, after the beating, did you have any conversation with Kondo?
A. We left the room immediately following the beating.

Q. What was the second beating you said you received from Kondo?
A. The second beating took place in August 1943.

Q. Will you tell the Commission the circumstances surrounding that beating.
A. At that time I had a recurrent attack of amebic dysentery and had been going to the sick bay for a period of 10 days previous to this incident. When I first went there I went there with the intention of receiving powders in an attempt to stop the heavy bowel movements that I was having at that time. I received the powders that I had asked for but they didn't seem to help the dysentery condition that was existing, my condition was still getting worse in so far as my strength holding out. Doctor Hashimoto, on the last three occasions in which I had gone to sick bay previous to the incident, had recommended that I stay in camp for a couple of days until I could stop this dysentery condition. On the day of the incident, which was the ninth day that Doctor Hashimoto had recommended for me to stay in camp, Kondo had ordered me out to work this morning. I did not go to work but went back to my bay and went to bed. Kondo came around about 10:00 o'clock this particular morning and asked me why I had not gone out to work. I got out of the bed in which I was lying and got on the floor and stood at attention. I explained that I had been going to the "benjo", which is known on the latrine in Japanese, all night and that I was beneath such condition that I could not get out to work that day. He said that day is the first that I had left my address unreported during the last night; that was the reason I had this dysentery condition. He slapped me about four times in the face on this occasion after making a statement about my failing to keep the minimum address.

Q. How hard did he slapped you?
A. He hit me with full open-hand swing about four times.

Q. Now after this slapping, did you have any physical evidence of it?
A. None other than a flushed face.

Q. Did you ever see any one else beaten by the accused, Kenichi Kanda?
A. Yes I have on numerous occasions.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I object to the use of the words "numerous occasions." Let him say yes and let him explain. This man is not giving an affidavit.

PROSECUTION: I'll concede to the answer being "yes."

Q. Now, specifically, do you recall the name of any American prisoner of war who was beaten by Kenichi Kanda?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. What was his name?
A. Bob Kenerith.

Q. Do you know an American POW named George Yeager?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you ever see an incident in which he was beaten by Kenichi Kanda?
A. Yes.

Q. When did that take place?
A. This incident took place over in the isolated sick bay section of the English camp which was in existence from March 1945 until May. It took us or about a month after my first incident pertaining to myself had.

Q. Where in the camp did this take place?
A. This took place in the sick bay.

Q. Were you physically present at that time?
A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing there?
A. I was a patient in the sick bay at that time.

Q. Will you tell the Commission, as far as you know, what took place when Kenichi Kanda beat Yeager?
A. At that particular time Yeager, who was a member of the United States Army, was over there in the sick bay suffering from beri beri which had spread all over to various sections of his body. At the time of this beating incident, I was about 20 feet from Yeager and Kanda.

Yeager was having some discussion with Kondo over obtaining some Japanese beriberi powder. I did not hear the full argument. The first thing I knew, Kondo had hit him. Yeager was standing up and Kondo had hit him and knocked him back into the sick bay and, from what I could understand from what little Japanese I know, he was saying that Yeager was a big man and should be going out to work instead of lying around in the sick bay. He proceeded to kick him about the face and spine, and different sections of the body for about five minutes. He would stop for about five minutes and then repeat what he said about Yeager being big and should be out working, and then continue kicking him again.

Q. On what part of Yeager's body did Kondo hit him with his hand?
A. He hit him just once with his hand in which he knocked Yeager back into the sick bay. During the rest of the incident, he just used his feet kicking him.

Q. Did he hit him with an open palm or closed fist?
A. I do not know whether he hit him with an open hand or a closed fist.

Q. What kind of shoes was Kondo wearing?
A. Heavy Japanese Army shoes.

Q. How long in all would you say that this beating took place?
A. This beating took place about five minutes.

Q. What was Yeager's condition at the end?
A. Yeager's condition at the end was, well he just lay in the bay for quite a while. Then some of the fellows helped him over to the sick room. Before this beating, Yeager's condition was --

DEFENSE: I object to " Yeager's condition before this beating." Let the man testify an answer to the question. This man is not a doctor.

PROSECUTION: Just tell what happened.

A. (Cont'd) The men helped Yeager into the washroom where he took a shower after this beating had happened.

Q. What physical evidence of the beating did Yeager have at the end of it?
A. I saw Yeager in the washroom the next day after the incident happened and there were red marks on his body where he had been kicked -- bruised appearance.

Q. Did you see him immediately after the beating?
A. I saw the men who were taking him to the bathhouse. At the time this incident happened, we were taking our baths in the bath shed which was about 50 feet from the sick bay room.

Q. What was Yeager confined in the sick bay for?
A. Yeager was in the sick bay suffering from beriberi of which he died a year later.

DEFENSE: I think any reference to the death of Yeager should be stricken from the record.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution consents.

LAW MEMBER: It will be stricken.

Q. Now, you mentioned a man named George Favorite who was beaten by Kenichi Kondo, is that right?
A. Yes.

Q. When did that take place?
A. On or about February 1945.

Q. Will you tell the Commission the circumstances surrounding that beating.
A. Favorite at that time had suffered from diarrhea and a stomach cramp condition which had been with him for about two weeks previous to the incident. He had been going to the sick bay for medication. His condition got worse, Doctor Hochman diagnosed his case to Kondo saying that he should be allowed to remain in camp for a few days. Kondo over-ruled Doctor Hochman and ordered Favorite to work. On the day of this incident Favorite had gone to the sick bay that morning. Doctor Hochman had tried to get him to stay in camp and Kondo had over-ruled him and ordered him to go to work, which he didn't do this particular morning, he went back to his room and was lying down when Kondo came in and found him there. When Kondo found Favorite in the room there, he called him down form sick bay and asked him why he had not gone to work that day. Kondo told him that he should have gone to work, stood him at attention, slapped his around the face, and then took him down to the guard shack where he had him stand at attention. He remained "at attention" for a couple of hours and then was sent back to his room by the Commander of the Guards.

Q. How much force did Kondo used in striking Favorite?
A. Just open-hand slaps.

Q. Did Favorite have any physical evidence of the slapping at the end of it?
A. Just the normal appearance any one had who was slapped in the face.

Q. Who ordered Favorite to stand "at attention?"
A. Kondo.

Q. In this beating which you have told the Commission you have made mention of the fact that you overheard conversation that Kondo had made. Do you speak Japanese?
A. Just a little knowledge that I picked up from my association with Japanese around the prisoner of war camp and while out at work.

Q. Were you able to understand what Kondo was saying in each of the incidents which you have mentioned?
A. Kondo himself had a slight knowledge of English which he picked up in the same way I picked up my Japanese.

PRESIDENT: He is not answering the question.

PROSECUTION: Yes, I know. Will you read the question?

The reporter read back the question.

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Sergeant, when you first came to the Osaka Main Camp, what was your physical condition?

DEFENSE: I object to that. The defendant is not charged with sending a man to work. The sergeant was in a fit physical condition.

PROSECUTION: The specification states that this accused sent sick prisoners of war to work. I want to find out whether this man was sick when he was sent to work.

LAW MEMBER: Objection is over-ruled.

DEFENSE: Kondo was not present at camp when this man arrived, is that not right?

PROSECUTION: I am not asking whether Kondo was present, I am just asking preliminary questions.

A. My physical condition upon arrival in Osaka on November 11, 1942, was, at that time myself and a good percentage of the 100 man group who arrived that day were suffering from dysentery and malaria attacks.

Q. Approximately how many times will you say, if you can now remember, did you go on sick call at the American POW dispensary at the Osaka Main Camp?

A. Between 70 to 80 times during the period I was there.

Q. Do you remember now for what ailments you went to be treated at the dispensary?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What were they?

A. They were four different diseases, malaria, beriberi, pellagra, migraine headaches, and on couple occasions I had flue there during the winter.

Q. When was the first occasion on which you had contact with Kenichi Kondo?

A. The first contact I had with Kenichi Kondo was in the sick bay section of the American camp, of which I previously stated was the isolated section where they kept 50 to 60 Allied prisoners of war who were unable to go out to work as daily regular workers. Kondo, at that time, was a Second-Class Private during the period I was there and was on a student basis. Therefore, he didn't conduct the sick call there at that time during the period I was there. This period was from on or about March 25th until the first of June, 1943.

Q. When was the first time you had contact with Kenichi Kondo at the American POW dispensary?

A. The first time I had contact with Kenichi Kondo in the American dispensary was after this sick bay had been discontinued and all the American had moved back into the American section of the camp, at which time, on or about June or July 1943, we had our sick bay in which Kondo was taking over the function known as "sick call." The first occasion I had to attend the sick call was about August 1943.

Q. Koniehi Kondo was at the dispensary from on or about June 1943, until what time?

A. He was up until his departure. I do not remember the exact day, but it was around April 1945.

Q. Did the 75 or 80 times that you had mentioned, in which you went into the dispensary, occur during the time that Kondo was there?

A. Yes.

Q. What other Japanese medical personnel were on duty with Koniehi Kondo at the dispensary?

A. On a few occasions I have seen two or three lowly ranking medical privates of the Japanese over at sick call. Apparently they were watching Kondo's method of work. They only remained there a couple of days. I found out later they went to other camps in the same capacity that he was in.

Q. Did these 75 or 80 times that you went to the POW dispensary occur during one specific year?

DEFENSE: Ask him when they occurred. I think that is the question.

Q. (Cont'd) Or, did they extend over the entire period when Kondo was at the dispensary?

A. They extended over the entire period Kondo was at the Omuta camp.

Q. Do you know how much medical training Koniehi Kondo had?

A. I do not know what his entire medical background is other than when I first saw him for the first two month period in the British sick bay, he was apparently on student status.

Q. Would you say Koniehi Kondo was qualified as a medical orderly?

DEFENSE: I object to that. This witness is incompetent to answer that question. He is not a medical man of any type.

PROSECUTION: He doesn't have to be. He can speak from general knowledge.

DEFENSE: It is not a question that can be answered from general knowledge and you know that.

LAW MEMBER: The question is not worded as to how the witness observed the performance.

PROSECUTION: We could hear that, sir.

LAW MEMBER: The question could be worded as to how he observed the performance of his duties as medical orderly and not, "does he know if he is qualified." To that extent the objection is sustained.

Q. If a man came to sick call with diarrhea what would be necessary in order to stay in from work, if you know?

A. In a few occasions I have known where men who had diarrhea attacks and this condition existed for a period anywhere from eight to ten days, who were receiving medication and tried to remain in camp, it was only upon the time where they presented a stool containing blood or mucus whose Kondo would allow them to remain in camp.

Q. Have you ever seen how Kondo at sick call would determine whether a POW had fever?

A. I have seen him used two different methods, on some occasions he would have either Doctor Moshman, or Chief Morris, or Singer use a regular thermometer. On other occasions I have just seen him reach out and touch the forehead of a man trying to determine a fever.

PROSECUTION: Sir, if the Commission please, if we are going to adjourn at 11:30 I would like to know because I am going to start on a new phase.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will adjourn to meet at 0900, the 24th of October 1946.

The Commission then, at 1128, adjourned to meet at 0900 the following day, 24 October 1946.

Leonard M Rand

LEONARD M RAND
Chief Prosecutor

Yokohama Courthouse
Yokohama, Japan
24 October 1946

The Commission met pursuant to adjournment, at 0900, all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the reporter and the interpreters who were present at the close of the previous session on this case, being present.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

At the request of the prosecutor, the reporter read back the last two questions and answers from the notes of the previous session.

Q. Sergeant, do you recall the "mumps" incident?

DEFENSE: Mr. President, we object to this line of questioning at this time because there has been no testimony by this witness that there had been any mumps.

PROSECUTION: I am asking him, sir, if he recalls such an incident.

DEFENSE: Kondo is not charged with it.

PROSECUTION: He is charged under Specification 10 with mistreating prisoners of war.

LAW MEMBER: Just repeat the question.

The reporter read back the question.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained. Rephrase that question to bring out any allegation about mumps.

Q. On an average, sergeant, how many men were attending sick call each morning?
A. It fluctuated, between 20 to 30 for the American section of the camp.

Q. And what generally were the normal complaints that the prisoners of war had when they came on sick call?
A. The various complaints were as follows: dysentery, diarrhea, malaria recurrent attacks, injuries sustained while at work, skin diseases, such as boils and ulcers, and conditions of the skin which were attributed to malnutrition.

Q. You mentioned yesterday the fact that you were beaten by Kenichi Kondo, the man named Yagger, and the man named Feverite were beaten by him. Do you know of any other incident where an American POW was struck by Kenichi Kondo?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. When was this?
A. I do not remember the exact dates or parties involved but on several occasions where I had gone on sick call, I had seen men slapped in the face while arguing to stay in from work on that day after Doctor Hochmap had told them to stay in and Kondo had ordered them to go out to work.

DEFENSE: Defense objects to that last answer by the witness in that he says he knows of incidents where men were slapped but is unable to give names and dates, on the ground that the defense is not able to defend against such accusations because they are not named. We move that the remarks be stricken from the record.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, these remarks are very relevant to the issue. Prosecution will attempt to find out why the witness does not remember names and dates, and the Commission can place such weight as they wish upon that evidence.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, if we do not have dates and names it is impossible for us to go into the matter because of one thing, we are supposed to be advised of all specific evidence. That is required by SCAP rules that the defendant must know exactly what offenses he is charged with. An offense, if the Commission please, is a violation of the law toward a human being at a certain time and at a certain place. For those elements we should be thoroughly advised of or no offense is stated. We are asking the Court, at this time, that even though there is a liberality in the rules of evidence, that there is no liberality in the stating of the offense as we know it. A statement like this by the witness would be the type of statement that could be made by anyone against me, or anyone in this court room, and we must appreciate the fact that a man is innocent or is presumed to be innocent, yet he would have a hard time to defend himself against any like that, in fact it would be impossible for him to defend himself against it except by his own negative answer. It is asking too much to allow statements in which the evidence which alleges an offense without defining the offense. The offense is not merely slapping. The offense is not merely pulling a trigger and hitting a man. It has to be a certain man and has to occur within a certain period of time. Now these things are necessary and it is necessary for the prosecution to prove that. The prosecution has stated that they are unable to prove that.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, Specification 10 alleges among other things, that the accused Kenichi Kondo did strike, kick and beat prisoners of war. There is no reference made to any specific names. Now, in the affidavits before this Commission now in evidence there will be many statements that Kenichi Kondo hit and beat sick prisoners of war but the affiant cannot remember the names and dates, that is already in evidence by paper evidence. Now, here is a witness from the camp who personally saw, that is best evidence. Let us find out why he does not remember names and dates.

DEFENSE: Purely, simply, because the prosecution drew up loose specification, the Court cannot indulge a loose type of evidence to support it. We have the right and liberty to ask for a Bill of Particulars. The prosecution's reason for not giving the Bill of Particulars is that they say, "You have the affidavits", "You have the information", and "What else do you want?" But you see when they bring a witness here we do not have that stated, we do not have for the defense the charges and specifications which will advise the defendant of the offenses of which he is charged. Because of that fact they deny us the Bill of Particulars of the incident which might be in the witness' mind or head or in his knowledge.

PROSECUTION: I have just one thing to state again. I again state to the Commission that here is a man who was present in the camp. What better evidence is before the Commission.

DEFENSE: As I understand the general catch-all specification, the reason why it is written is that at the time the prosecution does not have the names of a lot of men who were probably struck at the time it writes it. So, in order to save them embarrassment, it writes that specification but in the event to get specific names it can put them under Specification 10. So that the defendant has no objection such as the present witness' name, and that is the purpose for the general specification but that is the only purpose it can serve, or otherwise the rights of the accused are put in jeopardy.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, may I point out that the affidavits that we are offering in evidence were admitted on Specification 10. No objection was made that witness was not available for cross examination. Here the witness is going to be on the stand and they can examine him to their heart's content.

DEFENSE: I think that a little unfair remark for the prosecutor to make. Counsel who started the case is not here now, I think, therefore, references to anything he did in reference to the affidavits is entirely out of order.

PROSECUTION: It is not out of order. I have made no statement by counsel against counsel.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained. The Commission desires to hear from this life witness everything that he saw and he did of his own knowledge. The remarks of the defense will be taken into consideration and the evidence will be evaluated for what it is worth.

A. He had recommended to Kondo they stay in from work, he had not told them directly.

Q. Now with respect to what you have just testified, do you now recall any of the names of the American POWs?

A. A couple of the names I do remember. One by the name of Hagee (phonetic), and another one by the name of Tusker (phonetic).

Q. Do you know why they were struck?

A. The reason I know they were struck, as far as I could see was their continuance arguing with Kondo trying to stay in camp that day.

Q. Did you ever hear from any American POW that he had been struck by Kondo?

A. Yes, I have.

DEFENSE: We are objecting to this question and answer on the ground that it is hearsay and the persons that said that they were struck are not here in Court and subject to cross examination. To state that they were struck as any reason that this man might attempt to give in explanation, is incompetent because he cannot read the mind of the accused.

DEFENSE: Absolutely.

PROSECUTION: I will rephrase the question.

Q. Did any of the prisoners of war you stated told you they had been struck by Kanda, did they state to you why they had been struck?

A. In the cases I remember such as Burns and Tucker, they had told me they had agreed to stay in from work that particular day.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Doctor Hochman about his running of the POW dispensary?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What were those conversations?

DEFENSE: We object to this line of questioning on the basis that there are three affidavits before this Commission already in evidence. If you will note the dates on the affidavits he was interrogated on three different occasions in an attempt to get more information from him each time. Now, certainly Doctor Hochman has stated everything he is able to say about this matter. Anything brought out by this witness from conversation he had with him is strictly incompetent because the best evidence before the Commission as to what Hochman said is what he wrote himself.

LAW MEMBER: Objection overruled.

Q. Do you now remember any of the names of these American POWs who stated they had been struck by Hunter?
A. One I remember very well was Captain Barton.

Q. These conversations you are now speaking about, did any of the prisoners stated why they had been struck by Hunter?
A. The usual reason was their just arguing to stay in from work after they had been ordered out to work.

DEFENSE: At this time defense objects to the words "usual reason" as expressed by the witness in which it is definitely impossible for him to determine why anybody was struck. The only person who can give an explanation as to the reason is the man who, it is alleged, did the striking. It is impossible to read the mind of another and anything that might have motivated that man in use of words such as "usual" is definitely out of order.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will agree to striking of the word "usual."

LAW MEMBER: The word will be stricken.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation on LAW MEMBER: Before you go on, you have struck the word "usual", how will his answer read?

The reporter read back the answer leaving out the stricken word.

LAW MEMBER: If you strike the word "usual" it will not make any sense.

WITNESS: The reason.

PROSECUTION: Do you object to the word "reason"?

PROSECUTION: May I point out that Chief Sanders already testified and his conversations are on the record.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission is quite competent to judge the objection. The objection is not sustained. Any conversations this witness had with any one he is intitled to testify to. The affidavit by Doctor Hochman will be given due consideration. Any conversations by the witness will be given and taken into consideration. Objection is not sustained.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, the law as we know it and included in the law of France, Italy, Britain, Canada and the United States is that if a person enters into conversation with someone else, a stranger to the defendant, when the defendant himself is not present at that conversation and when the defendant does not have the opportunity at the time of the conversation to deny it or to affirm it, if he is not present at that time, then the Courts without fail have said, 'The lips of the participants of the conversation are sealed by the law.' I don't believe we could go many jurisprudence, any system of law, whether it be protocol, civil or common law, where conversation between two persons, strangers to the defendant, may testify to in the Court wherein the defendant is being charged with incidents with which the testimony relates. That is the background, sir, of the objection that was made that the Court overruled.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission is entirely conversant with what you have just said about the law in civil court. However such law is not binding on a War Crimi Commission. Proceed.

A. On two or three occasions Doctor Hochman came into the barrack section in which I stayed in the Gusen Camp and with a small group of men we held conversation just pertaining to the general conditions in the camp.

Q. On any of those occasions did Doctor Hochman make any statements about Mauthausen?

A. That he was disgusted with the way things were going in the sick bay, that he was a qualified physician and he was giving his diagnosis to Mauthausen and Mauthausen was overruling them as much as to say that he did not have as much knowledge of the medical profession as he did.

DEFENSE: The defense asks for mistrial on the improper admission of this testimony. We do not believe that it is possible under any circumstances or any rules that the Court can admit such evidence. International law is nothing but the grouping of the laws of the various countries and if we can find no law in the various countries which would allow the admission of improper evidence, then it certainly can't be admitted in this Court. This Court is here to try the case and to try it fairly and impartially. I think the part of fairness and impartiality is to attempt to weed out these matters so that we can go directly down the line as to the facts. At this time I ask for mistrial on the basis that I have already stated.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution does not care to answer.

LAW MEMBER: Subject to objection by any member of the Court, motion for mistrial is not granted.

Q. Sergeant, do you know Chief Sanders?
A. Yes.
Q. What was his job in the camp?
A. Chief Sanders was a Camp Commander for the Allied personnel in the Pe Ton camp.
Q. Did you ever see Chief Sanders at sick call
A. I have seen Chief Sanders on many occasions standing outside the sick call watching the proceedings before the men fell out for work call, that would usually be between 6:30 and 7:00 o'clock in the morning.
Q. Now, if a beating took place in camp to an American POW, would he report that to anyone?
A. He has on several occasions reported the beatings to the Interpreter.
PROSECUTION: Do not misunderstand me.
DEFENSE: Let the witness answer the question. If it is an improper question and improper answer, then let us answer.
PROSECUTION: I object to counsel's remarks.
LAW MEMBER: That is a proper objection and proper remark.
DEFENSE: If the Commission please, counsel has no right to stop the witness. The only one who can stop the witness is the Commission.
PROSECUTION: Counsel is attempting to be very difficult in this case.
LAW MEMBER: Let the witness finish his answer before the prosecution interjects any comments whatsoever.
WITNESS: I misunderstood that question.
LAW MEMBER: Will the reporter read back the question and answer?
The question and answer were read back by the reporter.
A. On several occasions when prisoners have been beaten they reported to the Japanese Interpreter Sakata and Sakata requested me to investigate the matter, who was the Camp Commander, and Kondo's treatment of the prisoners while under arrest in the Guardhouse for a period of maybe a week or two weeks.
Q. You said yesterday that you had gone to sick call for diarrhea, Doctor Yoshida had recommended that you stay in, Kondo had overruled him and you were sent to work, is that correct?
A. Yes.
DEFENSE: For the sake of clarity, is that August 1943 you are talking about?
WITNESS: I think he only mentioned one.
WITNESS: Yes.

Q. Now, did anything like that ever happen to you again?
A. Another time, I don't remember the exact day, I sustained a foot injury while working out on a ship in the Kobehama harbor. On that day I had my foot caught in a slide of bags and sustained an injury. That night I went to Doctor Hoshuan who examined my foot and told me to go back to the barracks. The next morning I went back to camp by on a routine sick call and Doctor Hoshuan showed my foot to Kondo. He got some dark liquid and painted my foot and told me to go out to work that day morning, [illegible]

Q. At this time you were mentioned, had Doctor Hoshuan made any recommendations about you?
A. Yes he did. He recommended that I stay in camp this particular day. [illegible]

Q. Now these two incidents you have related about yourself, have you ever seen anything similar happen to any POW?
A. Yes I have.

Q. Do you now remember their names?
A. Well I do. [illegible]

Q. Will you please tell the Commission their names. [illegible]
A. John H. Zimmer and Barber.

Q. Were there anyone else? [illegible]
A. There were other fellows but I just don't remember their names at this time. [illegible]

DEFENSE: We ask that this be stricken, stating there are no names given or dates, on the ground before stated that it is impossible for us to defend against such statements because the accused cannot know when these incidents took place, or the time at which they took place. They can't be recalled to his mind unless you quote more specific details. [illegible]

LAW MEMBER: Objection is overruled. Statement will be taken for its worth. [illegible]

Q. Do you remember what the circumstances were in the "Zimmer Incident"
A. The "Zimmy Incident" was the same as mine and happened quite often in the camp, because the men in the camp were working on cargo ships out in the Yokohama Bay and it was almost a daily occurrence for someone to sustain an injury while on the cargo, stevedore work. [illegible]

Q. Had Doctor Hoshuan made any recommendations to Kondo about Zimmer?
A. Yes he did. [illegible]

Q. What was that?
A. His recommendation was that Zimmy remain in the camp. Kondo just painted the injured section of his foot with this dark solution and told him to go out to work. [illegible]

Q. Now, if a American prisoner of war came to sick call in the morning, who would have the final say as to whether or not he stayed in camp or went out to work? [illegible]

DEFENSE: I object on the ground that any answer to such a question would definitely be an opinion and conclusion on the part of this witness. He isn't competent to testify to that at all.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I would like to refrase the question.

LAW MEMBER: Refrase the question.

Q. If an American POW went to sick call in the morning, if you know, who in the dispensary had the final say as to whether or not that person went to work or not?

DEFENSE: Sir, the addition of the words 'if you know' does not change the question at all because this man is not in position to know. He was a worker at the POW camps. That is all he was.

PROSECUTION: Fair, but he aided in the dispensary since, Mr. Duffy.

LAW MEMBER: Read the question.

Question was read back by the court.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained. The question will be answered.

DEFENSE: Sir, may I just say one more thing, since it involves the actual issue before this Commission which is who did have the final say and authority in the running of the dispensary and it is in your judicial capacity to decide this case, any answer to the question by this witness would usurp the prerogatives of the Commission for that is what the Commission has been appointed to determine.

LAW MEMBER: Answer the question.

A. Just from my own knowledge, on occasions that I myself went on sick call and on occasions where Doctor Hohman had recommended I should remain in camp, Yingle had over-ruled his diagnosis and I had been sent out to work.

Q. I don't believe you have at yet stated who had that authority. Would you please so state to the Commission.

DEFENSE: He has answered the question, obviously the prosecution is attempting to drag something from the witness when the witness has answered the best he knows.

LAW MEMBER: That question is ambiguous and the objection to that question is sustained.

Q. Mgt Sergeant, if a person wanted medication, what would the procedure be?

A. They would report to sick call and go through the normal functions of sick call, going up to Hondo and giving their number which he would write down, and they would in turn explain what was wrong to Doctor Hoshuan and he would recommend what medication should be given, such as quinine, or aspirin, or anything along that line.

Q. Have you ever gone to sick call for the sole purpose of getting medication?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. Did you get it?
A. On most occasions, yes, and on a few occasions I did not.

Q. Now on the few occasions you did not, what happened?
A. The occasions I did not receive medication was when I went down and tried to get aspirins for migraine headaches. As I did not have any fever when Kondo reached up and felt my forehead, he refused my request for these aspirins.

Q. Do you remember approximately when these dates were?
A. They were between the latter part of 1944 and the time I left the camp in May 1945. I do not remember the exact dates.

Q. Now on these occasions you have mentioned when you were unable to get medication, do you know, of your own knowledge, whether or not the medication you sought was then available in the dispensary?
A. On the occasions I remember they had these Japanese aspirins in a square box which was available at that time.

Q. Do you know of any American prisoner of war who went to sick call and was refused medication?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, may I interpose in this line of questioning. The Sergeant here is giving his very honest and best in testifying to the questions that are asked by the prosecution but I ask this only in the matter of fairness. The same type of fairness that we might give to a dog. If we are going to allow the Sergeant here throughout the questions asked by the prosecution to testify that the man did not get medication, that medication was available, we are placing him in a very awkward position of a medical officer or someone who has a complete knowledge of medicine, or at least a study of medicine, to the extent that the medicines available were of the type needed to treat the malfunctions suffered by the prisoners of war. We are placing him in that position. I don't believe in fairness that we should have a Sergeant testify to things like that, particularly when we have so many affidavits by Doctor Hochheim. He is testifying to the best of his knowledge and he is testifying fairly and honestly as to his own idea of the thing. We will admit that he was present at the time and that he had a better idea than you or I would as to whether or not this medication might have been, might facilitate the recovery of a particular individual who went to sick call. But, at the same time Sergeant Ryan does not possess any particular medical knowledge. If it were possible for us get Doctor Hochheim here, Doctor Hochheim could testify. Doctor Hochheim testified to everything he knew or everything that happened in that camp in a medical way by three separate affidavits. To ask these questions of this man is unfair to him and certainly is unfair to the defendant.

Q. Now, if a sick prisoner of war, a Polish prisoner of war, came to the dispensary, what would be necessary for him to have for PROSECUTION: Sir, we are only inquiring as to medication, as to receiving of medication. That is what this present line of questioning is. There is no question of treatment [illegible]

DEFENSE: You don't even know what the inference is! This man went up there for medication and he asked for medicine, and medicine was refused, and medicine was available. The inference is that he should have had medicine and that is an inference that we cannot take the witness [illegible].

PROSECUTION: Sir, that is just the inference the prosecution is trying to prove. In all these cases Doctor Suleman was present at sick call, a competent doctor [illegible] he is in a position to know what goes on at sick call. It has to be a position

LAW MEMBER: Read the question. [illegible]

The question was read back by the reporter.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained. The points raised by the defense can well be brought out on cross examination. The witness will answer the question. [illegible]

A. There was one other party and that fellow was by the name of Hanna (phonetic) who had the same thing I had, that is migraine headache, and his eyes were distending painfully at that time. [illegible] will give a reason.

Q. Were you present at the time he requested medication?

A. I wasn't present on the occasion but Hanna, who slept next to me, told me about the incident when he came back from sick call that [illegible]

Q. Did he tell you what medication he had asked for?

DEFENSE: I object to this line of questioning on the basis that the questions are asked for hearsay on the part of the witness.

LAW MEMBER: Objection over-ruled.

A. Hanna had requested aspirins to relieve his headache condition that he had at the time. That was the only medication he had asked for.

Q. Did he tell you what had happened in the dispensary?

DEFENSE: Same objection, asking for hearsay.

LAW MEMBER: Objection, over-ruled.

A. Hanna told me that he had gone down there to the sick bay to get the aspirins. Due to the fact that he had no temperature his request for aspirins was turned down.

Q. Now, do you know of your own knowledge, whether or not at that time there were aspirins available in the dispensary?

A. In Hanna's case I don't know if the aspirins were available or not.

Q. Now, if a sick prisoner of war, an American prisoner of war, came to the dispensary, what would be necessary for him to have for him to stay in from work?

DEFENSE: Sir, again we must object of necessity to this continuous line of questioning, which attempts to get Sergeant Ryan to testify to matters applying with in the realm of medical knowledge. Sergeant Ryan's testimony is applicable to to what he saw and his testimony is good as to the matters a layman can see, or feel, or hear. But to ask him questions continuously that is within the realm of medical knowledge, is strictly out of order.

PROSECUTION: May I point out to the Commission that Sergeant Ryan has testified from experience gained from visiting sick call between 75 and 80 times. Also he had taken ill at the camp two years. He definitely knows what goes on at sick call. If he is in a position to tell the Commission, fine. If he does not know, fine. Whatever evidence can be given should be received by the Commission. In fairness to the accused he should testify about everything, whether favorable or unfavorable. He is here on the stand, defense may cross examine him. If he does not know names that can be determined, but I feel he should be allowed to give any knowledge he has of the happenings at the camp and the Commission can give it any value they choose.

LAW MEMBER: That question is ambiguous, "what will he have to have." Will you re-word that question and after you have re-worded that question, we will have a recess.

PROSECUTION: Can we have a recess now?

LAW MEMBER: Do you withdraw the question now?

PROSECUTION: I withdraw the question.

The Commission then took a recess until 2020, at which time the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the reporter and interpreters resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

Q. Sergeant Ryan, of your own knowledge, from the time you went on sick call, how seriously ill would an American prisoner of war have to be to stay in from work?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, the same objection we have submitted before because the statement, "how seriously ill", though it changes the question, it does not qualify the witness to answer that question because he is still not a member of the medical profession.

LAW MEMBER: Objection over-ruled.

A. On the occasion I stayed in myself or went to sick call, you had to have a temperature of a certain degree. It was given in Japanese and was 37.8C. I don't know how high that is but you had to have that before you could step into ~~it~~ if you had diarrhoea or dysentery, you had to show a stool that showed the condition I have stated before. In so far as injuries sustained at work, you had to almost be where you could hardly move around before you could stay from. I had sent him go to work that sustained foot injuries where they were limping plumby bad before they went out to work. In early 1945 we had an epidemic of mumps. At the outbreak of this epidemic there were only four or five cases. These men were quarantined. When the number increased to between 20 to 25%. When it reached that high, the men who had the mumps and everybody else start with to work cutting wheat over their heads, that is white socks. Of these men who went to work, several men had the mumps go down into their testicles and swell up, I think.

Q. Now, Sergeant, in this mumps incident, do you know of your own knowledge who sent these men to work?
A. Kondo put out an order to Doctor Hashimoto that all the mumps cases would go out to work and they would wear these white socks over their faces when they went out to work. [illegible] what was the name of the Japanese medical person who was in authority at
Q. How do you know that, Sergeant?
A. I worked on working parties where several of these men came out that day and they told me what had happened, that they had been ordered to go out to work and wear these socks to keep from spreading the disease to the people at work and the other men in the party.

Q. Do you know whether or not Doctor Hashimoto had made any recommendation with respect to these men?
A. Doctor Hashimoto had recommended that all men who had mumps should remain in camp and be isolated into a separate room.
[illegible] Sir, we object to what is on the paper that his attitude
Q. How do you know that, Sergeant? [illegible]
A. The reason I know this is that several of us prisoners in camp who did not have the mumps protested to Hashimoto about the men going out on the working parties with us, figuring that the disease might spread about the camp, and he said he had tried to make some arrangement with Kondo to have the men segregated in a separate room and that the men who had mumps to stay in camp until the epidemic had passed the ninth stage. Q. Sergeant, where is Shinbiku Hospital?
A. Shinbiku Hospital was about a mile from the Headquarters Camp in Sunkiang. [illegible] not to work also due to the [illegible] not work at all.
Q. Now, on the first occasion you had to go to the dispensary, what was the name of the Japanese medical personnel, as far as you know, who was in authority there?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, we object to the wording of this question as to who was in authority. I think the question should be, "Who were the Japanese personnel in attendance at the dispensary?", because otherwise it is calling for pure conclusion on the part of the witness.

LAW MEMBER: Have you anything to say to that?

PROSECUTION: May I stand on the question? I asked him when he went to the dispensary for the first time, at the dispensary what personnel were in authority.

PROSECUTION: Sir, if the Commission please, all of the previous questions I have asked the prosecution witness have been along general lines on certain specific beatings not listed in the Specifications. Now, sir, for your information I am going to question him about these Specifications.

A. [illegible] Hambright was brought [illegible] and taken prisoner by the [illegible] British ship by an A passenger ship which had been sunk and he had been taken prisoner by the Germans and turned over to the Japanese [illegible] shortly after his arrival at camp Hambright [illegible] and was sent to Sendai Hospital where he remained for a period of about eight months. This particular duty officer ordered Hambright how to [illegible] Hambright said he [illegible] and [illegible] that he just got out of Sendai Hospital and was very slow in getting his health back. DEFENSE: At this time, if the Commission please, I would like to have to have stricken the testimony of this witness in regard to Specification 2, starting with the reply which have to do with Kondo at about 12 o'clock in the morning "and the defendant what was wrong with him and why he resigned in camp" upon the ground he was told by Kofoe. We have no evidence that Kofoe actually saw this but we believe that in the first place it is hearsay and in the second place it might be [illegible] hearsay. Q. Do you know of any incident involving Kenichi Kondo and John Doherty Jr.?

A. No, I do not know of this incident.

Q. Specification 6 alleges Kenichi Kondo, the accused, did mistreat Private Russell Robbins, an American prisoner of war. Did you know an American prisoner of war by the name of Robbins?

A. No, I do not know the incident.

Q. Specification 5 alleges Kenichi Kondo, the accused, did mistreat Sergeant Vanlew, Private Ordayne, Private Vance and Private Smith, American prisoners of war. Did you know these American prisoners of war?

A. Are you referring to the "Palm Incident?"

LAW MEMBER: Have him answer your question.

PROSECUTION: I think the way it stands I have answered the question.

Q. Do you know of an incident involving these men, the incident being known as the "Palm Incident?"

A. Yes, I do.

Q. When did this palm ritual?

A. This incident happened during July 19th. At that time Kondo had put out an order that all men would keep their stomachs covered at night. It was during one particular night or before the night this incident happened, Kondo would come around between 12 and 1 o'clock at night and check to see whether the men were keeping their stomachs covered. He would turn on the lights and flash lights in their faces and disturb the men. At that time it was very hard to sleep because of the bed bugs, fleas, lice, and other things like that.

PROSECUTION: I commend that that be stricken.

DEFENSE: Just because Kondo in his capacity could not be charged with it.

PROSECUTION: Just relate the incident.

A. The night of this incident Kondo came into the Army group in that room in the American camp which consisted of Army and Marine personnel. It was about 1 o'clock at night. He turned on the lights and would shout to see if the men were covered and was making a loud amount of noise. As he was leaving the room, several of the men yelled "Baka", which means in Japanese "Idiot". Kondo went back in the room to see where that noise came from. He had several men come out of their beds and stand at attention. From where I was in the Army section, we could hear the noise. After it had died down, I went over to the interim where the Navy was and several men came out. I asked what had happened, this fellow named Matsunio told me what I previously said about men not holding their and Kondo getting those men out of their beds. He told me that Kondo had beaten them for two or three minutes and then Kondoro had come and the beating had stopped. The only men I remember through this incident were Sergeant Hunsh and Chief Vance. The other names I do not remember. I know several names were mentioned but I cannot remember them at this time.

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, it is now ten after eleven, I realize the Commission goes at 11:30, however the prosecution would like to have some discussion with the defense which may shorten the examination on Specifications 1, 2, and 3. For that reason the prosecution, at this time, would like to ask for a continuance.

PRESIDENT: In order to converse with the defense?

PROSECUTION: Yes, on Specifications 1, 2, and 3.

DEFENSE: Defense has no objection.

PRESIDENT: At the request of the prosecution and no objection by the defense, the court will recess for the reason stated until 1330 this afternoon.

The Commission then recessed until 1330, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the reporter and the interpreters resumed their seats.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session. The witness will remind him that he is still under oath.

Q. Sergeant Ryan, Specification 4 alleges that Kenichi Kondo, the accused, did maltreat Robert M. Barber, a British prisoner of war. Did you know a British prisoner of war named Barber?

A. Yes, I knew Barber.

Q. Do you know of any incident involving him and Kenichi Kondo?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did this take place?

A. This incident took place in the latter part of 1943.

Q. Will you relate to the Commission just what this incident was.

A. Captain Barber was a merchant marine captain on a British merchant vessel, he had been taken prisoner by the Japanese and later turned over to the Japanese. He was sent to the Headquarters Camp at Omuta all the time I knew Barber at the Omuta Camp previous to the incident, he had been suffering from stomach ulcers which he told me was the reason he was going to sick call almost every day during the time I was there. He was receiving some Japanese powders for this aforesaid condition. Barber's condition got steadily worse. I noticed him on the job trying to eat the rice we got for noon, usually an hour after he had eaten he would vomit the rice up. As I stated before, Barber went to sick call almost every day. On several occasions when I had been at sick call myself I had seen Snyder of the Doctor Kaiman had recommended to Kondo that he remain in camp and not sent out to work as he was unable to hold food down that he was eating and he should be allowed to stay in camp for a while. The day the incident happened I wasn't at sick call this particular day. Barber was sent out to work that day and he told me during the noon day meal that during that morning while he was at sick call he tried to get these powders. I don't know whether he had an argument or not but Kondo struck him across the face and sent him out to work. A short time following this incident Barber was transferred from the camp to the Ichiota Hospital. That was the last I saw of Barber.

PROSECUTION: At this time, if the Commission please, before I interrogate Sergeant Ryan as to Specifications 1, 2, and 3, prosecution wishes to make an amendment to the Specifications and following its offer of the amendment, make an explanation to the Commission for the record.

As to Specification 1, prosecution at this time asks permission of the Commission to amend by eliminating the words "and contributed to the death of" of Specification 1. It will read as amended, "That on or about February 1945, at Headquarters Prisoner of War Camp, the accused Kenichi Kudo as medical orderly in charge of sick prisoners of war, did, willfully and unlawfully, mistreated Petty Officer Third Class David W. Smith, an American prisoner of war, by beating him and by forcing him to work when he was physically unable to do so, and by denying him necessary medical treatment."

Prosecution also asks permission of the Commission to amend Specification 2 by deleting the words "and contributed to the death of" so that Specification 2 as amended will read, "That on or about May 1944, at Headquarters Prisoner of War Camp, the accused, Kenichi Kudo, as medical orderly of sick prisoners of war, did, willfully and unlawfully, mistreated Petty Officer First-Class Robert W. Hoke, an American prisoner of war, by forcing him to work when he was unable to do so, and by denying him necessary medical treatment."

Prosecution also asks leave to amend Specification 3 by deleting the words "and contributed to the death of" so that Specification 3 as amended will read, "That on or about January 1945, at Headquarters Prisoner of War Camp, the accused, Kenichi Kudo, as medical orderly in charge of sick prisoners of war, did, willfully and unlawfully, mistreated S. Sgt. Serafin, an Italian, by forcing him to work when he was physically unable to do so, and by denying him necessary medical treatment."

Prosecution wishes to state to the Commission its reasons for seeking to amend at this time. The prosecution in this case, as in all cases, is sent down to present the facts to the Commission for their determination; in which we are like the District Attorney in civilian life or Trial Judge Advocate in military courts, in the hope to present the facts impartially and protect the rights of the accused. The prosecution does not state whether or not it feels that the defendant is guilty or innocent of the first three specifications before they were amended. However, we do feel that the evidence presented by the prosecution and any additional evidence we will have to offer will not be sufficient for the Commission to bring in a verdict of guilty on this specification and, therefore, the prosecution does not feel that the burden should be placed on the Commission if the members do not feel that the evidence is sufficient on these "death specifications." However we would like to have it also understood that we do not feel any less strongly about any of the specifications for the first three specifications as amended. We subtly feel that the evidence as brought before this Commission up to this time and to be presented further would not warrant such facts so that you would find this man guilty of contributing to his death and, therefore, in fairness to the accused, by an agreement with the defense counsel, we have consented to amend the specifications by eliminating only those six words.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will recess for two minutes without leaving the room. I want to ask both prosecution and defense for advice.

A conference was held by the Commission with the prosecution and the defense counsel.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission accepts the amendments to Specifications 1, 2, and 3 as requested by the prosecution and the words "and by confinement to death of" in each of the respective specifications will be eliminated.

The witness was still under oath.

Q. Sergeant, Specification 1 alleges Kenichi Kondo mistreated Petty Officer First Class David W. Smith, an American prisoner of war. Did you know an American prisoner of war by the name of Smith?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you ever see Smith on sick call?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you know what he was being treated for?
A. During the time I was in camp, Smith had been treated at one time or another for dysentery, malaria recurrent attacks and a general weakened condition.

Q. Did you ever overhear any conversation between Smith, Kondo and Doctor Hoshuan?
A. On one occasion I remember very well, about January 1, 1944, it was on a Monday morning and I was going on sick call. Smith was behind me in line and while we were waiting to be processed through the sick call, Smith told me that the day before, Sunday, after he had eaten his supper that evening he felt feverish and went to bed. During the night he said he suffered cramps and that morning he threw up his supper right after he ate. I went in the sick call and while being processed in the normal manner of giving name and receiving medication, I heard Smith tell Doctor Hoshuan what happened to him the night before, and Hoshuan took his temperature. I don't know exactly what it was but he recommended to Kondo that Smith stay in. I went out to the work line and about five minutes later he came out and told me he had been refused permission to stay in. I went to work that day which happened to be the Takashima party. After we started to work this morning, which we usually started about 8 o'clock, about 9:30 Smith started vomiting again. The Japanese "hancho" on the work party noticed him and told him to go to the shack where we are to lie down and told him to remain there until we went back that night. Smith did this and we went back about 5 o'clock that evening. He went to bed and Doctor Hoshuan took his temperature. While he was in bed there it was 103, I remember at that time.

Q. Did Smith tell you who had ordered him out to work?

A. He told me out in the work line-up that morning that Kondo had ordered him out to work.

Q. Now, immediately prior to this, do you know whether or not Smith had been going to sick call?
A. Smith had been going pretty regularly all during the time I was in the prison camp there.

Q. Did you ever had conversation with Smith other than the one you have just mentioned about his attendance at sick call?

DEF. COUNSEL: At this time, Mr. President, though the Commission has ruled that they would permit hearsay in, we would like to object for the defendant to all hearsay evidence that may be brought out by this witness. We make this an oral objection at this time.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained.

A. On another occasion, I don't remember the exact date, when Smith had diarrhea recurrent attacks he had tried to stay in at sick call but had been given these Japanese powders and sent out on a job.

Q. Did he, on these occasions, stated who had sent him out to work?
A. I just remember the one occasion where he had this diarrhea bothering him that he told me that Kondo had sent him out.

Q. Did he stated on that occasion, that you have just mentioned, whether or not Doctor Hochman had made any recommendations to Kondo about him?
A. All I know is this; that this day I noticed Smith going to the latrine five or six times at noon time on the job. I asked him why he didn't try to stay in that day. He said that Kondo wouldn't allow him to stay in that day but he didn't give me the details of what had happened at sick call. That is as far as I know.

Q. Now, Specification 2 alleges that the accused, Koniehi Kondo, did mistreated Petty Officer First-Class Robert H. Hess, an American prisoner of war. Did you know an American prisoner of war by the name of Hess?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you ever see Hess on sick call?
A. Yes I have.

Q. Do you know what he was being treated for?
A. During the early time I was in camp, he was being treated for what is known as scabies, which is a skin disease attributed to malnutrition. The last time I saw him treated he was being treated for a beriberi condition.

Q. Did you ever had any conversations with Hess about his attendance at sick call?
A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you see Hess at sick call receiving treatment from Kondo and Doctor Hochman?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. On these occasions when you saw him, of your own knowledge, was he permitted to stay in camp?

DEFENSE: In such cases, sir, where he testifies to an incident at which the witness himself was present, the proper way to put the question, as a better procedure is to have him ask, just ask him what happened rather than to lead him.

PROSECUTION: All right, sir, I shall rephrase the question.

Q. On these occasions you have stated that you saw Ross at sick call, what happened there?

A. I saw him go for a three week period to sick call every day at the time he had a malaria recurrent attack. He was getting quinine during the first part of this three week period. He came just went up for Mentheri powders which he received. At a later date he complained of having difficulty in breathing around his chest and his body was getting a swollen appearance to it. On this one particular day Doctor Hoshuma informed Kondo that he was getting in a bad stage of beriberi and that he should not be sent out for awhile.

Q. What did Kondo say in response to that statement by Doctor Hoshuma?

A. He said that Ross was a good nice man, that is, Ross was big and strong enough to be able to go out to work. He sent him out to work that day. That is how I remember this one particular incident.

Q. Now, Specification 3 alleges that the accused, Kunichi Kondo, did mistreat G. B. Serafin, an Italian prisoner of war. Did you know an Italian named Serafin?

A. Yes, I did.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense desires to reiterate its objection to any testimony in this particular specification because this court is without jurisdiction to consider this matter. It is no use for me to rehash but it is on the basis of jurisdiction.

LAW MEMBER: These charges and specifications have been referred to this court by order of the Commanding General of the Army of Japan and the court and Commission consider that its jurisdiction and the motion is denied.

PROSECUTION: Just for the record, that was an objection.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is denied.

Q. Sergeant, will you tell us as far as you remember what the physical make up of Serafin was?

A. Serafin was a man between 58 and 60 years old. He had been a head steward in the English merchant service for a good many years and his home was in England.

Q. What was Serafin's status at the main camp?

A. Worker.

Q. Was he treated any different from any of the Americans who were stationed there?

A. No he was not.

Q. Now, did you ever see Serafin at sick call at all?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. For how long a period of time was that?
A. For the first year and half he was in camp he had rather light duties, he was working in the camp and I didn't see him at sick call then because he was a member of the camp staff and could have gotten medication without going on the regular sick call. The last year and a half he went out to work with us and he was on the same detail, which was the Takachima Detail. It was on or about January or February 1945, we were working out on this Takachima Detail, and Serafin, I believe, got some sort of chest cold. For a period of about three weeks he went on sick call and they let him stay in for a few days. Then they sent him out again. I was on sick call this particular morning and Serafin was getting some kind of cold medicine at the same time. Doctor Hochman had recommended to Kondo that, on account of his age, it would be jeopardizing his life to send him out to work at that time. Kondo sent him out to work. That is the only occasion I was on sick call at the same time Serafin was.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Serafin about his attendance at sick call?
A. The only conversation I had with Serafin was the fact that he said he was too old to be out working with us fellows out there, and he had tried to stay in camp instead of going out as a regular laborer and had been unsuccessful.

Q. Did he state why he had not been successful in staying in?
A. The only thing he said was that Doctor Hochman had recommended one day that he should be allowed to stay in and Kondo had overruled Doctor Hochman's statement.

Q. Do you know of any other beatings or strikings of American prisoners of war by the accused, Kenichi Kondo, other than what you have testified?
A. That is all I can testify to. There were other beatings in the camp but I do not know of the incident or just who they were brought to by camp conversation.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution is finished with the direct examination.

DEFENSE: In this last statement that the witness, Sergeant Ryan spoke of, was he referring to beatings by Kondo or by whom, and were they the same ones he testified to this morning to which we objected because there were no dates, names and places?

PROSECUTION: Let us find out.

Q. Sergeant, these beatings that you now allege you do not remember the names or dates but overheard them, did they involve the accused, Kenichi Kondo?
A. Yes, they did.

Q. Now, these beatings I am now talking about, are they the same beatings that you have spoken about on the stand or are they different beatings?

A. What I am implying is this: I have come back to camp on occasions or been out on the line in the morning and have heard remarks such as this, "Kondo was on the stampage this morning and he was doing a lot of stuffing." I do not know the specific names or the incidents they spoke about.

PROSECUTION: Nothing further, sir.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will take a ten minute recess.

The Commission then took a recess until 1130, at which time all personnel of the Commission, the prosecution and defense, the reporter and interpreters resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the defense:

Q. Sergeant Ryan, is it correct that you arrived at this Ocean View Camp on 11 November 1942?
A. That's right.

Q. And from the time you arrived at the camp on 11 November 1942 until you left the camp sometime in May 1945, you were on sick call between 70 and 80 times. Is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Now, approximately how many times did you go on sick call from November 11, 1942 until the end of the year 1942?
A. After I arrived in the camp on November 11, 1942, I was there about five days and I was transferred to the Ichiota Hospital where I remained until January 9, 1943, when I returned to the No. 1 Camp in Omuta.

Q. What was the first day you went on sick call after you returned from Ichiota Hospital?
A. At that time in the American camp, it was between the period of January 9, and March 25, 1943, there was a three-star Japanese medical private who was at the sick call there and I went in about two occasions for beriberi ???.

Q. Do you know what his name was; do you know who this orderly was?
A. I do not remember his name.

Q. And from August 1943 until the end of 1943, approximately how many times did you go on sick call?
A. I'd say between 20 and 25 times.

Q. Am I to understand that the first contact you had with Kenichi Kondo's dispensary was in August of 1943?
A. I believe in June 1943 I had gone down to the sick bay and received beriberi injections from Doctor Hashman, that is the first time I had seen him in the American section of the camp but previous to that I had seen him in the isolated section of the British camp where the 50 or 60 workers were hospitalized.

Q. Between March 25 and August of 1943, how many times did you go on sick call?
A. Between the periods of March 25, 1943 until May 25, 1943 I didn't have occasion to go on sick call because I was in this isolated section over in the British section of the camp. Then in June 1943, when I was back in the American section, I went in for a few days getting these beriberi injections, and the next occasion I had after that was around August 1943.

Q. And in the first six months of 1944, how many times did you go on sick call?
A. I say about 20 times.

Q. And the last six months of 1944?
A. About the same amount of time, 20.

Q. And about how many times did you go on sick call from the first of January, 1945 until you left the camp in May?
A. About 15 times.

Q. At the time you left the camp in May 1945, was there any improvement in your health from the time you arrived there on 11 November 1942?
A. My general condition was a little better but I was still getting these malaria recurrent attacks.

Q. Now on this occasion of your beating you described that you received in April of 1943, you testified that you were struck by the accused, Kenichi Kondo, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. And on that occasion I believe you testified that it was because you have refused to go out to work, is that correct?
A. That is right.

Q. On that occasion also, were there any other men who had refused to go out to work?
A. On this particular occasion, no there wasn't this one day.

Q. To whom, if any one, did you registered complaint as to the treatment you received at the hands of Kondo?
A. I informed Doctor Hochuen about the incident the next morning when he came into the camp.

Q. Did you report this incident to any one else?
A. No, I didn't.

Q. Now, I believe, you have described a second incident that took place in August. Now on the second occasion which you have described that took place in August, 1943, you said that you were slapped by Kenichi Kondo, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. And on that occasion your complaint was a diarrhea ailment, is that correct?
A. There was a recurrence of "amoeba" dysentery.

Q. And upon that occasion you requested powders of Kondo and received them, is that correct?
A. Doctor Hochman had requested the powders for me and had recommended that I stay in camp on this particular day, which Kondo had refused.

Q. But you did receive the powders, isn't that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. And the reason you have given for being slapped by Kondo was that you had failed to go out to work that day, is that correct?
A. That is correct. The reason I failed to go out that day was that there was blood and mucus appearing in my stool and on the next morning following this occasion, Doctor Hochman presented a stool to Mr. Kondo and I remained in camp for a period of four day following this.

Q. On the day you were struck by Kondo, did you present a stool at all?
A. I hadn't presented a stool on that day.

Q. Were there any other occasions, Sergeant Ryan, in which you stayed in from work without permission after going on sick call?
A. No, there wasn't any other occasion.

Q. Now I direct your attention, Sergeant Ryan, to the incident you described involving George Yeager that took place sometime in April or May, between March and May of 1943, and in describing that incident, Sergeant, you stated that George Yeager was not over in the sick bay, I believe. Would you state to the Commission where he had been prior to that time, where he had been standing?
A. What I meant by the bay was, in the sick bay you had a raised platform like this (indicating the raised platform on which is placed the witness' chair) on which you slept on and about six feet away there was another bay about that high. Yeager was standing on the surface of the bay and when Kondo hit him he knocked him into the bay section.

PRESIDENT: Into the what section?

A. Into the bay where he slept.

Q. Then he was pushed or knocked over a raised platform, is that right?
A. He was knocked over.

Q. Now, approximately how many times was Yeager kicked?
A. I'd say he was kicked between, or roughly speaking about 20 times. Kondo would kick him three or four times, then yell at him, then proceed to kick him again. The whole beating took place over about five or ten minutes.

Q. Now about the Favorite incident that you described, Sergeant Ryan, in this instance this was a case where this man was slapped, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Now when Favorite was taken down to the guardhouse and stood at attention, was a Corporal of the Guards there at that time?
A. I do not know. The only thing I knew is that when Favorite came back into the room, the Corporal of the Guards had seen him standing there and had told him to go back into his bay, the room where he was staying at.

Q. But he could have been taken down to the Commander of the Guard by Kondo the original time when he was made to stand at attention, isn't that correct?

A. I don't know because the Corporal of the Guard wasn't always in the guard shack out there but would only come in there periodically.

Q. Now, when Kondo was working at the dispensary starting in June 1943, how many American prisoners of war were at the camp?

A. Did you mean by that question American the people classified as being members of the American section of the camp?

Q. Classified as being members of the American section of the camp.

A. I'd say about 250.

Q. Do you know whether or not there were any other prisoners of war that Kondo took care of during this period?

A. Up until the two camps merged into one, on the 8th of the 8th Battalion is, I think the best shape of the American section. Then when the two camps merged into one they had two separate sick calls at that time, at the same time, one sick call was pumped in, that would be the Americans, then the British would follow the Americans into the sick call.

Q. And what is your best recollection Sergeant, as to the date this merger took place?

A. I'd say about the first of 1944.

Q. Would you give me a month, January, February or March of 1944?

A. I'd say January of 1944.

Q. And on these occasions when they had two separate sick calls, one for what had been formerly just the American section formerly the British section, did Doctor Hachuda and Kondo attend both these sick calls?

A. No they attended both the sick calls.

Q. And what then was the combined total of prisoners of war both Americans and British that were being serviced in these sick calls by Doctor Hachuda and Kondo?

A. The total strength of both camps, those members of the camps, should be about 550.

Q. Now Sergeant, all the time you were at this Omuta Camp, how many times were you admitted to the camp hospital?

A. The only period I was admitted to the hospital was between March 25th and May 15, 1943, as far as being hospitalized as a hospital patient.

Q. And for what were you hospitalized on these occasions, Sergeant?

A. On this occasion I had just been released two months before my entry there from the Ichiura Hospital and I still had the effects of this malaria and dysentery and I had a beriberi condition which was setting into my feet.

Q. And how many times, Sergeant, were you permitted to rest in camp? How many days were you permitted to rest in camp?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, I request the defense counsel—

Q. [illegible]

DEFENSE: He'll withdraw the question.

Q. You have testified, Sergeant, that during the time you were at the camp you suffered from various ailments. You listed them as, the first one as dysentery. Now, how long were you confined in the hospital for any period while you suffered from dysentery?

A. At the time I had this dysentery it was classified as a recurrent attack of "acute" dysentery and this came about, this work incident and at that time I had—before I was allowed to stay in camp I was going out on the job for ten days and I was having movements between 20 and 25 times while on the job. Doctor Hoffman chatted up-stairs to Doctor Kondo and said if I continued going out on the job I would waste away to nothing and they would carry me back. At that time Mr. Sanders had some of the men go out and buy some sulfapyridine tablets. At this time I stayed in camp for about five days until my bowels stopped moving. This time such period. I was disciplined as a "sick-patient" part of the time with two exceptions.

Q. Who recommended this treatment of sulfapyridine for you, Sergeant?

A. Sulfaguanidine, a medical student here.

DEFENSE: I understood him to say sulfapyridine, that is why I put the question in terms of [illegible] period in October 1942.

PROSECUTION: That is all right but speak louder, when you suffered from the flu?

Q. What sulfa drug were you treated with at this time?

A. I believe it was sulfaguanidine.

Q. Now, Sergeant, when both sections of the camp, the American and

Q. And who recommended this treatment of sulfaguanidine? Known as

A. Doctor Hoffman recommended it. At that particular time they weren't able to get any through the Japanese Army and there were no Red Cross supplies available and they were buying it out on the job from the Japanese. [illegible] with a big building in the American side camp and the British owned it to it. [illegible]

Q. Did Doctor Hoffman tell you that you were suffering from amebic dysentery?

A. I knew I had been suffering from that because there was a report sent up from the Bahidin Hospital when I left there. I was just temporarily excused, account this sick call other than land, and particularly [illegible] that put marked him.

Q. Now, Sergeant, did any one say to you that you were suffering from amebic dysentery? In so far as saying any specific and numerous

A. They told me I had amebic dysentery on account of the stools that were taken from me at the Bahidin Station and this report had still followed me back from the camp.

Q. Is that "amebic" or "amebic"? [illegible]

A. I don't know the correct name for it.

Q. Is this the only occasion in which you were confined in camp with [illegible] amebic dysentery or diarrhea?

A. I have been staying in about two other occasions just for a day when [illegible] only reason [illegible]

Q. About when did this take place, Sergeant?

A. I don't remember the exact dates.

Q. How many times were you permitted to stay in camp with malaria?
A. About three or four times.

Q. Do you recall the dates?
A. No I don't.

Q. About how long were you permitted to stay in on these occasions?
A. It was about a day at a time, on these occasions I have had fever of about 104. I might have attacks during the night. Another time I went to sick call and there wouldn't be any fever showing, I would be given some quinine tablets and sent out on the job. After I had been out on the job for a couple of hours I would get another attack of the fever.

Q. How many times were you confined to camp with beriberi?
A. It was during this period between March 25, 1943 and May 25th when I was in most of the time during this three month period. I was classified as a "non-patient" most of the time with the exception of some of the time when Kohbo-shoo and tried to send me out to work when he was a medical student there.

Q. How many times were you confined in camp with pellagra?
A. I was in for about a 30-day period in December 1943.

Q. And how many times were you confined to camp when you suffered from the flu?
A. About three times for periods of about three days.

Q. Now, Sergeant, when both sections of the camp, the American and British, merged was that the first time the camp became known as Cabbie Camp?
A. No, as far as my knowledge, it was always known as Headquarters Camp No. 3, and was used on one side of the street and the others on the other side of it, and then they built a big building in the American side camp and the British moved into it. We had our mess hall and administration on the same side and through the same channels.

Q. Can you recall any occasion at sick call in the morning, the regular sick call from 0630 to 0700, in which anybody, any other Japanese personnel, attended this sick call other than Kondo, and particularly those people that can remind him?
A. As I said before there was three Japanese medical privates in the student status. But in so far as seeing any superiors and supervisors at sick call, I have seen them just walk into the office, just look around, but as far as staying in there for supervision at sick call, I have never seen them doing that.

Q. Do you know a Japanese medical orderly by the name of Corporal Hirahara?
A. I have seen various Japanese corporals and sergeants in and out of the camp there but as far as knowing them by name, I didn't know them well enough to call them by names.

Q. Now you say then that Kondo is the only person you can remember by name of the Japanese personnel that attended sick call, is that correct?
A. That's correct.

Q. And all the time that you were at this Osaka Camp, the Allied personnel that were at attendance at these sick calls were Doctor Hachman, Chief Pharmacist Mate Merritt and Ginger Hodson, is that correct?

A. There was another doctor by the name of Doctor Burroughes who was there a short period and only helped with dressings and opening bells and incidentals like that. He didn't have anything to do with sick call functions as far as giving any diagnoses or anything.

Q. Hachman, Merritt and Ginger Hodson were the ones who were there all of the time, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it was Hachman who made recommendations to Kondo?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in their capacity as medical officers, don't you believe that they were the people who knew best of the health and welfare of the prisoners of war during that until you list?

A. Yes, they should have a good knowledge due to the fact that they were at sick call all during the day.

Q. When the Japanese medical officers came around and examined the personnel in the sick bay, was Kondo present at that time?

A. These doctors would come around and sometimes they would hold their examination in the sick bay, and at other times they would just point out a certain area in the camp area and would have all the men who remained in camp that day come for examination. On some occasions Kondo was there, and on other occasions just Hachman and the Japanese doctors were there.

Q. On any of these occasions did the Japanese doctors indicate any dissatisfaction with the number of men who were ill?

A. I have never seen this happen. From what I have seen, they and Dr. Hachman would just discuss the case and on some occasions the Japanese doctors would recommend that certain men should stay in for a week or so at a time and not even attend sick call.

Q. On any of these occasions when the Japanese medical doctors came around and examined the prisoners of war, did they recommend that certain people be sent out to work?

A. I have seen occasions when they would examine the man and say that he would go to work in three or four days.

Q. And on these occasions when the doctor recommended that certain people would go to work in three or four days, whose duty was it to see that this man was sent in three or four days?

A. Dr. Hachman would inform the man that they were supposed to go to work and the time limit was, and if they weren't well and able by then they were to report back to the sick call. There might be some occasions where the man sustained injuries on the job and the man would come and see the part of the body that was injured, and they would be lying in the bay and the doctor would recommend they go to work in four or five days, and by that time if the man was able to go to work in that time then Dr. Hachman would inform the man to come to the sick bay and go through the formality.

Q. Did you ever hear of Dr. Nosu's policy of sending prisoners of war to work?
A. No, I haven't.

Q. You read the record of trial in this case?
A. You mean talked it over with the prosecutor?

Q. Have you read the record of trial in this case as it has been compiled to date?
A. I have read certain parts of it.

Q. And what parts of that did you read?
A. I read part of Hardy's testimony.

Q. Can you state about what incidents or facts that contained?

PROSECUTION: Sir, I object to the question. I don't see that it makes any difference what incidents or facts he read. If Counsel chooses to interrogate him about a certain incident based on what he read in the record, that is fine; but I don't see any point in questioning him prior to that about what he read in the record.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, we have a rule set up called "Separation of Witnesses" whereby no witness is allowed in the Court room to hear the testimony of any other witness before he is called. We are quite interested to find that has been violated by the prosecution in this case.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will state for the record that we have discussed with the witness everything that Chief Counsel has said. There is certainly no objection to that. If that is what the defense counsel is seeking to find out, we state it for the record.

LAW MEMBER: Before rendering a decision I'll ask the defense a question: Who set that up?

DEFENSE: That has been set up between the prosecution and defense when these cases were first started.

LAW MEMBER: In agreement?

DEFENSE: It was not only in agreement, it was the order of the president.

LAW MEMBER: At that time. In any event, the objection by the prosecution is not sustained.

Q. Of what incidents, Sergeant, that you have testified to in this case, have you read in the record?
A. I read of the Knudson incident.

PRESIDENT: The what?
A. Knudson.

Q. Did you read of any other incident?
A. Yes, the Doherty incident.

PRESIDENT: Which one?

DEFENSE: Doherty, sir.

Q. Any other incidents?

A. There was a couple of incidents there which I did not have any knowledge about and which I didn't testify to. I tried to refresh my mind on them, but if I didn't have any knowledge of the incident I didn't testify on it.

Q. Did you remember, Sergeant, any of the general testimony in the record that coincided with anything you may have testified to prior to your developing the specifications on your own testimony?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question on the grounds it is too general. If Counsel wishes specifically to ask him something, I would have no objection, but a question like that embraces everything to which he had testified.

DEFENSE: All it involves is the general conditions he has testified to.

PRESIDENT: Why not ask if he read in the record about these general conditions. That is all.

LAW MEMBER: Objection is not sustained.

Q. Did you read anything else in the record in Chief Sander's testimony on any other point other than the two incidents you have stated here, namely the Doherty and the Sanborn incidents?

A. I read some of the other incidents, but the only thing I was looking for was these other two specifications which I had no knowledge of, and still have no knowledge of. In so far as scanning the other testimony, I did while I was up in the office, in looking for any other information which I might have on these other two enemy bombs. I did not find any.

Q. Then is it correct to state that you skimmed through the record of Chief Sander's testimony in a general manner and read the two incidents, Doherty and Sanborn?

A. Those were the two I was looking for. As far as going through the thing in detail, I did not at the time.

PROSECUTION: May I just remind Counsel, in case there is some confusion, that the witness has not testified about the Doherty incident at all.

DEFENSE: I am just making the question more specific to harmonize with the objection you had before.

Q. Did you read any of the affidavits in this case?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you know which one they were?

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will state for the record that the witness has read all the affidavits presented on behalf of the prosecution.

Q: [redacted] Sergeant Hyde, in some of those conversations that you had with various prisoners of war about some of the incidents that took place [redacted] do they, don't you believe that many of those very conversations [redacted] Action. [redacted] I find that you said were all conversations

PROSECUTION: I object to the question, sir, on the ground that it is too general and that Counsel specifically referred to a particular [redacted] conversations were suggested, he will confine himself to those particular conversations, and that objection is sustained.

DEFENSE: Sir, don't it [redacted] to inquire into some of them in a reasonably brief, detailed manner, that's entirely very there, particularly [redacted] I have more than two hours' [redacted] time, I don't like to have my [redacted] after the decision is made.

LAW MEMBER: I don't see who complained a great deal of the time when they [redacted] to get in for the record this one offer of proof, [redacted] Then you did go out and work [redacted] with you did not [redacted]

LAW MEMBER: Isn't that before a decision is rendered? I thought you [redacted] all, sir.

DEFENSE: No, sir, [redacted] conversations and specifications were referred to the Commission by the Commanding General of the American [redacted] sir, we have been overruled in it and we would like for the [redacted] in Japan".

LAW MEMBER: [redacted] to any particular conversation.

[illegible] December, 25th of December, 1946.

DEFENSE: We don't know, sir, what they are. We are asking the Sergeant.

[illegible] 1946, adjourned to [redacted]

LAW MEMBER: [redacted]

DEFENSE: The first question, sir, has to be a general question. Then if the witness answered there were any such conversations, then they will be specified.

PROSECUTION: I have no objection to the question except that the Counsel has put in the words "if these conversations were suggested".

LAW MEMBER: Read the question.

[redacted]
Chief Prosecutor

The question was read back.

LAW MEMBER: It was "any" not "all".

DEFENSE: No, sir, I thought I said—

PROSECUTION: I still object on the ground that the witness is not apprised as to what conversations he means, what incidents are referred to, and also the word "suggested". The witness doesn't know what conversations are meant.

DEFENSE: I'm asking him if there were—

LAW MEMBER: The law member understood the question to any were all of these conversations suggested, and upon that basis rendered the decision. Upon re-reading I find that you said were any conversations suggested, and upon that basis the objection is not sustained.

A. No, I wouldn't say that any of them were suggested. Just in my own experience of what I have seen such as the night before and the incident that happened on guard and not being allowed to stay in camp, and so I said this three incident appeared as that any other incidents said by anybody could be taken to be the truth.

Q. Out of your group of about 500 men didn't you have any men in that group who complained continuously during their entire stay there, particularly I mean more than the normal person does, from your experience, while you were there, Sergeant?

A. There was some men who complained a great deal of the time when they were in camp, but they were not who were really sick. In so far as complaining about not being able to stay in camp, there wasn't any inducement for men to stay in camp. When you did go out and work you received a meal which you did not receive in camp.

DEFENSE: That is all, sir.

LAW MEMBER: At this point the Law member wishes to instruct certain words in the decision made during the objection of the defense with reference to Exhibit. I stated that although the specifications were referred to the Commission by the Commanding General of the American Forces in Japan. It should read "referred to the Commission by the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers in Japan".

PRESIDENT: At this time the Commission will adjourn to reassemble at 0900 tomorrow, 25th of October, 1946.

The Commission then, at 1615 hours on 24 October, 1946, adjourned to meet at 0900 hours on 25 October, 1946.

[illegible] did the members of your group work on sick call because when you had sick call with the days you went to work?

PRESIDENT: The Commission has [illegible] this question in both cases. Perhaps the witness [illegible]

A. [illegible] stated the question.

RICHARD E. RAID
Chief Prosecutor

Q. [illegible] days that he had off, [illegible] sick call because with sick call because with the number of men on sick call on the days he went to work?

A. On the days that we had off, even on legal holidays, they usually held a sick call in the morning which we about five o'clock. At that time they would issue the necessary drugs and [illegible] of medicine such as quinine would be given.

Yokohama Courthouse

the Commission met, pursuant to adjournment, at 0900 hours, all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and reporter who were present at the close of the previous session in this case, being present.

the witness, Sergeant Ryan, who also present and who remained he was still under his former oath.

Questions by the defense (cont.):

Q. Sergeant, did you ever see Kanda eating food at any time while he was in the camp?

A. I just seen him wearing the bayonet scabbard which all Japanese soldiers used, only in 1943, we were issued new bayonets for [illegible]

QUESTION: Who had the scabbard?

A. With the bayonet in it.

Q. Did he wear this all the time or just when he was going home or to work?

A. I believe he wore it just going to and from camp. I am not sure.

Q. Did you ever see Kanda carrying a "shinai" or a bamboo stick?

A. No, I never [illegible]

Q. Sergeant, did you ever work at all on Sundays?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. About how many days off a month did you have?

A. Three to two days off a month. Sometimes more if there was a lot of [illegible]

Q. How did the number of men who went on sick call compare with the days you had off with the days you went to work?

OBJECTION: If the Commission please, I don't think that that question is quite clear. Perhaps the witness may have trouble understanding it.

LAW MEMBER: Repeat the question.

Q. On the days that he had off, how did the number of men who went on sick call compare with the number of men on sick call on the days he went to work?

A. On the days the men had off, such as legal holidays, they usually held a main sick call in the evening which would be about five o'clock. At that time they would just make the necessary dressings and issue of medicines such as quinine would be given.

Q. Did the number of men on sick call increase or decrease on those days you had off?
A. It would, I'd say, just be about the same. The men went on sick call in the morning for necessary dressings and they wouldn't go on the evening sick call. The men who had fever or any conditions that came on during the day would go on the evening sick call, the holiday sick call.

Q. At the times you attended the sick call, Sergeant, did you ever see the defendant go after any Japanese medical authority to assist in the determination of whether a man was fit or unfit to go to work on that day?
A. Not in any of my own cases have I known him to do that.

Q. Have you ever heard of it in any case while there, your own?
A. I believe I have heard of it on some occasions where that contained injuries of such such as foot injuries;

Q. Now Sergeant, when you were at the hospital within the camp on the British side early in 1943, just what casualty were Kondo's duties at that time?
A. There was Kondo and another two-star private, whose name I don't remember, over there as student visitors. During the two months I was there they were learning to give transfusions and injections and at that time they were under a three-star Japanese private in the Japanese National Corps whose name I do not remember. He was only around the camp at that period for around five months.

Q. For failing to go to work on the two occasions you have described to this Commission and for which you stated you were struck by Kondo for failing to go to work, at that time did you receive any other punishment?
A. Punishment by whom?

Q. Anybody else?
A. Not I know of.

Q. And by whom was that?
A. Are you referring to during the whole time I was a prisoner?

Q. No, just during those two occasions you described in which Kondo struck you for failure to go to work. Those are the only occasions.
A. No I didn't.

Q. Now, Sergeant, would you say that your health was average as far as prisoners who were at the Osaka Main Camp, at least to your knowledge?
A. The first year and half I was there it was below the average of the general health of the camp.

Q. The rest of the time you were there, would you say your health was average or above average?
A. It was about average the rest of the time.

Q. And would you be able to state, Sergeant, whether or not the rest of the prisoners spent the same amount of time away from work as you did while you were in prison at this Osaka Main Camp?

A. There was a group of men, prisoners, who were taken from Guam whose health held up far better than was the were taken from the Philippines. As a result, the occasions for them to go on sick call were less than men taken from the Philippines.

Q. Did Bunny and Tushar tell you that they were slapped by Kondo for arguing with him from staying in from work?

A. No.

Q. Now, Sergeant, I would like to read to you a brief portion of Prosecution Exhibit Two, an affidavit by Hashman, and ask you a few questions. In this affidavit he speaks of the Smith Case and he makes this following statement, he says that in his examination "It developed that Smith was undernourished and poorly developed. He was a good man and merely complained. There were no positive symptoms of pneumonia present at this examination. I did, however, recommend to the Japanese medical orderly Kaniehi Kondo, that Smith be kept in camp for a few days in order to enable for him to rest up. Kondo, I believe, acting upon general instructions that no prisoner, unless definitely sick (high temperature, broken bones) would be permitted to rest, refused to allow Smith to remain. He was sent to work and a few days later he developed pneumonia." Now Sergeant, in these two or three conversations that you say you had with Doctor Hashman when he came into the barracks to talk over the general conditions in the camp, did he ever indicate to you or to any other member there during these conversations whether or not he thought Kondo was acting under the orders of some superior or not, in regard to the sending of prisoners of war to work?

A. He didn't mention that in any conversation that we had.

Q. Now, wouldn't Doctor Hashman be in a better position than yourself to judge whether or not he thought Kondo was acting under the orders of some superior in regard to sending prisoners of war to work?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question on the grounds that calls for a conclusion on the part of this witness.

DEFENSE: Are we going to have an objection like that from the prosecution? I've assumed that the prosecution, asking for conclusions all the time from witnesses, would stand up and even make such an objection.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained. The witness will answer the question.

A. He should know more about the function there in the sick bay than I do because I wasn't there every day.

Q. As to the procedure on sick call in the morning, am I correct Sergeant, in stating that the first thing that took place was that the prisoners of war wishing to attend sick call, lined up outside and filed in after Kondo opened the dispensary in the morning?

A. That is correct.

Q. And is it correct that the next step in the procedure was that the prisoners of war gave their numbers to Kondo as they filed by in the dispensary?

A. No, they gave their numbers to him as they came up to him and filed by.

Q. And then was the next step that Doctor Koehnen made his diagnosis as to the ailment the prisoner of war complained of and then made a recommendation to Kondo?
A. That's right.

Q. Sergeant, who administered the medicines and various treatments to the prisoners of war in these sick calls?
A. They were administered by Doctor Koehnen, Kenichi Kondo, and Chief Mate Ginger.

Q. Did Kondo ever prescribe medicines for prisoners of war?
A. Yes.

Q. Who was "the strafer", do you know?
A. We had two members of the camp that were called "the strafers."

Q. Now, do you know John M. Zimmer?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether or not John Zimmer was in the hospital when the Yager Incident took place?
A. Yes he was.

Q. Do you know where he was situated in the room in relation to where this incident took place?
A. Zimmer slept right behind me in the sick bay.

Q. On the near side from where the incident took place or on the far side from where the incident took place?
A. On the right-hand side of me.

Q. And if Zimmer states in his affidavit, which is Prosecution Exhibit Twelve, when asked about the incident, "that Kondo had asked Yager if he had any medicine and Yager acknowledged that he had" and "accused Yager of stealing medicine", he beat Yager until Yager crawled under the bed to escape the beating, "Kondo then continued by kicking Yager for a time, after that one of Yager's teeth was knocked out either by Kondo's fists or by his feet." Now with these facts in mind, is it possible that Yager crawled under the bed to escape the beating rather than being knocked into the sick bay?
A. We weren't sleeping on beds at that time. We were sleeping on a raised bay which is similar to the stand which I am now on. From what I had seen he was knocked on the bay and then Kondo jumped on to the bay.

Q. Now when Zimmer again in Prosecution Exhibit Twelve says, "I have seen Nishimura beat Kondo when there were too many men who stayed away from work because they were sick", I now ask you have you seen Nishimura beat Kondo?
A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you ever heard of it?
A. No.

PROSECUTION: I object, you have[illegible]

PRESIDENT: What was the answer to that?

DEFENSE: He never heard of it.

Q. Do you know that John Zimmer made three affidavits that have been presented in evidence in this case, Prosecution Exhibits 3, 12 and 13?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the same John Zimmer who you testified about yesterday who was thrown who injured his foot while at work and was sent back out to work again after his foot was bandaged?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know that in reading these three affidavits which are prosecution exhibits in this case, that Zimmer does not mention the fact that he was sent out to work while he was physically unfit to perform labor?

A. Yes.

Q. In preparing these affidavits in this case, don't you think that Zimmer would have given his illustration of people who stayed in from work when they were physically unable to do so, his own case if he believed he was physically unfit to perform labor?

A. [illegible]

PROSECUTION: I object. How would this witness possibly know what Zimmer would do. The affidavits are in evidence; they speak for themselves.

LAW MEMBER: I didn't understand the question myself.

The reporter read back the question.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

Q. Now Sergeant, isn't it true that the reason many of the men want to work was so that they could steal food while at work?

LAW MEMBER: Ask that again.

Q. Isn't it true that the reason many of the men wished to go to work was because they could steal food from the Japanese while they were at work?

PRESIDENT: Steal food?

DEFENSE: Yes sir.

A. The reason that a good deal of the men were anxious to go to work was the fact that they received this noon meal which wasn't given to them in camp. Also on several of the farms where they worked rations of rice and beans--this farm allowed them to cook up this rice and bean up in addition to the dinner that was given to them.

Q. Isn't it true that men would steal food while at work?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question. What difference does it make; it is immaterial to the issue of this case; what difference does it make if men stole food at work? How does that connect up with the accused, Kenichi Kondo?

LAW MEMBER: The Commission wants to get the full picture of what occurred and the question will be answered. Objection is not sustained.

A. Yes, men would steal food while at work.

Q. Was that while serving as stevedores while unloading boats?
A. This was doing general stevedore work while on boats or unloading stuff over around the warehouses.

Q. Did you ever see Lt. Miyatake, the medical authority of the camp, strike prisoners of war at the hospital?

PROSECUTION: No objection to the question if counsel will identify the hospital.

DEFENSE: Camp Hospital.

PROSECUTION: You mean the dispensary?

DEFENSE: Camp Hospital, that is where Kondo worked until 1942.

A. Do you mean 1943, until June 1943?

DEFENSE: I just asked if you ever saw Lt. Miyatake strike any prisoners of war while in the hospital within the camp.

PRESIDENT: Give us the dates.

DEFENSE: I cannot give the dates; I can just give the general period he was there. Sir, I think that is the exact language the prosecution has been using in asking questions. Prosecution Exhibits have already been allowed.

PROSECUTION: I object on the grounds that whether he struck any American prisoner of war is irrelevant unless connected with the defendant, Kenichi Kondo.

LAW MEMBER: I ask the defense, what affidavit is it contained in?

DEFENSE: Prosecution Exhibit One, sir.

PROSECUTION: We are objecting to the question on the following grounds; firstly, it is not connected with the accused, Kenichi Kondo; it has nothing to do with the charges in this case. If the defense is permitted to ask thought questions as to certain officers striking prisoners of war, you can go down through the whole camp and ask if they, one in that camp struck American POWS. What difference does it make if they struck American prisoners. How does it connect with the accused, Kenichi Kondo, in this case? Kenichi Kondo is on trial. The question is no wise connected with the accused, we are straying too far afield, it is not connected with the issues.

PRESIDENT: I would like to ask the prosecution's question. In those affidavits where you have lined out part of the affidavit, is that for convenience or is it part of the affidavit?

PROSECUTION: The paragraphs lined out have no part in the issues of the case; they are extraneous matters.

PRESIDENT: They are part of the exhibits?

PROSECUTION: They are part of the original affidavits but when offered they are generally not considered by the Commission. In all cases where the defense feels that certain crossed out portions should be in that is usually determined before the trial.

LAW MEMBER: Inasmuch as that is part of the affidavits the objection is not sustained.

Q. Do you remember the question or do you want me to rephrase it, Sergeant?
A. Rephrase it.

Q. Now at the time while you were at the camp, did you ever see Dr. Yyetake, the medical officer in the camp, strike prisoners of war?
A. Yes I have.

Q. How often?
A. I have seen him on two or three occasions myself.

Q. What with?
A. The time I had seen him he hit [illegible] with his fists and open hand.

Q. Now Sergeant, at the time you went on sick call and complained of the migraine headache, who diagnosed this headache as being a migraine headache?
A. Doctor Hoshman.

Q. And was migraine headache the ailment you described to Kondo at the time you requested the aspirin?
A. I told him I had what is known as "itai" in my head; that means pain.

Q. You have said, I believe, that the Japanese aspirin came in square boxes, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Were any other items in the dispensary contained in square boxes?
A. Yes, there was these stomach powders they gave for dysentery, diarrhea or any stomach ailments and I don't know what the powders consisted of but they were just known as stomach powders.

Q. Now Sergeant, in the mumps epidemic that you spoke of that took place in early 1945, I believe you stated that the first four or five men who contracted the mumps were isolated, is that correct?
A. Yes, they were.

Q. And was this isolation of these four or five cases a result of Doctor Hoshman's recommendation to Kondo?
A. I didn't hear him give the recommendation but I imagine it was.

Q. And is it your testimony that these cases remained isolated until they grew to the number of between 20 and 25?
A. That's right.

Q. Approximately how long did these cases remained isolated from when the first case of mumps was set off to itself in this isolation ward?
A. You mean all the cases or just the first five?

Q. I want to know Sergeant, how long the men remained in isolation, that is from when the first man went into isolation until the 20 or 25 men were sent out to work?
A. Some of the men were left in the room and some remained in the sick bay. When the sick bay got filled up, those men who were in the sick bay were going out to work.

PRESIDENT: That doesn't answer the question you asked. How long a time?

A. I don't remember the length of time. That lasted over, I'd say, six weeks to two months.

Q. Is it correct that you stated that these men were finally sent out to work by Komichi Kondo?
A. That's right.

Q. Could it be possible Sergeant, that when Kondo ordered these men out to work that he had received orders from some of his superiors?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, how long did this epidemic lasted?

PRESIDENT: Are you through with the mumps' questions?

DEFENSE: Just a few more questions.

Q. Just how long did this mumps epidemic lasted?
A. About a two month period.

Q. And did it ended after the men went back to work?
A. The cases took their normal course. I do not know how long these cases lasted, I think in about two weeks some of the men would get over it and some others would get it, but the whole epidemic stopped in two months, somewhere around that time I am not sure.

DEFENSE: That's all.

PRESIDENT: At this point the Commission will take a ten minute recess.

The Court then took a recess until 1010 hours, at which time the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, and the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, during the course of an objection to Prosecution Exhibit One, I made the statement from which the Court might have gotten the wrong inference and I want to correct it. These affidavits come down to the defense stricken by the prosecution as to what they think is relevant to the particular issues in the case. Some times the portions stricken are believed to be by the defense relevant or become relevant through testimony, therefore, the defense may question a witness about parts that are stricken but he cannot offer that portion in evidence until the defense's case goes on.

PRESIDENT: Until what?

DEFENSE: Until the defense starts; until the prosecution has rested. He cannot offer that in evidence, he can merely refer to it and indicate from what exhibit it comes. Some time the prosecution and defense do get together and agree on what portions should be stricken. I don't know whether that has been done in this case but still we are not bound by additional evidence brought in by witnesses when that is proven to be relevant.

LAW MEMBER: That is my understanding and I also am under the impression that in the final bound copy of the proceedings of the Commission in which all the affidavits are appended that there are no portions stricken.

DEFENSE: No sir, that is incorrect. The affidavits are stricken in the final bound copy so that the reviewing authority has already the same evidence that is given to the Commission and the reviewing authority pays no attention to the parts stricken.

LAW MEMBER: In my opinion the stricken portions were merely superfluous.

PROSECUTION: They are irrelevant and immaterial and have nothing to do with the case.

PRESIDENT: And I understand they are contained in that affidavit because the affidavit might be used in other cases.

PROSECUTION: Sir, most affidavits refer to the camp and therefore mention specific atrocities which may involve two or three defendants. Obviously it is improper to relate to acts committed by another defendant whose this man is on trial and, therefore, they are stricken.

DEFENSE: It may be prejudicial to his cause.

Q. Sergeant, on these days off that you remained in from work, did Kondo attended sick call?
A. The occasions I went in there on days I had off I attended the evening sick call when Kondo was not in attendance at that time.

Q. Do you know whether or not he attended the sick call held in the morning on your days off?
A. I don't know if he did or not because I don't remember having occasion to go in the morning.

Q. I believe you have testified that on occasions Kondo has prescribed medicines for prisoners of war, how often did this happen?
A. This happened probably every day such as somebody coming in from work at night having a foot injury. He would either paint the foot himself or have Merriton Ginger paint the foot with this dark solution.

I don't know what it consisted of.

Q. Did Merritt and Ginger Hodson do the same thing?
A. Yes, even in so far as painting is concerned?

Q. Painting and prescribing treatment for injuries?
A. I have seen Chief Merritt take a man's temperature and he would call out the degree of temperature to Kondo. Kondo would write it down and then Kondo would recommend aspirin for instance or either give it to him.

Q. Do you refer now, Sergeant, to when the men came back from work in the evening?
A. Yes.

Q. Did this same procedure take place at the morning sick call?
A. Most of the dressings and medication was given in the evening sick call. However certain cases such as malaria and diarrhea medicine would be given in the morning, and stomach cramps and incidents like that.

Q. Who recommended the medicines on these occasions?
A. Doctor Woolman, and Kondo would recommend them too on some occasions. To give an example, like you would go up there and be examined and if you had a fever one of them either Merritt or Ginger, or Doctor Woolman, who have taken the fever would give the degree of fever to Kondo and Kondo would either give aspirin or recommend giving the aspirin, in other cases it would be vice versa, Doctor Woolman would recommend.

Q. Was this procedure followed in accordance with the course of treatment administered to the men that came on sick call daily?
A. In some instances Doctor Woolman would be examining somebody and the next man would be called into line and Kondo would diagnose his case himself.

Q. How often did this take place?
A. This would take place only in the evening sick call and would be just in minor cases such as someone going in and telling Kondo they had a head cold, and if Dr. Woolman was on the side with someone else Kondo would give him cold tablets or just aspirin. That pertained only to minor ailments.

Q. Did you ever hear of a meeting between Woolman, Kondo, Miyashi, and Schlorer?
A. No, I haven't.

Q. Now, Sergeant, do you know what Honor was doing in camp the day that the Brudpon incident took place?
A. Honor was a member of the camp detail who worked around the camp. Some days he would repair windows or work in the cobbler's shop. Members of the camp staff never went out as workers, and the work was all within the limits of the camp.

Q. Do you recall where you were in the camp when Honor told you about this incident?
A. It was after I came in camp from work that evening. I believe it was in the camp compound.

Q. Did Reuter tell you what he was doing at all in Room 5 that morning at 1000 hours?

A. I think at this time Reuter was putting in windows that had been broken.

Q. Did Reuter tell you at all whether or not anybody else accompanied Kondo at the time he was making the sick call rounds?

A. I don't remember him saying anything pertaining to that.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the Horsley incident, is it correct that the night the duty officer came around he told Horsley that he could remain in camp the next day?

A. That's right.

Q. Were you present at this occasion when the duty officer told Horsley this fact?

A. I was in the camp at the time.

Q. Were you present at the time this duty officer told Horsley?

A. I was in the next room.

Q. Did you hear this duty officer tell Horsley that he could remain in the next day?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. How did you know that the duty officer told Horsley that he could stay in the next day?

A. I heard it from Hoffer, who was a witness at the time when Horsley got beaten; and the way he found out was when Kimura, the interpreter, informed Kondo, I believe, that Horsley had personal permission the previous evening from the duty officer to remain in camp.

Q. So it was Kimura who told Hoffer the next day that the duty officer had excused Horsley the previous evening, is that correct?

A. Hoffer just overheard the conversation between Kimura and Kondo and Horsley and Sanders who were there at the scene of the beating.

Q. Hoffer heard of this incident on the day of the incident rather than when the duty officer spoke these words to Horsley, isn't that correct?

A. I don't know. The only thing I know is that Hoffer witnessed the incident and just from what I have testified previously, he told me what had happened.

Q. Did Horsley go on sick call the morning following or did he stay in his bunk?

A. I don't remember what he did.

Q. Then it could have been possible that the duty officer told Horsley to go on sick call the next morning to be excused, is that correct?

A. I have heard from men who were in the room the conversation was as follows: He asked Horsley how he felt, the duty officer asked Horsley how he felt, and Horsley said he felt pretty weak and he said 'Tomorrow you yasume.'

Q. What does 'yasume' mean?

A. It means stay in for rest, you don't go to work.

Q. Do you know who these fellows were that told you?
A. I don't remember their names but they were English Merchant Marine men.

Q. First, where did this striking take place?
A. As far as I remember, I think it took place outside the sick bay.

Q. Did the cook, Hoffer, tell you what he was doing near the sick bay at approximately 1000 hours that morning?

PROSECUTION: I believe that question has already been asked. Counsel for the defense asked him whether Hoffer told him "Yes, he was in the sick bay at the time."

DEFENSE: I don't recall it. That was not the question. The question is, "Did he tell the witness why he was in the sick bay that morning at 1000 hours?"

LAW MEMBER: The witness will answer the question.

A. The galley was only about 20 feet from the sick bay.

Q. And Hoffer saw that from the galley, is that correct?
A. He probably was on the outside of the galley which most of the cooks just sit around in between meals and when they are cutting vegetables. During hot weather they go outside of the galley and chop vegetables, because there was no noon meal cooked and they didn't start cooking the evening meal until about two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Did Hoffer tell you whether he was inside or outside the galley?
A. I didn't state whether he was inside or outside.

Q. From your experience and knowledge of the Japanese language and your association with the Japanese, what was the most insulting Japanese word that you could use to the Japanese people?
A. Just tell them they are "jete mai".

Q. What does that mean?
A. It means they are no good.

Q. How about the word "baka"?
A. That is the same as telling them, saying in American you are nuts or crazy. That's what that means.

Q. Does this word "baka" have any vicious connotation to the Japanese people?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question. How can this witness, an American prisoner of war, know whether it had a vicious connotation to the Japanese people? How could he possibly know?

LAW MEMBER: I think the question can be worded as to define the word "baka" as to its reaction on the personnel in the camp.

DEFENSE: Strike the question.

Q. Has it been your observation that the Japanese believe that diarrhea is a result of eating cold in the stomach?
A. Either that or drinking cold water.

Q. And isn't it true that you were under orders to sleep during the summer time with blankets over your stomach?
A. That was the order put out by Kondo.

Q. These orders could have originated from above, isn't that correct?
A. We didn't receive any written orders on it. It was just a verbal order that was given to Sanders.

Q. Can you answer the question whether or not it could have been received from above?

PROSECUTION: Sir, I object to this question and all questions like it on the ground that the answer obviously would have to be "yes". This witness couldn't know. Could they have been; certainly; how does he know? Anything could have been received.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission is able to take judicial cognizance of that.

DEFENSE: Sir, it might be within the witness's cognizance that the order could not have come down from above. If that is true, then we want this witness to so testify, but if he knows of no reason why it could not have come down from above, then I don't think it can hurt us.

PROSECUTION: How can this witness possibly know what comes down from above, so it could have happened. That "could" is so indefinite hanging up in the air, but how can he tell us?

LAW MEMBER: The defense will be given the full latitude. The question will be answered. The objection is not sustained.

A. The orders could have come down, but as there were no written orders I do not know where the source came from.

Q. You have testified that Kondo made visits to the barracks to see if the men had the blankets over their stomachs in the evening between midnight and 0100 hours. Now how many times a week did Kondo make these visits?
A. They were irregular; sometimes maybe he would come three or four nights running then you wouldn't see him for six; then he might come one or the next night and make steady visits about two nights again.

Q. You say then it was about 50 per cent of the time he came, or just about what percentage?
A. I'd say about 50 per cent.

Q. Now when you went down to the latrine this evening after the "baka" incident took place, just how long did you talk to Mackenzie about the incident?
A. I'd say we talked about two minutes on the incident.

Q. Did he tell you that a corporal of the guard was also present at the time?
A. He just mentioned Kondo's name at the time.

Q. Did you ever talk to Sergeant Hooker Vance about this incident?

A. The only talk I had with [redacted] is when I was asking him about it on the job and he said he wasn't the one that yelled "balm", but it came from his general direction and as a result he was one of those that was called down.

Q. Did he tell you whether or not a corporal of the guard was present on this occasion?
A. He didn't go into details on it. The only thing he told me was that he was just protesting saying that he wasn't the one that had said "balm", but that he had been called down from the deck on it. I mean by being called down to the deck that he was sleeping on the second bay.

Q. Did anybody ever tell you whether or not a corporal of the guard was present on this occasion?
A. I have heard that in just general conversation out at work talking about it.

Q. In these conversations isn't it true that it was said that this corporal of the guard struck some of those men?
A. I don't remember clearly on that part. The only thing I know is that they said Kondo came into the room and I believe when Sanders—I don't know if the corporal of the guard was in the room when Kondo first came in, but when Sanders came in later the corporal of the guard was there. That's the only thing I know about it.

Q. Did Chief Sanders tell you that?
A. No.

Q. Did Sergeant [redacted] say he was struck?
A. I know [redacted] was struck because in the conversation we had he was saying he had been a victim of circumstances, that he had been pulled down from his bay, but that he hadn't been the one that hollered the word "balm".

Q. Did he state whether or not he had been struck?

PROSECUTION: May I have that identified as to whom he stated that?

Q. Did Sergeant [redacted] state that he was struck?

PROSECUTION: To whom?

DEFENSE: During this conversation, the witness is talking about this conversation.

A. He didn't state to me that he was struck, but he was in the group that was pulled down from their bays. If he was in that group, he was struck.

Q. But he didn't tell you he was, did he?
A. MacKenzie is the one that told me about [redacted] being struck.

Q. Did these men go to work the next day?
A. Yes.

Q. Now on this morning that Kondo—

PRESIDENT: I suppose the defense, if they will before leaving Specification 3, to clear up the title of Vance, because he is alleged to be a private and the witness has called him by other titles.

Q. What rank was Vance?
A. He had a Chief Petty Officer.

Q. Did you ever speak to Vance about this incident?
A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever speak to any of the other men who are alleged in this Specification about this incident?
A. The only man I talked to personally was Rapk.

Q. Now on these evenings that Kondo came around and checked the prisoners of war to see that they were sleeping with their blankets over them, did Kondo attend sick call between 6:30 and 7:30 the next morning?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, Sergeant, wasn't it customary for the Japanese to rank both British and American merchant men, regardless of their rank in the merchant service, as privates?
A. In the Kobe Camp, yes.

Q. Now on this date that Luther went on sick call did you ask for powders, do you know whether or not these powders were available?
A. I don't know if they were available or not.

Q. Now in the evening were guards there walking around guarding the barracks at night?
A. Yes.

Q. And if the vicinity of the prisoner of war barracks, is that correct?
A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. Upon any occasions do you know whether or not the prisoners of war slept outside contrary to regulations?
A. During the summer and about the month of August and July when it was very hot inside the rooms due to the fact that we had these air raid curtains up and we couldn't get air into the room, several of the men would bring mattresses out and sleep outside.

Q. You stated that Smith went on sick call on a Monday, isn't that correct?
A. That's correct.

Q. Did he go on sick call on the previous day?
A. No, he got sick over late Sunday evening.

Q. His complaints at the time were cramps and that he had vomited, isn't that correct?
A. And he felt feverish and had cramps.

Q. Do you know whether or not Smith had a fever that morning when he was on sick call?
A. I don't know if he had a fever or not, but he looked sick and was doubling up while waiting for sick call and his face had a flushed appearance.

Q. Did Dr. Rothman recommend that he receive powders for his stomach while you were present in the dispensary?
A. Dr. Rothman, while I was in the dispensary, recommended that Smith stay in and Keefe overruled him and Dr. Rothman told Smith to wait a minute, and I went out and joined the work line up and Smith came out about five minutes later.

Q. Did Smith receive powders or medication for his stomach at that time?
A. I don't know if he received them or not.

Q. But he could have, isn't that correct?
A. That's correct.

Q. Now you said you thought that Smith had a 103 temperature when he came back in the evening. How do you know that?
A. There was a friend of mine in the same room that I stayed in, in the Army group, by the name of Bunny. He went down and visited him that evening in his room.

Q. Did Bunny tell you that his temperature had been?
A. Yes.

Q. What did he tell you it was?
A. He said his temperature was 103 and that is what Dr. Rothman recorded it as when he took it from Smith in his room there.

Q. Did you see Keefe strike Smith on this occasion?
A. I didn't see him strike him as I left the sick bay and I left the room there, and I think the purpose was that Dr. Rothman was going to arrange still further for him to stay in for the day.

Q. Now you testified that you remember one other occasion on which Smith went on sick call and that he received powders and was sent out to work, is that correct?
A. That's correct.

Q. Do you know whether or not on this occasion Smith tried to remain in from work or not?
A. Smith at this time was in pretty frail physical appearance, and the fact that he had this diarrhea again was wearing him down, so Dr. Rothman had recommended that he be allowed to stay in camp for a few days.

Q. Now on talking about the first occasion that you remembered that Smith went on sick call for recurrent diarrhea, is that the same one you speak of now?
A. Yes.

Q. Yesterday on direct examination you stated upon this occasion you don't know whether Smith tried to stay in or not?
A. Yes, sir, Dr. Rothman recommended for him to stay in.

Q. This is just for accuracy, Sergeant Ryan. Did you see him on both occasions or on one occasion, because you testified that on two occasions you remember Smith being on sick call?

A. Smith was on sick call quite often, and as far as remembering back there he was in one of the poor categories of health all the time. As far as remembering the exact incident, I do remember on one occasion I was there Dr. Wachman recommended that he stay in.

Q. Now was there an incident when Hess was suffering from beriberi and went on sick call to get any beriberi powders, that Dr. Wachman didn't request that Hess remain in from work?
A. I believe when these first started going on sick call was during this three week period that he just barely went there himself to receive powders for the beriberi complaint, because the job he had was out at the Japanese "gocio" and it was about the easiest job we had.

Q. Now on the times that you knew of that Hess went on sick call to get beriberi powders and complained of beriberi, do you know whether or not he always received them?
A. As far as I know he received them.

Q. Now while you were at the prisoner of war camp, did you ever learn where Serafin was born?
A. I never knew where he was born.

Q. He was an Italian steward aboard an ocean-going liner, is that correct?
A. Serafin lived in England a good many years and his family resided there, and I don't know what nationality he was classified on but he was on an English merchant vessel and he had been on this service a good many years.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution would like to state for the record at this time that its information from the State Department indicates that his status all this time and up to the time of his death was an Italian national.

Q. On what date did Serafin arrive in camp, do you know, Sergeant?
A. He arrived with the group that arrived before I did, and I believe their date of arrival is October 28, 1942.

Q. During this first year he worked as an officer's orderly, isn't that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Then for a period of nine months he was Chief Sanders' orderly, isn't that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. And then he went to paper work for a couple of months, working with the Indians, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. He stayed there until the paper job was finished because the Japanese were all out of paper, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Then this whole group was ordered out to work by Nasu, isn't that correct?

A. I don't know who ordered them out to work because I wasn't on the detail myself. The only thing I know is they started to go out to work on the various details.

Q. And then when Serafin did finally go out to work in the latter part of 1944, isn't it true that the work in which he was engaged at the steel mill did not demand much effort?

A. I never worked with Serafin while he was on the steel mill detail.

Q. Do you know what type of work he was engaged in?

A. In the steel mill, this particular steel mill where he worked at, most of the work was air hammers chipping out castings.

Q. Do you know what type of work Serafin did?

A. If he worked at the steel mill, he would work on an air hammer.

Q. When Serafin went on sick call complaining of these chest colds you speak of, did he receive medication for these chest colds?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Now, when Dennis Merritt says, in answer to a question put to him in his affidavit which is Prosecution's Exhibit 14, "Who was this Japanese doctor at Omuta Camp No. 17?", and he replied, "I do not know his name, but he was a lieutenant and senior medical officer that handled everything over to a guard named Kondo and backed him in everything he did. He had an interest in the sick men and he never ordered them or prescribed medicine for them", is he referring to Dr. Nonu?

A. There was about three medical lieutenants around camp, so he could refer to any of the three of them.

Q. When he says he was the lieutenant and senior medical officer, is that Nonu?

A. That would be Nonu.

DEFENSE COUNSEL: The defense counsel asked me whether I had further questions of the Commission please, we believe that we are through with our cross-examination, but we do not want to close at this time. We may have a question to ask after the recess.

The Commission then recessed until 1330 hours, at which time the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the sworn interpreters, and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

Cross-examination by the defense (cont'd):

Q. Sergeant, do you ever recall Chief Sanders telling you that he struck Kondo after the Knudsen incident?

A. The only conversation I had pertaining to this incident was with Hamer. I didn't have any with Sanders.

Q. Did Hamer tell you that Sanders struck Kondo?

A. Hamer stated that Sanders stopped Kondo from administering the beating any further.

Q. Bunny didn't say that Sanders struck him, did he?
A. He said he stopped him from beating Hudson any more than he did.

Q. Sergeant, I ask you again did Bunny state to you whether or not Hudson struck him?
A. No, he did not.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution has a few questions to ask and redirect.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Sergeant, you testified that when you read the record in this case, you read the report of the Hudson incident, is that correct?
A. That is correct.

Q. Did you know about this incident before you read about it?
A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did the report in any way refresh your mind as to the details of the incident?
A. I remember the Hudson incident very well as, I believe, most of the men do, due to the fact that they had seen Hudson being carried [illegible] to the latrine there on several occasions before this incident took place.

Q. Did you ever recall any times when Dr. Hoshuns wasn't present at sick call in the morning?
A. Dr. Hoshuns was present on any of the occasions that I went to sick call.

Q. The defense counsel asked you whether Bunny and Tucker stated that they were struck by Sanders because they did not go to work, and you answered "No", is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Why were they struck, Sergeant?

DEFENSE: I don't know the question, if the Court please. Counsel is standing with his back to an open window.

PROSECUTION: My question was why were they struck?

DEFENSE: If the [redacted] question stands, that question is objectionable on the basis it is asking for a conclusion of another man's mind. The defense counsel stands here and asks this witness "Isn't it a fact that Bunny and Tucker were struck because they didn't go to work?", and he said "No".

PROSECUTION: My question was why were they struck?

[illegible]

-29-

DEFENSE: In the direct examination the witness testified as follows: "I have seen men slapped for arguing about staying in after Dr. Kochman recommended that they stay in." Then the question was asked, "Do you know the names of any persons that were so slapped?" He said, "Yes, Bumgy and Tasker", that they were struck because of arguing with Kondo. That was objected to; the objection was overruled. Now, on the basis of the fact that this has been brought out on direct testimony, Counsel is without any right to bring up anything that has been brought out in direct testimony. This is not a review course. This is not a refresher course. This is anything that is new that is brought out by the defense counsel. Counsel may ask this witness and clear something up, not re-establish it. The witness testified that Bumgy and Tasker told him they had been arguing with Kondo and that Kondo had struck them because they wanted to stay in from work. Now those are the notes that I have on the cross examination.

PROSECUTION: I asked the question, "Isn't it a fact that Bumgy and Tasker were struck because they argued with Kondo about going to work?" The answer was "No". I am now asking why they were struck?

LAW MEMBER: Objection is overruled.

A. They were slapped for arguing to stay in from work. They didn't stay in but were just insisting that their condition—

DEFENSE: I want to object and ask that that answer be stricken on the grounds that it is a repetition of the direct examination.

LAW MEMBER: What was the question?

The question was read back.

DEFENSE: The answer, sir, I am asking that it be stricken because it is repetitious.

LAW MEMBER: Counsel for defense has plenty of repetition. The objection is overruled. Try not to ask any questions that are repetitious.

Q. Sergeant, counsel for the defense read to you from the affidavit of John N. Zimmer as follows—

PRESIDENT: What number exhibit?

PROSECUTION: Exhibit 13, I believe, sir.

Q. —and he read as follows: "I have seen Matsumura beat Kondo when there were too many men who stayed away from work because they were sick." And he asked you if you had ever seen that and you answered "No", is that correct?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, that is Prosecution Exhibit 12 and also he didn't ask him "if he had seen them" he asked him "if he had ever seen Matsumura strike Kondo", and his answer was "No."

LAW MEMBER: What is the question before the Commission? Is it Exhibit 12 or 13?

PROSECUTION: The meaning is precisely the same. Will you answer that please.

A. No I haven't.

Q. Correct me if I am wrong, I believe counsel asked you if you had ever heard of Matsuura beating Kondo, is that correct?
A. I had never heard that myself.

Q. Now reading from that affidavit the very next sentence of the same exhibit says as follows, "Kondo, inturn, would beat the men who stayed away fromthe job", have you ever seen that?

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, this witness has stated that he saw all of these records and all of these affidavits. We asked him about that to determine whether or not this man had seen it and to show whose the prosecution has violated a standing rule, we feel that the prosecution has; it is not the fault of this witness at all. We asked whether or not this witness, a prosecution witness, remembers this statement.

LAW MEMBER: Prosecution said that he had seen all the affidavits.

DEFENSE: Yes sir and we asked him whether or not Matsuura had ever beaten Kondo, prosecution has stood up and said that they were going to defend the defendant's rights and objected when we asked the question as whether or not Matsuura had beaten any one to show the course of conduct of the superior officers. They objected to that and then at the same time they went to turn around and by reestablishment ask this witness the same questions, ask him to affirm or contradict. We cannot bring up statements of a former witness, that is only within the rights of the defendant. It is only within the rights of cross examination. When we place our witness on the stand they can bring up anything they desire on cross examination but that is not direct examination. We were using prosecution exhibits, if the Commission please, we were not using defense exhibits. It is not the type of evidence that should be allowed. Simply asking whether or not the question was asked of this witness to have them affirm or deny that another witness which the counsel has already stood up by merely offering that affidavit by saying we vouch for the veracity of this witness. The defense has a right to attack the veracity of any witness, either by affidavit or whether he takes the stand.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I would just like to state something here. Counsel seems to be taking quite side of the fact that the witness has seen the affidavits. I don't quite understand that. Certainly if we are lawyers or prosecutors and when preparing any case we are going to show the witness anything we have. Of course he admitted he saw everything. I showed him everything, I would be remiss in my duties if I hadn't. This is in evidence now I stand up to a certain portion. I am reading the sentence immediately following which pertains to the defendant. I only read the sentence to his benefit.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, such is not the case. The reading of these affidavits are to confront the life witness with the statement made by another man, he asked him whether or not he saw a certain thing take place. The question that the prosecutor has asked this

The reporter read back the question.

A. Yes, as in my own case and in the case of Reynolds.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution has nothing further.

PRESIDENT: Recross examination?

DEFENSE: No further questions, sir.

PRESIDENT: The Commission has a few questions.

EXAMINATION BY THE COMMISSION

Questions by Members:

Q. Sergeant, was the prisoner of war who was sick in the stockade by the latrine and who was kicked by the shavers, was he named Thompson?
A. Yes.

Q. In what position was Thompson when he was kicked?
A. He was lying in a sort of a cringed position.

Q. Lying on the floor?
A. On the bay. This bay section was--you would have the floor here (indicating) and the bay section was kind of raised just like the stand here (indicating).

witness now as to what this affiant, Zimmer, has said under oath. this witness has already testified to that for himself on innumerable occasions. No purpose can be served by inquiring and the only purpose of putting these statements before a live witness is to see whether or not the affiant, who is not here available for cross examination is himself telling the truth. We don't deny the facts of the following sentence as the prosecutor seems to indicate because Ryan himself has testified to these facts, and Zimmer has. To use the words of another witness, which is actually what Zimmer is for the prosecution, in examining any other one of their own witnesses is entirely out of order.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I'm only asking for information of this witness.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission in former cases has found sworn statements and affidavits quite at variance with evidence given by live witness. The Commission desires to hear any evidence from the live witness whether it is contained in the affidavit or not. The objection is overruled. In one particular case the defense by the prosecution cum live witness showed that the affidavits of the prosecution were in error and they were allowed to inquire of the live witness.

DEFENSE: Sir, that was the idea of why these questions were asked of these affidavits and we do not say that we are out of order but he is out of order.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission is interested in comparing these affidavits with this live witness' testimony.

PRESIDENT: Read back the question.

Q. How was he dressed?
A. He had about the same amount of clothing that an American soldier wears in the fatigue outfit, just pants and jacket.

Q. He was not undressed?
A. No.

Q. Have you ever been present when the accused refused to provide necessary medicine or medical attention?
A. The time in my own case when I went in to get aspirin for migraine headache and was refused, and the other time when Bussy went in for the same reason and he was refused.

Q. Bussy had a headache?
A. Bussy's eyes were deteriorating all the time he was in camp. In fact today he is studying Braille up in Connecticut.

Q. And what kind of medicine did he want?
A. Some aspirins.

Q. And you were denied medicine such as aspirin tablets?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you never heard of any other occurrence?
A. Not that I know of.

PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions by any other member? There appear to be no further questions, the witness will be excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offer in evidence as Prosecution Exhibit No. 20, original statement signed by the accused, written in Japanese and signed by him in Japanese, with English translation by ATIS.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, I don't believe I am violating any confidence between counsel and myself to say that I had the opportunity last night to get this statement in Japanese to the defendant, there are certain things which the defendant said were omitted which were not corrupt at the time he signed it. We do not desire to object to this with the exception of being allowed to attack it when the defendant takes the stand, but not having an interpreter here which the prosecution is required to do under the rules in offering statements like this because of the fact that under any law, conversations through an interpreter are hearsay unless the interpreter is testifying. This statement is just a conversation the counsel for the prosecution held with the defendant and was taken down in English for the counsel for the prosecution through an interpreter. The questions were asked, the interpreter interpreting the questions the accused answered, the interpreter interpreting it from Japanese to English and counsel wrote down the answers. Thereafter I believe ATIS translated this particular document into Japanese and, if I understand correctly, this document in English is a translation of that document.

I believe perhaps the rule of best evidence that we should have the original document of the prosecutor because of that fact there may be some question as to the accuracy of it. We do not know whether in taking it down or whether it is in translation or in translation back, but the defendant will have it also when he takes the stand to explain certain parts of it. Therefore, we don't want to object at this time to it with the exception that the defense does desire a certificate from AFPE that this is a true and correct translation of that document, that this is a secondary document.

LAW MEMBER: Which document did the accused sign?

DEFENSE: The accused signed the copy in Japanese.

LAW MEMBER: Did he have time to read it?

DEFENSE: He did have time to read it and at the time he signed it he was told it meant the same thing but now says it contains about three discrepancies.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission understands your point and accepting the document they will allow you to correct interpretation or explain when the accused is on the stand as you see fit and we will weigh the evidence.

DEFENSE: There is one other point. We move this be accepted with a certificate from AFPE that this is correct translation.

PROSECUTION: Counsel has spoken at considerable length about this document. Might I say I furnished this document to the defense yesterday. The rules say that statements by the accused are not necessary to be furnished to the defense, we did this as a point of cooperation. If they are concerned about the accuracy of the statement, I am here. I took the statement. They can put me on the stand. There is no certificate from AFPE necessary.

DEFENSE: Wait a minute.

PROSECUTION: I'm speaking.

LAW MEMBER: Proceed. The defendant will be on the stand if he wants to deny anything. When the accused takes the stand he may attack any part of the statement he chooses.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, defense would like presented an Oral Bill of Discovery whereby the Court will require the prosecution to present in Court the original notes taken by Mr. Ruml on which the translation was made by AFPE into Japanese of the statements so that we can check them as we have a right to do, sir, the accuracy of the original translation. The only thing the Court is going to get is a translation of the conversation with the defendant through the interpreter as shown by the notes of Mr. Ruml and translated into Japanese and back into English. That is why we ask for a certificate from AFPE. If they don't have a certificate from AFPE then certainly the Court should require that the prosecution make it available to us so that we can check it ourself.

LAW MEMBER: Is this statement signed by the defendant?

DEFENSE: If the Court please, is that in issue?

LAW MEMBER: He said he is submitting a signed statement.

DEFENSE: Is that in Japan?

PROSECUTION: May I explain the procedure to the Court? My notes which were transcribed in English taken at the meeting are exactly as this English translation here. These same notes were translated into Japanese and then were translated back. I took the original notes and if the defense has any question of the translations, I will be willing to take the stand. If the defendant wishes to take the stand and explain anything about this he may do so.

DEFENSE: Yes but they require the defendant to take the stand. The defendant is not required to take the stand. All I want are the original notes. MMAP rules say that these statements may be taken without showing they are not voluntary. I am not saying that this is not voluntary at all.

PROSECUTION: May I at to also to the Commission that I do not know where the original notes are. The statement is here to be admitted in evidence, the offer is made by the prosecution.

LAW MEMBER: On the authority contained in directives from General Headquarters Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, Letter AG 000.5 (5 December 1945) LF Subject: Regulations Governing the Trials of Accused War Criminals, and Letter AG 000.5 (ED) Headquarters Eighth Army, 5 February 1946, Subject: Rules and Procedure, an Outline of Procedure for Trials of Accused War Criminals, the statement of the accused will be admitted in evidence.

DEFENSE: That has already been ruled on. I now ask for the Oral Bill of Discovery for the original notes of Mr. Ryal so I can check these against the translations.

LAW MEMBER: Has the prosecution produce the original notes?

PROSECUTION: Sir, I do not know where the original notes are. They are not in my possession at this time. I may have destroyed them when I got this book. I don't remember, this was done in May 1946. As the taker of these statements I am here. I have said before I will take the stand as to any interpretation of this statement.

DEFENSE: There is a ruling to be made by the Commission at this time.

LAW MEMBER: I am trying to think what you called that.

DEFENSE: I called that an Oral Bill of Discovery, sir, asking that the opposing party allow us to examine the records for the purpose of determining whether such evidence or records of documents is available; merely asking of the Court to ask the prosecution to make those records if in existence available and if not in existence state to the Court that they are not in existence.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I have stated three times now I would be glad to take the stand and testify that these notes, this translation is exact word for word of the original notes taken by me. What else does the Commission desire? Defense may cross examine; that is the best I have. I took them.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission will not require the prosecution to present an Oyez Bill of Discovery.

PROSECUTION: I request permission of the Commission at this time to read Prosecution Exhibit 20 just admitted in evidence.

Having been admitted in evidence, Prosecution Exhibit 20 was read to the Court by the Chief Prosecutor.

PRESIDENT: At this time the Commission will take a recess for ten minutes.

The Commission then took a recess until 1430 hours, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, the reporter and interpreters resumed their seats.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution offers in evidence as Exhibit No. 21, the original affidavit of Sergeant Marshall J. Applemiller. Prosecution would like to state to the Commission that the reason this was not offered previously is that this has just come into the hands of the prosecution since the adjournment of the case two and half months ago.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense makes a general objection to the whole affidavit on the grounds it is hearsay. That is the first ground, sir, and we ask for a ruling on it from the Commission.

LAW MEMBER: Objection overruled.

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, the defense offers an objection at this time to the entire affidavit because it contains matter therein as to the activities of Kenichi Kondo at the hospitals at Osaka, Japan and Kobe, Japan; and the defendant is not charged with any activities that took place at these two hospitals. The material contained therein is actually exposing the defendant of various activities with which he is not charged and which do not appear anywhere in the charges and specifications.

LAW MEMBER: The Commission will take due cognizance of that and will not hold against the accused any matters contained therein that are not contained in the charges and specifications. They will disregard that entirely.

DEFENSE: By that do you mean, sir, that you are not admitting the affidavit and disregarding it?

LAW MEMBER: No. Is that all the objection?

DEFENSE: If the Law Member will look that over and determine whether or not it is immaterial to the issue; the question is if the entire affidavit is irrelevant to the issues in this case, then the Court should strike the entire affidavit at this time rather than having it read and disregard it.

LAW MEMBER: Is that all the objections you have?

DEFENSE: Well, I would like a ruling on them, sir.

COURT: The objection is not sustained. The Commission will evaluate the evidence contained therein entirely in connection with the existing charges and specifications. If the matter is not pertinent it will be disregarded by the Commission.

DEFENSE: Well, sir, it amounts to letting in evidence with which the defendant is not charged, but I have some specific objections to various portions of the affidavit that I would like to point out to the Commission if the Commission is going to permit the affidavit to be read. I would like to point out that we in no way waive the general objection to the entire affidavit for the grounds we stated, hearsay, and also that the defendant is having evidence put in against him with which he is not charged. The specific objection I would like to call to the Court's attention is on Page 2 of the affidavit, Question No. 3, and ask the Commission to strike the words in the first line, "deaths of."

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will consent that the words as suggested by the defense counsel be stricken.

LAW MEMBER: They will be so stricken.

DEFENSE: Now the question will read, "Do you recall any details concerning R. M. 2/C Smith and R. M. 1/C Hess in February 1944, and the possible connection of Komichi Kondo, Japanese medical orderly." The question will make sense.

LAW MEMBER: All right.

DEFENSE: And also I would like to object to the answer to that question starting at Line 9.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will consent to striking the entire question and answer.

LAW MEMBER: The entire question and answer will be stricken.

DEFENSE: I would like to call attention to the Commission to Question No. 4 which pertains to beatings of two men at Kobe Hospital.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will consent to striking question and answer.

LAW MEMBER: They will be stricken.

DEFENSE: The defense ask to strike the fifth question due to the fact that it pertains to the deaths of various individuals at these hospitals.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution request that that question and answer remain for the following reasons; while it is true that Kondo is not charged with any death and the question starts out saying that he cannot say that he saw these incidents but he does go on and explains various things that happened.

DEFENSE: The defense feel that any reference to deaths permitted in the record at this time and any evidence at all is prejudicial to the defendant since there are no deaths charged to him in the specifications.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will consent to the striking of the word "deaths"

LAW MEMBER: How are you modifying it?

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will consent to the striking of the words, "as a contributing factor to the deaths of the patients in the hospital."

DEFENSE: So that the question will read, "Can you relate any incident whatsoever in which Kondo was involved?"

PROSECUTION: We will also consent to the striking of the first sentence of the answer.

LAW MEMBER: Read the question as modified.

DEFENSE: The question will now be, "Can you relate any incident whatsoever in which Kondo was involved in either of the hospitals?"

LAW MEMBER: Right.

DEFENSE: And the first sentence of the answer is deleted to that question.

PROSECUTION: Including the word "but" in the second sentence.

LAW MEMBER: It will be stricken.

DEFENSE: The defense request the Commission to rule on the striking of part of the answer in Answer 8, Line 8, of the material contained in the parenthesis beginning with the words, "apparently cursing him though most of us, including the victim, could not understand"; on the grounds that the witness himself admits his incompetency.

PROSECUTION: That is consented to by the prosecution.

LAW MEMBER: It will be stricken.

DEFENSE: And we object to the entire ninth question and answer on the grounds that it is incompetent and prejudicial to the defendant, and especially so is the last sentence because it is impossible to tell what is in the mind of another person.

LAW MEMBER: That request is overruled; the Commission will evaluate it for what it is worth.

DEFENSE: And the defense respectfully request the Commission to consider especially in this affidavit again that this entire affidavit pertains to the Stadium Hospital in Kobe, which is material outside the charges and specifications against the defendant.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution, sir, would like to strike out the third question and answer on the third page, third question and answer from the bottom on the grounds that it mentions Kobe which we are not interested in.

DEFENSE: The defense consents and on the first page also the defense would also like to strike this entire proceeding in the upper left-hand corner which starts out, "In the matter of the beatings inflicted upon American prisoners" etc., on the grounds it is prejudicial.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution consents.

LAW MEMBER: It will be stricken.

PROSECUTION: By consent with the defense and prosecution, in the upper lefthand corner of the page which was stricken out, the following words will not be stricken out, "In the matter of Kunihi Kondo, Japanese medical orderly."

DEFENSE: Sir, I was going to ask if the prosecution would agree or stipulate with the defense that these were activities that were committed in the Shoshun Hospital.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will agree that these acts were committed at the Shoshun Hospital which the prosecution contends was the Zentsuji Hospital which is one mile from the camp.

LAW MEMBER: What specification does that come under?

PROSECUTION: Specification 10. Sergeant Tyak testified, I believe, on direct examination that the Zentsuji Hospital was one mile from the camp. I will stipulate that the acts alleged to have been committed by the defendant were committed at the Shoshun Hospital, All other acts, as stipulated, are not coming under the charges.

Sir, the prosecution rests.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense would like to make a brief statement before it makes its opening statement. The defense would like to make a few brief statements again before we proceed with our case in this specification No. 2 and also a motion for a finding of Not Guilty, on the ground that the Commission does not have jurisdiction to try this case.

It is well known that Italy was at war with the Allied Powers. It never was fully accepted as a member of the Allied Powers at any time, and as yet has not been so accepted. It is an enemy nation and this man, as the prosecution has stated, A. E. Principio was considered an Italian and he was captured and brought to this camp sometime in November 1943. At that time Italy and United States were at war, they remained at war and are still, technically, at war until the conclusion of the signing of the peace treaty, which has not yet been written up in its final form.

Italy accepted the surrender terms of the Allied Powers and became a country which was half free. Its half free to stay got a status of co-belligerency and declared war on the Germans on the 13th of October, 1943. Now, it is the feeling of the defense that Italy never officially declared war on Japan which was recognized. It is true in a Memorandum published by the prosecution they have stated that Italy unofficially declared war on Japan but it is dated one month before the entire conflict ended, on the 15th of July, 1945.

Now under the rules as laid down by the Supreme Commander Allied Powers, it is felt that the Commissions have not been given the powers to try acts committed by Italians against enemy nationals and we contend that G. B. Serafin, during the entire time he was at the camp, was an enemy national, and because this specification has been referred to this Commission by SCAP does not, by its mere reference to this Commission, give or lend any weight to the fact that this Commission has the power to or the jurisdiction to consider this case. We respectfully submit to the Commission that it should consider this defense's motion very seriously and make a finding of ~~dismissal~~ on its behalf or on this motion for at this time, as we say, Serafin was an enemy national of the United States and all its Allied Powers.

We have one other motion to make very briefly, sir, and that is to Specification 5, to this incident which is called the "balm" incident and we make this, sir, at this time on the grounds that it is not a war crime. We look to the rules and see the type of crimes which are stated to be war crimes and the type of offenses over which Commissions have jurisdiction. We do not find any place where the differences, or opinion, or mere calling in which some persons may have been struck because of a personal fight between one person calling another a "fool" is a war crime. On the facts as brought out in this case thus far, we have nothing which would indicate that it could be considered as a war crime. There is no abusive treatment and the mere fact that this act happened between one man or between people who were ~~counting~~ at the time a nation is at war does not make it a war crime.

We submit that the incident could have happened at any time between any two people. When a man is making his rounds at night carrying out his duties to check and see that blankets cover the men's shoulders, and is looking out for their welfare in the wee hours of the morning, it is pretty disconcerting to have some one wake up and call you a "baker", "fool" and we submit that there was no atrocity committed or gross mistreatment on the part of the defendant. It was nothing but a personal matter which could arise in the barracks between two American soldiers and we submit that surely this is an incident on which the Commission can rule at this time without forcing us to move further. We respectfully request the Commission to so rule because if any one of these five men, who are said or alleged to have been struck in this affidavit, thought enough of this striking or this incident which has been so well played up in this Court, was anything more than a personal fight, they certainly would have taken the trouble to write affidavits in support of this specification. So, we respectfully request the Commission to make a finding of not guilty on the motion of the defense at this time on Specification 5.

PROSECUTION: Sir, as to the first motion of the defense counsel I shall not answer because I feel that was argued, at considerable length, between Lt. Weik and myself some two and half months ago. It was referred to the Commission and I'll stand now on the Commission's rule which it made at that time when it overruled the defense.

As to Specification 5, the "baka" incident, I don't doubt that Kaniehi Kondo was quite discomcerted when he went around on his appointed rounds and found that the men didn't have their blankets around them, but it must have been quite disconcerting to the American personnel who were trying to sleep to be awaken at that hour of the morning and it must have been quite disconcerting to have five men beaten up by the accused. It was testified to by Chief Sanders and it was testified to by Sergeant Ryan, but what more convincing proof can the Commission want than the statement by the accused himself which is before this Court, and in which he admits the "baka" incident and in which he admits he hit one man whose name is not mentioned, therefore, I submit there is more than enough evidence before this Commission; and, if you will recall, just before we adjourned the motion was made to strike and refused. In between that time and now we have the additional evidence of Sergeant Ryan and the statement of the accused, more evidence than they had at that time when it ruled, and I therefore rely on that rule on which the motion was denied.

DEFENSE: Sir, on Specification 5, all evidence brought before this Court by witnesses for the prosecution has been of a hearsay nature. That has been pointed out to the Commission and I also note that the prosecutor stated Kaniehi Kondo said he had hit him, hit some man but that is not denied. That is not what the defense is basing its motion on. The defense is basing its motion on the fact that this was not atrocious conduct, this was not a war crime, this was something that arose up between two people, and one man thought he was doing his duty as he had been ordered and he did it in the hours of the morning when he wasn't required to be working, and some man said "baka" and was struck.

Now we take into consideration all that the prosecution has said as to the statement made by Kondo and stated that the rest of the incident was entirely hearsay. Sanders arrived at the barracks after the incident was over and we had testimony to that, but the main basis of this motion is that it is not a war crime and we think it isn't worthy of consideration and should be ruled upon at this time.

The Commission then after having deliberated upon the motion in closed session, announced as follows:

LAW MEMBER: With respect to the motion on Specification 3, the motion is denied. With respect to motion on Specification 5, the motion is denied.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense would like to make a brief opening statement as to what it proposes to show in this case. We will show that Kaniehi Kondo was a private in the Japanese Army. He was a man who had nothing but the barest elementary school education, he entered the Army and was sent to become a medical orderly. During the course of his career in the Japanese Army, Kaniehi Kondo never rose above the rank of a private, a superior private, he was sent to a camp, the Osaka Main Camp, and there administered to the needs of approximately 550 prisoners of war. At this camp was a colonel, Colonel Hirata, who was in charge of the entire Osaka Camp area.

In the medical section there was a senior medical officer known as First Lieutenant Nosu. Lt. Nosu had three other assistants at the main camp. They were Lt. [illegible], Lt. [illegible] and Lt. [illegible] Yoh Kondo, the defense will show, was given the job of administering to the needs of the 550 men who were at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp. There he attended sick calls which were conducted by Lt. Hashman, an American prisoner of war, and he was a Japanese personnel who was present from June 1943 until he left there in May of 1945.

During this time the defense will show in its case that Kondo had great pressure brought to bear on him by his superiors, and specifically by Doctor Nosu. Now we will show that Doctor Nosu was an unstable individual, very erratic, and we will produce evidence to show that he is now in a hospital with some degree of mental unbalance and will have certificate from the doctor to attest to that. We will show that this was a type of man under whom Koniehi Kondo served while he was a medical orderly there at the camp. Kondo himself will be able to give a history or account of his activities while he was at the camp and give the Court a frank opinion and state the facts as to what went on at this sick call which seem to be the primary source of the trouble or motivating factor behind the case brought against him.

On the first three specifications we will have a general type of defense as we will to the general Specification 18 and will show that a considerable amount of pressure was brought to bear on Kondo to get these people out to work and we will endeavor to show who was responsible for this. We will be supported in this by various former members of the camp staff, most of whom are the former medical personnel in one capacity or other and knew Kondo quite well. Unfortunately there is one Doctor who was there longer than anyone else. We have not been able to get him to come to testify before the Commission because he is ill in the hospital with some infection in his lungs but we do have a stipulation as to what he would say if he were here in Court. We will have another medical doctor who was there but he was not there for a considerable period of time; it was mostly in the latter part of 1944 and early 1945. We will have a medical sergeant, a medical corporal, another superior private, who will testify in this case.

Now as to Specification 3; Kondo does remember the man Serafin. He does not remember Hess or Smith by names nor do the specifications set forth by the prosecution case recall anything to him about these individuals, and he will testify as to what he knows about Serafin and Serafin's case.

As to Specification 4, which was a slapping ascribed to Kondo, Kondo does not recall the name of this individual or the incident.

Specification 5, which is known as the "baka" incident, Kondo himself will testify as to the circumstances surrounding the striking on this occasion and it will be substantially the same as in the confession before this Court except for some additional details.

The Sixth Specification, involving Kettles will be denied by Kondo on the grounds that he cannot recall such an incident taking place.

Though he knew both Doherty and Knudson the men set forth in specifications7 and 9, and as these specifications state that these men were beaten with a leather slipper, Kondo will deny these specifications.

Specification 8, the "Hanley" incident, Kondo will admit striking this person and he will give his reasons.

Now as to Specification 10, the general specification, the testimony which will be brought out by the majority of our first four witnesses is a general defense. They were medical people who will speak to set forth the case for Kenichi Kondo and the reasons which motivated his actions.

Now, due to the introduction today of Prosecution Exhibit 21, the affidavit of Marshall J. Appenseller, we are forced to call additional witnesses. These two witnesses will testify that Kondo never was at any time at Ichioka Hospital stationed there. Both these men will testify that they were at Ichioka Hospital during the period stated in Sergeant Appenseller's affidavit and they will state under oath that Kondo was not in Ichioka Hospital.

Now as to Specification 11. That is the only specification that alleges any acts that took place outside of Osaka area but you must always keep in mind, Commission, that this Oyama Camp was within the Osaka Main District and, therefore, the guiding people behind the handling of prisoners of war within the Oyama Prisoner of War Camp would be superior in their various capacities in the Osaka Main Camp, namely Colonel Ikuta and Lt. Nosu as medical officers. We will have witnesses here to testify that Kondo, while he was at Oyama, performed his duties in an excellent manner with no complaints to the person in charge of that camp, and also we will show by testimony of the officer who had access to Kondo's record, Kondo's officer, that Kondo was considered a very fine medical orderly, especially when one considers he was a superior private and that he was considered to be very efficient by the officer at the Osaka Main Camp.

These are the facts which the defense proposes to set out in this case before this Commission.

Now, if the Commission please, it is almost time to adjourn. We have witnesses here to be called but it would greatly assist in not breaking the continuity if we adjourn now.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will adjourn to reconvene at 0900, the 26 of October 1946.

The Commission then, at 1550, 25 October 1946, adjourned to meet at 0900, 26 October 1946.

A. Medical Officer Noon.

Q. Now, were there any other occasions on which Kondo came down to request your services at the camp to assist in the diagnosis of the prisoners of war that you weren't sent to this Chihko dispensary?

PROSECUTION: May it please the Court, I want to object to that question because I think it is definitely leading.

DEFENSE: Let's strike the question.

Q. Were there any other occasions when Kondo came down to the dispensary to request your services?
A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?
A. Five or six times.

Q. And of whom did he make these requests?
A. Medical Officer Noon.

Q. And do you know the reason why you weren't sent on these occasions?
A. They didn't come to me for any assistance. They went to Noon, who in turn came to me.

Q. Now, just what was the procedure that it was necessary for Kondo to go through if he was to get your services at the dispensary on any given occasion?

A. There is no reason for them to come to me for assistance. They make this request to the attending medical officer who in turn orders me to go.

Q. Would you be able to visit this dispensary on your own volition, or on request by Kondo himself?
A. No, I cannot go.

Q. Is it correct then, the understanding you want the Commission to have, that you had to get the order of Nosu before you could proceed to the Chikko dispensary?
A. That is true.

Q. While you were at the Osaka Main Camp did you ever have the detail, the detail as duty officer?
A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many times?
A. Once on the 7th or the 8th.

Q. Do you mean once every 7 or 8 days?
A. Once every 7 or 8 days.

Q. Now, as duty officer did you have the authority to excuse a prisoner of war from work?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I'm going to object to that question on the grounds it is irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial as far as this case is concerned.

LAW MEMBER: Objection overruled.

A. No.

Q. In your associations with Lt. Nosu, your superior officer, just what sort of individual and superior officer did you find him to be?
A. He was very strict and gave orders and was rank conscious.

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings of medical personnel held by Nosu?
A. There were no meetings
Q. That you attended?
A. No.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Doctor, how many years did you attend the Tokyo Medical College?
A. four years.

Q. And in Japan does a doctor have to serve an internship after medical college before he practices medicine?
A. Yes.

Q. Prior to entering medical college, what kind of an educational background must you have?
A. Middle school education.

Q. Now, Doctor, did you know Dr. Hochman?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you, during the time you knew Dr. Hashimoto ever discuss the treatment of diseases in these prisoners of war camps?

PRESIDENT: Treatment of what?

PROSECUTION: Illnesses and diseases.

A. With Hashimoto?

Q. Yes.
A. No.

Q. Would you know Dr. Hashimoto well enough to testify whether or not in your opinion he was a competent doctor?
A. Yes, he was quite competent as a medical officer.

Q. Now, what were Dr. Hashimoto's duties at this prison camp?
A. Immunization and taking care of patient supplies.

Q. Now, Hester, on direct examination you testified that the first time you went to the prison camp, Mr. Kondo had asked Mr. Hoan to send you there, is that true?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, when you arrived at the prison camp, did you ask Mr. Kondo why he wanted you there?
A. I did not ask him.

Q. But you did examine I think you said three prisoners and found they were suffering from hypochlorite?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to Dr. Hashimoto when you arrived at the prison camp to find out whether or not he had examined them?
A. No, I didn't ask them.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Kondo as to why he didn't allow Dr. Hashimoto to examine them instead of sending for you to examine them?

DEFENSE: I object on the ground there has been no testimony at any time that Dr. Hashimoto did not examine them. This was not brought to check on Dr. Hashimoto's diagnosis.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

Q. Did you talk to Dr. Hashimoto about these men's ailments?
A. About the results of the diagnosis?

Q. [illegible]
A. Yes.

Q. Did Dr. Hashimoto tell you that Kondo had allowed him to examine the men prior to your coming?
A. I do not know.

Q. Doctor, will you tell us how many methods you used to determine whether or not a patient is suffering from dysentery?

DEFENSE: Just a minute. Defense objects on the grounds that there has been no testimony presented by this witness that the prisoners of war he examined were suffering from dysentery at this camp.

LAW MEMBER: I think when he testified he said he examined hospitals cases.

PROSECUTION: Yes, but here is a doctor who is a medical expert.

LAW MEMBER: I think you have to stick to the things he testified he examined. Do you wish to reword your question or will I have to sustain my ruling?

PROSECUTION: There has been definite testimony in this case that the accused would send the men out to work.

LAW MEMBER: We understand that. Now what about the witness?

PROSECUTION: I still feel that he, being a doctor, should be allowed to tell the different methods used by the profession.

LAW MEMBER: You didn't word your question that way.

PROSECUTION: Will you read the question?

The reporter read back the question.

LAW MEMBER: Not suffering to a prisoner of war?

PROSECUTION: No.

LAW MEMBER: Make that clear in your question.

Q. Doctor, how many methods do you use or would you use in examining prisoners of war or other patients in order to determine whether they are suffering from dysentery?

DEFENSE: I permit the question on these grounds. The testimony that had been brought out by any examination of the prosecution that there had been dysentery in the camp has been a testimony of non-expert witnesses and men who said they had dysentery.

LAW MEMBER: There is no objection to this question, so the objection is not sustained.

DEFENSE: Yes, but we want the Commission to keep that in mind.

A. Microscopic examination, bacillary examination, stool tests, and from the general conditions of the patient's body.

Q. In other words, Doctor, would you say that a man might be suffering from dysentery although he didn't pass blood?

A. I cannot tell.

Q. Do you use the four methods you have outlined before you definitely determine a man is suffering from diarrhea?

DEFENSE: He examined him on dysentery, let's stick to dysentery.

PROSECUTION: All right.

A. Yes.

Q. Would you say, Doctor, a prisoner of war or a patient who had been relieving himself 15 to 20 times a day was suffering from dysentery?

DEFENSE: That question put by the prosecutor is not one of the four methods outlined by the doctor as to the method by which he determined dysentery.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained. The Commission will evaluate the evidence for what it's worth.

A. It may not only be dysentery, it could be intestinal catarrh, but we suspect dysentery.

Q. Doctor, were you familiar with the general health conditions of the prisoners of war at Omuta Main Camp?

DEFENSE: Just for clarity I think you ought to stick to Chilton, because he confused the details.

Q. Are you familiar with the general health conditions, Doctor?
A. Yes.

Q. And was that good or bad?
A. Since I came into the camp I believe the general condition was good.

Q. Now, Doctor, how many methods did you use in determining whether or not a prisoner of war was suffering from malaria or fevers of any kind?
A. I didn't see any malaria.

Q. Well, could you, a doctor, having been graduated from one of the medical colleges and practiced your profession for from 12 to 14 years, can you place your hand on a man's forehead and tell whether he is suffering from malaria or fever?

DEFENSE: I object to the ambiguity of the question. "Fever or malaria"; if it is confined to fever the question wouldn't be objectionable.

PROSECUTION: I agree with you.

A. I cannot tell.

LAW MEMBER: Is that translated correctly, "I cannot tell." Read the question again and get a better answer from him.

The question was repeated to the witness by the interpreter.

A. Yes, it can be determined.

PRESIDENT: Yes, what?

Q. You mean by that answer, Doctor, that your being a medical man and experienced, you can tell that, is that correct?
A. It can be determined whether a man has a fever or not by that method.

Q. Doctor, on these other two occasions where you went to the camp to examine prisoners, who sent for you?
A. I went on the orders of Lt. Nosu.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether or not Kondo had asked Dr. Nosu to send you out to the camp?
A. Kondo requested this through Nosu.

Q. Do you mean on all of the occasions when you went to the hospital, Kondo had requested through Nosu that you come?
A. That is true. Once when Nosu was not there, he came to me and asked.

Q. Now, Doctor, on these three occasions when you were called to the hospital, did you examine all of the prisoners or did you just examine the ones that Kondo asked you to examine?
A. Just the ones I was requested to examine.

Q. By whom, the request?
A. Kondo.

Q. Now, on both of these three occasions before you examined any one of those prisoners, did you discuss that prisoner's condition with Dr. Hoshuan?
A. Yes.

Q. Did Dr. Hoshuan tell you that he had made a diagnosis in those cases?
A. I did not hear this from Hoshuan.

PRESIDENT: That does not answer the question. Read the question in English and then get it from him in Japanese.

The reporter read back the question and the question was interpreted to the witness.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did Kondo tell you that Dr. Hoshuan had made a diagnosis in these cases?
A. Yes.

Q. Did Kondo say anything to you as to why he didn't rely on the diagnosis of Dr. Hoshuan?
A. No, he did not.

Q. Do you know what medical experience Kondo had?
A. He has the knowledge of a medical orderly.

Q. Would you say that Dr. Hoshuan was a competent doctor, in your opinion, a truthful man?
A. Yes, he was.

Q. You don't know what went on at sick call on any other occasions do you, Doctor, that is of your own knowledge?

PRESIDENT: When?

PROSECUTION: On any other occasion.

PRESIDENT: When?

PROSECUTION: During the three times that he was at camp.

A. Yes, I know.

PRESIDENT: Does he know, or does he mean yes?

INTERPRETER: He knows.

PRESIDENT: Have him make a complete statement instead of just saying "yes".

A. I do not know.

PRESIDENT: See. Let's be careful, interpreter.

INTERPRETER: Sir, he answered it one way, then changed it.

Q. Mr. Kondo was a private in the Japanese Army, is that right?
A. That is correct.

Q. And never received any promotion that you know of because of his ability as a medical man, did he?

DEFENSE: That question is strictly out of order.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

PROSECUTION: That is all.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the defense:

Q. Doctor, on the three occasions that you visited the Chikko dispensary, did Dr. Kaelman make any statements to you as to Kondo's behavior on sick call?
A. No, he did not.

Q. Now, Doctor, as one professional man giving an opinion about another, just what would you, Doctor, think of Dr. Mosu's ability as a medical officer?

PROSECUTION: I think that is an improper question.

LAW MEMBER: Are you objecting?

PROSECUTION: Yes.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

Q. Dr. Amae, do you have any idea why you were the person who did clerical work in the main office, while a medical orderly, Kaniehi Kondo, performed the medical treatment on prisoners of war?
A. I have no idea.

Q. Now, while Kondo was at the Chikko Main Camp who was his superior officer, not in the medical line; who was the commanding officer in the camp?
A. Second Lieutenant Matsumura.

Q. Who was the commandant of the entire Omuta Camp then?

PROSECUTION: May it please the Court, this is redirect examination and my understanding of redirect examination is—

DEFENSE: This is the last question.

PROSECUTION: I withdraw my objection.

A. Col. Marsh.

DEFENSE: Sir, the reason I wanted to ask this question is that there is another Dr. Marsh who I spoke of yesterday we desire to have testify. Now, we prepared a chart and wanted to give the overall picture of what the status was, [illegible], but then with his first and [illegible], U.S.N., was very vital

LAW MEMBER: Ask him directly.

Q. What was Dr. Marsh's status in the prisoner of war camp?
A. He was next to the ranking medical officer.

DEFENSE: Sir, the reason for that question was because we are going to get that before the Court by agreement with the prosecution, by way of preparing a chart of the medical setup there. Now, I wanted to get down on the record just exactly what people were present in the camp, who the commandants were, and who the medical people who this man knew were.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Doctor, I think you just testified this Dr. Hochman never made any complaints to you about Kondo, is that true?
A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And you also testified in answer to one of my questions that you consider Dr. Hochman a responsible and truthful man?

DEFENSE: That is already on the record.

PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw it.

Q. Are you familiar with the affidavit or statement that Dr. Hochman made about Mr. Kondo?
A. No.

PROSECUTION: Let me read the statements.

DEFENSE: From which exhibit?

PROSECUTION: Exhibit No. 9. Now, let me read you the statement Dr. Hochman made.

DEFENSE: One of the statements that Dr. Hochman made.

PROSECUTION: Now, I'm cross examining the witness.

Q. Let me read this answer to you: "Q. Can you describe the medical orderly mentioned in Part B of your report?"

LAW MEMBER: Does he understand English?

PROSECUTION: Maybe he does not.

LAW MEMBER: Don't give it to him all at once.

Q. "Q. Can you describe the medical orderly mentioned in Part B of your report?

"A. In my camp we had a three-star private named Kanda. He kept the books at sick call and made decisions that should have been made by a doctor, and often overrode my decisions. He hit sick POWs over the head with books, slapped their faces, hit them with his fists and kicked them. He was about 5' 9", 145 lbs., age 33, wore very thick horn-rimmed glasses because he was nearsighted. His home town was Nagoya."

Now, knowing Dr. Hoshuma and considering him and his reputation for competency and truthfulness, would you say that statement was true or false?

A. I do not know.

DEFENSE: Sir, before we take a recess, does the Commission have any questions of this witness?

PRESIDENT: No, we have not.

DEFENSE: Then, if it please the Commission, this man is a doctor and has been here quite awhile. May he be excused?

PRESIDENT: I have no more questions.

PROSECUTION: We have no further questions.

PRESIDENT: The witness is excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will take a 10-minute recess.

The Commission then recessed until 1045 hours, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, the interpreters, and the reporter resumed their seats.

Major Gordon K. Philips, chief defense counsel, was also present.

DEFENSE: Defense calls as its next witness Kiyomi Kobayashi.

Kiyomi Kobayashi, a witness for the defense, was sworn and testified through the interpreters as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the defense:

Q. State your name?

A. Kiyomi Kobayashi.

Q. How old are you?
A. 37.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Hyogo Ken, Taka Gun, Kireda Shi, Tako 720.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Police officer.

Q. How many years education did you have?
A. Higher primary school.

Q. Are you married or single?
A. I am married.

Q. Any children?
A. One.

Q. Were you in the Imperial Japanese Army?
A. Yes.

Q. During what period did you serve in the Imperial Japanese Army?
A. The first time I was in from 1 September, 1941 to November 30 of the same year at the Himeji Army Hospital. My second period was from June 30 to December 30 at a field hospital, and my third term was from October, 1943, to the end of the war.

Q. Now, did you ever serve at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp?
A. Yes.

Q. And during what dates did you serve there?
A. From August, 1943 up until April, 1945.

Q. Do you know the accused, Kenichi Kondo?
A. I do.

Q. Did you know him while you served at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp?
A. Yes.

Q. What was his rank while he was there?
A. Medical private first class, medical superior private.

Q. What were his duties?
A. He was a chief medical orderly of the Ohikke Prisoner of War Camp.

Q. And was that a camp within the Osaka Main Prisoner of War Camp?
A. Yes.

Q. What were your duties while at this camp?
A. I was MDO in charge of the medical supplies of the entire Osaka Prisoner of War Camp.

Q. Were all the medical supplies for the entire Osaka Camp area stored at the Osaka Main Camp?
A. That is correct.

Q. And just what was the procedure by which you distributed these medical supplies to the sub-camps?

PROSECUTION: I have no objection to this line of questioning, except I feel that all questions so far as the distribution of supplies should relate only to the Osaka Camp. What was distributed to other camps I think is immaterial.

DEFENSE: We will show that there has been a few statements made in the record by Chief Sanders that left the impression that there were a lot of supplies there. I want to show by this question that Chikko was only a small camp and they received an allotment each month, and he did the best he could with it.

PROSECUTION: Sir, the Commission can draw its own inference as to the number of supplies.

PRESIDENT: The Commission wishes to have the entire picture of the supplies and you can proceed with the question.

DEFENSE: Please read back the question.

The question was read back by the reporter and translated to the witness by the interpreters.

A. We received medical supplies at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp from once to twice a month, and the officer in charge or the person in charge would distribute them according to Dr. Nosu's orders.

Q. And how often did you make this allotment of medical supplies to the Sub-Camps?
A. We used to distribute them once a month, but after the air raids began we started to distribute them once every two months.

Q. And in this manner did the Chikko Camp draw its supplies?
A. That is correct.

Q. And if the medical orderly at the Chikko Camp, who was Kondo in this case, wished to procure any extra allotment of medical supplies during any given month, just what procedure would he have to attempt?
A. Do you mean in excess of--

Q. That's right. In excess of the allotted supplies.
A. In these cases they would, through their MCOs, request emergency supplies.

Q. Who was the senior medical officer in the Osaka Main Camp?
A. Medical First Lieutenant Shoichi Nosu.

Q. And was he the senior medical officer all the time you were at the Main Camp?
A. That is correct.

Q. What was your association with Lt. Nosu; what was your relationship with Lt. Nosu?
A. He was my superior officer.

Q. And as a superior officer, just what sort of a man did you find him to be?

PROSECUTION: I object to the question, sir. It is too indefinite as to what.

DEFENSE: As a superior officer.

PROSECUTION: In so far as the prosecution is concerned, they feel the question is immaterial to the issue. It makes no difference what type of man this man thought Dr. Kase to be.

DEFENSE: Well, we'll ask him from his knowledge during the approximately two years he spent at the Osaka Main Camp, what would be say was the general opinion in the Osaka Main Camp to Dr. Kase as a medical officer.

PROSECUTION: I still object on the grounds this man is not qualified to testify as to the competency of Dr. Kase.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained. The Court will evaluate whatever opinion he has for what it is worth.

A. He was very strict and very rank conscious, and treated his subordinates according to their ranks.

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings of medical personnel held by Dr. Kase?
A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many times?
A. He assembled the men every morning except the times he was not there. He assembled them at roll call time.

Q. Did you ever see Kondo in attendance at any of these meetings?
A. Yes.

Q. And what did Dr. Kase say at any of these meetings in regard to any instructions he would give to the medical personnel?
A. He said, "I'm the ranking officer here and my orders must be obeyed to the letter, and since I have the complete responsibility here you will all obey my orders."

Q. While you were at this prisoner of war camp, did you ever see Kase speak to Kondo?
A. Yes, I have seen him.

Q. Were you present during these conversations?
A. I believe I saw them about two or three times.

Q. And where did these conversations take place?
A. In the office of the Main Camp.

Q. Now, what was said on these occasions?
A. I believe I saw Kase give instructions to this effect to Kondo, especially when there were too many patients. He said, "There are too many patients these days and you will have to raise the health standards of the camp." I saw him speak to Kondo several times and to Kondo and Hinohara several times.

Q. Do you know whether or not Kondo ever received any commendations while he was at the camp?

PROSECUTION: I want to object to that question because it is very indefinite. Did he receive any commendations from whom?

DEFENSE: From any of his superiors, if that is what you want.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained.

A. Yes, he received some commendations.

Q. Can you give the reason why these were given, if you know?
A. He received these commendations about three times, and he received the commendation twice for raising the health standards of the prisoners of war there. Also for diligently working in his capacity as medical orderly, and for that he received a furlough, and on the third time he received the commendation was in 1944. It was during a flood. There was some carbide stored in the warehouse and when it was on the verge of exploding, he did some work to prevent the explosion, and he also saved some medical supplies there, removed them to a safe place. For this he received the commendation from the Army commander.

Q. What was this Army commander's name?
A. I have forgotten.

Q. Was that Maeda's superior?
A. Yes.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

PRESIDENT: What was that?

DEFENSE: Col. Maeda's superior gave that commendation.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Mr. Kobayashi, are you at present confined at Sugamo Prison?
A. No, I am not.

PRESIDENT: I didn't hear that question.

PROSECUTION: I asked him if he was confined to Sugamo Prison and he said "No", Sir.

Q. Now you stated Kenichi Kondo received three commendations from the Japanese. Did he receive any commendations from the American POWs?

DEFENSE: For obvious reasons that question is highly prejudicial.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained. Rephrase the question, but don't use the word "commendation".

PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw that question and rephrase it.

Q. You stated that Kenichi Kondo received three commendations from the Japanese commander. Do you know whether or not he received any type of praise from the American prisoners of war?

DEFENSE: I believe that any question along this line is out of order. It is highly prejudicial.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained. You may proceed.

A. I do not know.

Q. When did Kondo get his commendation for improving the health conditions of the camp?
A. I don't remember the exact date.

Q. Approximately when?
A. Once sometime in 1944, and sometime in February of 1945.

Q. Now, when did you overhear the conversation between Kondo and Dr. Nosu in which Dr. Nosu stated there were too many patients, he would have to raise the health standard?
A. I don't remember the date exactly.

Q. Approximately when?
A. I believe it was around February or March of 1944.

Q. Was that the first conversation?
A. I do not know in detail.

Q. When was the last conversation you ever heard between Kondo and Nosu?
A. Towards the end of 1944.

Q. Now, you stated that towards the end of 1944 or in February of 1945, Kondo received a commendation from the Japanese authorities for improving and raising the health conditions of the camp. Can you explain why if he got that at that time, Dr. Nosu at the end of 1944 would complain to Kondo in the conversation to which you have just testified that there were too many patients, "You will have to raise the health standards of the camp"?

DEFENSE: Obviously, sir, since this man is a medical sergeant, he testified he was not the man who gave the commendation, he obviously is not competent and cannot testify as to why he received them. He testified he received them and the reason why he understood it was received, but what motivated the giving of them the man cannot testify to.

PROSECUTION: We'll withdraw the question.

Q. You don't know anything about Kenichi Kondo's activities at sick call, is that correct?
A. I do not know anything about it.

Q. Now, you have testified what the medical men thought of Dr. Nosu. Do you know what the opinion of the American prisoners of war was about Kondo?
A. As I have said before, I had no connection with the sick call so I had no contacts with the prisoners of war. I did my work inside the office in the Main Camp, and I had no contacts with the prisoners of war.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

There being no further questions, the witness was excused and withdrew.

The Commission then adjourned to meet at 0900, October 28, 1946.

Leonard M. Kaud

Philips, chief defense counsel, excused by the appointing authority for the day.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense calls as its third witness Koichi Hayakawa.

Koichi Hayakawa, a witness for the defense, having been duly sworn, testified through the interpreters as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the defense:

A. Yes.

Q. During what dates were you stationed there?
A. From the 27th of November, 1943 to the 15th of September, 1945.

Q. What were your duties at this camp during that time?
A. I was a secretary at the Omuta Main Camp.

A. He was a superior private.

Q. Did you ever work with or under Kenichi Kondo?
A. Yes.

Q. And for how long a period did you work, either with or directly under Kenichi Kondo?
A. About one month as a student.

Q. Was this at the Chikiko dispensary within the Main Camp?
A. That is correct.

Q. And during the period while you were at the Main Camp, did you also live in the same barracks or boarding house occupied by Kenichi Kondo?
A. That is correct.

Q. Now, from your association with Kenichi Kondo during this period of approximately two years, could you tell this Commission correctly how much interest Kondo took in his duties?

PROSECUTION: Just a moment. I object to the question on this ground: This witness has stated that he worked with Kenichi Kondo for one month only. Now the question is "knowing Kondo for two years", can he state what his interest was in his duties? How could this witness possibly know?

DEFENSE: This man lived with Kondo. He can testify whether Kondo spent any period of time at his work, and what period of time he spent in his barracks.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained; the Commission will evaluate the testimony for what it is worth.

A. Kondo was a very serious person and as a leader he was very kind to us. For example, being a soldier in those days was a great hardship, but regardless of whether it was summer or winter he made his rounds at night.

Q. During this month you worked with Kenichi Kondo, did you ever see Kenichi Kondo strike a prisoner of war on sick call?
A. No.

PROSECUTION: Will you state in your question "During the one month that he was there"

DEFENSE: That's what I said.

PROSECUTION: I didn't hear it.

Q. Now, do you know a Dr. Noma at the Osaka Main Camp?
A. Yes.

Q. What were his duties at this camp?
A. He was a ranking medical officer of the medical section.

A. Yes.

Q. Just what was his general theme?
A. He always instructed the medical personnel and cautioned us about various things. He said, "I have the complete responsibility, do as I say."

DEFENSE: Your witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Mr. Mochizuki, are you a very good friend of the accused, Kenichi Kondo?
A. No, I am not a very close friend.

Q. Were you a very close friend of his while you were stationed at the camp?
A. We were in one room. We were in the same room and our relations were my relation to him was as subordinate and he was my leader.

Q. Now, you testified that you worked with Kondo for one month in December of 1943. Was that in the dispensary?
A. Yes, at the Chikko dispensary.

Q. During that one month did you attend sick call every morning?
A. There was no sick call in the morning.

Q. Am I correct in stating that in December of 1943 at the Chikko dispensary where Kondo operated, there was no sick call from 6:30 to 7 o'clock in the morning?
A. There was no morning sick call until we moved to the new camp.

Q. What new camp are you referring to?
A. At first the camp was divided into No. 1 and No. 2 camps. Around the middle of February, 1945 it was incorporated into one camp, and previous to that we did not have any morning sick calls.

Q. Is it possible he could have struck an American prisoner of war and you not know about it?

DEFENSE: That question is strictly out of order.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

PROSECUTION: Sir, defense asked these very same questions last Saturday morning.

LAW MEMBER: He said he never saw or heard.

Q. Can you explain to this Commission, in view of the fact that you know Kenichi Kondo for two years, can you explain the presence in this case now of approximately 15 affidavits which state Kenichi Kondo struck American prisoners of war, plus the fact that we have had live testimony that Kenichi Kondo struck American prisoners of war? Can you explain that to this Commission?

DEFENSE: Such a question is strictly out of order at this time.

LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

Q. Now, am I correct when I state that other than this one month which you state was in December of 1943, you don't know what Kenichi Kondo did in the POW dispensary in the Main Camp?

Q. Now, this one month you worked with Kenichi Kondo, what precisely did you do with him as regards American prisoners of war?
A. I was a subordinate of Kondo, so all I did was to carry medicine and did not have any contact with the prisoners of war.

Q. Now, during this one month you worked with Kenichi Kondo, did you see Dr. Nashuma around?

DEFENSE: Around where?

PROSECUTION: We are talking about the camp.

DEFENSE: The camp isn't an issue. It is the action at the dispensary.

PROSECUTION: I'll reword the question.

Q. During the one month you worked with Kenichi Kondo, was Dr. Nashuma present at that time?
A. Yes, he was there.

Q. Did you ever see Kenichi Kondo overrule any of Dr. Nashuma's decisions regarding treatment for an American prisoner of war?
A. No.

Q. Did you ever see Kondo send a sick American prisoner of war out to work over Dr. Nashuma's protest?
A. No, absolutely not.

Q. Now, you have stated that you never saw Kenichi Kondo strike American prisoners of war. Did you ever hear of him striking an American prisoner of war?
A. No.

DEFENSE: Of his own knowledge.

A. Kenichi Kondo did not serve at the Main Camp dispensary.

Q. I am referring to the POW dispensary where the American prisoners of war were stationed, the Chikko Camp. Am I correct in assuming that other than that one month which you state was December, 1943, you don't know what Kenichi Kondo's relation with the American prisoners of war was at the dispensary, is that correct?

A. Kondo did medical work at the Chikko dispensary, and I was at the Main Camp, so I do not know what he did over there, except at night when we came back to the same barracks.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by the defense:

Q. Now, Hayakawa, just what time of day was sick call held for the prisoners of war when you were in attendance at sick call on December of 1943?

A. There was no sick call in the morning, but when the prisoners of war came back from work between 5 and 6 P.M. the sick call was held.

Q. Were you in attendance at this sick call during December?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when you stated that Kondo made the rounds in the evenings, can you explain to the Commission exactly what you mean by that statement?

A. Kondo would get up around 2 or 3 o'clock and walk around the camp inspecting the general conditions. He did this daily, and at first I wondered what he did because he put on his clothes. Then I found out he was making his rounds.

Q. Rounds of what and what was he inspecting?

A. He made his rounds to see whether or not the prisoners of war were covered with their blankets. There were many prisoners of war with diarrhea, so he made this round to check on this.

Q. Now, Hayakawa, to clear up a point for the Commission, you stated on cross examination that sick calls were not held in the morning until the camps joined sometime in mid-1945. Would you wish to correct yourself and say mid-1944?

PROSECUTION: Sir, I object to this question.

DEFENSE: Oh, goodness gracious. It is in order. It is only a mistake in the year. It is not a contested point.

LAW MEMBER: Let the witness answer the question.

A. In the middle, sometime in the middle of February, 1944, the prisoner of war camps were incorporated.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

PROSECUTION: No questions, sir.

PRESIDENT: The witness may be excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

A. He entered the temperature of the patients, the patients' names, the names of the sickness, the pulse, and whether they would rest or not rest, on the books.

Q. And what were Kondo's duties on these sick calls?
A. He would enter the following things down in the books: the name of the patients, the name of the sickness, the temperatures, and whether they would rest or not rest, and what sort of medicine was given. He would also give the medicine.

Q. Now, would Ginger make his entries in English, and Kondo make his in Japanese?
A. Yes.

Q. What were your duties while you were in this sick call?
A. I took the patients' temperatures, gave them medicines, and if no medicine was on hand, I would go and get some, and decide whether the patients would go to work or not.

Q. Now, Miraima, would you explain to this Commission exactly an example of just what a prisoner of war would do from once he entered the dispensary until he left it, that is the sick call procedure?
A. First, the PWs all lined up and I would take the temperatures of the patients that had fever. If the patient does not have a fever, they will be taken care of by Merritt, and later on they would be divided up as to the ones that are able to go to work and the ones that are unable to go to work. The ones with fever and the ones with diarrhea are told they will be given medicine, and the ones that were able to work would be sent to work, and those that were unable to work would be made to rest. Hochman examined all the patients that had fever. All of that was taken down in the book and that was the end of the sick call.

Q. Now, just how would you determine whether or not a patient had fever?
A. That can be determined by the temperature taken either with an American thermometer which was put in their mouth, or with a Japanese thermometer which was put under the arm-pit.

Q. Did they ever check some of the men's temperatures by just feeling of their foreheads?

PROSECUTION: That question is not proper. That is definitely leading the witness.

LAW MEMBER: Read the question.

DEFENSE: I just asked him if they ever took the temperature of any prisoner of war by just feeling their forehead.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained. Answer the question.

A. That is just to determine whether or not they have the fever.

Q. Were both procedures followed as far as testing whether a patient had a fever, now, by feeling of the forehead and also by the use of the thermometer?

A. We would determine whether or not they had a fever by putting our hands to their forehead, and then we would use the thermometer to measure the degree of fever.

PRESIDENT: At this time the Commission will take a 10-minute recess.

The Commission then took a recess until 1020 hours, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters, and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

Q. Now, any time that you attended sick call, did you see any disagreements or differences of opinion arise between Dr. Hoshuan and Kondo?

A. Yes.

Q. What were these disagreements about?

A. It was as to whether they would send them out to work or not.

Q. And approximately on how many occasions did you see these disagreements arise?

A. About three times.

Q. And over what type of patients did these disagreements arise?

A. When a patient had a slight fever, and Hoshuan told them to leave them indoors while Kondo told them to send them out to work.

Q. And what happened to these patients as a result?

A. They went out to work.

Q. Now, at any time while you were in attendance at these sick calls, did Dr. Hoshuan make any complaints to you over Kondo's behavior on these sick calls?

A. No.

Q. On any of the sick calls that you attended, did you ever see any of the diarrhea patients bring stools to sick call to show to Kondo?

A. No.

Q. Now, at any time that you attended sick call, did you ever see Kondo strike a prisoner of war?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?
A. Twice.

Q. Approximately what date was the first occasion?
A. About January, 1945.

Q. Do you recall the reason why this prisoner of war was struck?
A. I do not remember the one that happened about January, 1945.

Q. Now, how many times was this prisoner struck?
A. About 8 times.

Q. And how was he struck?
A. With his fists.

Q. And do you recall whether or not this patient went to work or not?
A. I do not remember exactly.

Q. Was this prisoner of war who was struck knocked down?
A. No, he was not.

Q. Was he bleeding?
A. No.

Q. Where was this prisoner of war struck, what part of his body?
A. On his cheeks.

Q. And what physical effects did the prisoner of war show after being struck on the cheeks?
A. It was just red.

Q. Now, you stated that Kondo struck another prisoner. On what occasion did this second striking arise?
A. February, 1945.

Q. And where was this prisoner of war struck, what part of his body?
A. His cheek and his hips.

Q. And with what did Kondo strike this prisoner of war?
A. With his fists.

Q. Now, what physical evidence did this prisoner of war show on his face?
A. His cheek was just red.

Q. Was this prisoner of war knocked down?
A. No, he was not.

Q. Now, other than these two times that you explained to this Commission that Kondo struck a prisoner of war, did you ever see Kondo strike any other prisoner of war?
A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of him striking any other prisoner of war?
A. No.

Q. And, if you know, do you know the reason the second prisoner of war was struck?
A. Sometimes this patient came to sick call and sometimes he did not.

Q. That does not answer the question. Will you explain to the Commission the reasons why this prisoner of war was struck?
A. On Saturday he came to sick call, and when he should have come to sick call again in the afternoon or the morning or the evening sick call the following day he did not come and he came on Monday.

Q. Was that the Monday morning sick call?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you know Chief Sanders?
A. Yes.

Q. What were his duties at the camp?
A. He supervised all the prisoners of war.

Q. And did he ever make any complaints to you about Kondo's behavior on sick call?
A. No.

Q. Now, on any of these occasions when Kondo struck a prisoner of war, was he ever scolded to your knowledge by anyone?
A. I do not know.

Q. Now, what was Dr. Nosu's capacity at the Osaka Main Camp?
A. He was a medical 1st lieutenant.

Q. And where was Dr. Nosu's office in relation to the dispensary?
A. It was in the dispensary of the Osaka Main Camp.

DEFENSE: I think he misunderstood the question.

PROSECUTION: It is right in the record.

DEFENSE: That does not make any difference whether it is in the record or not. Where was Dr. Nosu's office in relation to the dispensary? Was Nosu's office in the same building as the dispensary?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, this sick register that showed the status of the prisoners of war at sick call daily, was it taken to Nosu's office?
A. No, we did not bring this book every day.

Q. How often was it brought?
A. What we brought to Dr. Nosu's office was the daily report. We did not bring this book there.

Q. And how often was this daily report brought to Dr. Nosu's office?
A. Every morning.

Q. And who brought this report?
A. Kondo.

Q. Did you ever accompany Kondo on any occasions when he brought this report?
A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many times?
A. Three.

Q. In any of these conditions did Dr. Kozu make any comments to Kondo about the morning sick report and what its contents were?
A. Yes.

Q. And on these occasions just exactly what did Dr. Kozu say?
A. He said, "Lately there are too many patients and regardless of the fact that there are three medical officers at this Main Camp, we have too many patients and it will lower the health standard and give the medical officers a bad name. It will also lower the work efficiency so we must make the patients with the light injuries work. You must also send the patients with temperatures of below 37.5 to work."

Q. Did he give you any other instructions on any of these occasions that you attended?
A. No, nothing more.

PROSECUTION: Is that question, "Did he ever give this witness any other instructions while he was present"; to whom?

DEFENSE: To both he and Kondo.

A. I forgot one more thing. "Do not be fooled or mislead by the prisoners of war."

Q. Approximately how many prisoners of war attended sick call in the morning?
A. On the average, 15.

Q. And of the number that attended sick call, can you give the average number of those who would be excused each day?
A. About 5.

Q. And of those five that were excused, what would be the nature of their ailments?

PROSECUTION: I want to object to that because I don't believe there is any testimony that this witness here is a medical man, and I don't see how he could possibly know what ailments they were excused for.

LAW MEMBER: He is trying to get the type of ailments.

DEFENSE: Did you want that answered, sir?

LAW MEMBER: Your question is to type?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

LAW MEMBER: He may answer that.

A. Those that received heavy injuries while at work, and those with high temperatures.

Q. Now, do you know a Lt. Matsumura?
A. Yes.

Q. What were his duties at the camp?
A. He was commanding officer of the Chiba Prisoner of War Camp and labor supervisor.

Q. And what was his relationship to Kondo and yourself?
A. I was working at the Chiba Prisoner of War Camp, so we had something to do with each other. Kondo was a medical orderly so he had something to do with him.

Q. Did Matsumura ever speak to you about the sick calls being held for the American POWs and the manner in which it was being conducted?
A. Yes.

Q. Approximately what date did he speak to you about this?
A. About January, 1945.

Q. What did he say on these occasions?
A. He said, "There are too many patients lately. If we do not send patients with light ailments out to work the work rate will fall, and so you will have to send out some patients with light illnesses."

Q. Were patients sent out with light ailments?
A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the methods by which the medicines were distributed to the dispensary where Kondo and yourself worked?
A. We received medicines from the Osaka Army Hospital and then they were put in the warehouse. The MCO in charge would look at the previous methods and make according to the condition of the patients a list. This list he would show to the ranking medical officer, and after the ranking medical officer fixed up the bad parts of this list he would distribute the medicines.

Q. Who was the medical supply sergeant at this camp?
A. Medical sergeant Kobayashi.

Q. While you were on these sick calls in the morning, did you ever see Kondo refuse to give medicines to any prisoners of war?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, all of this examination here has been most leading and we haven't objected, but I think these questions are definitely and positively leading. If the Commission remembers when Mr. Hayashi, a prosecution witness, was on the stand any question which was leading counsel for defense immediately raised objection to, and there was quite a bit of to do about it. Now, if we are limited at any time, I think counsel for defense should be, too.

DEFENSE: Am I not correct in stating that Mr. Hayashi testified in English?

LAW MEMBER: It is the opinion of the Commission that this witness does not understand quite a few of the questions, and we have permitted him to be led in order to get out his testimony.

DEFENSE: It has also been my idea that they want these things expedited. It is difficult to get an answer out of this witness.

PROSECUTION: My objection is, sir, the question should be what did Kondo do with respect to the issuance of medicines regarding American prisoners of war.

DEFENSE: He has already testified that medicines were issued.

LAW MEMBER: In view of this witness, that objection is not sustained, and he may answer that question.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever receive any complaints to that effect either from Dr. Nashman or Chief Sanders?
A. No.

DEFENSE: Your witness.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution:

Q. Witness, will you state the extent of your medical training?
A. Approximately five months.

Q. What kind of training was that and where?
A. Nursing, bandaging, stretcher bearing, prescribing, and massaging.

Q. Now, witness, you have testified, I believe, that you were a corporal and Kondo was a superior private, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Kondo's work was that of a medical orderly, I believe you testified; were you also designated as a medical orderly?
A. Yes.

Q. Do I understand then that you were Kondo's immediate superior at these sick calls?
A. Yes.

Q. What if anything did you do on these two occasions when you saw Kondo strike one of the prisoners eight times with his fists, and beat the other prisoner?
A. I didn't do anything.

Q. I believe you also testified that it was January of 1945 when Matsumura told you that there were too many men on sick call, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. I believe you also testified that it was in January of 1945 when you saw the prisoner beaten by Kondo, is that right?
A. Yes.

Q. The second beating was in February of 1945, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. These two beatings that you witnessed, one in January, and one in February of the same year, were shortly after Matsumura told you that Kondo was leaving too many prisoners in camp?
A. Yes.

Q. How many months were you in the camp with Kondo?
A. Approximately 8 months.

Q. And in that 8 months you saw him beat two men in a period of two months?
A. Yes.

Q. Why were you not at sick call every day if you were a medical orderly?
A. My main duty was working in the office, and the work at sick call was only one of my additional duties, and I also had to be in charge of quarters.

Q. As a matter of fact, witness, there were some few weeks when you didn't attend sick call at all, wasn't there?
A. I do not know.

PRESIDENT: He testified that he attended sick call about three times a week.

PROSECUTION: Yes, and I said as a matter of fact he didn't attend sick call for four weeks.

A. No.

Q. How many patients were reporting for sick call when you first went to the camp?
A. I do not know.

PRESIDENT: Now, for my information, does he say "no" or "remember"?

INTERPRETER: "I do not know".

PRESIDENT: That wouldn't mean "remember".

INTERPRETER: He said "shuimasen" which means "I do not know".

Q. How many men were attending sick call four months after you were in camp?
A. The average at first was around 20.

Q. In January when Matsumura talked to you, I believe you testified it was an average of about 15 a day, is that correct?

DEFENSE: There hasn't been any testimony on that, if the Commission please. The testimony was that there was an average of 15.

PRESIDENT: Ask the question that will bring that out.

Q. Would you say there was an average of about 15 prisoners a day at sick call on these occasions when you were there?
A. Around January?

Q. Well, how many would you say attended sick call a day, say during September of 1944?

DEFENSE: He wasn't at the camp in September; he didn't get there until October.

PROSECUTION: Change it to October.

A. I believe around 10.

Q. Now, would you say in January—
A. I believe it averaged around 10 or 15.

Q. Well, was it about the same in October of 1944 as it was in January of 1945?
A. There may have been a little more in January, but generally it was the same.

PRESIDENT: I think at this time if any of those figures are at all pertinent, you will have to establish the strength in numbers of the prisoners of war in the camp.

Q. Will you tell us if there was the same number of prisoners present in camp in January of 1945 as there was in October of 1944?
A. I believe it was the same number.

Q. When Lt. Matsumura complained to you that there were too many men on sick call, what did you say to Lt. Matsumura?
A. I did not say anything in particular.

Q. You didn't say to Lt. Matsumura that you had been attending sick call at least three times a week, and had been witnessing the diagnosis of these prisoners?
A. No, I did not.

Q. Were you ever present when Mr. Kondo requested that Dr. Amae come to the hospital to examine patients that had already been examined by Dr. Hochman?
A. No.

Q. Did Kondo ever tell you he had disagreed with Dr. Hochman and was calling in Dr. Amae to look over the patients?
A. No.

Q. Now, I believe you told us in the direct examination that Kondo examined the prisoners and made diagnoses of the cases also?

DEFENSE: He didn't say that.

PROSECUTION: Yes, he did.

DEFENSE: He just said, check temperatures.

PRESIDENT: All we need do is search the record and find out which is correct.

PROSECUTION: It is my recollection and in my notes here that at first when we questioned this witness, he told us that Kondo would make diagnoses, and later came back and enumerated three other things he did, such as keep records.

DEFENSE: I think it is better to check it if you want to.

PRESIDENT: What is the point you are raising?

PROSECUTION: I want to find out how far Kondo would go in making diagnoses.

PRESIDENT: Why don't you ask the question?

Q. Would Kondo diagnose the ailments of these prisoners of war, or would he merely examine them and write down the data that someone else gave him?
A. Who do you mean by others?

Q. I mean other medical orderlies, such as this gentleman and others.

PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw the question.

PRESIDENT: Ask him who decided whether he was sick or not?

Q. You testified that you were familiar with three disagreements between Dr. Hoshman and Kondo, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. You also testified in those three occasions where there was a disagreement, the three men were sent out to work, is that true?
A. Yes.

Q. Had Dr. Hoshman diagnosed the ailment of those three prisoners of war?
A. Yes, he looked at them.

PRESIDENT: At this time the Commission will recess until 1330 this afternoon.

The Commission then took a recess until 1330, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters, and reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

PROSECUTION: Will the reporter read back the last three questions and answers.

The last three questions and answers were then read back by the reporter.

Q. Now, witness, who was in charge of the dispensary?
A. What dispensary do you mean?

Q. Where the sick prisoners came for sick call.
A. Dr. Hosu.

Q. What Japanese medical orderly was in charge when the men came to the sick call?

DEFENSE: I think "in attendance" is better. The Commission can decide who was in charge.

PROSECUTION: I think "who was in charge" is a proper question.

LAW MEMBER: All right. Go ahead.

A. Kondo.

Q. And did Kondo, was Kondo the same—

A. And Yamamoto and Tabata; these are the medical orderlies.

Q. And what medical orderly had the authority to determine whether the man should go to work or remain at home?

A. Among these three it was Kondo.

Q. Now, witness, you have told us that there was an average of 15 prisoners of war who reported to sick call each day, is that correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. You also told us that there was about five excused each day, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. All right, now, out of the 10 who reported to sick call and who were sent to work, how many would Dr. Hochman recommend stay at home?

DEFENSE: Just a minute. The witness has testified that he only knows of three occasions on which he saw Kondo overrule Hochman, so I don't think the question is proper.

PROSECUTION: This is cross examination. Certainly I have the right to ask out of 15, 10 who went to work and 5 stayed home—I believe I have a right to find out whether Dr. Hochman agreed as to the 10 men who went to work.

LAW MEMBER: Objection not sustained. The question will be answered.

A. About two.

Q. So that you would say each day there was at least two prisoners sent out to work that Dr. Hochman thought shouldn't be sent to work, is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. In other words, each day Kondo would overrule Dr. Hochman's judgment on at least two prisoners?

DEFENSE: That is strictly cumulative.

PROSECUTION: I think it is a proper question to show how many times Hochman was overruled by Kondo.

LAW MEMBER: The question will be answered.

A. Yes.

Q. You also testified, in answer to the defense counsel's question, that the type of ailments that these men were allowed to remain in camp for was serious injuries and high temperatures, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Dr. Kondo insist upon sending all prisoners of war out to work except those who had serious injuries and high temperatures?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, defense counsel asked you if Sanders or Dr. Hochman had ever complained to you about Kondo's conduct and your answer was "No".
A. No.

Q. Now, in view of the fact that Kondo is the man who had the authority to send the prisoners to work, do you know any reason why Dr. Hochman and Mr. Sanders should complain to you?

DEFENSE: That question is out of order, sir, because it is a purely argumentative question, and it is a point that can be argued by counsel if he wishes to. It isn't a proper question to put to the witness.

PROSECUTION: Counsel for the defense asked these specific questions, "Did Dr. Hochman or did Mr. Sanders ever complain to you?" Now, I want to show there was no reason why they should complain to him. The reason they didn't complain to him was because of his own testimony he had no authority. The only purpose in asking the question by the defense counsel was to show that these men had never complained. I want to show why they did not complain. They did not complain because there was no use; he had no authority.

DEFENSE: His answer, sir, was exactly what my objection was to be. He knows his reason that this witness answered the question by stating an argument which is only proper in closing. He has shown himself that the question is not proper to ask by making a brief closing argument on that point, and that is exactly his reason for asking that question at this time.

PROSECUTION: My reason, members of the Commission, for asking that question is exactly the same reason why counsel for defense asked it.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained and he may answer the question to the best of his ability.

A. He did not have the authority.

PROSECUTION: That is not an answer at all. Explain the question to him.

LAW MEMBER: Yes, yes, they didn't complain to him. That answers the question.

DEFENSE: He said, "He did not have the authority." By that he would mean Kondo.

PRESIDENT: Ask him, "Who do you mean by 'he'?"

Q. Who do you mean by "he"?
A. Kondo didn't have the authority.

PROSECUTION: I don't think that is an answer to the question. Will you read the question again?

The reporter read back the question and it was translated to the witness by the court interpreter.

A. I do not know.

PROSECUTION: That is all.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q. In addition to the prisoners of war who were permitted to visit each day when they were excused from work, were there any other prisoners of war resting in camp?
A. Yes there were [illegible].

Q. Approximately how many were there when you first came to the camp in October?
A. There were approximately ten.

Q. And approximately how many rested in camp in January of 1945?
A. About twenty.

Q. On any of these sick calls, would you clear up for the Commission, did Kondo diagnose ailments of prisoners of war?
A. Kondo did not diagnose the patients.

Q. Who did?
A. Hoshuma did the diagnoses.

Q. During the entire time, I believe you testified you knew Kondo 18 months, did you ever see or hear of Kondo striking any man other than those prisoners of war you described?
A. No.

Q. Now, this morning on your cross examination you were asked by the prosecutor whether or not you had ever seen Doctor Awa at sick call and your answer was "No". Now I ask you, at this time, is that correct?
A. I am positive.

DEFENSE: Ask him again.

The question was again put to the witness by the interpreter.

A. Yes he came to the sick calls.

Q. How many times did you see Awa at sick call?
A. About three times.

Q. Do you know of any occasion when Kondo went to the medical office to get Awa to have him come to the dispensary?
A. Yes.

Q. How do you know this?
A. Because Hiraiwa and I worked in the same room as a probation officer [illegible].

Q. On how many occasions did you yourself see that Kondo came to get Awa to go to the dispensary?
A. Once.

DEFENSE: I have no further questions.

[illegible]

A. There were times when they differed.

Q. You only saw Doctor Ando those once, didn't you without [illegible]

DEFENSE: He said three times.

A. Yes.

DEFENSE: Yes what?

INTERPRETER: Once.

DEFENSE: That is when Ando came after him once.

Q. How many occasions did you see the doctor coming to the dispensary, Doctor Amma?

A. Three times.

Q. Now in each one of these instances, didn't Doctor Amma examine prisoners of war and recommend that they be allowed to rest and not go to work?

A. Yes.

Q. Now don't the records show that Doctor Amma because Ando didn't want to take the recommendations of Doctor Hoshuma?

A. I do not know.

Q. Just one further question: Now in view of the fact that Ando never made any diagnoses, do you know of your own knowledge why he didn't accept the diagnosis of Doctor Hoshuma?

DEFENSE: That is argumentative, sir.

PROSECUTION: I qualified that by asking if he knew of his own knowledge.

DEFENSE: That still does not take the argument out of the question. It is strictly argumentative, sir.

LAW MEMBER: Let him answer that; we will evaluate it for what it is worth.

A. I do not know that.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

DEFENSE: No questions by the defense.

PRESIDENT: No further questions; the witness may be excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense calls as its next witness Masayoshi Kato.

PRESIDENT: The witness is warned that he need not answer a question if he thinks that it will in any way incriminate him; he has that right.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I am going to object to the question.

The reporter read back the question and it was translated to the witness.

A. No, I do not know.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

DEFENSE: No further questions by the defense.

PRESIDENT: The witness may be excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

Kenkichi Maejima, a witness for the defense, was sworn and testified through the interpreter as follows:

A. He was not when I went to work.

Q. Do you know the the Japanese personnel were in attendance at the sick call for the prisoners of war?
A. Usually Sergeant Hayashi was there, Kondo was also there at that dispensary and from the factory Doctor Nakamura also came.

DEFENSE: Did you put that question to the man the way I asked it; will the reporter read back my question?

The reporter read back the question.

DEFENSE: The one before that.

The reporter read back the previous question.

The question was then translated to the witness.

A. The sick call was held at the dispensary and his duty was office work in the dispensary, so he was there.

A. No.

Q. Was there any [illegible] doctor stationed permanently at the Ouyama Prisoner of War Camp?
A. The main camp is quite a distance from the Ouyama Camp and the medical officer from the main camp could not get around to that camp, so I asked the Company to send around there doctor and they sent around one doctor twice a week. At that time Kondo was there, a Doctor Sakanaka went to the camp.

Q. How often did Doctor Sakanaka go to the camp?

A. No, not once.

DEFENSE: No further questions.

PRESIDENT: At this point in the proceeding the Court will take a ten minute recess.

The Commission then, at 1445, took a recess until 1455, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, the prosecution and defense, the accused, the reporter and the interpreters resumed their seats.

[illegible] the next point to put a letter [illegible] in evidence before

PRESIDENT: The Commission is in session.

The witness the recorded be was duly sworn under oath.

[illegible] the following CROSS EXAMINATION:

Questions by the prosecution: [illegible] as self-[illegible] [illegible] should be marked.

Q. Lt. Nakama, while you were at the Oeyama Prisoner of War Camp, on or about March 1945 did you receive a letter from Major Hiraishi [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

DEFENSE: You are going to read a letter that is not in evidence before this Court.

PROSECUTION: Sir, I don't have to offer the letter.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is not sustained.

DEFENSE: Sir, I firmly believe that this letter being offered is self-incriminatory and this witness should be so warned.

PROSECUTION: Sir, the letter is not self-incriminatory. I am not asking any questions that will incriminate him. Prosecution will avoid any questions that will incriminate him. The letter in question is complimentary.

DEFENSE: In a left-handed manner.

PROSECUTION: Now, see if you remember receiving a letter which I shall now read to you.

"To: Camp Commandant and Staff.
From: PW Officers and supervisors.

On behalf of all the men in this camp we wish to express to the Camp Commandant and his staff our deepest gratitude for the interest they have taken in our health and welfare. We feel much indebted for the unrestricted privilege of taking the men to the Nipponese dentist where they are treated with utmost courtesy and professional skill. We further wish to express our thanks for being allowed to withdraw considerable sums from the Nipponese safe deposit to help defray the cost of this treatment, realizing that such withdrawals are generally not authorized and must have required much effort and intervention on the part of the Camp Commandant and his staff.

In these trying times of war, with materials so scarce or restricted as they are, we feel we have been shown consideration beyond our expectations. We would like to have our feeling of gratitude conveyed to the dentist who has so liberally given of his time and efforts.

We beg to remain, your obedient servants,"

PRESIDENT: Which exhibit is that?

PROSECUTION: 26.

DEFENSE: Stricken in the affidavit.

PROSECUTION: I'm not mentioning the affidavit, merely reading the letter.

DEFENSE: We ask for a ruling on it.

LAW MEMBER: Objection is not sustained.

DEFENSE: Defense moves a motion for mis-trial.

LAW MEMBER: What is the idea of a mistrial motion?

DEFENSE: Because it was brought in prejudicial matter and also because it is incriminating evidence against this man. At the time that letter was submitted they intended to use it against this man when he was brought to trial.

PROSECUTION: I am just testing the witness' credibility, he stated he did not receive this letter. Depending on what he stated I am going to ask him one more question.

LAW MEMBER: There is nothing in the letter that violated the rights of the accused. Answer the question.

PROSECUTION: Sir, will you rule on the motion for mistrial.

LAW MEMBER: Counsel, are you making that motion?

DEFENSE: We will withdraw the motion.

A. I don't know anything about the letter. I heard about the contents of the letter from the POW officer but I did not receive any such letter.

Q. Do you deny that this letter was written at your request?

DEFENSE: That is strictly out of order. Goodness gracious.

LAW MEMBER: He said he heard about the letter but he didn't receive the letter.

DEFENSE: Are you asking him the question "Was it written at his request"?

PROSECUTION: Sir, there is nothing incriminatory about that letter. I am attacking this witness' credibility, I am not using prosecution exhibit. I haven't offered anything about Exhibit 15. It is a fundamental rule of law that in attacking a credibility of a witness, counsel may go into extraneous matters.

LAW MEMBER: The only thing is that the defense counsel is bringing up the point that this man is liable to incriminate himself. I told him he had the right not to answer any question that might incriminate him.

PROSECUTION: There is nothing incriminatory about him asking someone to write him a letter.

DEFENSE: The innuendo is—

PROSECUTION: Is not incriminatory.

LAW MEMBER: As it stands now he testified that he did not receive such a letter but he did hear of its contents from POW officers.

INTERPRETER: I would like to correct the last answer. It should read as follows:

A. I do not know the contents of the letter but I have heard about what was expressed in the letter from the POW officers. I did not receive that letter but I have a few other letters. I have them with me now.

PROSECUTION: I still ask my question "whether or not this letter was written at his request."

DEFENSE: The way the prosecution talks about this letter here presupposes such a letter exists; that we do not know. Also how they intend to use this letter against this defendant in the event he is brought to trial or whether it will be used against him is not set forth. In the event prosecution uses this letter, any remarks made about this letter at this time are entirely of an incriminating nature.

PROSECUTION: Sir, there is nothing incriminating about it at all.

LAW MEMBER: I do not want in any way to injure the witness' rights. Do you intend to use this letter in a case against this man?

PROSECUTION: I do not know. I am not prosecuting him. I ask this witness whether the letter was written at his request and he says he does not remember the letter, then on rebuttal prosecution may bring in testimony to show that someone in authority says a letter was written to him at his request. Now if I bring that in, you have a right to disregard all his testimony about Kaniehi Kondo. That is the sole purpose of this question. He has not said anything to incriminate him nor have I asked him anything.

LAW MEMBER: The question is now—

PROSECUTION: Did he request such a letter.

LAW MEMBER: Question will be answered.

DEFENSE: Due to the fact that he said he never heard about this letter he isn't even qualified to answer the question.

PRESIDENT: Will you ask him the question?

LAW MEMBER: The letter could have been written and he not receive it.

A. I do not know that letter.

PROSECUTION: Will you please ask the witness to answer the question?

DEFENSE: If he did not know the letter he cannot testify whether or not it was written at his request.

PRESIDENT: He has answered the question the way he wanted to and I will accept the answer.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

PRESIDENT: Will you repeat the last question of the prosecution to the witness and tell him to answer it Yes or No.

The question was again put to the witness by the interpreters.

A. No.

Q. Are you married or single?
A. I am married.

Q. How many children do you have?
A. Four.

Q. How many years education have you had?
A. I graduated from the Prefectural Agricultural School.

Q. Are you at present at Sugamo Prison?
A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever in the Imperial Japanese Army?
A. Yes.

Q. And what are the dates that you were in the Army?
A. I received induction orders on 5 January 1940 and was in the Army until the end of the war.

Q. Did you ever served at Osaka Main Camp?
A. Yes.

Q. In what capacity did you serve while there?
A. I was head of the administration section.

Q. By that you mean that you were the Adjutant?
A. I was head of the administration section and my job was of an Adjutant.

Q. In what period did you serve in this Camp?
A. From the 20th of June 45th until the end of the war.

PRESIDENT: That is all, the witness is excused.

A. The witness was excused and withdrew.

PRESIDENT: The defense calls as its next witness, Yasuji Morimoto.

Yasuji Morimoto, a witness for the defense, was sworn and testified through the interpreters as follows:

PRESIDENT: I wish to inform you that you have the right to refuse to answer any question that might incriminate you in any way.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Questions by defense:

Q. What is your name?
A. Yasuji Morimoto.

Q. How old are you?
A. [illegible]

Q. Where do you live?
A. Ogaki Fu, Fuyuno-gun Shonai machi, Ogaki, Shimoto.

Q. What is your occupation?
A. Agriculture.

Q. While you were at the camp did you know Kenichi Kondo, the accused?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what he did in the camp?
A. He was serving as a medical orderly in the main camp.

Q. Did you ever see him working in this capacity?
A. Yes.

Q. How often did you see Kondo engaged in this work?
A. I looked at the dispensary about once a week and I saw him there doing office work.

Q. As the Camp Adjutant did you have custody of the records of the various NCOs and Privates in the camp?
A. What sort of records?

Q. By that we mean records that show the efficiency and various qualifications of the NCOs and the Privates in the camp.
A. In the Army we have what is called an evaluation sheet and we have those of the camp at the camp but we do not have the sheets of the ones that are dispatched to this camp.

Q. Did you have Kondo's evaluation sheet?
A. We did not have his evaluation sheet because he was dispatched to our camp from the Zara Hospital.

Q. Did you have Kondo's evaluation sheet while he was at the Camp Camp?
A. Kondo was dispatched to the Camp Prisoner of War Camp from the Zara Hospital so the Zara Hospital has his evaluation sheet but I have seen [illegible] sheet of work and it is not one of my duties.

Q. When did you see it?
A. I believe around March 1945.

Q. Can you recall how Kondo was rated on this evaluation sheet?
A.

PROSECUTION: I object to the question, sir. It has nothing to do with the issues in this case. The issues are did Kondo beat prisoners, did Kondo send sick prisoners of war to work. If he wants to use him as a character witness the witness can testify from his own knowledge.

DEFENSE: He can testify to what he saw. You have people coming in here to testify what they heard. That is one of his senses.

LAW MEMBER: Objection overruled.

A. He was rated by numbers according to his actual work, inside work, and education.

Q. What is this inside and outside work?
A. He was rated by numbers according to his actual work, his work inside the camp and his studies.

Q. Now, just what was his rating as you recall seeing it on this evaluation sheet in March 1945?

A. [illegible] with the provisions of the prosecution. [illegible]
A. There may be points which I do not remember but he had a good report.
Q. Do you recall Kondo's transfer to Oryoku Camp from Cabu Camp?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know the reason?
A. Yes.
Q. Will you tell the Commission, if you know?
A. In May 1945, there was a number of medical corpsmen to various camps, to the Hospital at the Old Bilibid Camp. I thought this transfer would be good for him.
DEFENSE: No further questions.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Questions by the prosecution: [illegible]

Q. The most favorable report on Kondo, do you remember?
A. Medical Officer Wood did all the work that had anything to do with the medical criterion.
Q. You never attended that call at the Cabiao Camp for the American POWs in the morning, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you didn't know that went on at the sick call at the Cabiao Camp that was held for the American prisoners of war, is that correct?
A. That is the job of the medical officers and the ones that were appointed to do that sort of work and it is not one of my duties.

PROSECUTION: No further questions.

DEFENSE: No further questions by the defense.

PRESIDENT: No further questions, the witness may be excused.

The witness was excused and withdrew.

DEFENSE: At this time, sir, the defense would like to read into evidence a few items from the Prosecution Exhibits, in view of the fact that counsel for the defense is not the same counsel who was present in this case at the time these exhibits were admitted in evidence. There are a very few passages involved. They are very brief and the exhibits I would like to read at this time I know that I would have requested them to be entered into the record at the time of their original offering had I been a member of the defense staff. I would like permission of the Court and also permission of the Prosecution to read them at this time.

PROSECUTION: I will have no objection if I feel they should be in but if I feel they should not, I shall so inform the Commission.

LAW MEMBER: The defense may proceed.

DEFENSE: The first one I would like to read anything from is from Atwood's affidavit which is Prosecution Exhibit 1. I would like to incorporate into the record the one sentence beginning on Line 3 of the answer and ending at line 8. It is with the permission of the prosecution. This states, "A Lt. Miyatake, a medical officer in the Japanese Army, was responsible for medical regulations at this camp [illegible], and also in that same affidavit I would like to read the entire second paragraph of that answer, which is the paragraph devoted to Lt. Miyatake who has been identified in this case as one of the defendant's superiors, and my offer of proof was when we asked Sergeant Ryan to show a line of conduct on Kondo's superiors.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution objects to the offer of that portion of the affidavit for the following reasons: It merely mentions that Lt. Miyatake was on the staff and it mentions striking the prisoners with a club, a fist of his sword and with his fists by Miyatake. It does not identify him with Kondo. If he wants to put in that Lt. Miyatake, a Japanese officer, was a member of the medical staff, I have no objection to that but there is no evidence before this Commission that Miyatake beat any prisoner of war.

DEFENSE: Sergeant Ryan testified to that.

PROSECUTION: I stated that has nothing to do with the issues in this case. What difference does it make if Miyatake beat prisoners of war?

DEFENSE: For this reason, sir; even though rules as loosely as they have been drawn, it is stated that in mitigation it can be shown that the accused acted under orders. We don't say that haven't tried to bring out that anyone ordered Kondo to go out and strike prisoners but it does show that as a person who has already testified in this case, a key witness, that this man's superiors struck prisoners of war and struck them with the object or hardest stick, and it certainly shows a course of conduct and should be taken into consideration by the Commission. This man, the highest rank he attained, while at this camp, was superior private.

LAW MEMBER: As I understand you, you want the question beginning with "A Lt. MIYATAKE."

DEFENSE: No sir, I want the entire paragraph.

PROSECUTION: Sir, it is pretty far fetched to put into the record that if the man's commandant, for example, beats prisoners of war it should be in the record when we are trying Kenichi Kondo because it shows a course of conduct. We don't feel that that is in defense to Kenichi Kondo.

DEFENSE: It is "like father, like son." I certainly believe it is.

LAW MEMBER: Who was it who took it upon themself to strike that out?

PROSECUTION: The defense counsel, Lt. Hall, and myself. Under the defense counsel's argument it would be counter dividing to bring in all the evidence they would ask to be testified by any member in that camp.

DEFENSE: That is not our argument.

LAW MEMBER: Is that the only objection you have to it?

PROSECUTION: All he is showing is that other people beat prisoners in that camp besides the accused. Would I be permitted to show that some High Ranking officers did not beat prisoners of war?

LAW MEMBER: That is part of the affidavit.

PROSECUTION: No, it is not. That is why we crossed it out, sir. The record is now being cluttered up with immaterial matter.

LAW MEMBER: You want that paragraph in?

DEFENSE: All except the last line because that is conclusion.

LAW MEMBER: And you don't want that in?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir, I strenuously object.

LAW MEMBER: Inasmuch as that paragraph is a portion of the affidavit submitted in evidence and has been ruled out, I presume with the concurrence of counsel, and the present defense counsel desires that it not be stricken out, such request is granted.

DEFENSE: I would like to read, with permission of the Commission, that portion of the Exhibit "On at least twelve occasions I observed a Lt. Miyatake, also a Japanese Army officer attached to the medical staff of the Meinohe Camp Hospital, beat prisoners of war. I am unable to identify the victims of these beatings, but personally saw Miyatake strike prisoners with a club, the flat of his sword, and with his fists. These beatings were without provocation", and also I would like to read from Prosecution Exhibit 9, affidavit of Doctor Hochman.

This is the answer to the second question on Page 2, the remainder of that answer following "this" and this is with the agreement of the prosecution. Continuing from "this" I would like to read that any evidence from Doctor Neuhaus's affidavit, Prosecution Exhibit 9, "The American doctors in the sub-camps would write no notes requesting medical supplies and often even the Japanese medical orderlies from sub-camps would come to me and ask for supplies as they were unable to get it from Lt. HOSU", that is with the concurrence of the prosecution.

LAW MEMBER: It will not be stricken.

DEFENSE: And I have another portion to read, that is from Prosecution Exhibit 15. You will remember that Major Kleich was a man stationed at the Cayuna Prisoner of War Camp.

PRESIDENT: Yes, I have it here.

DEFENSE: Just the first sentence in the paragraph on the top of page of Page 2 of Major Kleich's affidavit. The reading of this sentence is with the concurrence of the prosecution. "The Camp Commandant advises that the Osaka District had requested that 85 percent of the men work; actually, such a request was always considered as an order within our camp by the Japanese."

LAW MEMBER: All right, approved.

PRESIDENT: At this time the Commission will adjourn to reconvene at 0900 tomorrow, 29 October 1946.

The Commission then, at 1615 hours, adjourned to meet at 0900 hours, 29 October 1946.

Leonard M. Hard

LEONARD M. HARD
Chief Prosecutor

Yokohama Courthouse
Yokohama, Japan
29 October 1946

The Commission reconvened, pursuant to adjournment, at noon hours, all the personnel of the Commission, the prosecution and the defense, the interpreters and the reporter who were present at the close of the previous session being present with the exception of Major Chilling, excused by the Appointing Authority.

The accused was also present.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense would like to offer into evidence as Defense Exhibit A a medical certificate dated 17 October 1946, which shows that Atsushi Nakao is confined to the hospital and is unable to attend at this time. The reason for so offering it at this time is prior to the introduction of the defense's stipulation with the prosecution and the accused and having on the record the reason therefore

I therefore request the Commission to admit this exhibit into evidence and have it attached to the record. We have the original with a copy certified by the translation section in the Eighth Army Interpreters Unit. For the record, sir, I am going to introduce into evidence a stipulation of Dr. Nakao because he is unable to be here and for clarity on the record too. The reason for the stipulation, because they have not been used too much in our Crimes Trial.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution

DEFENSE: No objection.

PROSECUTION: I'll state that the seal at the top is incomplete.

LAW MEMBER: Defense Exhibit A will be admitted into evidence and attached to the record.

Defense Exhibit A was read into the record.

DEFENSE: At this time the defense offers into evidence Defense Exhibit B, stipulation as to the expected testimony of Atsushi Nakao and asks that it be accepted and attached to the record.

PROSECUTION: The prosecution has no objection and wishes to state its position in the matter, this is a stipulation as to the expected testimony of the witness that if he were on the stand he would testify under direct examination to the following; the prosecution is, in effect, waiving its right to cross examination and is doing this merely to expedite the case of the long delay. We would, actually, prefer to have the witness here to interrogate him. But rather than risk any further delay we have agreed to stipulate to this, that if he were here he would testify as to that under direct examination.

LAW MEMBER: Defense Exhibit B will be admitted in evidence and attached to the record.

Defense Evidence B was then read to the Commission.

DEFENSE: At this time, sir, defense offers into evidence Defense Exhibit C which purport to be the diagnosis report showing the condition of Lt. Nosu, who is at the present time confined in the hospital. We offer this report at this time with a duly certified translation to show that this man, who was Ando's superior throughout the war, suddenly about eight or nine months after the war ended was hospitalized for being mentally deranged and to show to the Commission, and to appear on the record, as to why Nosu is not being called as a witness. We have two of these reports which I will introduce as Defense Exhibits C and Exhibit D. The other shows that his condition has not changed at all in October. At this time we respectfully request the Commission to receive Defense Exhibit C.

PROSECUTION: We object on the ground that such offer is irrelevant and immaterial to the issues concerned. If the defense wishes to contend that at the time Kondo acted under orders of Doctor Nosu and Doctor Nosu was deranged, such evidence might be material. No evidence to that effect has been offered. It is not relevant at all to the issue. The defense has made no contention that at the time Kondo took orders from Doctor Nosu, Doctor Nosu was mentally deranged.

DEFENSE: The reason sir, we put it before the Commission is to show that this man, who had charge of the whole Osaka area prisoners of war camps, the senior medical officer, the man who was responsible for the medical welfare of all the prisoners of war in that area, was a person who had or possessed some degree of mental unbalance as we attempt to show now by the fact that since he was incarcerated, he has shown signs of being mentally deranged.

PROSECUTION: The question is was he mentally deranged at the time he was the superior of Kondo. What good is evidence that he is now if there is no evidence he was before? The only reason any evidence at all should be offered about Doctor Nosu is to explain to the Commission why Doctor Nosu is not available to testify; the only statement that can be made is that Doctor Nosu is in a hospital. Any attempt to offer any other evidence is an attempt to influence the Commission.

DEFENSE: We will withdraw the exhibit, sir. At this time, sir, the defense calls as its next witness the accused, Keniehi Kondo.

LAW MEMBER: Has the accused been fully warned of his rights?

DEFENSE: I'll state that for the record and I'll again advise him of his rights as the accused in this case preliminary to his being sworn.

The accused, Kenichi Kondo, then answered the following interrogations by his defense counsel through the interpreter as follows:

Questions by the defense:

Q. Kondo, at the time you were originally served with the charges and specifications in this case, were you also given a copy of your rights as an accused war criminal?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, Kondo, you have three rights as the accused, I would like to explain them to you again before you make your election as to what you wish to do in this case.
A. Yes.

Q. First of these three rights you have is that you have the right to make a statement under oath, that is sworn statement. No. 2, you have an election to make an unsworn statement, that is a statement not made under oath. In the event you elect either one of these two, prosecution may cross examine on any matters contained in the charges and specifications brought against you and are in no way limited on the matter brought out on direct examination.
A. Yes.

Q. No. 3, you may elect to remain silent. That means you need notsay anything in your own defense. But if you elect to remain silent the Commission may draw such inferences from your failure to testify as is fair and competent to a reasonable mind and the prosecution may comment as evidence of your guilt on your failure to take the stand and to testify in your own defense.
A. Yes.

Q. Now, with the explanation as to your three rights in this case, (1) to make a sworn statement, (2) to make an unsworn statement, (3) to remain silent, which do you elect to do?
A. I'll testify under oath.

Kenichi Kondo the accused in this case, at his own request, was then sworn and testified through the interpreters as follows:

Q. You had been a medical orderly during the first period you served in the Army. Is that correct?

Q. During this period from January to sometime in April 1945, what was your relationship with the prisoners of war?
A. At Ichioka or at the Main Camp?

Q. At Ichioka and at the Main Camp?
A. No relationship with the prisoners of war.

Q. Now will you give the Court your best recollection as to date in April 1945 when you finished your course at the Ichioka Hospital?
A. I have no definite recollection.

Q. Was it the end of April, the middle of April, or the first of April?
A. I have no recollection.

Q. What duties did you assumed in the camp upon completion of your course at Ichioka Hospital?
A. I gave medicine to the POWs and helped out on the diagnosis sheet and the daily report.

Q. And what time of day was this sick call held in April of 1945?
A. Just at night.

Q. Was this after the prisoners of war returned from work?
A. Yes.

Q. Where was this sick call held?
A. At the dispensary in the No. 1 and No. 2 Camps.

Q. How many prisoners of war were in the No. 1 Camp at that time; give your best recollection.
A. I believe there was about 330.

Q. In this No. 1 Camp, were these prisoners classified as to British or American prisoners of war?
A. In that Camp there were British, Indians, Chinese, Philippines, Italians and Cubans.
Q. Approximately how many prisoners of war were in the No. 2 Prisoner of War Camp?
A. About 300.

A. In No. 1, among the 300.
Q. How many did you attend the sick call for both the No. 1 and No. 2 Camps?
A. 600, at night.
Q. The sick call for both No. 1 and No. 2 Camps at the same time or different times?
A. I was working at the No. 1 Camp up until August so I do not know what was going on at the No. 2 Camp.
Q. You only attended sick calls for No. 1 until August 1943, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Just where in the camp were these sick calls held?
A. There was a treatment room in a small place.
Q. What prisoner of war medical personnel were at attendance at these sick calls?
A. At that time, Merritt.
Q. Any other prisoner of war medical personnel in attendance at these sick calls?
A. By sick call I mean just giving them medicine. It was so small that we could not have a regular sick call.
Q. Was this in the evening now that you are speaking of? Was any doctor in attendance at these evening sick calls?
A. Merritt had a list of what to give the patients and he received this list from the doctor, so we gave out this medicine from this list.
Q. From what doctor did he receive this list?
A. Doctor Hochman.
Q. Do you mean that then Doctor Hochman examined the patients he had this list of medicines compiled?
A. This was done before I got there, I had to take care of two camps so I could not be there at certain times and I had to do errands, so the time I got there was not definite.
Q. Only the only persons in attendance at these evenings when medicine was passed out were yourself and Merritt?
A. Yes.

Q. And this period continued from April of 1943 until August of 1943?
A. This continued until March or April and sometime the doctor may think when I gave out the medicine,

Q. May I ask, how often was the doctor there when you gave out medicine?
A. Do you mean Doctor Hoehnen or a Japanese doctor?

Q. I mean Doctor Hoehnen.
A. Doctor Hoehnen visited at the No. 1 and No. 2 Camps, he sometimes there I would have he was not there and sometimes he was still there when I got there,

Q. What is your first recollection of seeing Doctor Hoehnen at any sick call which you attended?
A. I met him right after I started working at the prisoner of war camp.

Q. The Commission then, at 2:15, recessed until 1:30 hours, at which time the appearance of the Commission, the prosecution and defense, the accused, the interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

The Witness entered the stand and was reminded he was still under oath.

Q. Mrs Kuhn, right after you started at the prisoner of war camp and right after you attended your first sick call it was some time in April of 1943, is that correct?
A. To the best I would say the first sick call.

Q. And what date was this?
A. In mid April.

Approximately how many prisoners of war were living in the Manila Bilibid

January 1943.

Q. Mrs Kuhn, how often did you find Doctor Hoehnen in attendance at these sick calls that during?
A. About three out of ten times.

Q. On those occasions that you saw Doctor Hoehnen, just what did Doctor Hoehnen do?
A. He was making examinations.

Q. What did you do?
A. At that time I gave the medicine that Doctor Hoehnen prescribed to the prisoners of war.

Q. What did [illegible] do?
A. [illegible] was injecting the patients.

Q. Was there any other medical personnel in attendance at these sick calls?
A. No.

Q. For how long a period did you only see Doctor Hoehnen in attendance at these sick call for three times out of every ten days?
A. When I first started working with the prisoners of war in April of 1943 until the merger of the No. 1 and No. 2 Camps in March of 1944.

Q. Mar. During this period from abt. April 1943 to abt March 1944, what other duties did you have in addition to your attendance at the evening sick call when you assisted the prisoners of war medical personnel?
A. I made entries into the diagnosis sheet, helped in the entries of the daily reports and helped in the writing of the daily report of the medicines that day. I also run errands of the unit and I went with the prisoners of war to the work places and went for them at night, and also performed other miscellaneous tasks like private errands, et cetera.

Q. Mar Kondo, was there a sick bay for prisoners of war on the British side of the camp?
A. It was not what we called a sick bay but they had one squad which consisted of sick prisoners.

Q. Did you have any occasion to visit this squad room where sick prisoners were isolated?
A. There were times when I brought medicines there.

Q. Between what periods did this sick reconcentrado, between what dates?
A. I do not remember for sure but it was when it started getting hot in 1943 until the troops were consolidated.

Q. How often would you bring medicines to this sick call room?
A. About every other day.

Q. Mar Kondo, when were sick calls first held in the morning?
A. When the No. 1 and No. 2 Camps were consolidated in March 1944.

Q. At that time how many prisoners of war were living in the new consolidated camp?
A. About 650.

Q. What time of day was sick call held?
A. In the mornings from 6:30 to 7:00 and in the evenings from about 5:00 to 6:00.

Q. Did you attend both of these sick calls?
A. Yes, both hours before.

Q. What other Japanese medical personnel were in attendance at these sick calls?

PROSECUTION: Are you referring to the morning or the evening sick call?

DEFENSE: No, just the morning.

PROSECUTION: Change your question.

DEFENSE: Refer him to the morning sick call only.

A. Yes, but from half a month to a month they changed around.

DEFENSE: He didn't answer my question. I asked what Japanese medical personnel were in attendance at these morning sick calls.

A. Superior Private Fujii were, Superior Private Hashimoto and for a while there was Superior Private Kato, Private First-Class Tanaka, Superior Private Kishimura, Superior Private Takata and Superior Private Shimatsuji; that is about all I remember.

Q. For how long a period of time where these various naval personnel in attendance at these sick calls?
A. From about half a month to a month.

Q. On these sick calls what would their duties be?
A. They came to the dispensary for training in preparing for work after being dispatched to the various dispatch camps.

Q. While they were in attendance at these sick calls for these periods, were they also in attendance at the evening sick call?
A. Yes, together with myself.

Q. Did prisoner of war medical personnel attended these morning and evening sick calls after the camps became consolidated in March of 1944?
A. As present by the name of Hewitt and Ginger, just those two.

Q. Did any doctor attended these sick calls?
A. Yes, Doctor Hashimoto,

Q. Did any Japanese doctor regularly attend these sick calls?
A. Yes, when I went to call somebody.

INTERPRETER: Sands, you are not answering the questions.

Q. Was there any Japanese doctor there in regular attendance at these sick calls?
A. No.

Q. What were Doctor Hashimoto's duties on these sick calls?
A. To examine the patients.

Q. What were Hewitt's duties on these sick calls?
A. Hewitt and Ginger treated the patients and they also took down the numbers of the prisoners of war that were to be absent from work and the numbers of the prisoners of war that were to go to proper work.

Q. What were your duties on these sick calls?
A. I would prepare the medicines which Doctor Hashimoto prescribed and record the numbers of the prisoners of war and the prescriptions on the book; I would also help in the treatment.

Q. Now Sands, on any of these sick calls, did yourself and Doctor Hashimoto disagree as to whether or not a prisoner of war was sick or well to go to work?
A. No.

Q. Can you give this Commission approximately the first date on which any of these disagreements arose?
A. It was around mid March of 1944; Doctor Hara would make unreasonable demands at times.

PRESIDENT'S: I ask that any remarks after 1944 be restricted as not responsive.

DEFENSE: That is a technical objection.

PROSECUTION: This is a chief witness for the defense. I have not objected to any leading questions just to expedite the matter but now we are getting to the heart of the issue and I think all answers should be responsive to the question.

LAW MEMBER: What was the question?

DEFENSE: It was just the date he objected to.

PROSECUTION: Counsel asked the witness to give the first day he had disagreement with Doctor Hoshuna. The answer started to come back "mid March."

DEFENSE: If they are so insistent we will consent to it, but it certainly opens the door---

PROSECUTION: Let me say this if I might. It is my understanding when I took the assignment to assist in the trial of these war criminals, it was my duty to see or try to see that these trials were conducted in accordance with rules and regulations as laid down by the High Command; that plus the rules laid down by law. I feel that I and Mr. Rapp would be neglectful in our duties if we did not object to questions that we think are improper.

LAW MEMBER: Your premise is correct. Have the witness answer the question, let him answer the question. You must remember that the Japanese do not answer as directly as we do and we must be somewhat lenient.

PROSECUTION: The only point I am making is let him testify of his own knowledge responsive to the questions.

LAW MEMBER: Correct.

Q. Now Kondo, you testified that in mid March of 1944 that was the first time you disagreed with Doctor Hoshuna, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, could you state approximately how often any of these disagreements arose between yourself and Doctor Hoshuna?
A. They would occur from time to time, but I cannot remember how often.

Q. Did they happen daily, Kondo?
A. No, not every day.

Q. Approximately, how many times in a week would they arise?
A. In 1944 we had these disagreements about once or twice a week, but in 1945, when Doctor Hoshuna became very cranky with us, we had these disagreements about three or four times a week.

DEFENSE: Will you tell him from now on just to answer questions as they are put to him and not to be volunteering anything.

Q. What kind of patients did these disagreements arise over, that is in the general course of these disagreements?
A. They were mostly over patients with fever.

Q. How did you determine whether or not a patient had a fever?
A. With a thermometer.

Q. How did you take this temperature with the thermometer?
A. The American thermometers that came in the relief supplies were used in the mouth by Doctor Horvath and Singer. The Japanese thermometers were used under the arm pits.

Q. Can you tell the Commission the reason why disagreements arose between yourself and Doctor Hoshuan?
A. It was because Medical Officer Nogu told us to send the patients with 37.5 degrees centigrade, with temperature of 37.5 degrees centigrade, out to work.

Q. When did he first make this statement to you?
A. It was immediately after the camps were incorporated in March 1944.

PROSECUTION: I wonder if counsel for the defence could state for the record how much in terms of our degrees is 37.5 centigrade?

DEFENCE: It is about 99.5 degrees Fahrenheit.

Q. What was Doctor Noma's position at the camp?
A. Diagnosis and supervision of general office work in the dispensary.

Q. What was his position in relation to the medical personnel in this camp?
A. He was the ranking medical officer and in charge of the dispensary.

Q. Where was Doctor Noma's office in relation to this consolidated dispensary that was set up in March 1944?
A. The office was about 20 metres from the dispensary.

Q. Were they in the same building?
A. Yes, in the same hallway.

Q. Kondo, you have stated that a prisoner of war would have had to have a temperature of 37.5 degrees centigrade before he could be excused from work; you stated that it was began on the first time that Doctor Noma complained to you in March 1944. How did Doctor Noma make any further complaints to you?
A. Yes, frequently; it was not only 10 or 20 times.

Q. You mean it was more than 10 or 20 times?
A. It was more than that.

Q. Now Kondo, do you know what the complaints were for these complaints that Doctor Noma registered with you?
A. It was because we had sent a lot of men out to work.

DEFENCE: Is that right, did you give him the right question?

The interpreter repeated the question to the witness.

PRESIDENT: I suggest you ask him point-blank what the complaints were about.

A. The reason for this was I was letting patients with a temperature below 37.5 absent themselves from work and when this used to occur, he used to call me into his office.

Q. What is the normal temperature, Kondo, of a person expressed in centigrade?

A. To learned that it was from 96.5 to 97 degrees centigrade.

Q. Did Doctor Kuma ever complain or make any statement about anything else except the temperature of the prisoners of war?
A. Yes.

Q. And what were those complaints?
A. He told us to send the men with light diarrhea out to work.

Q. Sumiko, did you ever have prisoners of war bring their stools to sick call for you to see?

[illegible] I object on the grounds that the question is leading. The question should be: When prisoners of war had diarrhea, what would you do when they came to sick call?

LAW [illegible] Do you have anything to say?

DEFENSE: No sir, I have nothing to say about leading questions.

LAW [illegible] Read the question.

The reporter read back the question.

LAW [illegible] And you are objecting to it?

PROSECUTION: Yes sir, as I said, this witness is the heart of the defense. He should testify of his own knowledge without being led. The question should be: When prisoners of war had diarrhea, what would you do when they came to sick call?

LAW MEMBER: It is a leading question and the objection is sustained. Do [illegible] and rephrase the question.

Q. Sumiko, what would a prisoner of war have to do to be excused from work if he complained he was suffering from diarrhea?
A. Doctor Kuma told me that if they had to go to the latrine less than five or six times then they would be sent out to work, if they had to go out more than five or six times they would be kept in.

Q. How would you determine whether or not a prisoner of war had been to the latrine more than five or six times?
A. I used to ask the dutyman.

Q. What doctor is that?
A. Doctor Nochuma.

Q. And if Doctor Nochuma recommended that a man stay in because he went to the latrine more than five or six times, what would you do?
A. Then I let them rest.

Q. Did Doctor Kuma ever attend the sick call?
A. Yes, then we used to call him to look after the patients.

Q. On how many occasions did Doctor Kuma come to examine prisoners of war?
A. In the morning or the evening?

Q. In the morning first, just sick call Kondo, no other time.
A. I do not remember for sure but I believe it was 10 or 15 times.

Q. What procedure did you have to go through to get Doctor Naruo to attend the sick call in the morning?
A. First I would tell Medical Officer Noma who would order Naruo.

Q. Approximately how many times did you go to the office to get Doctor Naruo to come on sick call?
A. I told Medical Officer Noma to have him come down every day if possible, but I was refused.

Q. Do you know the reason for this refusal?
A. I do not know.

Q. Why did you request of Doctor Noma that Doctor Naruo attend these sick calls in the morning?
A. This was because at first Medical Officer Miyatake came but he came for only a while and Doctor Hashman and I thought that Doctor Naruo would be better, that is why I requested his help.

Q. You stated that Doctor Naruo actually did come between 10 and 15 times; now just what was the reason that you went to Doctor Noma and requested Doctor Naruo to come and examine the patients on sick call?
A. When Doctor Hashman stated that the patients had a fever so that they should be resting, if I made them rest that Doctor Noma would scold me, so I thought if I called Doctor Naruo and got his opinion that I would not get all of the blame.

The Commission then, at 1152, recessed until 1330, at which time the personnel of the Commission, the prosecution and defense, the accused, the interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness resumed the stand and was reminded he was still under oath.

DEFENSE: Would you read the last question.

The reporter read back the last question and answer.

Q. Now, had these patients been examined by Doctor Hashman prior to their examination by Doctor Naruo?
A. Yes.

Q. On each of these occasions, approximately how many prisoners of war would be examined by Doctor Naruo?
A. About one or two each time, so about ten altogether.

Q. Could you tell this Commission exactly what disposition was made of the patients that Doctor Naruo examined on these occasions?
A. About half of them rested and about half of them went to "paper work."

Q. What had been Doctor Hashman's recommendations as to disposition of these prisoners of war that Doctor Naruo had examined?
A. The two of them conferred and made a decision so I believe there was no objection.

Q. [illegible] how many times did Doctor Ando appear on these morning sick calls?
A. I do not remember the exact number but I believe it was around three or four times.

Q. Now, did you have to go through the same procedure to get Doctor Ando to come and examine these patients as you did for Doctor Hayes?
A. Yes, that is according- [illegible] tell me if they were to work or

Q. Approximately how many times did you go to Doctor Ando and request Doctor Ando's attendance at sick calls in the morning? [illegible]
A. About 15 or 20 times. [illegible] would not [illegible]

Q. Did you ever request the appearance of Doctor Miyatake at any of these sick calls?
A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever come? [illegible]
A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?
A. Three times. [illegible] I would be in

Q. On how many occasions did you request that this doctor accompany
A. About six or seven times. [illegible] but I did all

Q. When did Corporal Hirsima first started attending these sick calls with you?
A. I believe it was around October. [illegible]

PROSECUTOR: What year, please? [illegible]

Q. What year?
A. 1944.

Q. Approximately how often did he attend these sick calls? [illegible]
A. At least twice and most [illegible] or four times a week [illegible]

Q. For how long a period did he attend these sick calls? [illegible]

PROSECUTOR: Who are you referring to now? [illegible]

DEFENSE: Corporal Hirsima, the man who testified [illegible]

A. From October 1944 until the 14th [illegible] the 23 days.

Q. That is when you left the camp? [illegible]
A. Yes. [illegible]

Q. Now, just exactly what did Hirsima do on the mornings he attended sick calls?
A. Hirsima came to supervise me on Yosu's orders.

Q. Did he do anything else at these sick calls other than to supervise?
A. He helped me until the second and also helped me in the prescriptions.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Q. If a prisoner of war came on sick call complaining of diarrhea and said he had been to the latrine many times, five or six times, would you accept his statement that he was suffering from dysentery without any further proof?
A. Yes.

Q. And what would you have those patients do, if anything?
A. A doctor would diagnose them and tell me if they could go to work or not, then I would tell this to Hara and Hara would tell me that I should send them to work, so I would go and tell the doctor and if the doctor could not do anything about it then he would send them to work, but if he still objected then I would put them to "paper work."

Q. What doctor?
A. Doctor Hoffman.

Q. Did you have any other duties in addition to attending sick calls of the prisoners of war every day?
A. Yes. [illegible]

Q. What were those duties?
A. I would have day duty and I would also have night duty, I would be in charge of treatment of the patients from the 66th Camp personnel and the 100 men from the Chihkai Hospital Unit, and other than that I would have miscellaneous duties. I forgot to mention earlier but I did all the reporting work and I did all the work recording the patients of the prisoners of war patients.

Q. What did you do with this daily sick report which you compiled on sick call each day?
A. I brought it to medical officer Hara.

Q. Do you recall a mumps epidemic in the winter of '44-'45?
A. Yes.

Q. When this epidemic originally broke out, how many POWs were involved?
A. At first there were about 15, but later on there were from 20 to 25.

Q. When the first ones broke out, just what actually was done with these prisoners of war?
A. I reported this to Lt. Hara and had them put into sick bay.

Q. How long did these prisoners of war remain in sick bay?
A. The ones that received first stayed in for about 15 days. The ones that received slowly stayed in from 25 to 30 days.

Q. Were any of these prisoners of war who were suffering from mumps ever sent out to work?
A. No, absolutely not.

Q. Do you know a Lt. Matsumura?
A. Yes.

Q. What were his duties at the camp?
A. He was the labor supervisor and took care of all the matters concerning prisoner of war labor.

Q. Was he your commanding officer?
A. He was not a commanding officer, but he was more or less in the chain of command.

Q. Just what was his relationship with you?
A. Generally I received the usual orders from that headquarters, but orders in matters concerning the prisoners of war I received the orders from Matsumura.

Q. Did he ever make any suggestions to you about the manner in which sick call was being conducted?
A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?
A. When there were too many patients he would tell me to send men out to work because the commanding officer was displeased.

Q. Can you give any occasion on which he stated this by giving us the date?
A. I was told once around January, 1945, and I believe I was told a few other times but I do not remember the exact date.

Q. Can you recall for this Commission how many times he made such statements to you?
A. I believe around three times.

DEFENSE: At this time, Sir, after having gone through various numbers who were in the camp at the time and have been identified by Kondo, I had intended to put this exhibit in evidence through him by showing that it had been translated from a copy made out by him and certified to as correct by one of the interpreters in the Higashi Camp Headquarters. Doing but rather than go through that procedure and to expedite matters, the prosecution has consented that this Osaka Main Camp Chain of Command be introduced in evidence as Defense Exhibit C, and he would like to make a remark or two about any questions that he may encounter. At this time, Sir, we make this offer as Defense Exhibit C, to be withdrawn at the conclusion of the trial and a photographic copy or a photostatic copy be substituted in lieu thereof and attached to the record.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution has no objection to the offer of this document, relying on the word of the defense counsel that as far as he knows this is the chain of command. I have no information about all of these small people, but I will take his word for it. However, we do take exception to Corporal Hirata who was mentioned under "examination room", because he is also listed under "medical office", and is also listed as one of the persons who served in the examination room at one time or another. His own testimony is that he was only there six or seven months. There was three all the time. I don't think he should appear under "examination room". Other than that, I have no objection at all.

LAW MEMBER: The chart will be accepted in evidence on the basis as you presented it.

DEFENSE: We had also intended to have this identified by Dr. Haruo, who was there for a period of three years, but due to the fact that we had to get his testimony by stipulation, we couldn't have him identify the chart.

PROSECUTION: I don't see why you can't strike that. It shows Hinata was in the examination room here.

DEFENSE: The Commission understands that you are admitting the exhibit, but was making any objection to [illegible] Japanese at sick call.

LAW MEMBER: That is what I meant; you can attack it. It will be accepted in evidence.

[illegible] counsel in withdrawing the question. There is no

Q. Kondo, did you make a statement to the prosecutor, Mr. Rand, in the presence of an interpreter on the 21st of May, 1946?
A. Yes.

Q. At the time this statement, Kondo, was originally made, was there anyone else present besides Mr. Rand and the interpreter?
A. Yes.

Q. Who?
A. A person by the name of Hoshijima. [illegible] would that question and in this confession?

Q. Was this the same Hoshijima who was the chief of the prisoners of war of the camp?
A. Yes. [illegible] is exactly the same as the name Hoshijima [illegible] I think we are merely going to [illegible]

Q. Now, it is correct that you signed this statement voluntarily, is that not true?
A. I was told to read all this and also the will signed [illegible] by this

Q. Kondo, do you have any questions within this confession that you would like to explain to the Commission at this time?
A. Yes.

Q. What question or questions would you like to make a statement to the Court about at this time?
A. I believe there is something missing from No. 30.

PROSECUTION: Would you read that question?

DEFENSE: Yes, I'm going to. [illegible] I'm trying to say that another question [illegible] and the

Q. Question 30 is "The medical section [illegible] was able to go to work with 38 men to sick call." The answer is "I decided whether a man was able to go to work or not."

Now, what would you like to state at this time in regard to Question 30, Kondo?
A. When I first answered it, I answered it like this: "Dr. Hoshima decided whether the men would work and I did things according to what he said, but in case of doubt I would act according to the Japanese medical corps' instructions."

[illegible] this time as to [illegible]

Kondo are a few more things. When I was asked who was always at the dispensary, I answered I was there most of the time.

Q. That question "The was at the dispensary most of the time" and your answer "I was there" does not appear, Kondo, in this confession. Will you explain that to this Commission? [illegible] answer is "I was there most of the time."

Will you explain to the court what you thought that meant at the time you signed it?

DEFENSE: [illegible] I was mistaken about that. I will withdraw it. Question 24 says "Who was the dispenser at sick call each morning for P.O.W.", and the answer was "I was".

PROSECUTION: [illegible] counsel is withdrawing his question, there is no [illegible] on it.

DEFENSE: Read back the question.

The question was read back.

DEFENSE: Strike that question and ask this one instead.

Q. Isn't it not you were asked "Who spent most of the time in the dispensary" and you replied "You were". Just exactly where would that question and answer appear if it were contained in this confession?

PROSECUTION: If the Commission please, in view of the fact that the answer that is in there is apparently the same as the one the witness is trying to say is left out, I think we are merely going to get the witness confused by going into it. The purport is the same; just a few different words but the meaning is the same and unless there is an essential point in continuing this, I think the witness is going to be confused and we are not going to accomplish anything by this.

DEFENSE: Sir, he is liable to state that the answer should appear somewhere around 30. Read back my question.

The question was read back.

INTERPRETER: I think he is kind of mixed up, sir.

PRESIDENT: Is he claiming that Question 24 is not answered correctly?

DEFENSE: No, sir, I believe he is trying to say that another question was asked him by the interpreter down around Question 30, and the two questions were put together and signed as the answer to Question 30. And he seems to indicate that he did not answer Question 30 as it appears here.

PRESIDENT: He has modified that as he testified.

DEFENSE: Sir, we'll withdraw any further questions other than what he has testified to.

Q. Sgt. [illegible], do you have any other questions in this confession you would like to clarify at all to the Court at this time as to what you thought they meant at the time you signed this confession?

A. Yes.

Q. What number is it?

A. No. 33.

Q. No. 33 is "Who had the final decision as to whether a P.O.W. went to work or not?" The answer is "I made the final decision."

Will you explain to the Court what you thought that meant at the time you signed it?

A. To this question I really answered the officer of the day had the right after that I answered [illegible] to the question anything [illegible] and to the dispensary], the sentence was added upon [illegible] or by hearing and I would like for you to change it for me before

Q. Rather will you simply refer Commission wholly that your answer will be sufficient but give a complete answer don't just say the thing was added upon reading the matter with it and "You will be

A. [illegible] "The officer of the day made the final decision." I signed this.

Q. Was anything else said by you at that time to this question?

A. [illegible], but I am going into the specifications.

Q. Will you tell the Commission what else you said?

A. That I was asked "Who was at the dispensary?" I answered "I was at the dispensary."

The Commission then took a recess until 1130 hours, at which time

Q. You were asked "Who was at the dispensary?" and your reply "I was at the dispensary", was this question asked by the interpreter in conjunction with Question 39 as it appears here?

A. That question was immediately following No. 39.

Q. Now, do you have any other questions that you would like to clarify to this Commission at this time or any answer?

A. I would like to revise something near the end of No. 39.

I direct your attention to page [illegible] question I read to you if you recall?

Q. And what is number of [illegible] David M. Smith?

A. No.

INTERPRETER: What is the question number, Mr. Duffy?

[illegible] refer you to specification 2 and ask you if you know an American DEFENSE: It is identified [illegible] M. Smith?

A. No.

PROSECUTION: Mr. Duffy, why don't you just ask the question I propounded and omit him to give the answer to you now? [illegible] ask you if you remember an Italian by the name of [illegible] Serafini?

A. I would like to change the details in it. I would like to change that to "Sanders and Kimura came because I struck Horsley".

Q. [illegible] do you first recall seeing this [illegible] Serafini?

DEFENSE: Sir, the explanation of the Horsley incident in which he stated he struck Horsley, the last sentence of that reads "Sanders and Kimura came because I was striking Horsley". Evidently he wants to change it to "because I struck Horsley". [illegible] duty or honest [illegible].

Q. Do you have anything else you want to change in that?

A. No. Now, on this specification you are charged with [illegible] this was not to work when he was physically unable to do so, and despite

Q. Did you first identify Sanders before you signed [illegible]. Now,

A. Does [illegible] you, as you recall seeing S. E. Sanders [illegible] all at any time in mid-part January, 1943?

Q. And did you make any questions of the interpreters in regards to questions 30, 33, and 39 that you have clarified to the Court at this time? [illegible] Sanders at the dispensary during January of 1943?

A. Yes, I told the interpreters.

A. [illegible] not while I was [illegible].

Q. And what did you tell the interpreters?

[illegible] what did you say? [illegible] At any time did you say [illegible] in connection with Sanders that he was ill in January of 1943?

A. No, as far as [illegible] was not ill in January.

A. I told them that I read this and found that there were a few phrases with mistakes, and they might either be mistakes of interpretation or in my hearing and I would like for you to change it for me before I signed it. There were two interpreters and the two interpreters talked among themselves and told me the same thing is written in English, so there is nothing the matter with it and "You will be able to change it in Court if you wish". So, taking their word, I signed it.

DEFENSE: Now, sir, I don't know whether you want to take a recess or not, but I am going into the specifications.

PRESIDENT: At this point the Commission will recess for 10 minutes.

The Commission then took a recess until 1130 hours, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

Q. You have a copy of the charges and specifications, Kondo?
A. Yes.

Q. I direct your attention to Specification 1 and ask you if you recall an American prisoner of war named David W. Smith?
A. No.

Q. I refer you to Specification 2 and ask you if you know an American prisoner of war named Robert W. Rose?
A. No.

Q. I direct your attention to Specification 3 and ask you if you remember an Italian by the name of C. B. Serafin?
A. Yes.

Q. What do you first recall seeing this Italian, C. B. Serafin?
A. I saw him when Serafin was an officer's orderly.

Q. Do you recall what date that was?
A. I do not know for sure, but I believe it was around July or August of 1943.

Q. Now, Kondo, in this specification you are charged with forcing this man out to work when he was physically unable to do so, and denying him necessary medical treatment in and about January, 1945. Now, Kondo, I ask you, do you recall saying C. B. Serafin on sick call at any time in and about January, 1945?
A. He did not come to sick call.

Q. Did you see C. B. Serafin at all in the dispensary during January of 1945?
A. No, not while I was there.

Q. I don't mean at sick call now. I mean at any time did you see Serafin ill and registering any complaints that he was ill in January of 1945?
A. No, as far as I remember I did not see him in January.

Q. Now, Kondo, do you ever recall treating Serafin at all or assisting in his treatment?
A. If it was sometime in 1944 I remember that he came.

Q. When in 1944?
A. It was while Serafin was doing "paper work".

Q. And just what do you recall about Serafin in regard to treating him at any time?
A. No, I cannot remember anything.

DEFENSE: Will the reporter read back the question.

The question was read back.

DEFENSE: Would you put that question to him again in Japanese?

The question was repeated to the witness by the interpreter.

A. I do not remember what sickness he came for.

Q. Do you recall him ever coming to you?
A. Yes, he did come.

Q. On how many occasions do you recall his ever coming to you on sick call?
A. No, I cannot recall.

DEFENSE: Would you put that question to him again, please?

The question was repeated by the interpreter.

A. No, I cannot remember.

Q. You cannot remember how many times he came?
A. Yes.

Q. Can you recall the last time he came?
A. I do not know for sure, but it was one month before he went out to work, so I think it was sometime in September or October of 1944.

Q. Do you recall what he was treated for at this time?
A. No, I do not remember.

Q. Do you recall Dr. Hochman treating him for any ailment at any date later than September of 1944?
A. I received a report from Dr. Hochman in January of 1945 saying that he had a fever.

Q. And by "he" do you mean Serafin?
A. Yes.

Q. Approximately when in January did you get this report from Dr. Hochman?
A. It was on the morning of 16 January. If I look at the diagnosis sheet I can tell for sure.

Q. Can you recall what Dr. Hochman said was his ailment?
A. Yes.

Q. What did he say was his ailment?
A. He told me that Serafin had a fever from the previous night and was resting in bed. He told me that he was suffering from bronchitis.

Q. Did you see Serafin the morning of the 16th at all?
A. No.

Q. Did Dr. Hoshman state what treatment he was prescribing for Serafin other than that for the fever?
A. He told me that he gave him some aspirin the night before. He told me to give him some aspirin and stomach powders that day.

Q. As a result of Hoshman's recommendations, did you give him stomach powders and aspirin that day?
A. Yes, I immediately filled the prescription and gave it to him. Dr. Hoshman told me that it was not necessary to give him any antibiotics, so I did not give him any.

Q. Do you know what was done in further treatment of Serafin?
A. That is all I did, but since the Doctor had ordered the relief supplies they may have given him something from these supplies, but I do not know.

Q. Where did Serafin rest?
A. Within his own quarters.

Q. Was he ever placed in the hospital?
A. The day after the sickness, Noom made the rounds of the camp and he told me the following: He said he looked around the camp that day and he saw many flu patients and then he looked into the recuperation room to the many camp patients, and told Hoshman to stop hospitalizing all these patients. So I relayed this order to Dr. Hoshman.

Q. Mgm. Kondo, we are talking about Serafin. What, if anything, did this have to do in connection with Serafin?

[illegible] Why I ask that last answer be stricken? It is not the least bit responsive to the question.

[illegible] If you let him answer this one it may tie it up.

A. That is all I did; I just filled out the prescription and I gave it to him.

[illegible] I think you better put the original question to him again.

[illegible] Then we have it all stricken?

[illegible] Strike the last two questions and answers and ask him the question over again.

PRESIDENT: When he replies that he gave some medicine to him, let him specify whether he gave it to Dr. Hoshman or Serafin.

[illegible]: Please repeat the previous question.

The reporter read back the question and it was translated to the witness.

A. [illegible] how much did you weigh then?
[illegible] about 140 lbs. a week and sometimes five times
Q. Do you know the reason why Serafin was not placed in the hospital?
A. [illegible] just during the summer months
[illegible], but in the winter only once or twice.
Q. Will you tell the Commission that reason please?
A. The [illegible] for this was because Sh. Hans told me that there were only [illegible] patients in the sick bay, and if we put him there he might [illegible] the diseases from the others, so he told me to keep him [illegible] was usually between twelve and two o'clock [illegible].
Q. [illegible] do you know Serafin?
A. Yes.
Q. How, [illegible], do you recall [illegible] the summer of 1944 he [illegible]
Q. How for how long a period after the 16th of January did Serafin stay in the [illegible] compound?
A. The [illegible] under this [illegible] in which [illegible] that want to [illegible] them about it because there were [illegible] who were violating [illegible]
Q. And what part of treatment did Serafin receive during these two days?
A. I don't [illegible] what sort of treatment he received, because Merritt and Ginger made the treatments.
Q. About what time of night did this incident take place
Q. Mr. Kinsler, you stated that you were told to give Stomach powders and aspirin to Serafin on the 16th. Now, did you actually give these to Serafin yourself or did you give them to Merritt and Ginger to give [illegible] to Serafin?
A. I gave it to Merritt.
Q. Now, Hardy, just [illegible] did this incident occur?
Q. Now Hardy I direct your attention to Specification 1 and ask you to do you know a Soviet-British prisoner of war named Albert M. Herbert?
A. Yes I do but remember [illegible] among the prisoners of [illegible] making a sort of racial slurred "Nazi", so I hit this prisoner of war
Q. Do you recall any British prisoner of war that came on sick call between 1 January and 16 February, 1944 complaining of stomach ulcers?
A. At that time we did not have any stomach ulcer patients.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall any patients suffering from stomach ulcers who came to you on sick call and asked for pardon and were slapped by you?
A. I remember one stomach ulcer patient but I did not hit him.
A. As I started to leave, [illegible] about, pertain to the award
Q. Now Hardy I direct your attention to Specification 3 and ask you if you know a Sergeant John R. Smith, a Sergeant Norbert M. Vostal, a Private Gilbert G. Gregory, a Private Lyle Wood, and a Private John McCarthy, American prisoners of war?
A. No, I do not remember them, but after seeing the [illegible] I do recall that in the war we [illegible] Ginger, as I knew
Q. Now Hardy, was there a rule in effect in this camp that all prisoners would sleep in the summer time with a blanket over their stomach?
A. Yes [illegible]
Q. [illegible] other than that [illegible]
A. Lt. Hoon's order.
Q. Did you make tours of inspection to see that prisoners of war complied with this order?
A. Yes.
[illegible]

Q. Approximately how often did you make these trips?
A. From [illegible] to four times a week and sometimes five times.

Q. [illegible] during the summer months?
A. [illegible] in the winter only once or twice.

Q. [illegible] what time did you make these inspection trips, what time of night?
A. There was no definite time on which I would make my rounds, but it [illegible] between twelve and one o'clock [illegible] between ten to three.

Q. Now, Hondo, do you recall any evening in the summer of 1944 in which any person or prisoners of war were shrunk by you while you were making these inspections?
A. Yes, I remember this: It is when I was on my rounds and went to [illegible] there were many who were violating the rule of playing a blanket over their [illegible] I went over to caution them.

Q. About what time of night did this incident take place? The summer of [illegible] a little before roll call, between eight and nine, [illegible]
Q. between eight and nine in the evening?
A. Yes.

Q. [illegible] Hondo, just how did this incident arise [illegible]
A. I went around to caution the prisoners of war and when I went to the [illegible] No. 7 Squad was, after I finished cautioning No. 7 Squad and started to leave, someone among the prisoners of war who was making a lot of noise shouted "Baka", so I hit this prisoner of war who said this [illegible] him.

Q. Did you strike the prisoner of war who said the word "Baka"?
A. [illegible] a Nisei war and I knew him to be, but I did not strike him.

Q. How did you determine that he was the prisoner of war who had said "Baka"?
A. As I started to leave, someone shouted "Baka", someone in the second [illegible] shouted "Baka", so as I turned around I saw all the prisoners of war turned around and look in that direction, and when I looked in that direction I saw one man just lying in his bed and all the prisoners of war were looking at him. At that time there was a guard with a rifle making his rounds, and after someone shouted "Baka" he said "That is the man" and pointed his finger, so I knew this person to be the one that shouted "Baka".

Q. How many times did you slap this prisoner of war?

PROSECUTION: He did not say that he had slapped him as I recall it.

DEFENSE: I withdrew the question.

Q. Did you slap him, William Hondo?
A. Yes.

Q. Where was this person when he was slapped?
A. He was sitting in his bed.

Q. [illegible] of war was to work I ordered the [illegible]
A. [illegible] after hearing about these patients from Singer and Merritt, and [illegible] submitted the daily report to the
Q. [illegible] office [illegible] to
A. At that time [illegible] was wrong on the report. I then told Singer and Merritt that there was a discrepancy in one
Q. [illegible] report and both of them claimed that there was no
A. [illegible], and I told them that the report at the labor office about the laborers [illegible] did not like to be, went out and instructed
Q. [illegible]
A. [illegible]
Q. [illegible]
A. [illegible]
Q. [illegible]
A. [illegible]

A. The day after the prisoners of war went to work I entered the patients' records on the daily report after hearing about these patients from Ginger and Merritt, and then I submitted the daily report to the medical office and labor office. The labor office later reported to me that there was something about one person wrong on the report. I then told Ginger and Merritt that there was a discrepancy of one person on the report and both of them claimed that there was no mistake, and I told them that the report at the labor office about the labourers and patients did not jibe so they went out and inspected the barracks. After awhile the two of them came back bringing with them Hawley. I asked Hawley why he absented himself without reporting and was anything wrong with him and "Why did you not report to Ginger and Merritt before you absented yourself from work?" I asked him this several times and then I said "Why don't you say something?" and hit him. I then said "Don't be caught by the Japanese officers today" and let him go. I told him to go back to bed. After awhile Sanders, the interpreter Kimura, and Hawley came to me and Sanders, through the interpreter Kimura, asked me why I struck Horsley. I told him that no matter how much I asked him something, he would not answer so I struck him. Then Sanders told me that Hawley had the permission of the day duty officer Kajiyama to be absent from work. I then asked them "Why don't you tell me these things, either call Ginger or Merritt and tell him", and then Sanders told me that "He is only a youth of 17; that is probably why he didn't tell you". Then I said "I do not know his age, but if anything like this happens again let me know, let us know previously".

Q. Kondo, how many times was Horsley struck?
A. Five or six times with both of my open hands.

Q. In the face or where?
A. In the face.

Q. Did the duty officer report to you or did you ever receive a report that Hawley had been ordered to stay in from work?
A. No, I did not hear anything.

Q. Do you have anything else you would like to say about Specification 8?
A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell it to the Commission, please?
A. It is the custom of some armies that there is a great deal of shame when a person strikes a youngster of only 17, and I am very sorry about this incident.

Q. I direct your attention to Specification 9 and ask you if you know a former American prisoner named Age Harreby Knudsen?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall ever striking Knudsen on or about August, 1944?
A. I did not strike him.

Q. Do you recall of ever having stricken Age Harreby Knudsen?
A. In 1944 Knudsen sustained injuries at work. I made a report of this incident. I saw him for the first time then, and after this accident I did not see him.

Q. What was your rank while you were there? [illegible] came
A. Superior [illegible] there.

Q. Were there any other Japanese medical personnel at the Army Oeyama Camp? struck by your [illegible]
A. Yes, when I went there there was one superior private, [illegible] Takashima. I object to that question. What difference does that make in this case?
Q. Were there any other medical personnel there?
A. Yes, a medical NCO, Sergeant Hayashi.

Q. While you were at the Oeyama Prisoner of War Camp, did you ever attend sick call? [illegible] make in this case?
A. Yes.
[illegible] I don't see how prosecution can say it is immaterial
Q. And who were in attendance at these sick calls?
A. Do you want to know the Japanese personnel or the prisoners?
[illegible] to [illegible] the question with?
Q. I want to know both the Japanese personnel and the prisoner of war personnel.
A. Yes.

A. Sergeant Hayashi and myself, Dr. Bleich, a medical NCO named Harvey, and two of these other prisoner of war medical orderlies.

Q. Were these people who you have named in daily attendance at sick call?

A. Hay attended once a week when Dr. Bleich made a complete examination of the patients [illegible]

Q. Who was Dr. Bleich?

A. He was a prisoner of war doctor at Oeyama.

Q. Did you attend sick call daily?

A. It was not held every day. [illegible]

Q. How often did you attend sick call?

A. They held sick calls about once a week, and because I had to make entries into the diagnosis sheet I attended.

Q. Did you attend sick call daily, or did you just attend this examination conducted by Dr. Bleich once a week?

A. I attended once a week.

Q. At these sick calls that you attended once a week, what were your duties?

A. At that time I had to make entries into the diagnosis sheet when various illnesses of the patients changed and when the medical supplies changed, and I also had to enter the temperatures and pulse readings taken by Dr. Bleich, and when Hayashi told me to send light patients out to work I was sending them out.

Q. Did any Japanese personnel attend the regular daily sick call?

A. No.

Q. Were there any Japanese doctors in attendance at this camp?

A. Dr. Sakamaki attended about once a week, but the only cause for sickness of the sheet.

Q. Now, Kondo, at any time while you were in the Japanese Army, were you ever struck by your superiors?

PROSECUTION: I object to that question. What difference does that make in this case?

LAW MEMBER: What is it?

PROSECUTION: I object on the grounds it is irrelevant and immaterial. What difference does that make in this case?

DEFENSE: I don't see how prosecution can say it is immaterial in this case.

LAW MEMBER: The objection is overruled; the question will be answered.

A. Yes.

Q. On how many occasions?
A. Six times after I went to the prisoner of war camp.

Q. Who were these superiors?
A. [illegible]

Q. Now, Kondo, at any time while you were in the Army while you were at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp, did you ever have read to you or explained to you the Hague Convention of 1907 regarding the treatment of prisoners of war?
A. [illegible]

Q. At any time while you were in the Japanese Army or at the Osaka Prisoner of War Camp, did you ever have read or explained to you the Geneva Convention of 1929 regarding the treatment of prisoners of war?
A. No, I have not heard of it or read it.

Q. Now, Kondo, would you take a look at the charges and specifications against you? I now ask you if you have anything you would like to say about anyone of these particular specifications?
A. Yes.

Q. Would you tell the Commission at this time?
A. After being confined at Sugamo Prison for 10 months and receiving the good treatment, and the generous and good treatment and without suffering any undue hardship, I feel very sorry about the way the prisoners of war were treated, and I realize now the difference of the treatment to the prisoners of war in my camp. I am very sorry about what yielded the prisoners after finding out that Japanese prisoners are not struck by American guards. I am also very satisfied with this public trial, and with the work of my defense counsels and investigators, and I am very glad to be brought to trial before this court.

Q. Do you have anything else you would like to say to this Commission at this time in defense of the charges and specifications against you?
A. [illegible]

PROSECUTION: I want to move that the entire statement that was just made by the defense and read into the record be stricken from the record, because it has no bearing on the guilt or innocence of this defendant and is merely an attempt to secure the sympathy of the Commission. I move it be removed as having no part in the case.

DEFENSE: I have nothing to say to that.

LAW MEMBER: The accused is having his day in court. This is [illegible] the testimony for what it is worth. The objection is not sustained.

[illegible]

[illegible] that he struck [illegible] and it was proper. [illegible] did he st[illegible] such a time, how was

Questioned by the prosecution:

Q. [illegible] was questioned at the Queen Mine [illegible] to [illegible] in the health and welfare of American prisoners of war, to that purpose?
A. I did by [illegible] explain.

Q. Do you remember my asking you to impose Prison on or about 21 May, 1945 and taking a statement from you?
A. Yes. [illegible] no recollection.

Q. Now, when I was there with Chief Spokane, did you give your statement voluntarily?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, Prosecution Exhibit 20 is written in Japanese; did you see that?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you read it? [illegible]
A. Yes.

Q. Does your signature appear on each of those 10 pages?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear Sergeant Ayoi testify on the stand?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear Sergeant Ayoi testify under oath that while he was [illegible] you hit him with your fists and knocked out two of his teeth, and he showed where the two teeth were missing? Did you hear him say that?
A. Yes. [illegible] did you hit those prisoners?
A. Yes. [illegible] a prisoner of war camp [illegible] to stay until one [illegible] Dr. Allard looked him over and

Q. Now, do you deny that you did that?
A. I [illegible] this point at that time.
[illegible] I would be made to realize [illegible] more. The prisoner did

Q. Now, prosecution has in evidence an affidavit from Joel T. Boone which states that while he [illegible] you hit him with your fists and you kicked him. [illegible] they brought back DEFENSE: What number is that? I would like you to hand it to him.

Q. Anything you are going to confront him with said by someone else should be said to him. [illegible] look well.

PROSECUTION: I am reading from it, but I haven't finished my question.

LAW MEMBER: Go ahead.

Q. (cont.) And Sergeant Ayoi on the stand under oath also stated that he saw you [illegible] with your fists and kick him. Did you do that, or didn't you?

DEFENSE: If it pleases the Commission, if you will recall the witness was asked if he knew George Boone and he said he did not know George Boone. Now, to put a question to him of this nature seems like a [illegible] he does not know, and he not answer.

A. [illegible] did he strike persons at such and such a time, because he does not recall the man's name. If he gets the witness to say
Q. [illegible] then the inference can be drawn that he is lying. This man has stated that he does not know German, English, and to put a question to him of this type would bring out the inference that he is lying.

[illegible] All I want him to say is yes or no. Am I to be limited in my cross examination?

[illegible] that objection be not sustained. [illegible]

A. I have no recollection.

[illegible] I object to the [illegible] explain if possible.

[illegible] I'll withdraw [illegible]. It is not [illegible] any specific reason.

Q. Why?

A. I do not remember.

[illegible]

Q. Did you ever hit anyone with your fists at sick call?
A. Yes.

[illegible] Sir, such a question will [illegible]—

Q. Who?

A. I cannot remember.

[illegible]

Q. How many times did you hit someone with your fist at sick call?
A. [illegible] by putting your hand to [illegible]

Q. Are those the two occasions that Corporal Hiraim testified to on the stand?
A. [illegible] requires a prisoner of war to bring you a report of his [illegible] based in it is to examination that he was [illegible]

Q. And why did you hit those prisoners?
A. [illegible] morning a prisoner of war came limping to sick call and told me [illegible]. The Medical Lecturer looked him over and said he could not tell the condition of this patient at that time, as the prisoner will [illegible] a few days. The prisoner did not come again the rest of that day or the following day, on Sunday. [illegible] on Sunday at around noon, I saw this prisoner and he was not limping. The following morning I told Singer and Hamlet about this and told them to go get this man. When they brought back this man he was limping again, so I called him a liar and hit him [illegible]

Q. How many times did you slap prisoners of war at sick call?
A. I did not slap anybody during sick call.

Q. Did you ever strike any sick American prisoners of war?
A. I have never struck a sick patient.

Q. [illegible] Prosecution Exhibit 8, the affidavit of Dr. Hoskyns, states [illegible] sick [illegible] over the head with books, slapped their faces, hit them with his fists, and kicked them. Is that correct or isn't it?
A. I cannot recall.

Q. [illegible] worked at the dispensary with you, didn't he? [illegible] that
A. [illegible]

[illegible]

Q. Now, Merritt worked in the dispensary with you, too, didn't he?
A. Yes.
[illegible] is not necessary, sir.
Q. Now Merritt, in Prosecution Exhibit 14, states "Kunde prescribed medicines and convinced the sick men. I ordered sick men do work in all kinds of weather, beat them and disturbed them at night when they were trying to sleep". Is that correct or isn't it?
A. I have no recollection.

Q. Now, both Dr. Heckman and Merritt worked with you at the dispensary while you were there. Will you try and explain to this Commission why these statements were made? [illegible] with blood in it. Did you hear Sergeant Ryan testify [illegible] bowel movements of about DEFENSE: I object to the word "why", "Will you explain" is permissible.
[illegible] in camp and not to be had to [illegible] you a sample of his PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw the word "try". It is not done for any specific reason.
[illegible] I would like a previous question that was not [illegible]
PRESIDENT: Will you repeat the question as changed [illegible] and not [illegible] for any other answer than to put before this Court. The question was read back by the reporter.

DEFENSE: Sir, such a question will call necessarily for [illegible] important [illegible] part of cross examination.
PROSECUTION: I'll consent to its withdrawal.
DEFENSE: [illegible] the door is also open as far as questions as to [illegible] are raised,
Q. Now, Kunde, in the operation of the dispensary, did you ever take a man's temperature by putting your hand to his forehead?
A. Yes, there were times when I did that [illegible] previous question.
Q. Did you ever require a prisoner of war to bring you a sample of his [illegible] with blood in it if he complained that he was suffering from diarrhea or dysentery? [illegible] Sergeant Ryan testified, he testified under oath; we had to. Any statement he made was made under oath.
DEFENSE: I don't believe, sir, there has been any stool with blood in it in previous testimony brought out to date. [illegible] attempt to [illegible] the witness.
PROSECUTION: I think Ryan did testify to that.
[illegible]: I would like to inform the witness that this Commission is LAW MEMBER: Did you want to take that time to read up to this—that was brought out in Sergeant Ryan's testimony, both blood and mucus.

DEFENSE: If the Commission remembers that I'll accept the Commission's ruling on it, I will withdraw the objection and stand by the Commission's ruling. [illegible] state that was in court.
[illegible]
A. Yes, at times when the patients were suffering from diarrhea or there was blood in the stools or when they suffered from diarrhea.

Q. Now, Kunde, if an American prisoner of war came to you and stated through Dr. Heckman that he had movements of over seven times, and didn't bring you a sample of his stool, would you permit him to stay in camp?
A. I made them [illegible] by the reporter.

Q. Then it was not necessary for a man to bring you a sample of his stool if he had diarrhea in order for him to stay in camp, is that correct?
A. It was not necessary.

A. Yes, I heard Sergeant [illegible] testify to that in Court, sir.
Q. Did you hear Sergeant Ryan state on the stand here under oath—

DEFENSE: Today "under oath" is not necessary, sir. The stenographer made [illegible] Court. That is PROSECUTION: Sir, I haven't finished my question. If counsel wants to object to it, I suggest he wait until I finish.
[illegible] will you change that to "stated"?
PRESIDENT: Continue.
[illegible] sir, it was inadvertently said. I would like to change
Q. (Cont.) Did you hear Sergeant Ryan testify under oath that he had diarrhea and that he had movements, but before he could be permitted
A. to stay in camp he had to bring you a stool with blood in it. Did you hear Sergeant Ryan testify that he had bowel movements of about
Q. [illegible] during a fourhour period, and that before you permitted him to stay in camp and rest he had to come and bring you a sample of his
A. stool with blood in it.

DEFENSE: I would like the previous question that had any mention of the
A. word "under oath" stricken because they are purely superfluous and are not made for any other purpose than to put before this Court evidence of a prejudicial nature. [illegible]
[illegible] Personal Property [illegible] American prisoner of PROSECUTION: Sir, everything is going to be prejudicial to the defendant
A. that I call on cross examination.

DEFENSE: We know the door is wide open on the cross examination to be asked, but there are certain methods of asking a question that are improper.
[illegible] when you were present with Mr. Holmes, did you [illegible] the PROSECUTION: I have an objection to the words being stricken from the previous question [illegible] prisoners of war
A. it. [illegible] told us to make [illegible].
DEFENSE: Sir, I am objecting to the original question that appears on
Q. the record. We know that when Sergeant Ryan testified, he testified under oath; he had to. Any statement he made was made under oath, [illegible] more mention of the fact that he testified under oath does not lend sanctity to his testimony. It is purely made in an attempt to
A. discredit the witness.

PRESIDENT: I would like to inform the defense that this Commission is not prejudiced by any statements made by either side. The witness will answer the questions [illegible] to.

A. I have no recollection [illegible] will never [illegible].

Q. I asked him if he heard Sergeant Ryan state that here in Court.
A. Yes.
The reporter will [illegible] question and answer.
Q. Now, is that true or isn't it?
Q. You testified with respect to the "bunga" incident that [illegible]
DEFENSE: That is an improper question, [illegible]
A. Yes.
LAW MEMBER: I want to hear that question.
Q. All of the witnesses [illegible] that [illegible] and
The question was [illegible] by the reporter as to
A. Yes.
LAW MEMBER: Objection sustained.

Q. Now, Kondo, you heard Sergeant Ryan testify to that in Court; are these facts true or was Sergeant Ryan trying to get rid of their sick condition so they were sent out to work, is that correct?

DEFENSE: I object to the use of the word "facts". The statements made by Sergeant Ryan, from my point, are not necessarily facts. That is what the Commission is here to ascertain.

LAW MEMBER: Will you change that to "statements"?

PROSECUTION: Sir, it was inadvertently said. I would be glad to change that to "statements".

A. I do not know, sir, that is.

Q. Now, Kondo, who was in charge of the dispensary of the Japanese medical personnel of war camp and the number 1 camp, you
A. Mr. Kondo all out to work, and the American prisoners of war complained because they felt that that was unnecessary. Did you say that?
Q. Who was in charge that was present at the dispensary?
A. That was myself.
Q. Now, Kondo, did you have the authority to overrule a decision of Dr. Hoshuma regarding a sick or regarding an American prisoner of war who came to the dispensary for treatment?
A. This was Mr. Kondo prisoners, statements correct or are they correct?
Q. Now, Kondo, apparently you didn't understand my question. At sick call in the morning when American prisoners of war appeared for treatment when you were present with Dr. Hoshuma, did you have the authority at that sick call to overrule Dr. Hoshuma regarding any treatment of an American prisoner of war? Is that statement correct or not?
A. Mr. Hoga told me to make the decisions.
Q. Did you ever overrule Dr. Hoshuma's decisions?

DEFENSE: I think, Mr. Kondo, if you ask him up to what? It is correct.

A. Yes. Before we go any further, I would like to check this. I am quite sure he said to me, I was not to work.

The Commission then recessed until 1032 hours, at which time all the personnel of the Commission, prosecution and defense, the accused, interpreters and the reporter resumed their seats.

The witness was reminded he was still under oath.

PROSECUTION: Will you read back the last question?

The reporter read back the last question and answer.

Q. You testified with regards to the "mumps" incident that no prisoners of war with mumps were sent out to work, is that right?
A. Yes. If he was not in this camp, I don't know about his
Q. All of the prisoners of war that had mumps were segregated and hospitalized until they got better, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. And it wasn't until they did get better and got rid of their camp
[illegible] that they were sent out to work, is that correct?
A. Yes, that is correct, I believe that is correct, because Medical Officer Ando and Dr. Hashima told me this.
Q. Now, you never took any American prisoner of war who had camps to work, did you?
A. No.
Q. You never [illegible]?
[illegible]: They, he didn't.
Q. Now, did you later interpret Ryan testimony on the stand that when the American prisoners of war got camps and the medical treatment, [illegible] with them all sent to camps and the American prisoners of war completed camps they felt that's that was contagious? Did you hear him say that?
A. Yes.
Q. Yes, he heard that?
[illegible]
Q. Now, is that correct; are those statements correct or aren't they correct?
A. As far as I know the two medical officers, Ando and Hashima, told [illegible] got sick and got sent to camp.
Q. Mary Thompson [illegible] that you, Ando, sent American prisoners of war [illegible] camps out to work. Is that statement correct or isn't it correct? [illegible]
A. I have never took them to work.
Q. Chief Justice on the stand stated you had sent American prisoners of war who took camps. Is that correct or isn't it correct?
[illegible]
DEFENSE: Before you go any further, I would like to check that. I am quite sure he said he took them to [illegible] again and [illegible]
PROSECUTION: This witness can say.
DEFENSE: That is not for him to say.
PROSECUTION: That is my best recollection.
DEFENSE: At this time I think I am correct, and I would like to check the record on it.
PROSECUTION: To save time, I'll withdraw the question.
LAW MEMBER: You can say it this way. Don't say that Chief Justice said it; say it was testified.
PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw the question; it is not important. The point has been made.

Q. Now, Sunday the Nazi didn't order those sick patients out to work, did he?
A. [illegible] prisoner if he was on the sick list until he had been
Q. Then what Nazi order there is which says prisoners of War belong would you send [illegible]?
Q. Now you just stated before that they did not go to work until they were all better; which statement is correct? Did the Nazi Luther [illegible] him?

DEFENSE: The inference, sir, given by the question is not correct. He
Q. stated that your guard said that they weren't sent out to work until they were entirely well. That is very broad. Now by putting a question to him in the effect that the last answer was they were sent out to work while they were ill, and that is not proper, would sir, in case and [illegible], all you know that?

PROSECUTION: Sir, he testified on cross examination first that these patients were hospitalized and were not sent to work until they were well, better, that we have been questioning him did Dr. Rosa send these patients out to work and he said "Yes". His statements are at variance.

Q. Sergt, did you ever refuse to give any medicine to any American DEFENSE: Let's get it straight to the witness.
A. No.
LAW MEMBER: The witness never used the word "cure". He said "better".
Q. You repeat the question and if [illegible] refused to give him
[illegible] for the Japanese was he going to put him then?
PROSECUTION: I'll withdraw the question. I won't press it any further.

Q. Sergt, if a man came to sick call and claimed he was injured at work,
A. what would be necessary before you would let him stay in camp?
Q. I would listen to Dr. Beckman's diagnosis, and if he had to stay in, then he would stay. But when Dr. Beckman's diagnosis differed with Dr. Rosa's diagnosis, and when I brought Dr. Beckman's diagnosis
A. to Dr. Rosa, my request would be turned down so I would talk this over with Dr. Beckman and he would send them out to paper work.
Q. Did that [illegible] you?
DEFENSE: The defense interpreter wants to make a statement to the court interpreter.
Q. Did you have the [illegible] and beyond about a meeting that The interpreters held a conference. The question was then again put to the witness by the court interpreters. The answer came back as follows:

A. If it was an injury sustained at work, then they would do whatever
Dr. Beckman said, never with you people treatment of American prisoners of war, your overruling of Dr. Beckman's decisions to send sick
PROSECUTION: Sir, let's state that now I believe the witness is confused.
Repeat the question to the witness and see what his answer will be.
A. Yes.
The reporter read back the question which was translated to the witness by the court interpreters, getting back [illegible]
Q. [illegible]
A. If a prisoner was injured at work, then a person from the work place
Q. would bring a certificate of the injured and come to sick call.
My helper would then diagnose this person and make out a certificate
A. stating that this person was injured while at work. He would then be allowed to rest from work.
Q. What were they [illegible] when they were first given you?

A. They were my [redacted] in July and early [redacted] I received [redacted]

Questions by the defense:

Q. [redacted] you received [redacted] those communications?

Q. Doctor, on cross examination you stated that prisoners of war who were suffering from diarrhea upon occasion brought stools for [redacted] up to your hut there. Was you told that information why you requested that the stools of diarrhea patients be brought before you?

A. The reason I told them bring their stools to me for examination was because [redacted] told me to do so many of the patients that told me with their mouth that they themselves had diarrhea or they had blood in their stool or high fever. In such cases [redacted] told me to have them bring their stools to me and I would send them to the hospital for examination.

Q. Now, Hondo, just what happened so far as child visiting procedure or treatment for a prisoner of war who was injured at work?

PROSECUTION: I am objecting to the question only because I feel it has been answered by the witness twelve and is thereby repetitious.

LAY MEMBER: Objection not sustained; proceed Lt's get along.

A. When a prisoner of war sustained an injury at work the Japanese supervisor of this work place and the prisoner of war squad leader would bring this injured person to the dispensary, and then we would have to furnish sixteen with printed that we would make out a certificate stating that this person was injured at work, and also have the company make out a statement stating that they witnessed this person being injured that he would be allowed to rest.

Q. Just what sort of injury would a person have to suffer before Dr. Nihei would examine them?

A. Broken bones or prisoners of war with compound fractures. There were not very many of these, but prisoners that slipped on the deck of a ship and have their legs or had things fall on their feet would come to the dispensary.

Q. Did you yourself or any of the guards of any medical orderlies speak any Japanese to persons who were hurt at work?

A. Yes.

Q. What sort of Japanese would you have, or the medical orderlies?

A. If a prisoner of war was unable to walk back to camp, then I would take a purchase to the dispensary and carry him. Then I would bring him back to a carpenter and Dr. Nihei would look after him. I would also look at the prisoners of war who sustained broken bones, dislocations and all things according to Dr. Nihei's instructions. Minor and injuries would be busy with the other patients most of the time, so I would do this work.

Q. The certificate that in addition to the examinations you received from Dr. Nihei, Hondo, you received two other examinations. Who gave you these?

A. The camp commander, Col. Nyutani.

Q. Do you recall the dates you received these examinations?

A. They were not strictly examinations, but in mid-July and early December I received a furlough.

Q. Were they furloughs you received rather than examinations?

A. Yes.

Q. What years were these examinations received in July and December?

A. July and December of 1944.

DEFENSE: Defense has no further questions.

PROSECUTION: Sir, what is more official than the official record of the Prisoner of War Information Bureau? Is this more reliable or is the memory of this witness?

LAW MEMBER: What?

PROSECUTION: Shoichi Hara.

My present condition has no bearing in the issues in this case. If Counsel wishes to state for the record that the proper Shoichi Hara is not here to testify in person he is at the hospital, prosecution will consent to it. But if the only purpose is that, there will be nothing more in the prosecution's case or in the defense's case that should keep the commission detained during the time that Shoichi Hara was in the camp. It makes no difference what his condition is now. The only thing that Counsel can state to the effect is that Shoichi Hara is unable to appear here because he is in the hospital, to which the prosecution will agree. My statements as to his present condition are certainly irrelevant and immaterial to any the issues [illegible]

DEFENSE: If the Commission please, the reason for the request of this request is that we can definitely show on the record for future purposes the reason why Shoichi Hara was not available a witness. From the testimony that has been brought out, it is very evident that if would appear that Shoichi Hara able to come he should be called. How a determination by the officer that Shoichi Hara is confined to a hospital is not sufficient reason to show why there is no evidence before this Commission by Shoichi Hara himself; because if he were just in a hospital like any other sick person, we could take a deposition from him through which the prosecution and defense could examine the case and present his testimony before this Court; but such is not the case and for the protection of the Commission, if for nothing else, from future criticism as to why Shoichi Hara is not before this Court, it should appear on the record.

PROSECUTION: Sir, such an argument intended to show the Commission is not proper.

DEFENSE: It is not an argument to sway the Commission. It is purely an offer for the reason I stated: To show that Shoichi Hara is confined to a hospital and cannot testify before this Court, and that no deposition can be taken from him. That is the only reason we offer this exhibit.

PRESIDENT: Any prosecution will suggest to a statement that Shoichi Hara is in a hospital in his present condition which does not permit him to testify. That is all that this commission needs in evidence if it wants to protect itself. Anything to his present condition is entirely out of order.

LAW MEMBER: This exhibit you are introducing only concerns the inability of Shoichi Hara to testify, is that it?

DEFENSE: That is right, sir.

LAW MEMBER: Then the objection is not sustained. It will be admitted in evidence.

DEFENSE: I request permission to read the exhibit.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Defense Exhibit A was then read to the Court and opposing to the record.

LAW MEMBER: At this time the defense rests.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution offers in rebuttal, evidence as Prosecution Exhibit No. 15, that portion of an affidavit which I will read from the affidavit of Lalapuro C. Kinkaid, which is now in evidence as Prosecution Exhibit 15; and the portion that prosecution will read is offered only in rebuttal to counteract the testimony of Lt. Kosuke Nakamura, and goes only as to his credibility and nothing else.

LAW MEMBER: We have had 15 previously?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir, but the portion I am going to read was obvious out originally, and the portion I now offer is to attack the credibility of Lt. Kosuke Nakamura.

DEFENSE: If it is only offered for that purpose and not to jeopardize any case brought against Nakamura, the defense has no objection.

PROSECUTION: Prosecution will read from Page 4 of Major Kinkaid's affidavit:

"There was only one officer in the camp in charge, Lt Lt. Kosuke Nakamura", and then skipping down to the last sentence of that paragraph, "The following is a true and exact copy of one of the letters written at his request".

LAW MEMBER: I am trying to get it straightened out. I don't know what you are offering.

PROSECUTION: Just the letter, and that sentence.

LAW MEMBER: Have you read it yet?

PROSECUTION: I haven't read it yet. I am waiting for you to rule it in evidence.

LAW MEMBER: The affidavit as amended will be appended to the record and corrections made as requested. It is admitted in evidence.

PROSECUTION: I will now read that portion of the affidavit which has just been admitted into evidence by the Law Member:

"There was only one officer in the camp in charge, 1st LA. Komaki Kentaro. The following is a true and exact copy of one of the letters written at his requests

Omuta Prisoner of War Camp
Nippon
March 25, 1945

"To: Camp Commandant and Staff

From: POW Officers and supervisors.

On behalf of all the men in this camp we wish to express to the Camp Commandant and his staff our deepest gratitude for the interest they have taken in our health and welfare. We feel most indebted for the unrestricted privilege of taking the men to the Nipponese dentist where they are treated with utmost courtesy and professional skill. We further wish to express our thanks for being allowed to withdraw considerable sums from the Nipponese safe deposit to help defray the cost of this treatment, realising that such withdrawals are generally not authorised and must have required much effort and intervention on the part of the Camp Commandant and his staff.

In these trying times of war, with materials as scarce or restricted as they are, we feel we have been shown consideration beyond our expectations. We would like to have our feeling of gratitude conveyed to the dentist who has so liberally given of his time and effort.

We beg to remain, your obedient servants."

Prosecution offers in evidence as Prosecution Exhibit No. 22 official record from the Prisoner of War Information Bureau, which was the statement of service of Kaniehi Kondo at Cupuan Prisoner of War Camp.

DEFENSE: There is nothing on the face of that to object to, but the POW records themselves are not entirely reliable, and have been so testified to by the persons who has signed this document in other cases.

LAW MEMBER: This is just an exhibit to show the time that the accused was at this camp?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

LAW MEMBER: And you have no objection?

DEFENSE: On the face of it I can't object to it. I just made remarks about similar exhibits that come from the POW Information Bureau.

LAW MEMBER: The exhibit will be accepted.

PRESIDENT: Has the defense rested?

DEFENSE: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: Prosecution?

PROSECUTION: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT: The Commission will now hear the arguments for the prosecution and defense.

Oral arguments were then presented by the prosecution and defense.

The Commission then at 1615 hours, 31 October, 1946, adjourned to meet at 1315 hours, 1 November, 1946.

Q. State your full name, rank, serial number, permanent home address and arm of service.

A. My name is Clayton Woodrow ATWOOD. My rank is Pharmacist Mate, Second, Class, U.S.N. My serial number is 393-25-58. I am an American citizen and was born 23 April 1915 at Seattle, Washington. My permanent address is Maitland, Oregon, and I have no street address.
Mapleton, /s/ CWA

Q. Will you please give us what information you can concerning your experience as a prisoner of war paying particular attention to your experiences during your transfer to Japan and in Japanese prisons.

A. I was confined as a prisoner of war in Hoincho Prison Camp, Osaka, Japan from 9 June 1942 until 19 June 1945, and worked on the medical staff of the camp hospital during half of that time. ~~A Lieutenant NASSAU, a medical officer in the Japanese Army, was responsible~~ for medical regulations at the camp hospital. In January 1944 a Norwegian subject named KNUDSON became seriously ill with pneumonia. He had been captured by the Germans in the North Atlantic when he was serving on a merchant ship. Lieutenant NASSAU ordered this man transferred from the camp hospital to Itchioka Stadium, which was a prisoner of war hospital located beneath the bleachers of a stadium at Osaka. This so-called hospital was filthy and unsanitary. In spite of his condition KNUDSON was placed in a stretcher, in an open truck and taken to the stadium in a driving rain storm, without an attendant. I learned from the Ichioka staff subsequently that KNUDSON died on the following day.

On at least 12 occasions I observed a Lieutenant MIATAKI, also a Japanese Army officer attached to the medical staff of the Hoincho camp hospital, beat prisoners of war. I am unable to identify the victims of these beatings, but personally saw MIATAKI strike prisoners with a club, the flat of his sword, and with his fists. These beatings were without provocation.

A Private in the Japanese Army named KONDO was in charge of the sick list at Hoincho prison camp hospital. Lieutenant David HOCHMAN, Medical Officer in the U.S. Army, whose address is 5614 - 15th Avenue, Brooklyn, New York, was a prisoner of war at the camp. He recommended to KONDO that D. W. SMITH, a Radio Man First Class, U.S.N. be allowed to stay in the camp hospital because of beginning pneumonia. KONDO refused to permit this and sent SMITH to work because he was not running a temperature of 102 degrees. After working for two days SMITH collapsed and died two days later.

I have no further information which I believe to be of value in the prosecutionof men responsible for the mistreatment of prisoners in Japan.

A. Yes.

Q. State all that you know about this incident.

A. In February or March, 1944 - I don't recall exactly when - Smith came to me on regular sick call, complaining of illness. In my examination it developed that Smith was undernourished and poorly developed. He was a good man and rarely complained. There were no positive symptoms of pneumonia present at this examination. I did, however, recommend to the Japanese medical orderly, Kenichi Kondo, that Smith be kept in camp for a few days in order to enable him to rest up. Kondo, I believe, acting upon general instructions that no prisoner, unless definitely sick (high temperature, broken bones) would be permitted to rest, refused to allow Smith to remain. He was sent to work and a few days later developed pneumonia. Because of his extreme weakness, malnutrition and lack of resistance, he died within a short time.

Q. Is there anything further that you care to state about the matter in question?

In the matter of the manner in which Kenichi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly, was a contributing factor to the deaths of RM 2/C Smith and BM 1/C Hess in February 1944. * Perpetuation of Testimony of S/Sgt John Harold Zimmer, ASN 6573878.

Taken at: Valley Forge General Hospital, Phoenixville, Pa.

Date: 23 April 1946

In the Presence of: Charles H. Bergerhouse, Jr., Agent, Counter Intelligence Corps, Third Service Command

Reporter: Doris Wadsworth, Stenographer, Philadelphia Field Office, Counter Intelligence Corps, Third Service Command

Questions by: Charles H. Bergerhouse, Jr.

Q. State your name, rank, serial number, and permanent home address.

A. My name is John Harold Zimmer. I am a Staff Sergeant, ASN 6573878, and my permanent home address is 128 Manchester Avenue, Wabash, Indiana.

Q. State the date and place of your birth, your education, and your civilian occupation prior to entering the Army.

A. I was born 16 August 1910 at Wabash, Indiana, and I completed two years of high school. I worked as a travelling salesman for about five years before I went into the Army.

Q. Were you a Prisoner of War?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you recently been returned to the United States from overseas?

A. Yes. I arrived at San Francisco, California on 25 October 1945.

Q. At what places were you held and state the approximate dates.

A. I was captured on Bataan, 8 April 1942. About midnight of the same date, after we had been ordered to bivouac on an open field for the night, we were assemble and marched off without any equipment from the point of our capture near Marveilles to San Fernando, where we arrived about 2100 12 April 1942. The next day we were loaded into box cars and transferred by train to Fort O'Donnell, arriving there about 1300 13 April 1942. On 5 June 1942, we were again moved, because of dysentery at Fort O'Donnell, to Cabanatuan. On 4 October 1942, we were transferred to Manila, where we boarded a converted freighter on 5 October 1942. We arrived at Osaka, Japan, 11 November 1942, and were immediately imprisoned at Camp No. 1, Osaka. On 20 May 1945, with a group of other men from Osaka, I was transferred to Neatogua, Honshu Island, where I remained until liberated on 10 September 1945.

Q. State what you saw and heard regarding the complete details surrounding the deaths of RM 2/C Smith and BM 1/C Hess in February 1944, and tell to what extent Kenichi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly, was a contributing factor.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 3

A. In February 1944, while we were imprisoned at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, Smith complained that he was sick and too weak to work. Smith wanted to remain in camp, but Kondo refused and ordered him to report for work. Smith was returned from the job by the Japanese civilian supervisor at the Osaka Teokee Foundry, about noon, as they felt Smith was too ill to work. On the next day, Smith again complained to Kondo that he was unable to work because of his weakened condition. However, Kondo again forced Smith to report for work. On this day, the Japanese civilian supervisor at the Osaka Teokeo Foundry did not return Smith to the Camp, but told him not to work and to lay somewhere on the side and rest. On the third morning, Smith stayed in bed and did not report to Kondo at all. Smith risked a beating by Kondo by staying in bed, but apparently, he rather risked the beating then report for work, because he was feeling so bad. On this third day, Smith died some time during the day, before we returned from work at the Osaka Teokeo Foundry.

I do not know what the cause of Smith's death was, nor do I know just what time he died. An American lieutenant named Kauffman, who was from New York City, and who was a doctor in the Medical Corps, should be able to give more information about this incident, as he was present at sick call every day wi Kondo. I was told that Kondo refused to let Smith stay away from work by Sergeant Hector J.Bussey, of Shawnee, Oklahoma, who was a close friend of Smith and who had heard the story from Smith directly. I did not actually witness any of the above incident, except that it was easy to see that Smith was ill. I did not see Kondo beat Smith at any time, nor did I hear that he did.

Early in 1943, while we were at Camp No. 1, Oskka, Japan, Hess started breaking out all over the body with a rash. He was taken to the Stadium Sick Bay at Osaka, where he remained for several months. A great deal of difficulty was experienced in healing this rash, but it was finally cleared up in March or April of 1943, when Hess was returned from the Stadium in a very weakened condition. Hess tried to work, but was unable to do so. The other American Prisoners of War made Hess "Honcho", which is a group leader, who does not have to work. In July or August of 1943, sores broke out all over Hess' body After these sores first developed, Hess' weakened condition became worse, unt: Kondo allowed him to remain in bed for approximately one month, until Hess finally died in the early Fall of 1943. The American doctors did what they could for Hess with medicine from the Red Cross packages, but they were unable to prevent his ultimate death.

I do not particularly remember that Kondo beat Hess because Kondo beat so many men unmercifully, with clubs as well as fists, that it is impossible for me to recall the specific individuals who were beaten by him.

Chief Saunders, a Boatswain's Mate in the Navy, who was the Camp Commander at Camp No. 1, Osaka, and from Bellaire, Ohio, probably would remember a great deal more about Hess' death than I, as he was a very close friend of Hess. Also, Chief Scott, a Watertender in the Navy, was very close to Hess. Both of these men were captured off the same ship on which Hess served. Lieutenant Kauffman also treated Hess, and may know something about his death. I do not know whether or not any medication was given Hess by Kondo, nor do I recall in what manner the medication given by Lt. Kauffman was obtained.

I was an eye witness to the fact that Hess broke out into the rash, which was finally cleared up at the Stadium Sick Bay, and that Hess broke out in sores all over his body about a month before his death.

Q. Who was responsible for these deaths?

A. Colonel Maurota was Camp Commander over the Osaka area and had under his jurisdiction about fourteen prison camps, including Camp No. I. Maurota was almost six feet tall, weighed about 175 lbs., and was sixty or sixty-five years of age. His hair was graying on his shaven head.

Lieutenant Matsamura was Camp Commander of Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, and had direct authority over Kondo. He was about five feet ten inches tall, weighed 160 lbs., and was thirty-five years of age. He was medium built and rat-featured.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT

Kenichi Kondo, Medical Orderly at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, administered all medicines at Camp No. 1 for the Prisoners of War. I felt that Kondo was not qualified as a Medical Orderly. He gave me the impression that he was interested only in getting the men to work and see that they did not stay in the sick bay.

I have seen Matsamura beat Kondo when there were too many men who stayed away from work because they were sick. Kondo, in turn, would beat the men who stayed off the job.

This constitutes my full knowledge concerning these incidents.

Q. Do you have any further information or knowledge concerning War Crimes, other than that about which you have testified this date?

A. No.

A: S/Sgt Tasker Homer Bliss, 268511, U. S. Marine Corps, 197 South Bell Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Q: Will you give the places and approximate dates where you were held?

A: I was captured while in the hospital on Corregidor on 6 May 1942 by Japanese troops. On 25 May 1942, I was moved to Bilibid, Manila, Philippine Islands, where I stayed until the 28th of May 1942, when I was moved to the city of Cabanatuan, where we were placed in a school yard until the following morning. On 29 May 1942, we were marched to Camp No 3, approximately 30 Kilometers from Cabantuan, arriving the same day. There we were searched and all our personal possessions and clothing were taken from us. On 6 October 1942, we were moved to Fort Terminal Building, Manila, Philippine Islands, where we were loaded on a Japanese vessel Tattori Maru and sailed on October 7, 1942, arriving at Formosa on or about 9 October 1942. We left Formosa on 10 October 1942 and anchored off Bacu, Japan until the 19th of October 1942, when we returned to Formosa. On 22 October 1942, we left Formosa and sailed around off shore returning to port at Formosa again on 24 October 1942. We s tayed at Formosa until 27 October 1942 and sailed to Fresin, arriving 8 November 1942. We were then marched to the Camp Hoinsho, Japan, where we stayed until 20 May 1945. On 20 May 1945, we were transferred to Notagawa, Japan, where we stayed until liberated by American occupation forces on 10 September 1945.

Q: Did you witness any improper medical care of prisoners while interned?

A: Yes. at Camp Hoinsho, Osaka, Japan, they had a Japanese superior private by the name of Condo, who was in charge of medical treatment of the prisoners Condo, during sick call, very seldom ever examined any of the prisoners. Most of the time he would tell the men to go out and work. In about January or February of 1944, RM2/c Smith went to Condo for treatment of a chest cold. Condo refused to treat him and when Smith argued with Condo, telling him of his illness, he was beaten and then sent out to work, without any medical treatment. Smith returned on that same evening and died the following morning about 3:00 a.m. Boatsman Mate 1/c Robert W. Hess died of beriberi after Condo refused to treat him. morning, for medical treatment, Condo very seldom examined the men but would send them out to work, even though they had baráberi, dysentery, or pneumonia, without treatment of any kind. Several men died while going to work, on the job, or after they returned to their barracks, due to lack of proper medical dare.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 5

WAR CRIMES OFFICE
Washington 25, D. C. 5

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ RESTRICTED /s/T.R.C.K.

A. I never witnessed an actual killing of an American Prisoner of War, but improper medical treatment of a sick American by Japanese resulted in the death of HESS (First Name Unknown), BM, 1/C.

Q. Describe this incident in detail.

A. In approximately February 1944, HESS, who was imprisoned at that time at Osaka Prison Camp #1, Chikko Dist., Japan, was taken ill to such an extent that he was unable to answer sick call, which reported at the Japanese sick bay. He was unable to walk or get out of his bunk after the first few days of his illness. KENICHI KONDO, the Japanese medical orderly, would then go to his bunk and when HESS was unable to stand at attention, KENICHI KONDO would proceed to slap him in the face and body. I witnessed this occurrence on several occasions and understood that it was a regular happening. He would then give HESS very little medical treatment and within two (2) weeks of his confinement, HESS died.

Q. Was HESS fed properly during the period of his illness?

A. No. It was the custom at this camp to give only half rations to those who were ill and unable to work. HESS received only this amount during the time that he was ill.

Q. Do you know the cause of HESS' death?

A. An American medical doctor, whose name I do not remember, but who was at the camp at that time, told me that HESS was suffering from amoebic dysentery and that with proper treatment he could easily have recovered. However, with the treatment given him by KONDO and the Japanese medics, his death was a foregone conclusion.

Q. Can you name, describe, or identify any Japanese personnel at this camp responsible for HESS' death.

A. Yes. KENICHI KONDO was a three-star Private in the regular Japanese Army. At this camp he was a medical orderly attached to the Japanese sick bay. He was approximately twenty-five (25) years of age, five (5) feet four (4) inches tall, weighed one hundred and thirty-five (135) pounds, had a shaven head, black eyes, very dark complexion, wore thick lensed glasses, was full lipped, and spoke poor English. His only outstanding characteristic was his habit of walking "duck-footed." I do not know the names of any of the other personnel attached to this camp.

Q. Can you name any other American Prisoner of War who might have knowledge of this incident?

A. Yes. The following men were Prisoners of War at this camp:
L. T. SMITH, R.R. #2, Everton, Missouri
L. V. DEFOE, Box 891, c/o Mrs. Vocchivy, Seattle, Washington.
ROBERT TAVARITE, 822 Brighton Place, Mission Beach, San Diego, Californ ia
L. R. SCOGGIN, 1401 N. Blaine Street, Oltus, Oklahoma.
FRED M. BREWER, Rough Rock School, Chin Lee, Arizona
FRANK CENTO, 4559 Pope Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Q. Do you have any further information regarding this incident?

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 7

Q. Do you recall the circumstances surrounding the death of a man named Serafin?

A. Yes.

Q. State in your own words what you know of this incident.

A. Serafin's first name was Tony. He was an Italian by birth and a British subject. I believe he resided in London, England, an was in the Merchant Marine Service of Great Britain. He was an elderly man, about 60 years of age, had grey hair, was about 5' 1" tall, and was very undeveloped. Despite his age, he was assigned to do manual labor. Exactly what he did I don't know. On the evening of 16 January 1945, he returned from work completely tired and exhausted and with a head cold. He told me he felt he could not continue to work any longer because of his physical condition. With the permission of Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese medical orderly, Serafin was sent to his bunk and told to stay there. I wanted to hospitalize Serafin, but this was not permitted by Kondo. Serafin remained in his bunk all the following day. On the evening of 18 January 1945, between 2000 and 2100 hours, Serafin died.

Q. Can you state what he died from?

A. My opinion is that he died from coronary thrombosis, brought about by his age, hard work and insufficient rest and food.

Q. Were you permitted to perform an autopsy to definitely determi the cause of death?

A. No. The Japanese never permitted an autopsy to be performed.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances surrounding the death of a Petty Officer Robert W. Hess?

A. No. I cannot recall the circumstances, but I do recall the name.

Q. Do you have anything further to say?

A. Yes. Before the death of Serafin, I had been thinking about writing a request to the Japanese to excuse all men over the age of 40 years from manual labor. After the death of Serafin, I did this.

Q. Did the Japanese agree to this request?

A. No. They merely laughed at me. Nothing was ever done about it

Q. Is there anything further that you wish to state?

A. No.

Q. Will you state all facts in detail pertaining to atrocities, war crimes, violations of Rules of Land Warfare and human decency at OSAKA HQ CAMP, OSAKA (camp or other place), the dates thereof, the perpetrators, giving their names, ranks, units and other identifying information.

A. I was the first American doctor in the Osaka Headquarters Camp. I have here a 3 page report written by myself which roughly gives the situation.

INVESTIGATING OFFICER: This 3 page report by David HOUCHMAN, Capt (then 1st Lt), MC, dated 14 September 1945, is received in evidence and identified as Exhibit "A".

Q. Is the information contained in this report of your own personal knowledge and the opinions expressed your own?

A. Yes, ~~the American doctors in the sub-camps would write me notes~~ requesting medical supplies and often even the Japanese medical orderlies from the sub-camps would come to me and ask for supplies as they were unable to get it through Lt. NOSU.

Q. Will you describe Lt NOSU?

A He was about 5'4", 125 lbs, age 38, flat broad nose, thick lips, ears stood out, base of skull flat, speak broken English. He lived in Osaka with his wife. I don't think he had any children. He arrived in December, 1942 and stayed until the surrender. He was head doctor over all the sub-camps in the ~~Osaka POW System.~~

Q. Can you describe the Medical Orderlies mentioned in Part B of your report?

A In my camp we had a three star private named KONDO. He kept the books at sick call and made decisions that should have been made by a doctor and often overrode my decisions. He hit sick POWs over the head with books, slapped their faces, hit them with his fists and kicked them. He was about 5'1", 125 lbs, age 33, wore very thick horned-rimmed glasses because he was near sighted. His hometown was Nagoya. ~~There other soldiers and NCOs were at sub-camps and I speak of them in a general manner.~~

~~The [illegible] would [illegible] and [illegible] to show that [illegible] and medicine was given [illegible] like many other [illegible] state-[illegible] record.~~

Q. Who was the Camp Commander?

A A 2nd Lt MATSUMURO. He was about 5'10", 150 lbs, age 30, thin, wore glasses, only spoke few words of English and would end up a sentence with "you know?". His hometown was Kyoto near Osaka and he was newly married. A colonel MURATA was in

A. charge of all the camps. This covers the situation from the Medical stand point.

Lt.

~~Q. How many POWs died from a lack of proper medicine, care and~~ treatment on the part of Lt NOSU?

A Thirty died in our camp, but about seven died from natural causes such heart attack, old age and high blood pressure. True conditions that were forced on them would not have been prescribed. I have no way of knowing how many died at the sub-camps except that over 160 POWs died at Itchioka Camp from cold, hunger, starvation, beatings, and at the beginning lack of medicine. The only reason the death rate in my camp was low was because the men worked on the docks and stole food that kept their resistance up.

Q. Please state your name, rank, serial number, permanent home address and any other pertinent information concerning yourself.

A. My name is Frank Rilea ALLEN. I am a Private First Class in the United States Marine Corps. My serial number is 280441 and my permanent home address is Box 66, Rt. 1, Tigard, Oregon. I enlisted in the Marine Corps December 8, 1940 after completing two years of high school.

Q. When were you captured by the Japanese and at what prison camps were you interned.

A. I was captured May 6, 1942 at Corregidor and was in the Camp No 3; Cabanitnan, Philippine Islands until November 1942. I was then transferred to Osaka Camp No. 1 in Japan until June 1945 and then sent to the Natogawa, Japan camp until released on the 28 of September 1945.

Q. Did you witness any beatings or other cruelties at the Osaka and Natogawa prison camps.

A. ~~During the entire period while I was at these prison camps I was~~ beaten two or three times a week; sometimes for stealing food and sometimes simply for failure to salute or bow. A Corporal SARAMURI (phonetic) my and other prisoners what our nationality was and then would beat us if we answered American. Prisoners were often beaten and cut with bamboo poles which were cracked, scalded with hot tea or beaten by officers with Samurai swords. I saw the water treatment given Corporal Frank R. COMBEST and Seaman First Class VALENTINE at the Osaka Camp. The worst beating I witnessed was administered on about March 15, 1945 to Army Private G. P. GRIMSLEY who was beaten until unconscious with shovels, pick handles, etc., by about ten guards. GRIMSLEY had gotten drunk on some wine given him by Japanese soldiers and swung back when beaten by one of the guards. Other Japanese involved in the beating were First Lieutenant MATSUMURA (phonetic), Commandant of the Osaka No. 1 Camp and a Private on the medical staff named KONDO. Colonel MIRATA (phonetic), in charge of the prison camps in the entire Osaka area, looked on at several of the beatings and occasionally beat prisoners himself.

Q. Do you know of instances of failure to provide prisoners with proper medical care.

A. Yes. In June 1944 I received a head injury while working as a stevedore at about 0800 and was not treated until about 1530 and was told that the wound was sewed up with regular sewing thread.

Q. Does the testimony you have given cover all the pertinent details of thse incidents which you are now able to remember.

A. Yes.

Questions by: Charles H. Bergerhouse, Jr.

Q. State your name, rank, serial number, and permanent home address.

A. My name is John Harold Zimmer. I am a Staff Sergeant, ASN 6573878, and my permanent home address is 127 Manchester Avenue, Wabash, Indiana.

Q. State the date and place of your bith, your education, and your civilian occupation prior to entering the Army.

A. I was born 16 August 1910 at Wabash, Indiana, and I completed two years of high school. I worked as a travelling salesman for about five years before I went into the Army.

Q. Were you a Prisoner of War?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you recently been returned to the United States from overseas?

A. Yes. I arrived at San Francisco, California on 25 October 1945.

Q. At what places were you held and state the approximate dates.

A. I was captured on Bataan, 8 April 1942. About midnight of the same date, after we had been ordered to bivouac on an open field for the night, we were assembled and marched off without any equipment, from the point of our capture Near Marveilles to San Fernando, where we arrived about 2100 12 April 1942. The next day, we were loaded into box cars and transferred by train to Fort O'Donnell, arriving there about 1300 13 April 1942. On 5 June 1942, we were again moved, because of dysentery at Fort O'Donnell, to Cabanatuan. On 4 October 1942, we were transferred to Manila, where we boarded a converted freighter on 5 October 1942. We arrived at Osaka , Japan, 11 November 1942, and were immediately imprisoned at Camp No. 1, Osaka. On 20 May 1945, with a group of other men from Osaka, I was transferred to Neatogua, Honshu Island where I remained until liberated on 10 September 1945.

Q. State what you know of your own knowledge concerning the beating of George Yeager, while he was in the hospital suffering from diarrhea, by Kenichi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly, at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 12

A. During January 1943, George Yeager, who was from "G" or "K" Company of the 31s Infantry, was in the hospital suffering from chronic diarrhea. Yeager was abou 5'10½" tall, weighed 180 pounds, had black curly hair, and dark eyes. He also had a brother, Jack Yeager, who was a Prisoner of War at another War Camp in Japan.

One day in January 1943, Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese Medical Orderly at Camp N 1, Osaka, Japan, ordered Yeager to report for work. However, Yeager refused t do so, claiming that he was sick. Kondo then asked Yeager if he had had any medicine and Yeager acknowledge that he had. Accusing Yeager of stealing medicin, Kondo beat him severely until Yeager crawled under the bed to escape the beating. Kondo then continued by kicking Yeager for a time after that. One of Yeager's teeth was knocked out, either by Kondo's fists or by his feet.

I was a witness to this incident, as I was in the hospital at the time. I believe Kondo acted on his own initiative in this particular case, as it seeme to be a spontaneous outburst of rage on Kondo's part which precipitated the beating.

Q. Who was responsible for this incident?

A. I believe that Kondo was responsible for this incident, because, as I have stated before, it seemed to be a spontaneous outburst of rage on his part whi precipitated the beating. Kondo was the Japanese Medical Orderly at Camp No. Japan, and administered all medicines at this Camp for the Prisoners of War. I felt that Kondo was not qualified as a Medical Orderly, as he gave me the impression that he was interested only in getting the men to work and see tha they did not stay in the sick bay.

Lieutenant Matsamura was Camp Commander of Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, and had direct authority over Kondo. He was about five feet ten inches tall, weighed 160 pounds, and was thirty-five years of age. He was medium built and rat-featured. I have seen Matsamura beat Kondo when there were too many men who stayed away from work because they were sick. Kondo, in turn, would beat the men who stayed away from the job.

Colonel Maurota was Camp Commander over the Osaka area and had under his juri diction about fourteen camps, including Camp No. 1. Maurota was almost six feet tall, weighed about 175 pounds, and was sixty or sixty-five years of age His hair was graying on his shaven head.

This constitutes my full knowledge concerning this incident.

Q. Do you have any further information or knowledge concerning War Crimes, other than that about which you have testified this date?

A. No.

Q. State what you heard and saw concerning the torture of John "Red" Lewis and Oxendine, both enlisted men in the Navy, and Private Titus, U. S. Army, by a Japanese interpreter at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 13

A. Approximately in January 1943, someone broke into the Red Cross storehouse at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, and stole some soap. A portion of this soap was foun in the possession of John "Red" Lewis, an enlisted man in the Navy, who later died of tuberculosis; Oxendine, also an enlisted man in the Navy, whose first name I do not know, who was 6'2" tall, weighed about 190 pounds, blond hair, blue eyes, and who gave the appearance of being tall and husky; and Private Ti us, who was from Arkansas or Missouri, 5'10" tall, weighed 190 pounds, black hair, dark eyes, and giving the appearance of being husky. Titus had formerly been a wrestler with some carnival.

The Japanese interpreter, whom we called "The Thug", devised a method of tor - ture which he used to force a confession from Lewis, Titus, and Oxendine. "The Thug" forced the three men to lie on their backs on their bed with their head extending over the top of the bed. A wire was then placed taut across the throat of each man, so that the head could not be raised. The three men were then beaten with what I believe was soap in a sock. After this beating, when the men still refused to confess, water was poured into their faces until they were choked into unconsciousness. After these men had fainted, the wire was removed and they were thrown on the side to recover. When the men had regainc consciousness, they were forced to cross their legs and sit on their ankles. They remained in this position at attention for about fourteen or fifteen hour from 1600 one day until 0700 the next day. One of the three men finally confe ed, and they all served prison terms in the Osaka prison with Japanese crimina for about thirty days.

The victims, themselves, told me about the incident mentioned above. I saw th sitting cross-legged in the guardhouse, and was told by them later, that they had been in this position for about fourteen or fifteen hours. I believe tha Lewis' death was speeded up by the beating, imprisonment, and the fact that he was forced to work, although suffering from tuberculosis.

Q. Who was responsible for this incident?

A. "The Thug", whose name I cannot recall, in my opinion, bears most of the respo sibility as he took fiendish delight in torturing and beating the prisoners at all times. "The Thug" was the Japanese interpreter and was an Aide to Colonel Maurota. He was about 5'6" tall, weighed 160 pounds, and was about twenty-five years of age. He was very well educated and wore European clothes. At the ti this incident took place, "The Thug" was a civilian, but he was later inducted into the Japanese Army.

Colonel Maurota was Camp Commander over the Osaka area and had under his juris- diction about fourteen camps, including Camp No. 1. Maurota was almost six feet tall, wieghed about 175 pounds, and was sixty or sixty-five years of age. His hair was graying on his shaven head. Maurota assisted in the beating of Lewis, Oxendine, and Titus.

Lieutenant Matsamura, who also assisted in beating the three men mentioned above, was Camp Commander of Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan. He was about five feet ten inches tall, weighed 160 pounds, and was thirty-five years of age. He was of medium build and rat-featured.

Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese Medical Orderly at Camp No. 1, Osaka, Japan, also assisted in beating Lewis, Oxendine, and Titus. Kondo administered all the medicines at Camp No. 1 for the Prisoners of War. I felt that Kondo was not qualified as a Medical Orderly, as he gave me the impression that he was in- terested only in getting the men to work and see that they did not stay in the sick bay.

This constitutes my full knowledge concerning this incident.

At this time, we were all taken to prison camp except one person, a German, who had the German flag flying over his property at the time of capture.

Q. Do you recall the name of this German and any other information concerning him?

A. Yes, his name was George Scharf. He had been to the United States but came back to Guam and lived there for a number of years. He supposedly had tried for American citizenship but had been refused. As far as I know he was still a German citizen and when the Japanese took over Guam, he hoisted the German flag.

PROSECUTION EXHIBIT 14

Q. State the places where you were held, the approximate dates and the date of your liberation.

A. I was at Camp Zentsuji from about 15 January until 9 June 1942; from approximately 15 June until 20 June 1945 at Osaka Camp No. 1; from there I was sent to Nagoya Area Prisoner of War Camp 10-B. I was liberated 6 September 1945.

Q. Do you recall anything about a building called "The Old Stadium"?

A. Yes, at Osaka Camp No. 1, there was a building which we called "The Old Stadium." This was used as a hospital. Only the men who were too sick to do any work were sent there and left to die. This building was filthy beyond belief. There were no precautions taken against bombings or strafings except a dugout which was two or three feet deep and this really was not any good.

Q. Do you recall any prisoners of war being sent to "The Old Stadium"?

A. Yes, the Japanese doctor at Osaka Camp No. 1 sent patients, who were suffering from pneumonia, from the camp to "The Old Stadium." I can remember at least three instances when men were taken out of bed, put on a truck loaded with old clothing and junk of all sorts which was being transferred to "The Old Stadium." These men were put in an open truck, during rainy weather, and compelled to sit up on bags of various things. One of these patients survived and his name was S/Sgt. Hopper, U.S. Army, and he lived somewhere in Texas. The other two men died. I can't recall their names but one was a Norwegian and other was an Australian.

Q. Who was this Japanese doctor at Osaka Camp No. 1?

A. I do not know his name, but he was a lieutenant and the senior medical officer. He turned practically everything over to a guard named Condo and backed Condo in everything he did. This medical officer had no interest in the sick men and he never examined them or prescribed medicine for them. Condo prescribed medicine and examined the sick men; ordered sick men to work in all kinds of weather; beat them; disturbed them at night while they were trying to sleep; caused unnecessary trouble in the camp when it could have been avoided and had the authority or took it upon himself to cut rations of the sick men in half.

Q. Can you describe Condo?

A. Yes, he was about 30 years of age; very short -- about 5'4"; weighed approximately 145 pounds; was bowlegged; wore glasses and was very nearsighted. As far as I know, he had no nickname. He was at this camp for about three years and at first, he was a one-star private but at the end of three years, he was a three-star private.

Q. Can you describe the senior medical officer?

A. He was very thin, weighed about 135 pounds; approximately 5'8" tall; had dark short hair and was slightly bald on top and he work glasses. He spoke some English, also German and he claimed to have been educated in Germany and that is the reason we called him "The German Doctor."

Q. Do you know of anyone who might possible know "The German Doctor's" name?

A. I believe that Dr. Jackson, a lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the British Navy would know "The German Doctor's" name, but I do not know how Dr. Jackson could be contacted.

Q. Was there a Japanese doctor at "The Old Stadium"? If so, can you give any information about him?

A. The name of the doctor at "The Old Stadium" was Dr. Maru who was a sergeant major, officer cadet. He was about 33 years old; around 5'7" tall; approximately 130 pounds; wore glasses; was medium dark. He was fairly good as far as treatment of prisoners of war was concerned. This doctor claimed to be suffering with TB and he was hospitalized while on duty at this building. He would be sent to a Japanese military hospital for three months, then returned to duty; then back to the hospital, etc.

Q. Do you know any Americans who may have further information about "The Old Stadium"?

A. Lt. Col. Paul S. Roland whose home address is 52 Riverside Drive, New York City, knows the conditions that existed at "The Old Stadium" and in addition to this, he kept a record of the names of the men who died there. I myself do not know the names of any of the prisoners of war who were there but I do know that at least forty or fifty men died there.

Q. Did the Japanese guards mistreat or beat any of the American Prisoners of War?

A. Yes, I can remember one guard, a first sergeant, especially. This man was nicknamed "The Strafer" and would come out every day with a club or baseball bat and hit everyone over the head or on some other part of the body. At least 400 men out of 600, including the officers, were beaten by "The Strafer" more than once. Every morning he would stand at the gate as the working parties passes through and he would hit all the men over the head with a bamboo pole. He had no reason for doing this just that he seemed to get a thrill out of it. He would laugh and grin as he strafed the men passing by him and that is where he got the name of "The Strafer."

Q. Can you describe "The Strafer"?

A. Yes. He was tall and thin, about 5'11" and 150 pounds. He was a sergeant major; approximately 30 years old; rather hump shouldered and had a great many gold teeth.

Q. Do you know his real name?

I believe that the camp interpreter who we had at Osaka would have additional information relative to the Japanese personnel. His name was Haishi. He was a civilian who had worked in the Honolulu Navy Yard for 14 years and spoke very good English. He was married and had 4 children. I asked him several times if he was a citizen of the United States but he never would tell me. However, I am under the impression that he was. Haishi was about 45 years of age; 5'7" tall; weighed approximately 140 pounds and wore glasses.

I would like to add that while on work parties, several of the prisoners were injured by civilians. I do not know the names of any of these civilians as we never had time to find out. They never had any reason to beat the men but sometimes stated that they were not working hard enough. The work parties were in the city and suburbs of Osaka.

Q. Did any other beatings occur at this camp?

A. Yes, one day while some of the prisoners of war were loading Japanese ships ~~with war material, they went on a sit-down strike.~~ There was not enough guards that day to handle everyone but the next day there were 20 guards and each one was armed with a baseball bat. When the prisoners again refused to work, the Japs beat each man they came in contact with and several of the prisoners were injured so badly that they could hardly walk for two weeks after the incident took place. The guards who came the second day were from other stations and we had never seen them before. None of the prisoners of war were able to describe them because in the confusion they looked just like any other Jap.

Q. Who was the Japanese responsible for these conditions?

A. Col. Murato was in charge of the camp, and he made life miserable for the men. In addition to the things mentioned above, he would hold muster at midnight and send the prisoners to work in all kinds of weather.

Q. Is there anything else you would like to say about this camp?

A. Yes, about three to four months before V-J Day when the Japanese knew they were going to lose the war, they would load their barges with great amounts of nickel, pig iron, aluminum, iron and steel. They would send these boats out and when they were just inside the breakwater, they would sink them.

Q. Do you have anything further which you would like to state?

A. Only that I would be willing to go to Japan to testify at these War Crime trials provided I would not be kept there longer than six weeks.

LA MOYNE C. BLEICH, Major, ASN O-381692, 100 Grey Street, Buffalo, New York, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am a member of the American Army Medical Corps, having obtained my medical degree in 1939 from the University of Buffalo Medical School, Buffalo, New York. From 1939 to 1941, I completed my interneship and surgical residence at Buffalo General Hospital, Buffalo, New York, and entered active duty with the army in May 1941. I was a prisoner of war of the Japanese at Oeyama Sub-Camp No. 3, Osaka District, Japan, from 6 August 1944 to 10 September 1945.

Medical information. At this camp our diet was always inadequate in calories, proteins and vitamins. Our basic ration supposedly was to include 700 grams of grain per man per day, with 60 grams of meat or fish and additional vegetables. Actually from August 1944 until July 1945, we received between 600 and 650 grams of grain for the working man and about 500 grams for non-workers, and the meat and fish ration was almost non-existent. In July 1945, the ration of grain was cut to 600 for the workers and 300 for all others; meat and fish rations did not average more than ten to fifteen grams per day, but over long periods we might receive none whatever; vegetables even were not available, but at times we would get some potatos and greens. Just before V-J day, the average weight of the men was between 50 and 55 kilos, extreme cases being lower, including Private Mike Perich who weighed 47 kilos and Private Otaro who weighed 48 kilos. Both of these men were required to work in the open pit nickel mine withing the refinery where the ore was treated, not far from the camp. The Japanese worked our men even though they were not in good physical condition. They worked over 80% of the prisoners of war for work details each day, including camp workers and workers at the mine and refinery. I had come to the camp with about 300 American prisoners of war, and details at the mine and refinery might range up to 100 men. Not a single one of the men who went to the mine and refinery should have worked at all because they were under-nourished, about 10% had obviously evident edema from beri-beri, practically all showed evidence of pelagra, and at least 10% had diarrhea.

/s/ LCB

The camp commandant advised that the Osaka District had requested that 85% of the men work; actually, such a request was always considered as an order within our camp by the Japanese. These men worked long hours, leaving camp at 7:00 a.m. and returning about 5:00p.m. From August 1944 to Christmas of the same year, the pressure to reach the 85% quota was extremely heavy, but after Christmas 1944 half of the men broke down so much that even the Japanese recognized conditions, and almost 50% of the prisoners were on a Rest or Sick status/ The winter of 1944-45 was extremely severe, with temperatures averaging between 18 degrees and 20 degrees F. From December to March the ground was covered with snow to a depth of about three feet. Men and factory details were always sent out despite inclement weather, even though they were unable to do any work when they got to the mine or factory because of the weather conditions. /s/ LCB Some cases of pneumonia and cold resulted. Yeoman Shelley, USN, American prisoner of war, contracted pneumonia from exposure, probably while walking to and from the mine. He was seriously undernourished, and was a bad sick case for about two weeks. His health was broken, and he was still very sick at the time of liberation.

Our fuel supply was always inadequate. Our barracks had a small stove that could only be fired between 5:00 p.m. and about 7:30 p.m., and occasionally in the mornings. These fires failed to even heat up the barracks.

During the summer, fleas were a continual menace. I have seen our American prisoners of war with at least two bites for every 2" square of surface. No disinfectants were provided, and we could only air our clothes and beat them. The soap supply was inadequate, and although we had a boiler, we seldom had enough fuel to boil the clothes. Because of the fleas, the men did not sleep at night, and this tended to further deteriorate their health.

Medicines were wholly inadequate; we were allowed 500 GRAMS /s/ LCB of asperin per month for all 600 men in camp, including British and other nationals. This was only a small proportion of what was needed as fever cases were frequent. The Japanese gave us adsorbine for diarrhea, between 1000 and 1500 grains per month, but it was not effective and would help only mild cases if given in heavy doses. Because of the inadequacy of medicines, our best treatment was to prescribe Rest. The Japanese medical men, Two Star Private KONDO, however, was extremely arbitrary in refusing to allow men to stay in from the work detail. He would require diarrhea cases, for example, to show him their stools containing excrete so that he could determine whether the case was serious enough. Many times I had to shake thermometers up to get him to allow our men to stay in, as a temperature decline in favor would always be an excuse for KONDO to send such cases back to work. /s/ LCB KONDO was permanent at the camp from about May 1945 until it closed; was quite bowlegged; wore glasses because he was near sighted; was about 5'2"; 120 lbs; and about 25 years old.

/s/ LCB

Before him, Sergeant NAKAMA was the Japanese Medical Supervisor. He was a real tyrant. If he thought too many prisoners were on rest, he would hold an arbitrary inspection out of doors, and indoors if the weather was unfavorable. At one time he required T.B. case Pfc Chester McCusker of the 4th Marines to go out on work detail. At least two other men were definitely diagnosed as T.B. cases, including Pvt. Russell G. Chipps of the 60th Coast Artillery, ASN 15017249, and Cpl Norman Bussell, 4th. Marine Corps ASN 290908. Aside from a little American Red Cross food that came through very seldom, it was impossible to get these men extra food. As a result, Pvt. Chipps died September 3, 1945, after V-J day. His nearest relative was his sister, Mrs Lillian Neighbors, R.R. No. 1, Morgantown, West Virginia. Bussell was from Bakersfield, California. /s/ LCB Nakiama was permanent at the camp from August 1944 to after Christmas 1944. He was about 5'5" tall; 130 to 135 lbs; and between 30 and 35 years of age.

In addition, there was further heckling and sadistic conduct by the ranking sergeant in the camp, ICHI BA. He would call roll call formation at unwarranted hours. He once got me and my five ranking medical non-coms. in on a sudden inspection, and had all of us run around the parade ground, a distance of about one and one eighth or one and one quarter miles after slapping each of us. This kind of thing made treatment of the sick patients difficult. /s/ LCB /s/ LCB

In addition to Pvt. Chipps, there were the following seven other deaths for which the Japanese were largely responsible: Chief Yeoman Robert C. Brittingham, USN, ASN 3415195; he died 13 August 1944 from acute dysentery, about after we arrived at the camp. He had lost 56 pounds under his normal weight and was very undernourished, even at this late date he could have been saved if there had been available some emetine for treatment of dysentery, but there was none in camp/ /s/ LCB Pfc. Elmar A. Latvala, 4th. Marines, died January 1, 1945 from beri-beri heart. Earlier that day he was called out to work in order to fill the work quota. He was back a little later in a coma, and died that afternoon. He should not have been working at all as he was undernourished; he was really too far gone to save even with medicines. Private P. Kirkley, 60th. Coast Artillery, ASN 16041119, died January 30 1945 from acute dysentery aggravated by extreme malnutrition. Full and adequate diet would probably have saved him. Sgt. Major Cohen, American 4th. Marines ASN 722718 died March 6,1945 from MITCHELL /s/ LCB T.B.; just before his death he weighed 36 kilos. He was extremely undernourished and an adequate diet would probably have saved him. Storekeeper First Class Charles F. McCoy, USN 214-73-72 died 16 May 1946 from peritonitis following /s/ LCB amoebic dysentery. He had extreme malnutrition and simply lacked the strength to fight. With adequate foods and medicines he would probably have lived. Watertender John M. Fenell, USN died July 13,1945 from acute dysentery with peritonitis and extreme malnutrition; he would probably have lived if adequately fed. Private Joseph J. Keller, American 4th Marines died August 16, 1945 from beri-beri, heart failure and chronic dysentery. He could have lived if adequatel fed.

There was only one officer in the camp in charge, 1st. Lt. KOSAKU HAZAMA whose address I obtained as 188 Ebie Jami 3, Fukushima-ku, Osaka, Japan. He was a definitely weak and vacilating character. He left his camp to the noncommissioned officers to run. He frequently asked for letters thanking him for what he had done, and I as well as other officers at the camp, obliged, as we knew it was expedient to do so. The following is a true and exact copy of one of the letters written at his request:

Osaka Prisoner of War Camp
Nippon
March 25, 1945

To: Camp Commandant and Staff

From: POW Officers and supervisors.

On behalf of all the men in this camp we wish to express to the Camp Commandant and his staff our deepest welfare. We feel most indebted for the unrestricted privilege of taking the men to the Nipponese dentish where they are treated with utmost courtesy and professional skill. We further wish to express our thanks for being allowed to withdraw considerable sums from the Nipponese safe deposit to help defray the cost of this treatment, realizing that such withdrawals are generally not authorized and must have required much effort and intervention on the part of the Camp Commandant and his staff.

In these trying times of war, with materials as scarce or restricted as they are, we feel we have been shown consideration beyond our expectations. We would like to have our feeling of gratitude conveyed to the dentish who has so liberally given of his time and effort.

We beg to remain, your obediant servants,

This letter was obtained under duress, and it, definitely, does not not express my true attitude, as I feel he was responsible for the mistreatment of American prisoners of war at that came.

Prisoners of war at the camp included Lt. Andrew Bryant, Infantry offic. who was there the entire year that I was; and Lt. Colonel William Riordan, 200th. Coast Artillery, formerly stationed in New Mexico. He was there only after April 1945.

After V-J day, Lt. Hazama blamed headquarters for all the poor treatment of prisoners of war. He did not specify what orders he had received from higher headquarters, but simply said that Osaka had ordered everything as it was.

Then someone from the 2nd story yelled BAKA (fool). I struck the person who yelled BAKA. I slapped him. I don't remember his name.

46. Tell me about all the times you hit P.O.W.

* * * \

Q. What unit were you with when captured?
A. I was with the 4th Regiment, U. S. Marines, Philippine Islands.

Q. Did you witness any atrocities or mistreatment of American citizens at any time?
A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall any details concerning the deaths of R.M. ~~S/c Smith and B.M.1/c~~ Hess in February 1944, and a possible connection of Kenichi Kondo, Japanese Medical Orderly with these deaths?
A. No, I do not. I recall a Radioman Smith of the U. S. Navy who slept near me in Cabanatuan Prison Camp No. 3. I got well acquainted with Smith at this camp. I saw him later when I was in Cabanatuan Prison Camp No. 1, but after I left there I never saw him again. It is entirely possible that he was at the Stadium Hospital where I was in February 1944, but I was a bed patient and did not see all the other patients. I do not recall knowing a B.M.1/c Hess. I knew Kenichi Kondo, the Japanese Medical Orderly. He was working at the Stadium Hospital during the entire time I was a patient there; although both he and I were in this hospital in February 1944, it is possible that he was involved in the deaths of these men without my knowing about it, since I was a bed patient. Later Kondo was transferred with me to the hospital in Kobe, where he remained on duty until a few days before I myself was moved from Kobe.

Q. Do you recall any details relative to beatings of Ernie West and Mike Siroka in October 194- by this same Kenichi Kondo?
A. No, I do not. At this time both Kondo and I were at the hospital in Kobe, but here again, I was a bed patient much of the time and did not have the ~~opportunity to observe a big proportion of the things that went on in the hospital~~.

Q. Can you relate any incidents whatsoever in which Kondo was involved ~~as a contributing factor to the death of~~ patients in either of the hospitals?
A. ~~I cannot say definitely that his actions brought about or directly hastened the death of any patient~~ but it is my opinion that certain actions of his had a most undescribable effect on the physical condition of patients in both these hospitals.

Q. What were these actions by Kondo?
A. Beatings that he administered to hospital patients.

Q. Can you describe any specific beating, giving the date, the name of the victim and other details?
A. No; there were many beatings administered by Kondo with many patients involved. The incidents are a bit confused in my mind, particularly with reference to dates. But I can relate a typical incident so that it may be seen how Kondo's beatings were administered.

Q. Please do so.
A. He would come into the hospital ward, walk up to a patient, and start talking rapidly in Japanese. If the patient happened to be a bed patient, Kondo would force him to stand at attention if he could possibly get on his feet. If Kondo suspected that the patient was able to stand but unwilling to do so, he would "cuff him around" in bed until he got up. If Kondo finally became assured that the man could not get up, he would usually go on to some other patient to use as a beating victim. When he had the patient on his feet at attention, he would talk to him rapidly in Japanese ~~apparently cursing him, though most of us, including the victim, could not understand~~ and at the same time he would strike the patient about the head, sometimes with the "heel" of his hand and sometimes with a belt or a bamboo stick. Frequently he would knock patients down while administering these beatings.

Q. Would the patients ever know what they were being beaten for?
A. Yes, sometimes they would know that it was for infraction of some military rule or prescribed routine, (such as being caught with a needle, a pencil, or other writing material) but often they would have no idea of what the beating was for. It seemed to us that sometimes Kondo would come into the hospital with the express idea of finding a man even slightly out of line so he would have an excuse for administering one of these beatings.

Q. Would the beatings be administered even though the victims were obviously very ill men, or very weak?
A. Yes.

Q. Can you describe any other actions of this kind that were typical of Kondo?
A. Yes. Sometimes he would walk into the ward and call the whole group to attention and at his command the men who were well enough to stand would come to attention in a group. Then he would eye the group critically and if he saw one man who was not sufficiently rigid, or not in precisely the proper Japanese posture for attention, he would walk over to him and administer the type of tongue lashing and severe physical beating I have described above.

Q. Were you, yourself, ever beaten by Kondo?
A. Yes. It was Kondo who administered a beating to me and approximately twelve others in May of 1944, when we were ambulatory patients and were detailed to go out and build a Japanese garden, in the arena of the Stadium Hospital. We weren't working fast enough to suit Kondo and he lined us up; then went down the line with a wide leather belt, one trip down and a trip back, giving each of us three blows on the head with the belt, on both the trip down and the trip back.

Q. Do you know of any permanent injuries he inflicted at this time?
A. No.

Q. Did you ever see him strike a medical officer of the Allied Forces?
A. Yes. We had an English medical officer, a Lieutenant Robert Jackson, of the Royal Navy, in the Stadium Hospital, who was beaten occasionally by Kondo. These beatings were not very severe, being delivered by Kondo with the heels of his hands. Reasons for these beatings were (1) Lt. Jackson's "sticking up" for patients; (2) failure to have the ward properly policed; and (3) failure to have the medical records properly "juggled" to suit Kondo.

Q. Were beatings administered by Kondo both at the Stadium Hospital and at the hospital in Kobe?
A. Yes, but he gave fewer and less severe beatings after we got to Kobe because the commanding officer of the hospital there did not approve such severe treatment.

Q. Please describe Kondo.
A. He was about five feet, six inches tall, exceptionally well built, weighing about 165 pounds. He was about twenty-eight years of age. He was clean shaven and had no unusual facial characteristics. I have never heard him speak more than a few words of English. He habitually spoke Japanese to the hospital patients.

Q. Do you hold anyone else jointly responsible with Kondo for his mistreatment of hospital patients?
A. Yes, I hold the commanding officer of the Stadium Hospital definitely responsible because he permitted these things to go on. To what extent he definitely encouraged Kondo to do what he did, I cannot say. This commanding officer's name, I do not know, but his nickname was "The Pig." The commanding officer at the hospital at Kobe was named Ohashi (phonetic). He was a fairly decent person and as I have said before, was apparently responsible for the more moderate treatment we received from Kondo there.

Q. Do you have anything further to add?
A. No.

STIPULATION AS TO EXPECTED

TESTIMONY OF

ATSUSHI MARUO VCD

United States

Vs.

Kenichi Kondo

Yokohama, Honshu, Japan

24 October 1946.

S T I P U L A T I O N

It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the prosecution, the defense and the accused that if Atsushi Maruo, 701, 8 Miyoshi-cho, Mori-gushimachi, Kita Kawauchigun, Osaka-Ku were present, he would testify as follows:

My name is Maruo Atsushi, formerly a 2nd Lt. in the Medical Corps in the Imperial Japanese Army. I served at the Osaka Main Camp from 21 Dec. 1942 through July 1945. During this term while serving directly under Lt. Shoichi Nosu, I was absent from work during the following periods:

1. From the beginning of February 1944 to the end of March, I was sent to Ceyama Prisoner of War Camp by order of Col. Murata. There was an epidemic of some contagious disease, as I recall, and for that reason I was dispatched.

2. From the beginning of July 1945 through 20 October 1945, I was ill and hospitalized in Osaka at three different hospitals. Of the four months, the latter two were spent convalescing at home.

3. From the end of November 1944 to the beginning of March 1945, I was convalescing at home.

I was serving at the Osaka Main Camp as a Medical Officer under 1st Lt. Shoichi Nosu. There was 1st Lt. Miyatake besides myself, who was later followed by Probationary Officer Takeo Amo.

Sick calls were held daily from 0630 - 0700. Those who wanted treatment would report to the dispensary at that time to Lt. Koehman, the Prisoner of War Medical Officer. Lt. Koehman wou-

DEFENSE EXHIBIT

Make the diagnosis and make out a slip as to whether the Prisoner of War should be allowed to rest or not, and also a prescription slip of what medicines should be issued. Common medicines like stomach powders and aspirin were kept on hand by Dr. Hoehman and issued directly. Kondo, the medical orderly, issued the medicine and recorded the diagnoses and medicines issued in the examination (Register) book. If a prescription was ordered by Dr. Hoehman, Kondo issued it to the Prisoner of War then and there. Then the prescription slips would be sent to the Japanese Medical Officer for his stamp of approval.

Kondo's regular hours were from 0800 to 1700, but since he was a medical Corpsman, he came in time to serve at the 0600 - 0700 sick call period.

As for medicine, the full amount of the monthly requisition was never received from the Osaka Army Hospital. I would say it was about 65% to 80% of the requested amount. In the latter part of 1943, (although it was not acute) there was a shortage of medicine from the Army Hospital.

During the middle of 1944, the average issue from the Army Hospital was about 65% of the requisition. Part of this shortage was supplemented by medicine bought locally through the efforts of Sgt. Kobayashi with company funds. The distribution of medicine was done by Kobayashi under orders of Lt. Nosu, who was the final authority in all medical matters. Nosu was the chief Medical Officer of the Osaka Area Prisoner of War Camps. I have seen Kondo being scalded by Nosu five times, but have not seen him being struck. I saw these reprimands in the medical office, since Kondo brought a daily sick call report to Lt. Nosu. Whenever there was an increase of patients, Nosu would reprimand Kondo for being too lenient.

I have heard of the instruction by Lt. Nosu that Prisoners of War with 37.5° C and under were to be sent to work. Nosu received the morning sick report daily from Kondo. I believe it was on these occasions that he flared up and bawled Kondo out for having too many sick Prisoners of War excused from work, and that all Prisoners of War with temperatures under 37.5° C were to be sent to work.

Col. Murata was the camp commandant who held a meeting every morning of the camp personnel. In these meetings, he gave short lectures and instructions on the handling of Prisoners of War and such. In the monthly camp commandant's meetings, he had a graph showing the work production figures of the various sub and dispatched camps. He reproved any commandant whose graph figures fell below the rest of the camp. Murata did not call any conferences of the Medical section only at any time.

Lt. Hochman was the Prisoner of War Medical Officer who took charge of sick calls daily. Since he handled most of the Prisoner of War diagnoses he was in a position to know the most about the Prisoner of War health conditions. I got along very well with him and liked him. There were instances when Kondo came to me or Probationary Officer Amo to have a recheck made on a Prisoner of War as to whether the prisoner in question should be allowed to rest from detail that day or not. (Amo came to Osaka Main Camp at the beginning of September 1944.)

During the period of 21 December 1942 to the beginning of September 1944 when Amo came into camp, I made the most diagnoses among the Japanese medical officers in the main camp, but was not in attendance at daily sick calls. I worked on the average of two times a week at the Main Camp where two hours or less were spent in actual diagnoses of Prisoners of War, after which I did clerical work in the Medical Office of the Main Camp. On any of these occasions when I diagnosed Prisoners of War, Lt. Hochman or Chief Sanders never made any complaints to me about Kondo's behavior toward Prisoners of War.
